First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 19th, 1912. Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. July 15th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Arne Joselson, of Neptune Minn., who on April 29th, 1909, made Homestead Application Serial No. 0[illegible], for S.½ S. E. ¼ Section 25 Township 15[illegible] N. Range 39 W. 5th Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn, on the [illegible]th day of August 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole A. Norman, Joseph A. Dahl, of Neptune Minn. G. G. Haugaard, Alfred E. Jewal, of Gunder Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Aug. 9, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. August 7th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given, that May Arndt, of Highlanding Minn., who on May 15th, 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 08150 for S. E. ¼ Section 32 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet. U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 16th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

John M. Johnson, Bernt Johnson, Morgan Vaughan, John Guinan, all of Highlanding Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

The Trouble In That Family.

"You told me when you said goodby yesterday that I should never see you again," she complained as she straightened up beside the tub.

"I know I did," he replied, leaning wearily against his breath, "but you know wha' th' philosoph'r says, donshu? 'A bad promise is (hic!) better broken.' Why donshu try to be (hic!) more philosophic'l? Thash whatsh always been the trouble in thish fam (hic!) fam'ly. You ain't got 'ny phil (hic!) osophy in your system."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Flying Men Fall

victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles just like other people, with like results in loss of appetite backache, nervousness, headache, and tired, listless, run down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that as T. D. Peebles, Henry, Tenn proved. "Six bottles of Electric Bitters" he writes, "did more to give me new strength and good appetite than all other stomach remedies I used." So they help every body. Its folly to suffer when this great remedy will help you from the first dose. Try it. Only 50 cents at All Druggists.

Notice for Publication.

FirstPub. in The Sunbeam July 19th. 1912. Department of the Interior. U.S. Land Office at Crookston, Minn. July 15th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Ole A. Norman, of Neptune Minnesota, who on May 27th. 1911, made Homestead Application Serial No.06285, for S. E.¼ N.E.¼ & N. ½ S. E. ¼ Section 25 Township 152 N.Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn, on the 27th. day of August 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Sylfest S. Reishus. Agnes B. Norman. Selma Nelsoe, Joseph A. Dahl, all of Neptune Minn.

ARTHUR P. TOUPIN,
Register

Notice For Publication,

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Aug. 9th. 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. August 5th. 1912.

NOTICE is hereby given that Grace M. Pinkerton, of Torgerson Minn., who on May 15th 1911, made homestead Entry No 08180 for S. E. ¼ Section 23 Township 151 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 16th. day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

A. T. Rice. of Germantown Minn. John Markuson, E. H. Besancon, of Torgerson Minn. J. H. Hay, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Aug. 9,

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Aug. 7th. 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Knudt C. Shirley, of Thief River Falls Minn., who on Oct. 3, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 617. Serial No. 01106 for S.E.¼ Section 6 Township 154 N. Range 41 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 24th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Charl U. Overum, of Thief River Falls, Minn. Hans Jorstad, of Thief River Falls Minn. Ole Shirley, of Thief River Falls, Minn. Carl Larson, of [illegible] Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

C. GOTZIAN & Co.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9,40 a. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays. Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m,

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 19th, 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. July 15th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Selma Nelson, of Neptune Minnesota, who on May 31st, 1911, made Homestead Application Serial No. 06241, for S. W. ¼ Section 15 Township 152 N. Range 39 W., Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn, on the 27th, day of August 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Sylfest S. Reishus, Ole A. Norman, Agnes B. Norman, Oscar Norman all of Neptune Minn.

ARTHUR P. TOUPIN,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 19th, 1912. Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota, July 15th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Oscar Norman of Neptune Minn., who on June 1st, 1911, made Homestead Application Serial No. 06217, for S. W. ¼ Section 25 Township 152 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 28th, day of August 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Sylfest S. Reishus, Joseph A. Dahl, Arne Joselson, Selma Nelson all of Neptune Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

A Surprise In Store.

Sweet Innocence—Papa says that you can't afford to marry. Ardent Youth—Oh, how absurd! Why, it only costs a few dollars. Sweet Innocence—Is that so? How foolish papa is! I'll tell him.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER,
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

[illegible] Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Special attention given to Probate Court Work.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

C. L. Clarke is levelling grades north of Highlanding this week.

S. L. Holmn now has his ferry in good order at Highlanding and teams can be ferryed there at any time.

Read all the political announcements published in an other colum.

"That Washington never told a lie of course is very true, but he went into politics when the country still was new."

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Clark made us a very pleasant call Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter McAndress made this office a very pleasant call Tuesday evening.

Harvest is about finished and the whistle of the steam thrasher will soon be heard in the land.

George Singer, the Rhoda Merchant was transacting business in Justice Court here Monday.

Andrew Stoveron of McIntosh was up here this week buying stock with Simon Solberg.

Mrs. E. Poterson of Deer Park and ye Editor and family visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. K.M. Kratzer on Sunday last.

Miss Flossie Weaver of Marshfield Wis. arrived here Wednesday for an extended visit with her mother Mrs. A. Weaver.

Clifford Shuston, has taken the contract to haul the butter down for the Highlanding Creamery and makes regular trips now.

Parties using the ferry at Highlanding, when the owner is not present should leave 25 cts. ferry fee at the store of Andrew Ellingson.

There was no bids accepted by the County Board for building the new State Road east of Thief River Falls, as all the bids were to high and were turned down in a bunch.

Gunder Asbjernson the Malone Dairyman has built him a fine new stock barn this year; which will enable him to take care of his cows with much less labor than in the log barns.

The farmers should turn out and vote at the primary election on September 17, as your candidate for office may be defeated by the city and village vote and his name not be on the ballot when you are ready to vote in November.

What is the use for a few people to stand out against getting this Red Lake River declared unnavigable so we can get bridges across it. Any man that opposes this move which will be made this winter is doing a big favor for the lumber companies.

Up to the present time we have been unable to land a first grade teacher for the Highlanding School, which is to commence Sept 2nd, but we have several on the string and expect that we will get one in time to open the school on the date set by the voters.

If the roads should be bad this fall the farmers of this end of the county will be up against it for getting their grain to market. We used to think that the Red Lake River would be a good way to take our grain to market, but this project has been entirely abanded since the farmers discoverd that river was under the complete control of the Lumber Companies backed up by that Taft Engineers outfit at St. Paul.

The floating dredge on ditch 53 are hung up by lack of water, but 47 is now progressing finely. It seems to bad that the contractors could not have got men that understand their business to run that dredge last summer. It is simply adding insult to injury to have them come in here now and show us that this ditch could have been dug last summer if the right man had been put on the job.

C. H. Martz has filed for County Surveyor. He has given universal satisfaction in this position and will no doubt be re-elected for another term.

Martin Hyland has built a new addition to his farm residence and has now a very fine home. Martin is one of our farmers who makes use of the natural advantages of the good farming country in which he lives.

The water in Red Lake River is very clear this summer, but we never see a fish in it, since the lumber companies made the clean up last winter, and now the rotton "pot gang" of officials who backed them up in doing it, have got gall enough to come up here and ask for votes for their reelection. "Gee whizz", their political stink would drive a butchers dog off of a gut wagon.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS.

Paid Advertising.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The undersigned take this means of announcing to the voters of Pennington County that he is a candidate for re-election as Superintendent of Schools subject to the ratification of of the voters there of at the Primary Election to be held on Tuesday, Sept. 17th, 1912.

Your vote and support are respectfully solicited.

E. A. Mostue.

Candidate For Sheriff.

I desire to announce to the voters of Pennington county that I will be a candidate for the office of Sheriff, and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primaries, September 17. 1912.

JULIOUS HALVERSON.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

I hereby announce to the voters of Commissioner District No. 5 that I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for County Commissioner of said district at the Republican primaries Sept. 17th. Vote for a man that lives in the eastern part of your territory that will take an interest in getting you roads and bridges.

Lars Lee
sec. 4
Town of Hickory.

FOR CLERK OF COURT.

I hereby announce that am a Republican candidate for the office of Clerk of District Court of Pennington County, and respectfully solicit your vote and support at the primaries to be held on Tuesday, September 17, 1912.

Yours Truly
E.J. OVERLAND
Thief River Falls.
Minn.

Having received the nomination of the Public Ownership Party for candidate for County Commissioner of the 5th commissioner district, I will, if elected, consider myself at the service of the people and use all my efforts in the interests of the tax payers of Pennington County.

I earnestly solicit the support of the voters at the final election November 5th.

Respectfully
George Lemers.

COUNTY SURVEYOR

I hereby announce that I am a candidate for the Republican Nomination for County Surveyor, of Pennington County, and solicit your votes and support at the primaries on Sept. 17 1912.

C. H. Martz.

Indian Killed On Track.

Near Rochelle, Ill., an Indian went to sleep on a railroad track and was killed by the fast express. He paid for his carelessness with his life. Often its that way when people neglect coughs and colds. Don't risk your life when prompt use of Dr. King's New Discovery will cure them and so prevent a dangerous throat or lung trouble. "It completely cured me, in a short time, of a terrible cough that followed a severe attack of Grip," writes J. R. Watts, Floydada, Tex., "and I regained 15 pounds in weight that I had lost." Quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at All Druggists.

NEWS FROM ROLAND.

Harvest is in full blast.

Miss Mary Scott spent last week with friends near Rudell.

Carl Rindahl visited with his home folks near Fertile last week and returned to Roland on Sunday.

Miss Elsie Brekke returned home from Plummer on Saturday where she has been clerk at the Langlie store.

Mrs. Otto Dahl and children left for Hill River on Sunday for a weeks visit with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Broin.

Mrs K. W. Bondy and daughter Sophia returned to their home at Battle Lake on Thursday after a month visited with Mr. and Mrs. Rolandson and family.

Miss Ella Rolandson left for Battle Lake, on Thursday where she will stay with her Grand moher Mrs. Bondy this summer.

Thorvald Brekkie and Bennie Rindahl left for Dakota last week to take in the falls thrashing.

Miss Hannah Lindberg returned home from McIntosh on Monday after working all summer for her uncle Mr. Hanson.

Mr. H. M. Iverson from Erie purchased a team and buggy from butter maker Rindahl on Monday.

Mr. Lanager from Plummer made a short visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rolandson on Thursday.

William Lindberg is assistant at the Roland Creamery and will take possession of it ext month. Mr. Rindahl will retire from his work this year and will have the Farmers elevator at Oklee.

Order Limiting Time to File Claims, and for Hearing Thereon.

ESTATE OF Nettie Cady.

STATE MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF Pennington, IN PROBATE COURT:

In the Matter of the Estate of Nettie Cady Decedent.

Letters of Administration this day having been granted to Henry D. Cady

It is Ordered, that the time within which all creditors of the above named decedent may present claims against his estate in this court, be, and the same hereby is, limited to three (3) months from and after the date hereof; and that Thursday the 14th, day of November 1912, at Ten (10) o'clock A.M., in the Probate Court Rooms at the Court House at Thief River Falls, in said County, be, and the same hereby is, fixed and appointed as the time and place for hearing upon the examination, adjustment and allowance of such claims as shall be presented within the time aforesaid.

Let notice hereof be given by the publication of this of this order in "THE SUNBEAM" a weekly newspaper, as provided by law

Dated August 9th. 1912

Wilheim Michelet,
(Court Seal) Judge of Probate.

Stanton & Rowberg, Attorneys for Estate. Thief River Falls, Minn.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Aug. 23rd, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. August 20th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Paul Henriksen, of Esplee Minn., who on September 29th, 1910, made Homestead Application Serial No. 05657, for S. ½ N.E. ¼, S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼, & N. E. ¼ S.W. ¼ Section F Township 155 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn, on the 27th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Fred Solley, John G. Nilson, Carl T. Hanson, Paul Soad, all of Esplee Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Cold Blooded Man.

"Man is the coldest blooded animal there is," said a well known doctor. "Man's low temperature," the doctor went on, "is responsible for more than half his ailments. Your normal temperature is 98½ degrees F. It is only when you have a bad temperature that you get as warm as any of the lower animals—that is to say, when you are in a high fever, with a temperature of 102, you are at the normal heat of the cat, the dog, the ox, the rat, and so on. In the coolest of seas the porpoise is never cooler than 100 degrees. The bat, the rabbit, the guinea pig, the hare and the elephant likewise are all cool at 100 degrees. The hen has the highest temperature of all the lower creatures, and it is a good deal warmer when a chicken, its temperature then is as high as 111, but she had experience cool its blood [illegible] New York Globe.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.

PRICE 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

The Trials Of A Traveler.

"I am a traveling salesman," writes E E. Youngs, E. Berkshire, Vt., "and was often troubled with constipation and indigestion till I began to use Dr. King's New Life Pills, which I have found an excellent remedy." For all stomach, liver or kidney troubles they are unequaled. Only 25 cents at All Druggists.

"I Suffered Intense Pains in My Left Side."

Do you realize it is better to be safe than sorry, that it is the best policy to lock the stable door before the horse is stolen?

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

cured Mrs. C. C. Gokey, of a stubborn case of heart disease, such as thousands are now suffering with. Read what she says:

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do thirty minutes work in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blade, I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. I began to sleep well, had a good appetite, and improved so rapidly that when I had taken six bottles I was completely cured.

MRS. C. C. GOKEY, Northfield, Vt.

If you have any of the symptoms Mrs. Gokey mentions, it is your duty to protect yourself.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy.

is what you need. If the first bottle fails to benefit, your money is returned. Ask your druggist.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

HOUSE KEEPER WANTED

I desire to employ the services of a house keeper on my farm in the town of Kratka. Good conveniences and steady employment. Salary $4.00 a week and board. Call on or address

John Quirk,
Highlanding Minn

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehuel, Minn.

Mutual Redress.

"Does your wife regret that she married a poor man [illegible]

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.

NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Gibeau Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abraham Parquine, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Eleswhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What. Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

[illegible]

IF YOU NEED TIRES [illegible]

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. [illegible]

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

The Man-Eaters of M'Wembi

By Captain Fritz Duquesne

Copyright by Ridgway Co.

PIET DU TOIT saw the ending of the Boer war with the peace of Vereeniging, but there was no peace for him under English arms. His heart was burning like the live-coal of a slow match while the Union Jack dangled over his head, and he longed for a wilderness where he could live to his dying day without seeing so much as the print of an English foot.

He was a farmer of Lichtenburg, a grazing district lying in the west of the Transvaal, and it was easy for him to muster a little company of kinsmen and friends of like temper to trek with him out of the Transvaal a few days after the close of the war. There were twenty-six whites in his party, men, women and children, and about a hundred Kaffirs, most of whom had been attached by years of service and good treatment.

Du Toit had no definite choice of a spot to settle on. He planned in a general way to spy out the land amid and beyond the swamps of Mozambique and laid his course straight over the veld to Komateport at the railroad crossing between the Transvaal and the Portuguese territory. For some time his trek was heard from more or less frequently, but after passing the Portuguese border the news began to shrink to bare reports that the Boers had been seen by natives from time to time, still pressing on to the northeast through the wilderness to the vast swamps.

They were doggedly entering the most repellent region of the dark continent, a fearful expanse of fetid pools and loathsome mire, under the glare of the torrid sun, the breeding-ground of the crocodile and all manner of reptiles, insects and vermin, a perpetual fount of miasma and deadly fevers, but jealously held against intrusion by the fiercest and most bloodthirsty natives of Africa. All cunning and hate are lodged in these people, into whose native blood has come a touch of the Arab and of the trader of Madagascar. Their normal life is war; their chief amusement is murder; the savage with most blood on his hands is a hero, and may become a god when he dies.

It was presumed that the Boer trek had passed into the swamps, but no native had seen the entry and no news came out and back to Lichtenburg. After several months of vain waiting and growing anxiety, a search for the trail was begun with the help of native scouts.

Every path leading into the marshes was traced for many miles by the searching parties, but no marks of Du Toit's trek were detected and no tidings of the missing party could be gathered from the natives. Yet every Africander persisted in the belief that the party was somewhere alive or that its fate could be learned. All African history has no record of a lost Boer; but, after hunting vainly for many weeks, the Portuguese government was on the point of giving up the attempt, and it was evident that the Boers must renew the search for their countrymen or it would be abandoned.

I had gone to Lorenzo Marquas to select land for the same purpose as Du Toit in a territory beyond the stretch of British dominion. The mysterious disappearance of the Boer trekkers was table-talk in the little kiosks on the street-corners. Within an hour after my arrival a Portuguese colonel, who was seated at one of the tables, rose to meet me as I entered a kiosk and greeted me as an old acquaintance. I sat down to share a bottle of wine with him, and, after a few minutes of polite inquiries and flowery talk, he urged me to enlist in the hunt for the missing party.

The governor-general was persuaded to make one more trial, and my friend, Colonel Andreas, was put in command of a troop of four hundred men, with myself and a number of friendly natives as scouts.

On the second day the raw men showed signs of fatigue, and before the end of the third day the horses were fagged and plodded along with drooping heads.

As days went on, the column thinned out more and more, stretching out for over a mile. Millions of insects hovered over our marching troop, drinking our sweat and settling in such swarms that every man's back looked as if it were coated with flies' wings. One by one the stragglers in the rear would cry for help and drop swooning from their saddles. The horses, too, were falling from exhaustion. At intervals from the surrounding bush we would hear the sharp crack of a rifle; or an arrow buzzing like a frightened humming-bird would reach its mark in one of our troop. It was idle for us to attempt pursuit. Before we could spur our tired horses to the cover, the lurking native would slip off into the thickets.

After a month of this traveling by forced marches, stopping only a few times to rest at a pool or stream, our horses were too fatigued to go further. We knew that we were not far from the border of the swamps [illegible] marching men to the uttermost, the lances were broken up and thrown away and the troopers carried nothing in their packs but stinted rations for a week. The horses were shot and our men tramped off to the marshes. We expected that the natives with us would be able to keep us supplied with game, and all who were not needed to carry our tents and cooking outfit were sent out to hunt for meat; but it seemed that they were unwilling to take the risks of a hostile country, for the hunters almost always returned empty-handed. We were forced to cut our rations to eight ounces a day, and, at length, to a few morsels of food, for we had misjudged the distance that lay between us and the swamps.

Finally, after a wearisome tramp for two weeks, our famishing troop came upon a long declivity stretching for miles before us. The horizon, veiled in a blue haze, was blotted by a black jungle, the margin of the dreadful marshes of Mozambique.

After some search we found a newly made path and followed its narrow way into the swamps.

I was leading the troop when I saw ahead a company of armed natives blocking the way. The path was so narrow that our troop could not charge in force, and the screens of the swamp made an attack from them on the flanks and rear hard to resist. Still, it was impossible to retreat, and a bold front was the only resource. I leveled my rifle at the chief who headed the natives. He opened his arms, bearing his shield on the left and lifting his spear at full stretch in his right hand, so that his brawny, glistening body was fully exposed. His action meant: "I am a friend."

I lowered my rifle, and our troop was soon in friendly touch with the natives. The chief asked what we were seeking in the swamps and we told him that we were looking for the missing Boer trekkers. He told me that he had heard of their settlement in the country to the northwest beyond the swamps and would put us on the way to them. After resting for a few hours, the chief and his followers led us across the marshes by paths which we traveled for little more than a week until we came out into an open country where the kopjes were sticking up stiffly like the horns of a young koodoo.

We had hardly reached firm land when our soldiers fell sick. The only one of the company of unshaken spirit was the priest of the troop, a little gray-headed man who was constantly praying, with undimmed faith in God's help, while the man groaned and raved in the delirium of fever. We made hammocks of grass and bamboo poles and natives of the country agreed to carry our sick men for a few of our cartridges.

From the day that we left the swamps a string of graves stretched behind us. One after another of the little troopers fell out of the ranks.

At length we passed the ridge which was pointed out to us as the last to be crossed before reaching the well-watered country called M'Wembi, where the missing party was most likely to be found.

With every passing day our troop dwindled away. Colonel Andreas had been prostrated by fever in the course of our march and was carried in a hammock to our halting place, where he lay for days too sick to take any charge of the camp.

As usual I left my tent about midnight to relieve the watch which the priest was keeping. He was praying before the flickering campfire, and I stood beside him for a moment silently. Suddenly a heart-shaking sound like the roar of lions, but with strange muffled tones, seemed to spring [illegible]

[illegible] went out a little way from camp to a clear space where I could get our bearings. As I was finding my stars I saw a party of natives coming away from our tents, bearing a soldier in a hammock. I supposed that they were taking the body away to bury it. The experience was too common for me to question what they were doing. Once more, after a little time, the mysterious roars arose, and then they stopped and the night was still.

The next night I was aroused again by the strange roars. I took my arms and, half unknowing what I was doing, wandered off from the camp.

In a clump of bush not far away I heard a noise which grew more distinct as I approached. It was the peculiar weird chant of the natives. I crept through the bush and reached an open space where the natives were clustered. There, swung in a hammock, tied hand and foot, was one of our sick soldiers who I could see was still living, and around him danced half a hundred negroes. When the dance was over the blacks took the hammock and went off into the forest. I tried to follow, but my legs trembled and I fell to the ground.

Again the mysterious roars resounded through the darkness. In my weakness I lost consciousness, and when I woke it was daybreak.

THEY DANCED AROUND THEIR VICTIM

I dreaded the coming of night, but it came, and with it the frightful roars that were maddening me.

Except for this sound there was a silence as of death on the camp. I stepped out into the moonlight and stood in the shadow of a mimosa. A moving object caught my eye. A troop of natives in single file crept into camp with the sinuous stealth of a python in the grass. The leader opened the flap of a tent and entered with three followers. A moment later the four carried out a helpless sick man, and the band slid away noiselessly with its captive.

I followed at a little distance, raging at heart, but knowing that an alarm would excite a raid that would kill us all, hopelessly. As we advanced into the forest, the roars grew fiercer and clearer. Soon the natives halted. Torches were lighted and the troop danced around their victim as before. Then, taking up the body, they carried it to a heap of boulders, from whence came the mighty roar, and hurled it into the midst of the rocks.

The roaring died away and the wild laughter of the blacks rang out shrilly. In a moment the band hastened away toward our camp, leaving their smoldering torches among the rocks. Mystified, I crept to the place where I had seen the body thrown. A peculiar low growl greeted me as I reached the rocks. I seized one of the torches and shook it into life, drawing my revolver for instant use.

A dark blot amid the boulders disclosed an opening to my straining eyes. Holding the torch at arm's length, I fell on my knees and peered into the hole. Down among the jagged rocks of a vast den, white with the bones of animals, I saw the green phosphorescent eyes of a pack of lions.

It was a maddening sight, and I could hardly suppress a scream of horror as I ran back into the dark woods and groped through the underbrush toward the camp. I felt that we were powerless to escape these fiends and their idols, the man-eaters of M'Wembi.

That night, far down to the south[illegible]

I walked and crawled through the dorn bosch, but with daylight the fires vanished. There was nothing to do but rest, for I was not sure of the direction of the movement of the campers.

A few hours later gray columns of smoke rose perhaps five miles to the south. Hungry and thirsting and bleeding from thorn scratches, I set out toward the smoke as fast as I could in my fatigued condition. Two hours' walk brought me in view of the unmistakable Boer laager, a square of white-topped wagons around which horses were hitched. Broad-shouldered bearded men, heavily armed and booted, sat around the fires. I cried with joy and, taking my hat in one hand and my rifle in the other, I waved them and staggered on as the campers rushed forward to meet me. It was a party of Boers searching for the same lost voortrekkers.

I told them in a few broken sentences my incredible story. Jan Van Vigl, the leader, listened to me intently.

Word was given to inspan and, ten minutes later, oxen were dragging the groaning wagons in a long line across the country. I was placed on a horse and led the way.

When we came in sight of the camp on the distant hillside the sun was setting. Vigl decided that he would go to the camp with me and lay out a plan of action before the natives learned of the arrival of the Boer commando. We reached the tent under cover of the night, and Van Vigl for the first time heard the mysterious roaring that came out of the earth.

"My God!" he cried, "that's the roar of lions, but it is unearthly!"

"You are right," I muttered. "It came from hell."

We left the tents and made our way through the bush to the opening in the rocks. "When did you say they feed a man to these devils?" Jan asked. I looked at the stars and saw it was about an hour from midnight.

"In an hour, or perhaps two," I answered.

Without a word Van Vigl turned on his heel and walked away. I followed him down hill for some distance.

"What shall we do?"

"We shall do what we always do—an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth! Return to the tent, and when you hear an owl screech twice come back to the cave."

I returned to the camp, armed myself and filled my bandoleer with all the cartridges it would hold. After an impatient wait I heard the signal and made my way to the mouth of the den. As I passed through the bush a black figure rose before me.

"We are here," said Van Vigl. "If they come tonight the lions will have more than their fill."

An hour passed, when the brushing of men through the bush caught our ears. In the opening a troop of men was carrying a body bound tight in a hammock. They halted before the cave and, a moment later, the torches illuminated the night, and they danced around their victim. Then, when the slow whirl ceased, two of them raised the body and carried it toward the mouth of the pit.

A roar of horrid welcome came from the depths of the den, cut by the crack of a rifle driving a bullet into the heart of the black nearest the hole. With a groan he dropped the hammock and fell dead. The natives hurled their torches to the ground and tried to escape. The bushes were riven with flashes as a merciless hail of bullets poured from the guns of the Boers. On every side dry grass and brush set on fire by the torches blazed up, showing the savages against the livid background.

Frantic with the pelt of the bullets and the raging flames that leaped from the grass around their bodies, they rushed in their madness toward the only break in the ring of riflemen, unmindful that it was the mouth of the pit, or seeking any cover from the fire. In a moment we saw them plunging headlong into the depths of the den and heard the roaring rise to the pitch of fury as the waiting lions bounded on their prey.

When the last man fell with a screech we rushed forward and dragged the unconscious soldier from the burning grass.

The next day we returned to the den and filled the mouth with lighted bundles of bushes and dry grass to scare back the lions. When the fire burned out we entered and found the brutes suffocated by the smoke in the farthest recesses of the caves. Scattered about on the stony floor were fragments of human skeletons and rags and patches of clothing and leather, and we saw the tattered felt schoen of the Boers mingled with the uniforms of the Portuguese soldiers. Rings and trinkets, which Van Vigl's party recognised as belonging to the voortrekkers, made the horrid identifications beyond question.

There could be no possible doubt that the adventurous party of Piet Du Toit had fallen sick like our own men and had been carried, one by one, into the den by the [illegible] natives, [illegible]

Eileen

By Jean Dickerson

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Martin sat in the janitor's room of the fashionable apartment house reading a letter that the postman had just handed him. He spelled out the words slowly, and his round, burry face grew more perplexed and dismayed as he reached the end:

"London, January 10th, 1910.

"Dearest Martin: Yure last letter is next my heart. You can never know how proud I am of you to think of Martin Breen being elected mayer of a grate city like new York. I am sending you a bit of newspaper showing what a grate singer is Madame Florelle. Are you proud of me?

"Yore Eileen."

Was he proud of her, his pretty Irish sweetheart from whom he had parted in a green Galway lane two years ago? Then she had voiced her ambition to become a great singer for she had a sweet voice and she wanted to attain greatness of some sort in order to be worthy of the high position that her future husband would make for her in the new world. A policeman cousin had written back to the old home that there was no limit to the power one might attain—and Martin had declared when he kissed Eileen goodby that one day he would be mayor of New York city.

And Eileen had displayed as much ambition on her side. "I will be a great opery singer," she promised.

Her letters from various European cities had borne out this promise. His Eileen was a great singer—he had read her name in the newspapers and a picture of her in a grand satin dress was on his bureau.

Sitting there in the janitor's room of the Luxor apartments, the assistant janitor chewed a penhandle and having derived inspiration from its ragged end, wrote long and laboriously:

"New York City, January 20th.

"Darling Eileen: Tis a proud man I am this day to get yure letter that yure a grete singer. Being mayer of new york is no joke. You'll excuse this hed writing but me sikreterry is sick with the meezles and me orfis boy is writing this because I have a soer thum.

"Yores forever,

"Martin Breen."

Martin blushed at this lying epistle as he held it gingerly in his fingers on the way to the letter box in the vestibule. Two years—and he had climbed only so far as assistant janitor!

Martin Stared In His Turn.

What would Eileen say when she discovered his duplicity? He could not bear to destroy her faith in him and yet every day piled higher the mountain of deceit between them.

"Next letter I'll tell her I'm a failure—and a liar as never was!" he promised himself as the letter slipped through the opening.

He turned on the step to confront a dapper little man.

"I am come to look at the suite engaged for Madame Florelle," he said with a glance at Martin's trim uniform.

"Who?" yelled Martin, aghast.

"Madame Florelle," returned the other with a reproving smile. "She has engaged through me, her press agent, room in this apartment hotel. She sings next week in ze Metropole. My name is Bouchard—Paul Bouchard. If you will show me ze rooms—"

"Sure," said Martin. "The janitor himself will be doing that. I'll call him."

Martin's life the next few days was anything but happy. A dozen times he started to run away from the retribution that would overtake him when Eileen arrived with her train of servants. He heard all the details of the expected arrival.

There were to be three servants—a lady's maid, a man servant and a chauffeur, for the great singer would bring her own motor car.

"Howly saints, but I can't stand looking in her clear eyes and have her know me for a liar," he groaned during his sleepless nights. "I'll run away—I must see her just once—and tell her meself. I'll face her and tell her and when she scorns me—I'll go then—somewhere where there's a job for a lying fool of an Irishman!"

Martin [illegible]

constant wail of protest from the tenants of the big building. It was growing colder out now and something must be done.

The tenants were bombarding the janitor and in his turn he passed the blame along to Martin, who worked like a heaver in the furnace rooms urging on the workmen to complete the job.

When the janitor went to supper Martin climbed up to the office to take his place. He was hot and tired, and there were streaks of black on his countenance. For the moment he had forgotten his own troubles—there was trouble enough in the furnace room below.

A light step sounded behind him and he swung about to confront a trim lady's maid—a vision in short black gown, ruffled white apron and coquettish cap on her golden hair.

When she saw his face the color went away from her cheeks and lips and she shrank back against the door with frightened eyes. It was Eileen.

Martin stared in his turn. Why was the great Mme. Florelle masquerading as a lady's maid—unless she was play-acting?

Eileen was looking at his natty blue uniform with its gold braid, perhaps she overlooked the smirch of black on his cheek.

"Martin," she said, timidly.

"Then it is you, Eileen," he said in a shamed tone. "You expected to find the mayor of New York when you saw me agin, but I'm a liar—I wrote you lies—I ain't nothing but what you see, assistant janitor—and I may never be anything except janitor. I waited to ask your forgiveness—then I'm going away."

The color flared back into her cheeks. She stepped forward. "Is that true?" she asked, eagerly.

He nodded. "Such a grand lady as you are will be ashamed to know me. Are you play-actin' in that dress?"

Eileen drew very close to him.

"I came down to ask you for more heat in Madame Florelle's room. I am her maid—yes, look at me, Martin, dear, for I'm the biggest story-teller as ever was! I never could sing half good enough—they laughed at me for trying, but I've been maid to Madame Florelle—and I was ashamed to tell you about it, believing you to be so grand here! I had my picture taken in one of her dresses and sent it to you—I'm dreadful wicked! You will despise me!"

The last words were muffled on Martin's shoulder and when Eileen lifted her face part of the smirch from Martin's face was transferred to her own pretty cheek.

"We're both deceivers. We can start even, Eileen, darlin'—but I fear ye'll never be the wife of a mayor of New York if you marry me!"

"I don't care who I marry if it's only you," whispered Eileen.

AGE COUNTED BY CENTURIES

One of California's Immense Sequoias Undoubtedly More Than Three Thousand Years Old.

Huge as the sequoias are, their size is scarcely so wonderful as their age. A tree that has lived 500 years is still in its early youth; one that has rounded out a thousand summers and winters is only in full maturity; and old age, the threescore years and ten of the sequoias, does not come for seventeen or eighteen centuries. How old the oldest trees may be is not yet certain, but I have counted the rings of forty that were over 2,000 years of age, of three that were over 3,000, and of one that was 3,150. In the days of the Trojan war and of the exodus of the Hebrews from Egypt this oldest tree was a sturdy sapling with stiff, prickly foliage like that of a cedar, but far more compressed. It was doubtless a graceful, sharply conical tree, 20 or 30 feet high, with dense, horizontal branches, the lower ones of which swept the ground. Like the young trees of today, the ancient sequoia and the clump of trees of similar age which grew close to it must have been a charming adornment of the landscape. By the time of Marathon the trees had lost the hard, sharp lines of youth, and were thoroughly mature. The lower branches had disappeared up to a height of a hundred feet or more; the giant trunks were disclosed as bare, reddish columns covered with soft bark six inches or a foot in thickness; the upper branches had assumed a slightly drooping aspect; and the spiny foliage, far removed from the ground, had assumed a graceful rounded appearance. Then for centuries, through the days of Rome, the dark ages, and all the period of the growth of European civilization, the ancient giants preserved the same appearance, strong and solid, but with a strangely attractive, approachable quality.—Ellsworth Huntington, in Harper's Magazine.

Exposition of Book-Making.

At Leipsic, the great center of the book industry in Germany, there will be held from May to October, 1914, an international exposition of bookmaking and the graphic arts connected therewith, including photography. It will serve to commemorate the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Royal Academy for Graphic Arts and Book Industry at Leipsic. The exposition will include the following sections: The graphic and book arts; book industrial sections; the manufacture of paper; photography and reproduction technics; photography and production technics; processes of printing, publication and bookbinding; library work; educational appliances; machines, apparatus and implements; hygiene in manufactories and work[illegible] welfare

BOY WINS SYMPATHY

MAN ROBBED BY ELMER REYNOLDS MAY TRY TO HAVE CASE DROPPED.

DISPOSAL TO LENIENCY.

County Prosecutor, However, Inclined to Belief That Youthful Raffles Should Be Punished for His Crime.

Stillwater.—Modern ideas on the reformation of youthful criminals may play an important part in freeing Elmer Reynolds, the 14-year-old boy burglar arrested at White Bear lake for a series of bold daylight robberies in houses of the society colony there. The youthful Raffles, who has made a full confession, was arranged in municipal court here before Judge Gillan, but sentence was held up awaiting the arrival of the boy's father, Joseph A. Reynolds of Winnipeg.

George A. Watson, St. Paul, plaintiff in the case against the boy, and from whose house the youthful burglar obtained $5, said in view of the lad's repentance and good family connections, he was inclined to leniency in the case.

"After the boy's father arrives and I have had a talk with him, I may decide to ask J. C. Nethaway, county attorney, to drop the suit," Mr. Watson said. "If I find from the boy's father that the lad never has been guilty of robberies such as he committed at White Bear lake, I would prefer to see the boy go free, for I think he has learned his lesson."

Mr. Watson is not prosecuting the case, the court having selected the Watson robbery only as basis for a specific charge of petty larceny against young Reynolds.

Judge Gillan, before whom the boy burglar was arraigned, declared he would be the last one to stand in the way of the boy's freedom if Mr. Watson and the boy's father deemed it advisable to give the lad a chance.

"I'm not favorable to the idea of sending every boy who commits a crime to the training school at Red Wing," said Judge Gillan. "I believe in giving a boy a chance. The Reynolds boy is a nice lad and evidently has come from a good family. He appears to be sorry for what he has done and with all things considered I would hesitate and dislike to force the reformatory stigma upon him.

"I will be guided, however, as I must be, by the attitude of Mr. Nethaway, our county attorney. If he asks that the case be dropped, I would not attempt to halt the plan."

Mr. Nethaway said he was not inclined to be lenient with the boy. He declared at present he was of the opinion the case should be pushed, although, he said, he was not ready to declare this with finality.

"I am not in favor of freeing the boy because of the example it would set for other boys," said the judge. "I'm afraid if the boy were given his liberty other boys his age would think they could commit crime and be let off because of their first offense. Leniency on the part of the court, I believe, has the tendency to breed crime. The Reynolds boy has committed a crime and should be punished as an example."

The father said he would come to Stillwater or send a friend, to investigate his son's arrest.

FORECAST GOOD TIME.

Abundance of Small Game Declared to Be Practically Assured.

Winona.—Quail hunting is going to be good this fall and winter in the Mississippi valley, according to persons who watch such things. They state that there are numerous coveys, where a few years ago there were but few or none at all, and the coveys as a rule are large. The youngsters are already quite good sized and there are no probabilities of being killed off by rain or storm before shooting time comes.

In the grain fields in certain parts of the state it is said there are many more prairie chickens than are usually seen and the hunters are looking forward to some good shooting as soon as the season opens.

Young squirrels are numerous in those sections of the country where there is sufficient timber to encourage them to make their homes, while on every side come reports that the fields are filled with young rabbits that are now almost large enough to bag. On the whole, the hunters of southern Minnesota are feeling good over the prospect of some fine shooting when the shooting time arrives.

Postmaster in Session.

Rochester. — The third annual meeting of the First district postmasters' league was held in Rochester with 25 attending.

Decision in Samaritan Case.

Duluth. — Judge Daniel in district court has just filed findings in which he refuses to recognize the expulsions of A. E. McManus as general counsellor and W. A. Hicken as imcontroversy; also finds that the July controversy; also finds that the July meeting of the imperial council was illegally called; that of Collier's term of office as imperial treasurer expired in June; that no successor to Collier has been legally elected. Also to continue an order restraining the new officers from interfering with the old [illegible]

LARGE YIELDS—CHEAPER FOOD

BIG WHEAT YIELD HAS FAR-REACHING EFFECT.

Millers Predict That Flour Prices Will Drop Materially This Season.

Minneapolis. —A long wished for era of low cost of living is foreseen in the indications that the Northwest will have a bumper crop this year. Wm. Regan of Regan brothers, bakers, said that with cheaper flour, loaves of bread would be larger. Some millers are sanguine enough to believe that there will be a time shortly when bakers will go back to the pound loaf, instead of the 14 ounce loaf now sold for five cents.

Wholesale meat dealers say that if the prospects that now obtain are borne out later, meat will be cheaper because feed will be cheaper. Poultry eggs and dairy products will experience similar decreases in price to the consumer.

Speaking of the cost of flour, H. S. Helm of the Russell-Miller Milling company said: "Because of the magnificant prospects of the growing crop wheat prices have already worked down 20 cents a bushel in a few months. In consequence, flour prices are 75 to 90 cents a barrel lower than a few months ago."

J. J. Swaeford of Armour & Co., regarded as one of the best authorities in the Northwest on conditions in the wholesale and retail meat market, said that if the present promise of a large corn crop were fulfilled there would be little doubt that there would be a decrease in the wholesale and retail price of meat.

The effect on the price of dairy products is obvious. Farmers who have not been able to get feed at low prices have sold their cattle to the packer rather than bear the expense of feeding them. If the herds of the United States are increased, and the number of cattle on farms are increased on account of the cheap fodder, the price of milk, butter and eggs should be much lower.

The principal applied to live stock may be applied to poultry. Farmers will be able to make a regular business of their chicken raising instead of allowing it to be a hit or miss industry as in years past, when the chickens have been forced to forage for themselves.

NEW COMMISSION NAMED

Governor Makes Up New List for State Commission.

St. Paul.—A new Minnesota conservation commission was appointed by Governor A. O. Eberhart, following a request by the Minnesota Federation of Commercial clubs and the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce association. Notices of appointment were sent out today and the new commission will be called together as soon as acceptances have been received. The appointees include nine members of the old commission. Those appointed are:

Chairman, D. M. Neill, Red Wing, president Minnesota Federation of Commercial clubs, reappointed.

Vice-chairman, Fendall G. Winston, Minneapolis Civic and Commerce association.

H. C. Misner, Crookston, Northern Minnesota Development association.

W. A. McGonagle, Duluth Commercial club, reappointed.

F. A. Patrick, Duluth, vice-president Citizens' League of Minnesota.

Major Hubert V. Eva, Duluth, secretary Duluth Commercial club, reappointed.

Joseph Chapman, Jr., Minneapolis, chairman committee on agricultural education, American Bankers' association.

W. G. Bierd, Minneapolis, vice-president Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad.

F. A. Chamberlain, Minneapolis, president Security National bank.

Edmund Pennington, Minneapolis,

Harry A. Tuttle, Minneapolis Commercial club, reappointed.

W. L. Harris, Minneapolis Civic and Commerce association, reappointed.

George E. Vincent, Minneapolis,

Curtis L. Mosher, Red Wing, executive agent Minnesota Federation of Commercial clubs, reappointed.

John J. Furlong, Austin.

A. F. Woods, dean state agricultural college.

C. W. Glotfelter, Waterville, president state fair board.

Eli S. Warner, St. Paul, vice-president Association of Commerce, reappointed.

Howard Elliott, president Northern Pacific railway.

H. J. Maxfield, state commissioner of immigration.

H. H. Bigelow, St. Paul.

J. H. Rich, Red Wing, president Citizens' league of Minnesota.

Louis W. Hill, chairman of directors, Great Northern railway, reappointed.

Samuel G. Iverson, state auditor, reappointed.

J. W. Wheeler, St. Paul, chairman committee on agricultural education,

A. O. Eberhart, governor.

Dodges Bull; Breaks Neck.

Karlstad. — Nels Rund of Nelson Park died as the result of a unique accident. He was taking some cattle into Karlstad, and among them was a bull that was rather wild. Just as Rund was climbing aboard the hayrack the bull made a lunge for him and he had to jump for the back railing. As he swung one leg over the top board it broke, and he fell head-first to the ground, breaking his neck. Rund was one of the most prominent men of Nelson Park township.

TRIES TO PLACATE CROWD

ASSISTANT RISKS LIFE WHEN AVIATOR REFUSES.

Machine Totally Wrecked and Pilot Is Taken to the Hospital.

Winona.—Forced into making a flight in spite of the treacherous air currents to satisfy a large Winona crowd at the fair grounds, M. Singh of Chicago was badly, though not fatally, injured when the machine turned turtle at an altitude of about 50 feet and plunged to the ground with its pilot.

An aviation and automobile meet was scheduled as advertised for last Sunday, but after the patrons of the exhibition had gathered, it was announced that the Curtiss aeroplane had been so badly damaged in attempted flights that that portion of the program would have to be postponed until later.

Grounds Are Packed.

The grounds were packed at the time set in anticipation of the flights. A high wind was blowing at the time and the regular flier, S. Shesgreen, declined to go into the air current. Singh, a full-blood Hindoo, who was with the company, volunteered his services after the crowd became impatient with the apparent unwillingness of the promoters of the exhibition to carry out the program.

The machine made a perfect start and was about 50 feet in the air and directly in front of the stand, when the engine suddenly stopped, the nose of the machine dipped and paused, and then came crashing to the ground.

When about 15 feet from the ground the aeroplanist either jumped or was thrown clear of the wings and fell a short distance from the point where the machine was splintered to kindling wood. He was picked up unconscious and bleeding from wounds on the head.

At the hospital it is stated that one arm was broken, his head cut in several places, and his body bruised.

PLAN MUTUAL AID.

Rural Carriers Elect Officers and Indorse Legislation.

St. Peter.—The annual meeting of the State Rural Carriers' association, which was held here, was one of the most successful in the history of the association. Over 100 delegates were present, representing eighteen counties. Charles Ferbee, of the state highway commission, discussed the matter of good roads and gave information as to how carriers, being vitally interested, could aid in getting them.

W. D. Brown, editor of the Rural Free Delivery News, of Washington, delivered an address on the work being done with reference to salaries, and particularly with reference to the salary bill now pending. He advocated the house bill fixing a standard rule of twenty-four miles with a salary of $1,000 per annum and $30 additional a mile.

The secretary reported eighteen counties fully organized, with a membership of 334, an increase over last year of 100 members. An organizer will be put into the field to fully organize the state the coming year.

Resolutions were adopted favoring the establishment of a set of rules governing the pay of carriers for incomplete service and not putting the matter in the hands of local postmasters, as is now done; also for the establishment of the road labor tax and for federal improvements for roads on rural routes. The resolutions indorsed the state one-mill road tax, the state highway commission, the rural carriers' salary bill, as passed by the house, and the efforts of the Rural Free Delivery News toward securing the passage of that bill. Appreciation was expressed for the recommendation for their welfare given by the postmaster general in his last report. It was requested that patrons of rural routes be given an opportunity to express a preference regarding the delivery of mail on Christmas day.

L. H. Wilson of Olivia was indorsed for secretary of the national organization.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, J. H. Drew, Red Wing; vice president, R. H. McKay, Rush City; secretary, F. E. Hasselroth, Braham; treasurer, F. H. Hunter, Anoka. Executive Board—J. E. McNally, Little Falls; M. H. Stoehel, Mapleton; H. F. Hines, Cannon Falls. Delegates to national convention, at Nashville, Sept. 17-20, J. F. McNally, Little Falls; W. O. Layton, St. Peter; H. H. Lobb, Winnebago; George J. Rose, Mankato, and F. E. Hesselroth, Braham. Alternates, F. C. Schwartz, Austin; Albert Gerber, Wayzata; F. M. Lev, Jackson; A. E. Niehoff, St. James; Ed Nelson, Zumbrota.

Zumbrota, Stillwater, Morris and Duluth were in the race for the convention of 1913, but Duluth won by a big majority.

$1,600 BANK ROBBERY.

Cashier of Cohasset, Minn., Forced Into Vault.

Bemidji, Minn. — Two unidentified masked and armed men entered the bank at Cohasset, imprisoned the cashier, F. J. Skoedele, in a vault and escaped with all the money in sight, $1,600 in cash. The men fled into the woods west of town. Sheriff Reilly and a posse are in pursuit and the sheriffs of surrounding counties have been notified [illegible]

WILLING HE SHOULD GO FAR

One Man to Have Kid Transferred, but He May Have Had a Grouch.

"What do you think of this scheme of having the countries exchange children?" asked the Sewickley man.

"I don't think anything about it," said the Wilkinsburg man. "What is the idea?"

"An English family, for instance, exchanges children for a couple of years with a German family. References are first exchanged, and all sorts of things."

"I see."

"Thus both sets of children get a chance to learn another language and get acquainted with another country. It's quite a scheme."

"It's an elegant scheme," declared the Wilkinsburg man. "My neighbors have a kid that I would like to see exchanged with some family in Siberia."

How He Left.

The servants were discussing the matter below stairs.

"Master and mistress 'ad something of a row last night, I 'ear," said the butler ponderously.

"They tell me 'e ran out, cranked 'is motor car and left in it."

"You should have heard 'em," answered the parlor maid in a shocked tone. "Scandalous is what I calls it!"

"No," said the maid, positively, "he didn't leave in his machine; I distinctly heard the mistress say he left in a huff."—London Answers.

CHILD'S FACE ALL RED SPOTS

632 N. 5th St., Terre Haute, Ind.—"My little nephew, a boy of four years, had a breaking out on his face. It was little red spots at first, then he would rub and scratch and water blisters would form, and wherever the water would run another would come until his face was covered with them. He would cry and fret. His mother got some medicine, but it did not do any good. He would scream and cry and say it hurt. We hardly knew him, his little face was all red spots and blisters. So I begged him to let me put some Cuticura Ointment on them. The next morning I made a strong soap suds with Cuticura Soap and washed his face in the warm suds. The little blisters burst by pressing the cloth on them. After I had his face washed, I put the Cuticura Ointment on and in a short time his little face was all red and dry. I kept using the Cuticura Soap and putting on the Cuticura Ointment and his face got as well and it did not leave a scar. He was entirely cured in about one week and a half." (Signed) Mrs. Arthur Haworth, Jan. 10, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

Case of Mistaken Identity.

President Taft was out for his afternoon walk in Washington one day when a flaxen-haired little girl ran out in front of him, held up her finger, and exclaimed, in a shrill voice:

"I know who you are!"

The president, thinking it not at all unusual that she should possess this information, but willing to gratify her, asked:

"Well, who am I?"

"Aw," she said teasingly, "you're Humpty Dumpty."—Popular Magazine.

Fitting Crime.

He—I know who egged you on to this.

She—Who egged me on?

He—That old hen.

Lots of people are more anxious to pay their social obligations than their debts.

ONE EXPLANATION.

The Serious Man—He has six daughters, but he won't let any of them get married.

The Joker—Maybe he doesn't want to break the set.

Got His Answer.

When Oscar Wilde came to the United States to lecture on aesthetics in his highly aesthetic velvet costumes—and incidentally to prepare the public mind for the proper appreciation of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Patience," in which the aesthetic movement was held up to ridicule—he used to complain that America was very uninteresting since it had "no antiquities and no curiosities." But he ventured on this disparagement once too often, for in the course of his travels he uttered it to the American Girl, and she replied with the demure depravity of candid innocence that this was not quite a fair reproach, since "we shall have the antiquities in time, and we are already importing the curiosities."

Births in the Air.

The International Congress on Aerial Legislation, sitting at Geneva, Switzerland, is evolving a very detailed code of laws. One of its suggested paragraphs reads: "In the event of a birth occurring in an air craft the pilot is to enter the event in his log book and must notify the fact to the authorities at the first place at which he descends."

His Reason.

He—Dearest—During the first dance I have with you be sure and say something to me.

She—Why?

He—Because you're so light, if you don't speak I will not know I have you in my arms.—Princeton Tiger.

Exceptions.

Pater Familias—History repeats itself.

Smart Child—Not when it's my lesson.

There are lots of funny things to be seen in this world, and among them is a fat woman sitting on a little piano stool.

The Paxton Toilet Co. of Boston, Mass., will send a large trial box of Paxtine Antiseptic, a delightful cleansing and germicidal toilet preparation, to any woman, free, upon request.

Reservations.

She—Let me be the first aid to the injured.

He—If you're sure it won't be lemonade.—Baltimore American.

CURES BURNS AND CUTS.
Cole's Carbolisalve stops the pain instantly. Cures quick. No scar. All druggists, 25 and 50c.

Even the man who is his own worst enemy is always ready to forgive himself.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

It's easier to catch a husband than to uncatch him.

MOTHER OF LARGE FAMILY

Tells How She Keeps Her Health — Happiness For Those Who Take Her Advice.

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has helped her.

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to your wonderful medicine." —Mrs. J. G. JOHNSON, Scottville, Mich., R.F.D. 3.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for woman's ills known.

The Army of Constipation
Is Growing Smaller Every Day.
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are responsible — they not only give relief — they permanently cure Constipation. Millions use them for Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Sallow Skin.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.
Genuine must bear Signature
Brent Good

SOUTH GEORGIA
I would like to tell you something about the best section of the country and the best town in South Georgia. Many Northern and Western people live here. If you want a factory location, a farm or just a home write me fully. I have nothing to sell but want good citizens to come here to live and be happy. A. B. COOK, Mayor of Fitzgerald, Ga., Presi. 3d Nat'l Bank

160 Acre Farm in Canada Free
Western Canada offers great opportunities for farming, dairying, grain raising, fruit growing, stock raising and mixed farming. Thousands of acres of good land free in Alberta. Timber and immense deposits of mineral, coal, clay, shales, etc., await the manufacturer. The Calgary Standard has prepared an illustrated souvenir edition that will tell you how to acquire 160 acres of land free, and other valuable information. It will be mailed absolutely without cost to you. Send your name today. If industrious you will do well here. Ad. Calgary Standard, Calgary, Can.

OLD SORES CURED
Allen's Ulcerine Salve cures Chronic Ulcers, Bone Ulcers, Scrofulous Ulcers, Varicose Ulcers, Indolent Ulcers, Mercurial Ulcers, White Swelling, Milk Leg, Fever Sores, all old sores. By mail 50c. Booklet free. J. P. ALLEN, Dept. A6, St. Paul, Minn.

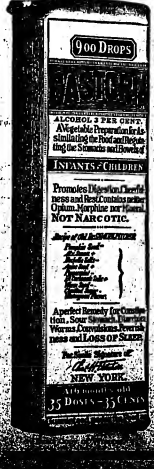
DEFIANCE Cold Water Starch makes laundry work a pleasure. 16 oz. pkg. 10c.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 34–1912.



900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL 3 PER CENT.
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of INFANTS & CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral.
NOT NARCOTIC.
NEW YORK.
35 DOSES — 35 CENTS

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought
In Use For Over 30 Years
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

The Corrector of Destinies

Being Tales of Randolph Mason as Related by His Private Secretary, Courtland Parks

The Burgoyne-Hayes Dinner

By Melville Davisson Post

Copyright by Edward J. Clode

The dinner given by Mrs. Burgoyne-Hayes to Prince Edward of Hesse Mechel-Schweren will be always remembered by New York. The proud old dowager cut society like a butcher. The list was a streak of blood. No massacre of King Philip's war ever left more savagery skulking in the bushes. The terrible old woman openly declared that she intended to give New York the bayonet, as her great relative did in 1777.

I shall always remember this dinner for another reason. It was the first appearance in America of Beatrix Waldo after her marriage with Capt. Gordon Smith of his majesty's lines in South Africa. There were a lot of floating, disconnected rumors about this marriage. Beatrix certainly posed as an heiress before the Englishman went under the yoke, and we got the impression, doubtless directly, that he had a large estate somewhere on Loch Codan, £5,000, at any rate, over his pay. Then we heard later on, through Jimmie Dale, I think—he always knew the foreign gossip—that the Englishman did not have a brass farthing over his pay, and was rather worse off than that by a fat budget of debts. We knew that Beatrix had no income to speak of—her aunt kept the gown-makers going for her. There were wild lands, back inland somewhere, that Beatrix used to turn into oil, coal and spruce lumber when she got to dreaming, but the over-drained old aunt used to pay taxes on them, and I think that was about the only reminder of the fortune that ever came along to New York.

I had Sarah Lamarr on my right at this dinner, and, fortunately, an impossible German person on her right, who kept his nose well in his wines and pates. I wanted to ask Sarah Lemarr about Beatrix, and was glad of the Teuton's exclusive interest in his stomach. I shared a rather general curiosity. The Englishman was here with Beatrix, putting in his leave of absence. If they mooned for vanished Eldorados, one saw no tear-stains in it. I thought the pair of them at the far end of the table looked happy enough, pretty comfortable for disillusioned fortune hunters. Presently I got Sarah Lemarr to myself, and was about to inquire into the mystery when she took the very subject from the tip of my tongue.

"I have been hoping for a word with you, Courtlandt," she said; "it's about Beatrix Smith. She needs your assistance."

"I am not a divorce lawyer," I said.

"Nonsense, Courtlandt," she answered; "they love each other. They are lovers. Can you gather the significance of such an undreamed of ending to the effort each of them made to marry a fortune?"

"Then," I said, "Beatrix cannot need assistance. Poets tell us that lovers do not dwell in this land of trolley cars and spindles, but somewhere on blessed islands they are happy."

"But, my dear boy," said Sarah Lemarr, "one might take a stone bruise or a thorn in the thumb even on a blessed island."

"Not so," I answered; "the Well at the World's End is there, and whosoever tasteth thereof shall be perfect as his dreams are perfect, and around and all about this land Lethe, the River of Oblivion, rolls its watery labyrinth. Nay, do not interrupt me; the human heart longs with a longing that cannot be uttered for this enchanted country where, you tell me, Beatrix walks with her Englishman."

"Well!" said Sarah Lemarr. "Who is the girl, Courtlandt?"

"There you go," I said, "demonstrating the greatest unwritten truth about a woman; namely, that every reflection arises from a personal experience. If one deplores sin, he has robbed his employer in his youth; if one apostrophizes love, he is about to marry Miss Jones of Forty-eighth street. The girl in my case, dear Madame von Hubert, is that mysterious fairy-woman, daughter of Abu Jaffer, surnamed the Victorious, second Caliph of Bagdad under the dynasty of the Abbasides, asleep on her silk carpet in Arabia."

Here the impossible German person interrupted to inquire if I thought the truffles were canned. I did not think they were canned, and he was content; but the moment gave Sarah Lemarr a lead and she seized it with the practical directness of a New Bedford skipper.

"Now, Courtlandt," she said, "be sensible. Beatrix needs $40,000."

"How original of Beatrix," I replied. "Most of us need only a couple of hundred."

"If you are going to be nasty about it, Courtlandt," she said, "I will never speak to you again. You must help Beatrix to find this $40,000. The poor girl is dreadfully worried about it. You see, Courtlandt, when the two of them awoke after the honeymoon to find their estate all Castilian haze, instead of a conventional separation they fell in love with each other like a couple of Breton peasants. Beatrix told me all about it; she is lovely. She does not want the money for herself; she wants it to pay Lieut. Gordon Smith's debts. When his debts are paid, he will be made a captain and transferred to his old regiment in India. Beatrix adores India; she is quite content to go out there and live quietly on a captain's pay, and love her big Englishman and be happy. But she wants his debts cleared off; 'his honor untarnished,' she calls it. It seems to mean a lot to her, and she is so absurdly in love with the tall soldier that it is enough to break a body's heart. Now, Courtlandt, where are we to get this money for her?"

"Unfortunately," I replied, "I do not at this moment think of a convenient orphan to rob. How would it do to rifle the poor box at St. Thomas'?"

Sarah Lemarr ignored my second offense after the manner of a woman, and, likewise, true to the same manner, gave the remainder of the story after having asked a decision in the midst of it.

"You remember Beatrix owned several thousand acres of forest land back somewhere in the Alleghanies, in some county of the Virginias. Let—me—see, she said the name had been a fortunate one for the first Captain Smith in America, and ought not to fail the second one."

"Pocahontas," I suggested.

"How stupid!" she said. "Of course, Pocahontas. Well, some lumber company has managed to steal half of Beatrix's land, and it, and some other rival companies, now want to buy the remainder of her. They will give $20,000. They have been dogging her footsteps ever since she landed in New York. But this is only $20,000, and Beatrix needs $40,000. If she could get back the land which has been stolen, it would bring the other $20,000. I don't know how they managed to get it. Beatrix has the whole story in detail, with maps and so forth. I think she failed to pay the taxes at some time, and they stole it that way. Now, Courtlandt, you must induce Mr. Mason to get Beatrix's land for her. She is stopping with me, you know. Bring him to my house tomorrow for dinner. Lieut. Gordon Smith is going to Washington tomorrow to call on the British legation and will not return until very late; but he knows nothing about it. Beatrix is the business agent for the pair of them."

I smiled at the artlessness of Mme. von Hubert. "Certainly," I said; "but why not bring the man in the moon, too, and the Witch of Endor. Randolph Mason is hardly the sort of person that goes out to dinner."

"Well, then," said Sarah Lemarr, "bring him after dinner. I will write him a little note."

I could have laughed in the girl's face. "What will you say in your little note?" I inquired.

"Oh, well, what any one would say," she answered, "that I wish to see him on an important business matter."

"And do you know," I said, "what would happen to your little note?"

"What would happen to it?" she said. Her chin went up. She was a social overlord, this Mme. von Hubert. Her invitations were commands. The social aspirant dreamed of their coming, as of that of Abou ben Adhem's Angel.

"This would happen," I answered. "Randolph Mason would rip open the envelope with his long finger, fold back the paper where you creased it across the middle, and drop it into the waste basket."

A red flush sprang up along her dog collar of diamonds. I hurried to explain. "I beg your pardon," I said; "but you must think of Randolph Mason as you would of an eccentric scientist—Darwin or Agassiz—an intellectual recluse without emotions, a sort of Hindoo ascetic of a high order. You could not write any of these such a note; neither could you write such a not to him. Now, there is a sort of note which you might write to any of these, and you might try such a note on him, although I have little hope of it."

Mme. von Hubert's head was still in the air. "You mean," she said, "such a note ought to run: 'Will the ogre kindly meet a kissable fairy on the north side of the hawthorn thicket at moonrise?' I believe your scientist, no matter how old, usually comes out of his shell for this sort of thing." But she could not keep her exquisite good nature under a bushel for long. She began to laugh. "Really, Courtlandt, to be serious, what ought I to write him? We must have his help for Beatrix."

"The sort of note," I said, "that you would write to a famous archaeologist, if you wished him to call and examine a rare Egyptian pot, or to a numismatist if you possessed a coin of the time of Cyrus, or to a bacteriologist if you had a culture of the bubonic plague for him. Invite him to the examination of a case of rare and interesting injustice, at your residence on Eighty-sixth street at nine o'clock tomorrow night."

I was going on to explain about this note a little in detail, but the impossible German suddenly realized that he ought to talk, and at once set about it with the persistence and regularity of a man filing a saw. We resisted as long as we could, and then gave it up for another Sedan. We were rescued finally by Mme. Castaigne, who gave some fragments from Moliere. I tried to get a further word with [illegible] Smith, but [illegible] Burgoyne-Hayes demanded me.

"I must present you to the prince, Courtlandt," she said. "Your great-grandfather on your mother's side, I think, was a soldier of our King George."

"Yes, madam," I said, "but the grand duke of Hesse-Darmstadt drew his pay."

I did not see the note which Mme. von Hubert wrote to Randolph Mason; but it was effective. He requested me to return after dinner and accompany him to Eighty-sixth street. The von Huberts have a residence on Eighty-sixth street. We arrived there on the hour and were shown into the library. Randolph Mason at once sat down in a heavy black oak chair before the fire. This chair was a massive and curious piece. It was carved by the peasants of the Black Forest for the baron's grandfather. The tortuous shapes forming its arms and legs are like the gargoyles to be seen under the roofs of castles on the Rhine, and now and then in Paris.

I was impressed by the picture of Mason in this massive chair. His long, sinewy fingers gripping the writhing features of the hideous oaken monsters, his face thrown partly into shadow by the flaming logs on the hearth. The masterful iron face, the lean, hard jaw with its projecting chin, the fearless, bony nose appearing in the fantastic light flattened a little at the end, like that of a beast of prey, and the craggy forehead—all colored, browned, reddened by the fire.

I heard the latch of the door click, and looked up to see Beatrix Smith standing on the threshold, looking at Mason with profound interest. Her lips were parted and her eyes wide. She had not thought to come on this curious picture of the middle ages taken down from some Italian gallery and propped up here in the library of the von Huberts. She bowed to me, crossed the room and sat down by the library table a little beyond Randolph Mason, at the corner of the fire.

"Madam," said Randolph Mason, "do not worry me with petty bickering."

Presently Mason looked up at her, "Is this Mme. von Hubert?" he said, without rising, without an inflection of interest or courtesy, as he would have said: "Is this the contract?" "The bond in question?"

She flushed a little. "No," she answered; "I am merely the interesting case that you came to examine into."

"Give me the details of it," said Mason.

She began at once without introduction or verbiage and told her story with a brevity and directness that I could not associate with that rather silly Beatrix Waldo who used to go up and down through the drawing-rooms of Newport looking for a rich husband.

She had inherited from her father two thousand acres of wild forest land in the county of Pocahontas in the state of West Virginia. She and her aunt had watched it carefully and paid the taxes on it each year; they had even taken the little local newspaper [illegible] the hordes of dangerous and unscrupulous land thieves said to infest the mountain districts of the Virginias. But her great care was not sufficient against the ingenuity of these pirates. After one of the periodic assessments of real estate, one thousand acres of her estate were listed on the land books under the name of Walden, returned delinquent, and sold for taxes. The land was purchased by Gilbert Williams, president of the Black Creek Lumber company, for $36.85. She had paid no attention to the sale, not recognizing her land under this name until she came to have the estate surveyed a few months ago, some five or six years after its purchase at the tax sale by Gilbert Williams. She also learned that the whole thing was a well planned and effective scheme of this owner of the Black Creek Lumber company to steal her land. These wild lands had vastly increased in value.

This company and a rival one, the Export Spruce company, were exceedingly anxious to purchase the remaining tract. They would give, she thought, twenty dollars an acre for it. The agents of the two companies had been at her heels ever since she arrived in New York. Gilbert Williams was now at the Fifth Avenue hotel. He had endeavored to reach her by telephone this very evening. He offered a little better price than the Export Spruce company, but he could well afford to, since he it was that had stolen half the land. The agent of the Export Spruce company was at the Holland. His note, on the table, requested an interview with her at any hour she would name, day or night. This indicated how very desirous they were for the land. Such a sale would yield her twenty thousand dollars. All the lands would have given her the forty thousand which she needed. Her name now was Beatrix Smith; she had married Lieutenant Gordon Smith the year before. He was in Washington today, but would return before eleven o'clock this night.

That was the whole history, brief, accurate and devoid of superfluous comment. She had there on the table the original deed, maps and tax receipts.

Mason's face showed marked annoyance, as that of an eminent surgeon would, who, having been sent for in hot haste, arrives to find the patient with a bumped nose.

"Why do you send for me?" he said; "any lawyer could adjust this problem."

"It is vital to me," replied the woman; "it means my happiness and my husband's career. I beg you to help me."

Her eyes began to fill up and her lips trembled with distress.

Randolph Mason gave no attention to the woman's emotions. He sat, beating the tips of his fingers on the arms of the chair, with evident annoyance.

"Let us get the thing over, then," he said. "Call up this man, Gilbert Williams. Say to him that Mrs. Smith has determined to sell the lands; ask him to come here at once with a notary [illegible] Beatrix Smith; "sell the land to Williams? the man who robbed me! How can that help?"

"Madam," said Randolph Mason, "do not worry me with petty bickering."

I signaled Beatrix Smith to a conference with me in the hall. "Do exactly as he says," I whispered when we were outside the door, "and hurry."

She promised and went swiftly upstairs to the telephone.

In a very few minutes Gilbert Williams arrived. He was a red-haired old fellow with a face like a fox, and beady eyes set obliquely in his head. Randolph Mason arose when he came in, and explained that as Mrs. Smith wished to leave America at once, she had determined to sell her lands, provided cash was paid. The lands were worth thirty thousand dollars, but her husband was absent and could not convey his curtesy in the deed. She would therefore take twenty thousand cash and make a deed on the spot. Gilbert Williams snapped up the offer. He did not care anything about the curtesy of the husband. The land itself was worth nothing, the timber only was valuable. His mills would cut it off in a year, and he was willing to take the chance of Mrs. Smith's living that long. He produced a deed, which he had brought with him to New York, and ran a pen through the blank which it contained for the husband's name. Beatrix signed the deed, and the notary who accompanied Williams filled in the acknowledgment and affixed his seal in proper form.

Gilbert Williams wrote out a check on the Importers' Bank of Commerce for twenty thousand dollars. We ascertained by telephone to the cashier at his residence that the check was good. Williams then folded his deed, put it in his pocket and departed with the notary. The whole matter had taken less than twenty minutes to bring to a close.

Randolph Mason inquired at what hour Lieutenant Gordon Smith would arrive, and was told that he would be at the house at half-past ten. "Direct the agent of the Export Spruce company to be here at that hour," he said. Then he sat down in the oak chair before the fire.

We were all greatly puzzled. We did not see why this second purchaser should be invited to come. Beatrix Smith had nothing more to sell. The transaction seemed to us to have arrived at its final act, the curtain down and the lights out.

Sarah Lemarr came down to the hall and peeped through the door at Mason, where he sat motionless, his right elbow on the twisted arm of the grotesquely carved chair, his clenched fingers propping up his jaw.

"O Courtlandt," she whispered, "he is splendid! I think Lancelot must have looked like that when he sat in Arthur's double-dragoned chair to umpire the last tournament. Just fancy, with what freezing, acid irony he would have said, 'Hast thou won? Art thou the purest brother to such an unconscionable rake as Tristan.'" Then she swore Beatrix to obedience and slipped back up the great stairway.

A few minutes after ten o'clock Lieutenant Gordon Smith arrived, and a little later, [illegible] Spruce company. Mason arose when this agent entered, and explained, as he had done to Gilbert Williams, that Mrs. Smith was about to sail for England, and had decided to sell her land. She would take twenty thousand dollars in cash for it, the deed to be executed and the money to be paid down. The agent agreed at once, and produced his deed. He was prepared as Williams was. Mason directed Beatrix Smith and her husband to execute the deed. I had no end of trouble with Beatrix in the hall this time. She did not want to make another deed; she had sold her land; she would not rob the Export Spruce company. It was not the company that had stolen her land; Mr. Mason had clearly gotten the two companies confused. He was making an awful blunder. I must call him out and set him right about it.

Instead, I called Sarah Lemarr. She berated Beatrix like a pirate. Disobey Randolph Mason? the thing was unthinkable! Make a mistake? not that big, fine, bronze god brooding by his sacred fire. "Why, girl," she said, "I would shoot every one of you in your tracks if that man told me to do it. He is adorable. I could follow him around like a dog and bite people if he whistled to me. Not another word out of you, or I will come down with the dog-whip." And she shook her little clenched hand over the bannisters.

Finally we got the matter over. Beatrix and her husband executed the deed. I got a notary from the Plaza. The agent gave certified drafts on Dexter & Company for the twenty thousand dollars, and, like Gilbert Williams, folded his deed and departed.

Beatrix Smith bearded the lion with eyes swimming in tears. "Mr. Mason," she said, "you have made a terrible mistake. The Export Spruce company is not the one who stole my land. I cannot take its money; it will not get the property." And she went on with a torrent of lamentation.

"Madam," said Mason, rising, "all this is drivel. I have made no mistake. The Export Spruce company will get every acre that it has this night purchased." Then he directed Beatrix to cash the checks at the earliest hour in the morning and sail at once for England.

When we went down the steps to his carriage, Sarah Lemarr slipped out from behind the door and caught my arm. "I shall see to it," she whispered. "They shall sail on the St. Paul at eleven o'clock." Then she gripped me until her nails hurt through my sleeve. "Oh, Courtlandt," she said, "I have at last seen a man!" and she closed the big door behind me.

The solution of the matter arrived a month later. I was taking a hasty luncheon at a down-town cafe, when Freddie Harland of the firm of Milton, Harland & Gaynor, came in and seated himself in the chair beside me.

"Hello, Parks," he said. "Old Williams tells me you were present when he bought a gold brick the other night."

"You mean the Smith deed?" I said.

"Well, rather," he answered. "Williams took it down to West Virginia to have it recorded, and discovered, to use his spectacular language, that it was not worth 'three hurrahs in hell'."

"What was wrong with it?" I said. "It did not convey the husband's curtesy, I know; but Williams knew that too. He did not care for that, he said; he could cut the timber off in a year and he was willing to take the chance of Mrs. Smith living until then."

"That," replied Freddie Harland, "is a mere bagatelle in the trouble. It seems that the supreme court of West Virginia has decided that a deed made by a wife, in which the husband does not join, conveys no estate of any character whatever, is merely a worthless piece of paper. The Export Spruce company has the land under a proper deed. Mrs. Beatrix Smith has vanished into the fog beyond Fire Island and the bob-cats have pre-empted old William's mills."

"Good," I said, "good! Gilbert stole half that land, so the chicken is home to roost."

"We reminded him of that," replied Freddie Harland, "when he began to jump around in the office."

For the legal principle involved in this story see Austin et al. v. Brown et al., 37 W. Va., 634.

Syllabus, Austin et al. v. Brown et al., supra. "M. A. S., a married woman, not living separate and apart, but with her husband, undertook by deed . . . to sell and convey a certain tract of land, part of her real estate . . . Held, said pretended deed was wholly ineffectual to divest M. A. S., the grantor, of her ownership of such land, and did not pass any interest therein, legal or equitable, to the said grantees."

Unsinkable Ship.

Plans for an unsinkable trans-Atlantic ship have been made by Otto Kretschmer, dean of the engineering department of the Charlottenburg Technical high school. In them he embodies the principle of constructing a hull within a hull. The inner body, which is entirely independent of the outer, contains all the engines and boilers and is walled in with steel plating and with no doors to the outer structure.

A Carping Friend.

"A college offers me a degree for a million."

"Do you want to be a college youth?"

"No; but I'd like a degree."

"Oh, why spend all that money? Join the boy scouts."

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

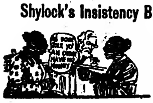
THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, AUGUST 30, 1912. NO. 23.

Shylock's Insistency Beaten by a Black Portia



AH DONT OWE YO' AH DONT HAVE NO MONEY

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—Notwithstanding the fact that the United States Constitution declares that no one shall be imprisoned for debt, the effort is sometimes made to use the police court as a collecting agency, generally by a creditor preferring a charge of obtaining goods by false pretences or embezzlement. Of course this doesn't always work with the judge, and it generally results in the prosecutor being taxed with the costs.

There was a reversal of this procedure the other day at the police court when Elsie Allen, a tall, gaunt negro woman of forbidding aspect, was arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct based on her efforts to collect a debt of 20 cents.

The old woman acted as her own attorney in the case and in the ability to ask rambling questions easily came up to any of the distinguished practitioners that daily haunt the city forum. Not only that, she did what a lawyer rarely does in the police court—she cleared the defendant, thereby setting aside the familiar adage that "he (or she) who is his (or her) own attorney has a fool for a client."

The principal witness against the amiable Elsie was a Xanthic colored maiden of elephantine proportions named Molly Mayhray. Molly's statement was to the effect that she had purchased 20 cents worth of peaches from the angular Elsie, and that she intended to pay for them sometime before the winter holidays. According to Molly's testimony, Shylock was not more insistent for his pound of flesh than was Elsie for her two dimes, the aforesaid insistency resulting in an attack on the fairy form of the corpulent Molly with a ferocity that caused her to vacate her happy home.

"Do you want to question the witness?" asked the judge at the conclusion of the statement of Molly.

"Does ah want to ax any questions?" snorted Elsie. "In course ah does. Didn't ah gin yo dat basket er peaches fur 20 cents?"

"Ah reckon so."

"Did yo' pay me dem two dimes when ah axed yo' fur 'em like er lady?"

"Lak er lady! Yo' said if ah didn't pay yo' would frow er brick at ma head."

"Did yo' gin me dat change?"

"Ah done tole yo' ah didn't have no money."

"Yo' ain't payed me twell yet, is yo?"

"No."

"Dar yo' is," said Elsie, triumphantly addressing the Caledonian on the bench.

"Do you want to ask any more questions?" asked Judge Douglas.

"Mo' questions? What mo' questions does yo' want me ter ax? Ah knows nuffin erbout dis yere cote, ah nevah has bin in jail."

"That will do" commented his honor. "you are discharged, but you must not undertake to collect any debt by such forceful methods."

Elsie glared at the judge a moment and said:

"Ah bet ah gets dat 20 cents befo' dat yaller nigger is er day older."

Go-Cart Is Cause of Mix-Up in Thrilling Comedy

DETROIT, MICH.—"The Comedy of a Go-Cart" would be an apt title for a sketch in which a woman, her two little children, a boy and a trolley car figured the other afternoon. The curtain rose when E. H. Lerchen, 146 Tuxedo avenue, hired Ed Schults, aged sixteen, 322 Hunt street, to take a go-cart to his sister on the West side. From then on the action was swift.

Ed boarded a Jefferson car and not having any little brothers and sisters who use one of the tiny carriages, he forgot all about Mr. Lerchen's when he alighted from the car at Fourth and Grand River avenues.

In a few seconds it dawned on Ed that he must be in that part of the city for something.

"Ah, hn, I have it," exclaimed the boy. "I was to deliver Mr. Lerchen's go-cart. But where is it?" he asked himself, feeling in his pockets. "Must have left it on the car," he said finally.

Ed appealed to a patrolman, who advised him to wait on the corner for the car to return and recover the cart. That appeared logical, so he sat down on the curb to wait. Then it dawned on him that he didn't know the number of the car, and all cars on Grand River avenue look alike. He decided to wait until he thought his car had time to go to the end of the line and return.

After a while a pay-enter came along and Ed saw a go-cart on the rear platform. He jumped at the conclusion that it was Mr. Lerchen's.

He stopped the car and the platform door swung open. Before the conductor could close it again Ed had the go-cart and was making off.

Mrs. Frank Marvin, 278 McGraw avenue, spied him. She had two little children with her, but that didn't deter her. She grabbed them both and made a race for Ed.

"Where are you going with my go-cart?" she commanded. "Put it down this instant."

But Ed ignored her and tried to continue his journey. Mrs. Marvin wouldn't have it that way and there was a struggle for possession of the cart. The boy wouldn't let go and Mrs. Marvin clung on. Somebody called the police and Mrs. Marvin, the children, Ed and the go-cart were given a ride to police headquarters in a patrol.

At the station neither Mrs. Marvin nor Ed would relinquish claim on the cart. Finally Mr. Lerchen was sent for and he quickly settled everything by saying the cart wasn't the one he gave the boy to deliver.

At that point the curtain fell on the first act. The cast is still in rehearsal on the rest of the show.

Municipal Elephant Serves as a Thief Chaser

MINNIE, the municipal elephant, the other day rescued Mrs. Jennie Plau, 3338 Paris avenue, from three hoodlums in the Brookside Park woods. Minnie dispersed the young men and nearly caught one of them in an exciting chase down the side of one of the peaks that rise across Big Creek opposite the Fulton road entrance.

Mrs. Plau is the wife of Paul Plau, Minnie's keeper. She had taken her young son, Arthur, eight years old, to the park to accompany Minnie and her husband on their morning walk before the visitors began to throng the meadows and woods.

Minnie is becoming very sure-footed [illegible] venture he had taken on a high path, fringed with bushes, that runs near the edge of the cliff. Mrs. Plau and her son had preceded the keeper and the pachyderm by 100 feet or more.

Suddenly three young men jumped from behind a clump of trees and one of them made for her. Mrs. Plau carried a handbag with $40 in it in notes and she screamed.

Plau and the elephant arrived in a hurry. The boys had not seen the elephant, which had been concealed by the bushes.

"One of the boys was only a few feet away from Mrs. Plau when Minnie saw him," said Plau. "I had heard the elephant snort a little while before and I thought either a man or a dog was near.

"'Go after him, Minnie,' I told the elephant and she did. It was the first time I had ever seen her try to injure anyone and she surely did try to get that fellow. He dodged behind a tree and then ran down hill. Minnie went after him [illegible]

IN THE LIMELIGHT

SENATOR STEPHENSON, WHO DEFIES AGE

Senator Isaac Stephenson of Wisconsin, the oldest member of either branch of congress, is standing the scorching hot weather of the national capital better than any of his colleagues. In Wisconsin Mr. Stephenson is known as "Uncle Ike," but among his senate associates he is familiarly hailed as "Dr. Ike."

Although Mr. Stephenson makes no pretentions to a knowledge of medicine as laid down in the books, and frequently admits that he is not abreast of the modern medical science, he has had a practical experience which he thinks fits him to give advice to the ailing. As far back as the early fifties, Mr. Stephenson was healing the sick. He was then in charge of various lumber camps in the Lake Superior region of northern Wisconsin.

"For fifteen years," said Mr. Stephenson, "we were without a doctor, lawyer, or preacher. We did not need a doctor, for I looked after the sick, and as for a lawyer we got along pretty well, because we fought out with our fists the troubles that arose among us. We had some pretty rough and hard men in the camps, and maybe we did suffer for want of a preacher. In the logging season we had hundreds of men, and my principal job was to keep our crews in good shape. The saw and the axe make trouble in the woods, not only for trees, but for men, and I have been called on to bind and sew hundreds of wounds. I was not what you might call a fancy bone setter, but I knew how to set a bone quickly and with the least pain to the broken arm or leg. We did not have anesthetics in those days, and the thing to do was to mend the break and get the man back on the job in a few days."

Mr. Stephenson says that a long life and a simple life go hand in hand. "As a young man, I traveled across the snow twenty odd miles a day," he said. "I swung a five-pound axe from dawn till dark. I slept in a blanket in the snow, ate crackers and pork and drank snow water, and was as healthy as a bear."

YOSHIHITO, NEW JAPANESE EMPEROR

The new emperor of Japan, the mikado, Yoshihito, faces a gigantic task as he steps into the place made vacant by his remarkable father, the Emperor Mutsuhito, who died recently after a prolonged illness.

Yoshihito is the third son of the deceased ruler and was proclaimed crown prince in 1888. He is a man of strong character and enviable attainments in war and statecraft. He is an officer in the army and in the navy and has seen severe service in both branches. He was married in 1900 and has three children. With all the advantages of a modern education and in full accord with the advanced ideas of the late emperor, he should prove a worthy successor to his father, who, though an oriental, was one of the truly great men of the age. He is the one hundred and twenty-second ruler of Japan in his line, which, according to Japanese legend, is descended from the gods.

The late emperor, who was only sixty when he passed away, succeeded to the throne at sixteen and was married at seventeen. He will go down in history as the ruler who brought the Japanese out from the wilderness of slavery to ancient customs and established them as a nation governed by a constitutional assembly.

Yoshihito, who now comes to the throne, was the only one of the mikado's near relatives who was unable from the first to be near to his father. He was just recovering from a severe illness and his doctors told him it would be unwise for him to leave his bed. He received bulletins from the sick room at brief intervals, however, both by telephone and by messenger. Later he was able to be at the palace in person and was at the bedside when the mikado passed away.

The belief in the divine right of kings, which so long was used as an excuse for the tyranny of the rulers of Europe, is still prevalent in Japan. There the person of the mikado is held sacred.

To Surprise Him.

Servant—"You want to see Herr Doktor? Could you come again tomorrow?" Patient—"Why, isn't he in?" Servant—"Oh, yes; but you're our first patient, and it's his birthday tomorrow. I should like it to be a surprise for him."—Fliegende Blaetter.

Marking Keys.

If you have a number of keys in the stable, shed, henhouse and such buildings, that look and feel about alike, put wooden tags on them, with one notch for the stable, two notches for the henhouse, etc. You can tell at a glance, then, or by feeling them if it is dark, which key is the right one.

Pass the Bouquets Now.

Never, never wait for post-mortem praise. Speak the kind words which love prompts, and remember that words of loving kindness are the best possible tonic which can be given, even to the happiest of the mortals.—Kate Tannatt Woods.

Oldest Inhabited House.

Kilkenny castle is one of the oldest inhabited houses in the world, many of the rooms being much as they were 800 years ago.

Aerial Mails in Italy.

Italy is experimenting [illegible]

Heredity and School Marks.

A German educator has been making a statistical study of the relation between heredity and school marks, and from 354 cases in which he was able to get full school records, through three generations, he concludes that the connection is very close.

Put Away Small Things.

Get rid of small wisdom and great wisdom will shine upon you. Put away goodness and you will be naturally good. A child does not learn to speak because taught by professors of the art, but because it lives among people who can themselves talk.—Chuang Tsu.

A Good Reason.

"Yes, he married her because her first husband left her."

"That's hardly a good reason for marrying a woman."

"It was, in this case. He left her $400,000."

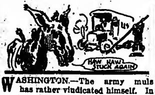
No Small to It.

Doctor's Wife (as patient departs)—Mercy! What a monstrous man. Wants treatment for obesity, I suppose. Doctor—No, he complains of pains in the small of his back.

Negroes Talk German.

[illegible]

Army Mule Vindicates Ability to Deliver Goods



WASHINGTON.—The army mule has rather vindicated himself. In a fair and free for all contest against the auto-truck and instrument, or vehicle designed, we might say to get his goat, the mule proved his right to remain in the American army. They tried to oust him, but he kicked—the mule may at all times be depended upon to kick.

The proposal to discharge the army mule without a pension, without even an honorable discharge, began to find supporters when the motor driven army wagon first appeared upon the scene. It was argued that the old order would have to give way to the new, and that the all conquering automobile would certainly relegate the mule to the rear. But they reckoned without full knowledge of the latent possibilities of the mule. A mule is a very deceiving proposition. He is as hard to fathom in his various moods and tenses as his counterpart, the "coon," or the senior senator from Idaho. He is sometimes grossly misunderstood; this is because in spite of a long and close association with mankind—mankind yet fails to become on intimate and cordial relations with the mule. His disposition and character do not invite affection or confidence. At times he appears as innocent and unsophisticated as a candidate for congress—this is the time to beware of him—for back behind those innocent eyes and drooping ears there lurks mischief—mischief in large and violent doses. With half closed eyes he is watching you, and in an unguarded moment—unguarded on your part, he is likely to apply his strong white teeth to the fleshy part of your arm and leg and you will imagine that you have been hit by a shark. Either that, or he will give you a swift and sudden jolt with iron shod foot somewhere in the region of your carburetor, and you will land in the next county, where you can leisurely contemplate the deceptive qualities of the mule.

But to get back to his contest with the auto truck, the question was decided in favor of his muleship in recent transportation contests in Iowa over rough roads. The mule won. Whatever his faults are, the mule can and will pull. He has never shown any great fondness for work, but he can perform and does so effectively when there is no way to get around it.

The race between the mule and the auto trucks in some respects recalled the memorable one between the hare and the tortoise, though not even the mule's most bitter enemies will assert that he is in any respects like the tortoise, but there is no disputing the fact that in speed he does not equal the auto truck when conditions are favorable to the latter. The mule was clearly outclassed in speed. But it was dependability that finally won for him, though that is one thing for which he has been given scant credit. While his gasoline consuming rivals failed to negotiate hills, or got their sparking plugs gummed over rough, muddy cross roads, the long eared consumer of oats and hay with his ever ready left hind foot in good working order to kick a personal friend off the landscape, arrived at his destination and delivered the goods and thereby retained his position.

Therefore, the mule remains in the army. He has been a hard working public servant and it would have been a pity to have discharged him without a character. There is then, some satisfaction in the thought that the mule will not be drummed out of the army yet awhile.

Pajamas Are Suggested for Unclad Lobsters

IF the next time you go marketing, you see a lobster or a crab clad in natty pajamas, don't rub your eyes or offer yourself to be pinched to see if you are awake. Just take it as a matter of course.

For pajamas have been suggested by certain humanitarians as means to prevent crabs and lobsters from biting off each other's claws and legs and feelers and whiskers while they are in captivity, the transitory state between the deep blue sea and the cooking pot. At present lobsters generally have their claws "chocked" with small sticks of wood, which are said to be painful assurers of quiescence, and the crabs are left free.

That is not as it should be, a member of the Pennsylvania Women's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals declares, and she has demanded some kind of clothing for the shellfish. Her demands have not been taken up in Washington.

"We must remember that the cold-blooded animals are not so sensitive of pain as the warm-blooded," Secretary John P. Heap, of the Humane society, said.

"This form of life, lobsters and crabs, is very low," Mr. Heap stated. "It is not imbued with the same feelings as the higher orders. It is an approach to the vegetable kingdom. Therefore, there is in such cases as these suggested hardly any cause for controversy.

"We have had complaints about such cruelties as turning turtles on their backs and leaving them in that position; but fish and reptiles seldom afford any ground for complaint."

Mr. Heap holds a far different opinion about oysters from that expressed by President John Craft, of the Alabama Oyster commission. Mr. Craft said he believes the oyster, when swallowed alive, suffers agonies unspeakable only because the succulent bivalve has no vocal organs.

"He would fairly shriek with pain had he a voice," Mr. Craft thinks.

Mr. Heap said he could hardly conceive of so low a brute as the oyster feeling any great degree of pain even when it was being torn from its native shell.

Dealers in crabs and lobsters have not taken the pajama suggestion seriously. They have laughingly replied to questions as to the feasibility of the plan that "if the ladies preferred to recommend pajamas rather than hobble skirts" pajamas would have the right of way.

Curator of the National Museum Gets a Skink

DR. LEONHARD STEJNEGER, head curator at the National Museum, is the happiest man in America. He has a skink. It came the other day and was not brought by the stork, but by Mr. Wood, a taxidermist, who found it in Florida.

The skink is not a—well, it is needless to say—as his name would indicate. He does not belong to the cat family. His scientific name is leoseps reynoldsi. In appearance the skink is not unlike an elongated lizard. He has four legs which he does not use, they having become paralyzed from lack of exercise. He gets his food by laying in wait, with his sticky tongue extended, for something to come along.

He lives by waiting and hauling in. The degenerate pins attached to leoseps' sides indicate that his remote ancestors walked. The present day specimen [illegible] skink does not need much air. He spends much time in sand beds far removed from the busy world.

NOW FOR A GOOD SWIM

From the standpoint of the scientist the skink is most interesting because he resembles skinks found in Persia and the Mediterranean, making the old world and the new close kin.

Experts at the National Museum say that the modesty of the skink coupled with his ability to swim through sand many inches deep, has made him a stranger to science in this country. His kind is plentiful in Florida, but the fact has just been discovered.

The skink when grown is about five inches long and very slender. He is [illegible]

THE SUNBEAM.
W. G. HUNT, Publisher.
SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

THE BORROWING HABIT.

Humanity is afflicted with some exceedingly bad habits, one of the worst of which is that of borrowing money in small sums. It is as demoralizing as intemperance. Indeed, it is often an accompaniment of that vice, perhaps the cause of it or perhaps the effect. A man who lacks business perception, who is deficient in the matter of making adequate provision for his needs, who does not calculate carefully, and who spends unwisely on luxuries, starts to raising funds by appealing to his friends. The lending of money is one of the vital factors in business, which is largely done on credit. But the lending of money individually, without security, without interest, just as a personal accommodation between friends, is one of the most unbusinesslike and demoralizing of practices. At first these loans are repaid conscientiously, says the Washington Star. Then the time goes by and the borrower is slow about refunding. After a while he grows accustomed to asking, loses his shame, gets callous to the thought of non-payment and thus drifts into the habit of petty borrowing. Now it is perhaps a quarter or a half dollar, or some other trifling sum that the lender would be perfectly willing to give in a good cause to meet a real emergency, without hope of return. But there is always the suspicion that the money is not really needed, save for some self-indulgence. The average man will hesitate about giving in this way when he feels that the money is going for drink, and that is why organized charity has come to be so generally supported in these times.

In New England, New Jersey and some other thickly settled sections of the eastern part of the United States what are known as farm colonies are multiplying. These agricultural colonies are generally made up of foreign-born peoples who come from the same district in Italy, Russia or Hungary. Farming areas of 1,000, 2,000 and sometimes 3,000 acres are purchased and divided up into ten and twenty acre allotments. On each of these small farms a family settles and engages in the growing of fruits and garden vegetables for the supply of the larger eastern cities, says the Baltimore American. Many abandoned New England farms are thus being restored to productive usage. Quite recently a 1,000-acre tract of land in Cecil county, located along the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, near Chesapeake City, has been purchased for a Polish farm colony. This land is to be cut up into ten-acre allotments, or into about one hundred small farms, upon which as many families will locate. The colony, it will be observed, is about midway between Baltimore and Philadelphia, and is in easy communication with both cities by water route, as well as by rail. Maryland has inviting inducements for many such colonies. In southern Maryland large areas suitable for cutting into small farms may be obtained at comparatively low cost. This land, in most instances, is splendidly adapted to the growing of fruits and vegetables. The soil is of far better average quality than the sandy soil of New Jersey. Upon ten acres of land farmed intensively not only a living can be made, but ultimate affluence may be attained.

A woman in Philadelphia is being sued for breach of promise, her loss being appraised at $5,000. When it is known that she is an exceptionally good cook, particularly of the dishes so loved of the Fatherland, it is not to be wondered at that the jilted one's anguish is not to be assuaged at a lower figure in these times when good cooks are so expensive, not to say rare and hard to keep.

The shaving of pet dogs and cats in hot weather by solicitous owners, as reported to be a fad this summer, will doubtless bring the usual storm of sarcasm and protests from the critical contingency who think that consideration for animals is logically incompatible with sympathy for human suffering.

"A widower of sixty-two with $8,000,000 seeks a bride of twenty, with blond hair, blue eyes and rosy cheeks." Being a widower and therefore wise, it will be useless for any of the chemical variety to apply.

It may have been noticed that with the usual courage of masculinity attacking a feminine stronghold the broadsides on the hobble skirt opened up fire after it had been announced that the target itself was going out of fashion, anyhow.

In spite of the advance of science, it will be some time before flying as a means of travel becomes general. The average citizen does not relish flirting with the [illegible]

NEW EMPRESS OF JAPAN

The new empress of Japan is the mother of an interesting family and is very popular personally with the people of the island empire.

PENROSE FOR QUIZ

INTRODUCES RESOLUTION TO INVESTIGATE ROOSEVELT CAMPAIGNS OF 1904 AND 1912.

SAYS RECORD FUND RAISED

Allege That Missouri and Southern Pacific Railroads Contributed $100,000 Each—Archbold, Perkins, Cortelyou and Colonel May Testify.

Washington, Aug. 24.—A sweeping investigation into the Roosevelt campaigns of 1904 and 1912 by a subcommittee of the United States senate is embodied in a resolution introduced on Thursday by Senator Boise Penrose of Pennsylvania in the senate chamber.

Mr. Penrose asks for a complete investigation of the charges against him and the charges he himself made with respect to the alleged contributions of the Standard Oil company to the national campaign fund of 1904.

The resolution as amended by Senator Reed of Missouri, provides for the summoning of Theodore Roosevelt, "Boss" Flinn, George B. Cortelyou and John D. Archbold of the Standard Oil company.

Declaring that George W. Perkins and his associates had underwritten some three million dollars to nominate Theodore Roosevelt for the presidency of the regular Republican party in the present campaign for their own personal uses, Senator Penrose injected a new element into the political imbroglio during the debate in the senate.

Mr. Penrose further stated that the largest campaign fund in the history of the United States for a nomination was raised for Mr. Roosevelt last winter.

Alleged contributions of $100,000 each by the Missouri Pacific and the Southern Pacific railroads to the Roosevelt campaign fund in 1904 were also mentioned by Senators Reed and Penrose, Mr. Penrose declaring that President Roosevelt was always in close touch with the national committee managers of his campaign.

LORIMER RECEIVES NO AID

Senate Committee Make No Provision to Pay Deposed Senator's Expenses in Investigation.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Contrary to expectations the senate committee on appropriations made no provision for former Senator Lorimer's expenses in the general deficiency bill reported. The committee which investigated Lorimer's election recommended that he receive $35,000 to defray, in part, the cost of his defense. The attitude of the committee indicates that nothing will be done in the matter at this session.

Captain Kills Family and Self.

Eastbourne, England, Aug. 21.—Capt. Hicks Murray of the Gordon Highlanders killed his wife, three children and himself Monday. After shooting he poured petrol over the house floor and set fire to it.

Agree on Naval Bill.

Washington, Aug. 21.—The conferees on the naval appropriation bill reached an agreement Monday to authorize the construction of one new battleship to cost $15,000,000, inclusive of armor [illegible]

SEVEN ARE INDICTED

GRAND JURY REPORTS IN ROSENTHAL SLAYING.

Lieut. Becker and Six Others Charged With Murder in Blanket True Bill.

New York, Aug. 22.—Seven of the men now under arrest for complicity in the assassination of Gambler Herman Rosenthal were named in a blanket indictment returned by the grand jury before Judge Mulqueen in the court of general session on Tuesday.

The men named are: Lieut. Charles Becker, accused of having plotted to kill Rosenthal; William Shapiro, driver of the gray automobile in which the gangsters went to the Hotel Metropole and killed Rosenthal; Jacob Reich, better known as "Jack" Sullivan, accused of having given the signal for the murder; Frank Cirofici, also known as "Dago Frank;" Frank Muller, known as "Whitey" Lewis; Harry Horowitz, known as "Gyp, the Blood;" Louis Rosenzweig, known as "Lefty Louie," gangman, alleged to have been in the automobile.

The four last named are the men supposed to have done the actual shooting.

Rosenzweig and Horowitz are still at large, but, although they have been reported at various places throughout the country, it has been strongly intimated that they are still in the city.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRE

Liverpool, Aug. 22.—The Allan Line steamer Corsican, which struck an iceberg east of Belle Isle, near Newfoundland on the afternoon of August 12 while on her voyage from Montreal for this port, arrived here. The fore part of the vessel was protected with collision bulkheads, otherwise she shows no signs of damage.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 22.—No deaths have resulted thus far of persons injured by the collapse of a grand stand when Governor Marshall of Indiana was notified of his nomination for the vice-presidency on the Democratic ticket. Five persons were seriously injured and forty bruised and cut.

Berlin, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Leishman, wife of the American ambassador, and her two daughters, Miss Nacy and Countess Gontant de Biron, were badly injured in an automobile accident near Reicherhausen Wednesday.

Gets Cash in Bold Day Theft.

Toledo, O., Aug. 21.—Nearly $1,000, mostly in currency, and the rest in checks, was filched from the office of the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation company office here Monday in a bold daylight robbery. An hour later the robber returned $100 to the company through a third person.

Johnson-Jeanette Match Off.

New York, Aug. 24.—Jack Johnson will not fight Joe Jeanette in New York. The boxing commission ruled to this effect Thursday and Jesse and Eddie McMahon, managers of the St. Nicholas A. C., withdrew the match.

Flack Waives Extradition.

New York, Aug. 24.—With nothing left of $800,000 filched while a trusted employe in the Abilene State Bank of Abilene, Kan., John [illegible]

SLAY U. S. CITIZENS

NICARAGUAN REBELS KILL TWO AMERICANS DURING MASSACRE AT LEON.

INSURRECTOS TAKE TOWNS

Foreigners Flee to Yankee Vessels in Harbor—Harvey Dodd of Mississippi and Companion Phillips Are the Two Men Slaughtered.

Washington, Aug. 24.—The state department on Thursday instructed Minister Weitzel at Managua to investigate the deaths of the two Americans, one named Phillips and the other Harvey Dodd of Kosciusko, Miss., who are reported to have been murdered by the rebels during the looting of Leon.

State department advices included these men among the dead and added that they had been killed while wounded and seeking refuge in a hospital. If the men were enlisted in the federal army the United States can do nothing but protest against the uncivilized manner of their death; if they were noncombatants the state department will demand reparation and recompense.

Dispatches from Corinto report that the rebels are marching victoriously through the country, taking all the small towns in their path. It is hoped that dissension in their ranks, owing to jealousies among the presidential candidates, may impede their progress until the arrival of the cruiser Denver on Sunday. The cruiser California, having on board 600 sailors and 60 marines, is expected at Corinto Tuesday, and the 750 marines from Philadelphia will arrive in Nicaragua in about ten days.

In the meantime the 450 sailors and marines already in Managua will be used for the protection of the capital and foreign women and children will be removed to the Justin and Annapolis off Corinto.

Minister Weitzel's dispatches were of the most gloomy character. He says: "The situation is growing steadily worse," and proceeds with the following details:

"The consul at Corinto reports on the 18th that the rebel forces have taken towns lying between Leon and Chinandega, among which are located a large sugar estate and the central distillery, containing 5,000,000 pesos' worth of alcohol. The consul has received requests for aid from the American and foreign interests in these localities. By cable on the night of the 20th the consul reports that telegraphic communication with Chinandega has been restored and that that town was then under government control. At the request of the authorities men were landed from the Annapolis and the Justin to protect lives and property of Americans and other foreigners. Twenty-five American and other foreign women and children were taken aboard the Justin on the nights of the 18th and 19th, and 15 American citizens passed the nights of the 19th and 20 at the consulate."

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 24.—Harvey Dodd, the young American reported murdered by rebels in the general massacre at Leon, Nicaragua, August 19, was the son of S. L. Dodd of Kosciusko, Miss., a prominent lawyer. Dodd was thirty-five years old.

ORVILLE WRIGHT IS HURT

Machine is Wrecked While Making Experiments and He Sustains Cuts and Bruises.

Dayton, O., Aug. 22.—Orville Wright, the survivor of an aeroplane tragedy in which his companion was killed experimenting with a hydroplane Tuesday, met with an accident in which good luck again attended him in that he was not drowned or seriously injured. His injuries consisted of a badly battered left eye and a number of cuts and bruises while his machine was considerably wrecked. The accident took place at the Pinnacles, a secluded spot seven miles south of this city where he hoped to conduct the experiment without hindrance.

DARROW TO HAVE NEW JUDGE

Hutton Declares That He Is Prejudiced Against Hearing Evidence in Second Trial.

Los Angeles, Aug. 22.—Declaring himself to be prejudiced after hearing all of the evidence submitted in the trial of Clarence S. Darrow that was concluded Saturday, and for that reason preferring not to rule on any phase of the second, or Bain, indictment against the Chicago attorney, Judge Hutton on Tuesday assigned the case to Presiding Judge Willis of the superior court and ordered a continuance until Monday. In the Bain indictment Darrow is charged with the second offense of jury bribery while chief counsel in the McNamara case.

Women Ascends Mont Blanc.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 24.—Miss Doris Keen, Philadelphia, arrived Thursday from Alaska on the steamship Alameda, having while in the north made the ascent of Mont Blanc, one of loftiest peaks of the Copper River valley.

President Harrison's Grandson Dead.

Sterling, Ill., Aug. 24.—John Hatton, a grandson of President William Henry Harrison, and a cousin of President Benjamin Harrison, died [illegible]

BELIEVE PEACE IS NEAR

FINANCIAL EMBARRASSMENTS OF OTTOMAN EMPIRE CAUSE.

Tripoli Will Be Annexed—Preferential Rights Offered Italy in Benghazi.

Berlin, Aug. 23.—In usually well informed circles here the opinion is expressed that the war between Italy and Turkey is near termination.

Paris and Berne have been the scene of tentative negotiations between the two powers for some days.

Turkey's financial embarrassments are understood to be responsible for her disposition to yield and accept the best terms obtainable.

While the great powers are refraining from any move that might savor of intervention, they are exerting their influence to bring about peace. They are the more anxious as the crisis between Turkey and Montenegro grows more acute.

Advices from Constantinople say that Turkey is willing to recognize the annexation of Tripoli, provided the sultan's suzerainty is recognized by the Italian government and that Italy pays Turkey a compensation for the territory annexed. Turkey refuses to concede the annexation of Benghazi but is willing to give Italy preferential rights there.

Turkey is said to be willing to concede a form of self-government to the islands now occupied by Italy. These islands must continue under the sovereignty of the sultan, and no compensation is to be given Italy for her expenses.

It is said Italy will agree to the canceling of capitulation rights within the Turkish empire. The Italian government will be asked to accept the new custom tariff of 15 per cent. imposed by Turkey.

COMMERCE COURT IS UPHELD

House Abolishes Tribunal, Then Provides Funds for It Until 1913—Pass Spanish War Pensions.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Two votes were taken on the legislative, executive and judicial bill by the house Wednesday. First it passed the measure which contained a provision to abolish the commerce court over the president's veto, but later it unanimously accepted the bill with an appropriation for the court until March 4, 1913.

The bill was passed over the veto by a vote of 153 to 54, 21 Republicans voting with the Democratic majority. After the senate had refused to pass the measure by a two-thirds vote the conference agreed to provide for the commerce court.

The house passed a bill granting pensions to the widows and orphans of officers and enlisted men who served more than ninety days in the Spanish-American war and the Philippines insurrection who are in need of assistance.

From the roster of the Spanish-American War Veterans' organization it has been estimated that there are 4,000 widows of men who served in these wars, and it is estimated that about one-fifth of these widows or 800, would come under the terms of the bill. More than $400,000 a year would be added to the present pension payments.

BOOTH'S BODY LIES IN STATE

Westminster Abbey Suggested for Burial Place — Daughter Leaves New York to Attend Funeral.

London, Aug. 24.—The authorities of Westminster abbey will offer a sepulcher there for the body of Gen. William Booth, the dead leader of the Salvation Army. The offer will be declined by relatives of the general, who will carry out his wishes that he be buried beside his wife.

General Booth's body was removed Thursday from the cottage at Hadley Wood, where he died, to Congress Hall, Clapton, for the lying in state. The state funeral will be held August 28, and the burial will take place August 29. Gen. Bramwell Booth and his wife will conduct the funeral services. Many hands and thousands of mourners will participate.

New York, Aug. 24.—Miss Eva Booth, second youngest daughter of Gen. William Booth of the Salvation Army, who is dead in London, sailed Thursday on board the liner France to represent America at the funeral of her father. With her went a staff of officers from the American headquarters of the Salvation Army. Miss Booth had not recovered from the shock of her father's death and had to be assisted.

Omaha Police Chief Dead.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 24.—John J. Donahue, chief of police of Omaha, died here Thursday as a result of an operation for the amputation of his right foot, which was affected with gangrene poisoning.

Fire Perils Ringling Circus.

Sterling, Ill., Aug. 24.—Sparks from a barn on fire fell on the large tent of Ringling Brothers' circus here Thursday and burned the tent. No one was hurt. The animal quarters were untouched. Loss, $100,000.

Breaks World's Shorthand Record.

New York, Aug. 24.—The world's record for shorthand speed was broken at the stenographers' convention Thursday when Nathan Behrin, stenographer of the New York supreme [illegible]

Orphanages in Turkey.

There are 22 orphanages in the Turkish empire, conducted by Americans, enrolling 3,000 inmates. In connection with these orphanages an industrial work has sprung up which gives employment to over 10,000 people in addition to the orphans. The work is largely done by the widows and orphans and includes rug and lace-making, various forms of embroidery, and other domestic work. The product of these institutions find a market abroad.

HANDS CRACKED AND BLED

St. Clair, Mo.—"My trouble began about fifteen years ago. It was what some claimed eczema. The form the disease worked under was a breaking out with watery blisters on my hands which would then dry and scale, and then would follow the trouble of cracking and bleeding, also itching and hurting. My hands were disfigured at the time, and sore. The trouble was very annoying, and disturbed my sleep. This last February it was ever so much worse than before. I did not do all my work on account of the condition of my hands. I could not put them in water without making them worse. I tried a lot of home remedies, also salves and liniments that claimed to be a cure for the trouble, but I did not obtain a cure.

"At last I saw the advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a sample. I thought they would cure, so I sent for a fifty-cent box of Cuticura Ointment and some Cuticura Soap. A doctor advised me to keep ahead with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they cured me completely. No trace of the trouble remains." (Signed) Mrs. Mary Taylor, Mar. 29, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

Its Class.

"I don't like this chicken-raising for a man to go into."

"Why not?"

"It's such a hen-pecking kind of business."

YOU CAN CURE CATARRH
By using Cole's Carbolisalve. It is a most effective remedy. All druggists. 25 and 50c.

Envious, Perhaps.

"I'm afraid our friend Scrapsley is a Socialist."

"No. You misjudge Scrapsley. What makes him sore is the fact that in spite of the high cost of living, some men manage to lead double lives."

The Cannibals Need Food.

An officer of the French colonial army brought a letter from the chief of a group of missionaries in the southern islands of the Pacific not long ago, which winds up as follows: "I regret to tell you that our little company can do little against the fanaticism of these poor wretches. Moreover, famine is ravaging the country, for the harvest has been destroyed. Therefore the dispatch of more missionaries has become urgent."—La Petite Republique.

Barber Shops in China.

Since the Chinese revolution a great many Chinese have had their cues cut off, and this has led to the opening of a large number of barber shops throughout the far east wherever Chinese are located, says an exchange. Several progressive business men of Singapore, anticipating this, imported a large number of American barber chairs, and they are now unable to get supplies quickly enough. It has also been learned that the Chinese insist on having American hair clippers, and refuse all other makes offered them.

It would seem that American manufacturers of barbers' supplies should experience a large increase in their Oriental trade.

THE WAY OUT

Change of Food Brought Success and Happiness.

An ambitious but delicate girl, after failing to go through school on account of nervousness and hysteria, found in Grape-Nuts the only thing that seemed to build her up and furnish her the peace of health.

"From infancy," she says, "I have not been strong. Being ambitious to learn at any cost I finally got to the High School, but soon had to abandon my studies on account of nervous prostration and hysteria.

"My food did not agree with me, I grew thin and despondent. I could not enjoy the simplest social affair for I suffered constantly from nervousness in spite of all sorts of medicines.

"This wretched condition continued until I was twenty-five, when I became interested in the letters of those who had cases like mine and who were getting well by eating Grape-Nuts.

"I had little faith but procured a box and after the first dish I experienced a peculiar satisfied feeling that I had never gained from any ordinary food. I slept and rested better that night and in a few days began to grow stronger.

"I had a new feeling and peace and restfulness. In a few weeks, to my great joy, the headaches and nervousness left me and life became bright and hopeful. I resumed my studies and later taught ten months with ease—of course using Grape-Nuts every day. It is now four years since I began to use Grape-Nuts, I am the mistress of a happy home, and the old weakness has never returned." Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They [illegible]

MARSHALL SAYS HE WILL ACCEPT

Governor of Indiana Formally Notified of His Nomination for the Vice Presidency.

DEMOCRACY DEFINED BY HIM

Rule of the People Not Essentially Rule by the People—He Believes Return of His Party to Power Would Right Prevailing Wrongs.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 20.—Governor Marshall was formally notified this afternoon of his nomination for the vice presidency by the national Democratic convention. The notification committee, headed by Judge Alton Parker, was received at the state fair grounds at 2 o'clock and the chairman made a brief address.

In accepting the honor of the nomination, Governor Marshall said in part:

It will be well for the voter to clear up some hazy definitions. We have for many years been entertaining a belief founded upon no fact whatever, that Democracy and Republicanism represent different ideas of government. The Republican has looked upon the Democrat as a man opposed to the government. The Democrat has looked upon the Republican as a man opposed to the people's rule and in favor of aristocratic sway. It is time for us to remember that Democracy is not a system of government. Indeed, Democracy may find its expression in any one of numerous systems.

The rule of the people is not essentially rule by the people. By their votes, even when Democracy has unfolded to full manhood suffrage, the people may have a monarchical form of government. The people's rule does not depend upon the number of votes nor necessarily upon the system of government under which they vote. Good or bad government must go back to good or bad citizenship, to intelligent or ignorant, to honest or dishonest, electors. I venture the assertion that if the electoral franchise were now granted to all the citizens of Russia, the Little Father would again be crowned in Peter's City.

"Classes" in America.

The historic Democratic party of America had its inspiration and its aspiration in the life and conduct of its great founder. It is time now to have a perfect concept of that Democracy, for, in recent years, we have divided ourselves into three classes and the classification has been made not by the heart-throbs of men but by their social condition. We have those who are immeasurably rich and who are looking for more, and we have those who are unutterably poor and who are growing poorer. Between these extremes, we have a great middle class, living well and reasonably content except for the uncertainty of not knowing whether they are to rise into the first class or sink into the third.

Many have assumed that only the unutterably poor and those sinking into that class were Democrats, and that the immeasurably rich and the climbers were Republicans. But these divisions have not been logical.

Republican "Senile Dementia."

This campaign calls upon some for justice, upon others for charity, upon all for patriotism. It does not call for the bandying of epithets nor for an appeal to the personal. We may safely leave to that senile dementia which has seized the so-called Republican party the personalities of this campaign. Its unfitness to rule the republic is disclosed by its inability to keep its temper. It was cohesive so far as its leadership was concerned while it was engaged in looting the public, but even its leaders are now disorganized while quarreling over the loot.

Though a majority of the people have been voting the Republican ticket and have been assuming thereby that the majority would rule, the disgraceful but purifying scenes which have been enacted recently in Republican conventions disclose that a large number of those who have been voting the Republican ticket are Democrats at heart. These scenes disclose further that we have been mistaken in some of our conclusions touching government in America. We have yielded a quiet assent to the proposition that a majority is all-powerful and that a minority has no rights which a majority is bound to respect. But now we know that the theory of the historic Democratic party, that it is the right of a majority to rule but only within constitutional limitations and without the usurpation of a single inalienable right of a single individual, is correct.

Majority Becomes Minority.

It is only when majorities thus rule that governmental machines move without friction. The right of a majority to thus rule must always be conceded. I wonder, however, if it has dawned upon the sober second thought of this people that it is possible for a majority to be a minority and that it is equally possible for a minority to be a majority. At first blush, it would seem that the officials elected by the plurality of votes become the representatives of the majority and that as such, they rule. But I am not in error when I declare that it is not the mere number of votes [illegible] ica, in the sense of having the power to formulate the policy, enact the legislation and control the government, and I point to the election of 1908 for proof. The protest of every man who voted for President Taft and who is now dissatisfied with the president's management of public affairs proves that for four years a minority has been the majority in America.

The social condition which we call Democracy and which finds its avenue of expression at the polls through our party, is unalterably opposed to special privilege whether granted by the law or seized by ruthless ambition. It is true the mother of all special privilege is the high protective tariff. All who voted the Democratic ticket at the last presidential election were unalterably opposed to this system of unjust taxation and a sufficient number of those who voted the Republican ticket were likewise convinced of its iniquity to make an overwhelming majority against it. Save a favored few, all were agreed that relief, to a greater or less extent, should be afforded to the people from the unjust exactions of this sytem. All knew that we could not educate the people of America indiscriminately, enlarge their views of life and happiness and then by the high cost of living deprive them of their pleasures without making of American life a seething caldron of discontent. Theoretically speaking, therefore, the majority of votes, having put a party in power upon a platform, pledged to relieve the people of their burdens, has been ruling under constitutional limitations. But this is not so. Immediately after the election the minority became the majority in the sense that it assumed control of legislation with reference to special privilege. All the members of the Democratic party and all the protesting members of the Republican party have been in the minority when it came to counting votes where the count fixed the cost of living. It may be said that this is a mere accident of politics, a single illustration, and that it will not occur again. But it is no accident. It is only one of the many illustrations. It simply discloses the utter folly of a man remaining a member of a party when the party policy ceases to voice his inner spirit. The Republican party does not recede now from its protective theory. Its return to power will mean again the rule of a minority and the theoretical idea of Democracy will continue to be the practical aristocracy of special privilege in this country.

Choice for the Voter.

The voter who cannot satisfy himself this year is indeed censorious. Eliminating the verbiage of platforms, taking their substance and viewing the candidates placed on them, the voter who believes that the cost of production at home and abroad should be equalized to the manufacturer of this country and who wants an oligarchy to rule, may vote the straight Republican ticket; the voter who believes in a similar protective theory but who prefers to an oligarchy that the president shall be the state, may vote the Progressive ticket; the voter who believes this government should be turned into a socialism, may vote the Socialistic ticket; the voter who thinks that church and state are not separate in America and that the people have a right to settle religious questions and to determine by ballot what is good and what is bad, may vote the Prohibition ticket; and all those who insist that it is not the business of the government to equalize the cost of production at home and abroad to the manufacturer until it equalizes the difference in the purchase price to the consumer at home and abroad, who believes that the only equalization justifiable in our government is the equalization of opportunity, who thinks that public office is a public trust, who does not believe that disgruntled and defeated politicians are genuine reformers, and who think that reforms are not born with sore toes, may vote the Democratic ticket.

I respectfully urge all those who are opposed to special privilege to ally themselves this year with the historic Democracy, the cornerstone of whose edifice is the Declaration of Independence and the keystone of which is the Golden Rule. At Baltimore, it proved its right to be because there it arose and by its proposed policy met the needs and wants of a people.

Results of Economic Injustice.

It is idle for a thoughtful man in America, whether millionaire or pauper, to longer play the ostrich. Safety does not consist in hiding one's head in the sands of either sentiment or hope. It is foolish for the vastly rich to keep on insisting that more and more shall be added to their riches through a specious system of special legislation ostensibly enacted to run the government, in reality enacted to loot the people. It is worse than ignorance for them to smile at the large body of intelligent Americans who regard themselves fortunate if the debit and credit accounts of life balance at the end of each year; and to assume that the mighty many, who are becoming convinced that that social system which we call Democracy is but a glittering generality, will long endure the industrial slavery being produced. The hour has come when patriotism must consist in something more than eulogies upon the flag.

Whether voting the ticket or not, men everywhere looking upon the awful injustice of this economic system are becoming socialistic in theory if not in conduct. And shall any fair-minded man say that if it redounds to the interests of the people of this country that a hundred men should control its business to the good of everyone, that there is anything fallacious in the theory that government in[illegible]

[illegible] favored few for the benefit of all should itself discharge that business for the benefit of all? I have never been able to convince myself that either system would not cast a pall over human action and dull the motives which have heretofore moved mankind to the very loftiest endeavor and produced what I conceive to be the most perfect system of government ever devised by the brain of man since that far-off theocracy of the Jew went down beneath his demand for the pomp and splendor of earthly power. And yet, I do not hesitate to say that if it be impossible to restore this Republic to its ancient ideals, which I do not believe, and I must make the ultimate choice between the paternalism of the few and the socialism of the many, count me and my house with the throbbing heart of humanity.

Three Grades of Citizens.

The discontent in Republican ranks is Democratic discontent. How much of it has reached the point where wearied with the bad workings of a good system, it is willing to topple that system over and try something new, I cannot prophesy. But I am quite sure that whatever badges men may wear in America this year, whatever ballots they may cast and whatever battle-cries they may utter, there are but three grades of citizens. The first grade is made up of the favored few, their hangers-on and their beneficiaries, who think the eagle is upon the dollar, not as an emblem of liberty but as an emblem of power and who look upon government as an annex to their business affairs; these are they who in the past years of Republican misrule have turned the temple of constitutional freedom into a money-changers mart and have made of the co-ordinate branches of government obeisant lackeys of the jingling guinea.

The second grade consists of those whose outlook upon life has been enlarged by the civilization under which we live, who have been taught by the school and the college, by the press and the magazine, who appreciate and enjoy the good things of life, whose horizon has been enlarged and whose capacity for joy and sorrow has been increased. Conditions have become unbearable to them. They hesitate to hope for reform so often has it been promised to them and so often has it been denied. They have reached the point where, in the struggle for that which they believe to be right, they are willing to destroy the ideals of the Republic. How many there are of these, I do not know, but I do know that special privilege in the Republic is breeding them day by day like rabbits in a warren.

Old-Fashioned Democrats.

The third grade of citizens it pleases me to call old-fashioned constitutional Democrats. These are they who believe that the equality of mankind does not consist in an equality of brain and brawn but in an equality whereby every man, native and foreign-born, has an inalienable right to exercise all of his ability in getting on in the world just so he realizes that in getting on he owes it to himself, to his family and to the Republic to see to it that he gets on honestly and that he does not prevent any other man from obtaining the reward of his honesty and enterprise. These old-fashioned Democrats believe in making money, but they believe that every dollar made should be so clean that an infant may cut its teeth upon it. They hold that it is no part of government to boost one man and to boot another, and that any system of government which enables one man to take advantage of another is not a system under which a Democratic condition of life can thrive. They hold that from age to age, social and economic conditions change, but that the great principle of the equality of all men before the law can never change while time shall last, and that the honest interpretation of this great principle in statutory enactment, judicial construction and executive conduct, will take from the life of a people the mighty avarice of the few, bind up the broken hearts of the many and loose the bonds of all who are in slavery to wrong, injustice and ignorance.

If I doubted that the return of the historic Democratic party to power would fail to right the wrongs of industrial life, to wipe out the injustices of legislation and to preserve the opportunity of every man for happiness, then my voice, now weak, would be silent. If I did not believe that, in-so-far as human agency can, this party of ours will promote the brotherhood of mankind, I would here and now repudiate it. But believing as I do that the Republic had its origin in an inspiration which did not come from the mere brain of a mere man but sprang from the heart of humanity, believing that this age more than any which has preceded it calls for conscience and brotherhood in governmental affairs; hoping that every sacrifice of mind and body and personal good which has been made, is a guaranty of the perpetuity of this, the latest and greatest experiment upon the part of a Democracy to work out its ideals in government; and trusting that the God of Washington, the founder, and of Lincoln, the preserver, will still be the God of the republic, and will not permit his chosen people to forever wander in the wilderness of legislative sin, I accept upon its platform, the nomination of the Democratic party for vice president of the United States. And may my right hand forget her cunning and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth if in all my settings I fail to get that greatest gift —wisdom and understanding to know the heartbreak and the need of the [illegible]

NEW ULM IS HOST

THIRD DAY OF CELEBRATION OF INDIAN WAR OF 1862 A SUCCESS.

INTERESTING FEATURES

Aeroplane Flights and Ball Games—Governor Addresses Huge Gathering at Park.

New Ulm.—With Governor A. O. Eberhart and his staff figuring as the the central figures of the day and with aeroplane flights a baseball game band concerts, a generous historical and military parade and a dance for side issues, a crowd that was estimated at more than 15,000 persons enjoyed New Ulm's commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Indian massacres. Governor Eberhart spoke, following and historical address of much the same nature by Mayor L. A. Fritsche.

The governor and his staff took part in the pageant and then went to German park, a beautiful little spot near the center of the city where a band concert preceded the addresses.

In the governor's party, which arrived early in the morning from St. Paul, were Governor and Mrs. Eberhart, General and Mrs. Fred B. Wood, and Mrs. C. H. Brown, Colonel and Mrs. A. H. Poehler, Colonel and Mrs. M. Nyman, Colonel David Wallbloom, Colonel George S. Koffend, Colonel Gustave Carlson and Major and Mrs. Prior.

The day's doings really began with the arival of the executive party. After breakfast came the parade. There were regular soldiers and some of the state militia, bands galore, floats, representing scene in the history of New Ulm and the surrounding country, local German societies, a battery of artillery, hundreds of junior pioneers and foremost in the applause along the line of march, the veteran defenders of Fort Ridgely and New Ulm during the perilous time of 1862, a momentous period in the development of the state of Minnesota, which has made possible the present celebration. Gray haired, feeble men and women rode in carriages and gaily waved their hands to the interested and enthusiastic people on the sidewalks.

What Floats Represented.

The floats in the order of their progression were as follows: "Indians, "Early Settlers," "Landing of First Boat, Jeanette Roberts," Medicine Man," "Minnehaha and Hiawatha, "Home of Savages," "Old Wind-Mill," "Indian Woodland Scenery," and "Peace and Prosperity." Many of the floats were prepared by local merchants, who have reason to feel highly enthused over their work.

Captain Louis . Vogel was marshal of the day and was assisted by Major John Buscheds, Ira D. Parker, Ed. H. Jnni, R. Pfeifferle, Luther C. Ives, George Gieseke, Henry Berg, Mike Schuster, Nick Gulden, Wm. J. Julius, P. J. Eichten, Anton G. Reinartz.

The speakers in a measure, reviewed the trials and the tribulations endured by the early settlers. He compared the material comforts of the present day with those of a half century ago, and wondered that the pioneers had been able to go through such circumstances, yet declared that they were made of stern stuff.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED

Sunday School Workers of Goodhue County Close Convention.

Cannon Falls. — The Goodhue County Sunday School Association convention was held at Pine Island. Officers elected for next year are: President, Mrs. W. B. Harrision, Red Wing; vice president E. F. Mahaffey, Zumbrota; secretary, Bessie Brooks, Cannon Falls; treasurer, Geo. Valentine, Cannon Falls; superiendents:—elementary, Ella Comwell, Pine Island; secondary, Myra Ward, Zumbrota; teacher training, Rev. W. E. Thompson, Cannon Falls; home department, Lurretta Indd, Zumbrota; adult department, Rev. S. J. Wallace, Zumbrota; temperance, A. T. Curley, M. D., Cannon Falls. The next session will be held at Goodhue in June 1913.

WINONA BANKER DEAD

F. A. Rising Succumbs in Chicago Hospital After an Operation.

Winona.—F. A. Rising, cashier of and connected with the Winona Savings bank since its formation in 1875, died at the age of 70 years, in the Presbyterian hospital, Chicago, where he had been operated upon for an intestinal trouble. The funeral will be held here on Thursday. He is survived by his wife and three children, Mary Rising of Winona, F. C. Rising of Minnewaukan, N. D., and Mrs. F. L. Coy of Cloquet, Minn. He was widely known in Minnesota banking circles.

NEW ACT NOT TO BE TESTED.

Mankato. — The proposed test of the corrupt practices act by Joseph Blissenbach, defeated member of the school board, will not be had, for the reason that he has decided not to go to the expense of a contest, as the office pays nothing. The board of education therefore, declared his opponent, L. T. Jefferson, elected. Mr. Blissenbach had proposed to contest the election on the ground that an automobile was hired to carry voters [illegible]

C. M. ANDRIST

One of the two candidates who have filed for the democratic nomination as governor of Minnesota, is C. M. Andrist, of Minneapolis.

ATTORNEYS DEBATE ACT

Legal Talent Consider Various Sides of Compensation Question.

Minneapolis.—Debate on the question of the workingmen's compensation act marked the second session of the annual meeting of the Minnesota State Bar association in Leamington hotel. The session of argument continued for more than three hours, while the best legal talent of Minnesota examined and cross-examined each other on fine points of law.

At the session in the afternoon H. V. Mercer, chairman of the committee on workmen's compensation, gave his committee's report. This failed to agree with the report prepared by a committee of the Minnesota Employers' association, and in part not with the ideas of William E. McEwen, representing the laboring men of the state. The result was that the later session was turned into a debate.

Mr. McEwen took the platform first, declaring immediately against the limitation of compensation, and urging for a form of state insurance for the injured workmen to be paid out of a fund made up of moneys expended for insurance purposes, for litigation in courts which would be eliminated, and such other funds as might arise as the result of the economical conditions which would arise from a proper act. This Mr. McEwen explained, would oust the accident insurance companies so far as factory, railroad or the like was concerned relative to employes.

The principal attack upon the Mercer law by George M. Gilliette, was on the grounds that that law made it compulsory that employers come under the control of the compensation act, whether they wish to or not. The argument that followed on the Mercer law made by numerous attorneys, was that making the law compulsory would make it unconstitutional in that it would take private property without due process of law. The New York law, which made it compulsory and was ultimately killed by the court of appeals was used as the example by the opposition to the Mercer law.

Mr. Gillette argued against the proposition of the employer being responsible for all injuries received by his employes regardless of whether it was the fault of the employe or employer. Under the Mercer law an injured man would receive compensation without further parley. The law as drawn up by Mr. Gillette and his associates makes it elective with the employer whether he shall come under the control of the state's compensation act, or remain under the court and jury system as at present.

Mr. Gillette argued against compensation for disfigurement and for industrial diseases, and urged that a limitation of liability be fixed at $50,000 to any employer in a single catastrophe. The period of compensation, which was placed at 300 weeks in the Mercer bill Mr. Gillette wanted fixed at 400 weeks.

CLUBS TO HOLD RALLY

Interstate Park Will Have Largest Meeting of Season on Aug. 27.

Taylors Falls.—The interstate park will have its largest meeting of the season on Tuesday, Aug. 27, when the Chicago farmers and merchants annual picnic, reinforced by the Interstate Farmers Club, will celebrate. A special train will be run from Rush City to Taylors Falls, with one fare and a third from all stations for the round trip. Committees are at work at every station. The music and special features are in the hands of Clarence Johnson of Rush City. Congressman F. C. Stevens of St. Paul, Governor Eberhart and others will speak.

SEEKS RE-ELECTION

Duluth Congressman Sends Filing Papers to Secretary of State.

Washington.—Representative Clarence B. Miller of the Eighth Minnesota district sent to the secretary of state his filing papers to be placed on the ballot as candidate for re-election to Congress. Mr. Miller filed as a Republican.

Beyond the mere announcement that he was a candidate for re-election Mr. Miller had no statement to make [illegible]

HELD FOR INFANTCIDE

Baby of Less Than Day Old Is Brutally Slain.

Owatonna. — Certainly one of the most revolting crimes in the history of Steele county came to light when Anton Murik was arrested on a charge of infanticide, being accused of killing his own child of less than one day old by beating out its brains.

It was born shortly after midnight. Marik was intoxicated at the time, as he had been for some days, according to neighbors, but was making no trouble.

A physician left the house at 2 o'clock, leaving a neighbor woman in charge as nurse. About daylight, according to the story told by the nurse, Marik came into the house and drove her out of doors. Then he sent the two older boys, aged 14 and 16, out and finally drove the third and youngest boy away.

This boy crept around and peered through a window and was a witness to the tragedy. According to his story his father seized the new-born infant by the feet, held it in the air and beat its head with his fist, while the mother lay terrified and helpless. The lad called his brothers. Coroner Adair, Sherig Leeby and others went at once to the scene. They found the baby with its head horribly crushed and the father lying in a drunken stupor. Marik is a man 60 years old.

MAY CHANGE LAW

Judge Orr Believes Legislation Not in Harmony With Criminal Rules.

St. Paul.—The Minnesota State Legislature may be asked at its next session to change the law defining grand larceny. It is believed by judges in the district court to be out of harmony with the criminal rules of common law based on "intent." and "I believe the law should be modified," said Judge Orr. "At present any theft from a building is classed as grand larceny, regardless of the value of the stolen article. When the culprit carries out a deliberate intent to steal it applies, but when a person, entering a store to buy something, a condition proved by the actual purchase, is tempted by something he sees, I do not believe he is guilty of grand larceny.

"Inasmuch as crime is based largely on intent, I have believe such a person should be guilty of petty larceny, as though the article had been stolen elsewhere than within a building."

DRAINAGE AN ISSUE.

Mud Lake Settlers Will Insist Upon Amendments to Present Laws.

Holt. — The Commercial club elected officers for the ensuing year, as follows: P. A. Risberg, president; S. S. Kolden, vice president; Charles W. Latta, secretary; B. L. Becke, treasurer; Axel Nelson, Chris. A. Yven and A. L. Carlson directors .

Owing to widespread dissatisfaction over drainage conditions in the Mud Lake district, a resolution was passed pledging the support of the club to the settlers in any legitimate action they may see fit to take to secure the prompt and proper fulfillment of the drainage contracts and remedy the present inconveniences and hardships.

It is intimated that any candidate who will not pledge himself to support proposed amendments to the drainage laws will meet with the organized opposition of the settlers in the Mud Lake district, which will be strong enough to defeat any of them.

WILL NOT TEST ACT

James E. Swenson of Lake Crystal Believed to Have Been Insane.

Lake Crystal. — The funeral of James E. Swenson, a real estate dealer, who shot and killed himself, took place here. He lay down on a rug in his office, placed a pillow under his head and fired a bullet through his heart. He left four letters, in which he ascribed his act to despondency due to the failure of his plans. One letter was addressed to his wife, one to his daughter, one to a business friend and the other to his friends in general. He had not been considered of sound mind for some time, and was recently discharged from the St. Peter asylum.

STATE BUYS FARM

Pays $30,000 for Site of Waseca Branch of School of Agriculture.

Waseca. — The sale of the R. P. Ward farm to the University of Minnesota for the site of the Waseca branch of the school of agriculture has just been completed. The property consists of 246.02 acres of fine farm land, nearly all under cultivation, with a large barn, a house and several smaller buildings. The price paid was $125 an acre, a total of $30,752.50, the largest sum ever paid for a Waseca county farm.

Will Stump East.

St. Paul.—Senator Moses E. Clapp is not expected to return to Minnesota when Congress adjourns. It is probable that he will spend September and October campaigning in the East for the Progressives. Requests have been made for Senator Clapp's services in Pennsylvania. No definite word has been received from Senator Nelson as to when he will return. His friends, however, think that he will remain in Washington until Congress adjourns and then return at once to his home at Alexandria.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879.

Editor Lattimore, of the Eleven Towns seems to be lost for a candidate to support for president, and we will advise him as follows: Vote for Roosevelt; pray for Taft, and bet on Wilson.

Nels Anderson who is a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds, is an old resident of Polk County, and numerous of his old friends are likely to give him a vote on election day.

Eberhart's campaign committee has issued on official booklet in which it gives the governor credit for the 5 per cent gross earnings tax and the direct primary. Of all the colossal nerve. Will some one of this committee please point to the paragraph in the governor's message or in his call for the special session advocating the increase in the gross earnings law?—T.R. F. N. Press.

The trouble with Eberhart is that he thinks the people are not onto him, dut he will find out that they are, when they get a chance to vote. May be he thinks that the people up this way think he has appointed an honest game and Fish Commission instead of a set of tools for the lumber companies but they dont.

The state game and fish commission's fish that they put into Red Lake River are beginning to be seen in large quantities up this way but it will be ten years before they can take the place of the fish slaughtered last winter by the lumber companies closing off the river.

Thief River Falls politicians are taking an active interest in the County Superintendent of schools campaign, which of course is none of their business, but indications are now that Mr. Mostue is a sure winner if the farmers will only turn out to election. Of course his opponent will pull a big vote in the Town of Highlanding owing to him being a socialist and this town casting a large socialist vote. But those who do not believe in turning the head of our country schools over to that party are likely to get into the collar and do some tall hustling before election day.

As we begin to get warmed up in the campaign we shall place the facts before the people to convince them that Taft and Eberhart are a disgrace to honest government. And have filled their appointative offices with men that are not fit to be trusted behind a farmers manure fork for fear he would steal the fork.

H. E. Ives is out with his photo calling the voters attention to the fact that he is a candidate for nomination and of course election for Clerk of Court. Mr. Ives has made a very efficient county official and about the only reason to defeat him for re-election would be that another man wants the job. But here is hoping we will see the smiling face of Harry behind that counter after January first.

A Red Lake River Farmer reports that he had a narrow escape from death about ten days ago. He was out in the timber east of here and a heavy rain storm came up, and for protection he crawled into a hollow log. After the storm had passed he tried to crawl out, but discovered that the log had swollen and closed up the opening so he could [illegible] through. He then began to think of [illegible] things he had done during his life and at last happened to think that he had voted for Taft and Eberhart, and then he got so small that he slid out of that hole with room to spare and returned safely to his home.

Jesse LaBree, will make a hustling campaign for his renomination and election and it can be said of him that he has made a first class sheriff, and it is with him the same as some others the reason he has opposition is because another man would like to have his job. But the people are the ones that say when they wish to retire a county official.

We are pleased to note that Hon. Ira B. Mills is a candidate for re-election as Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner. Mr. Mills has proven himself to be the right man in the right place for this position.

It is a pleasure for us to indorse and support a man like Halvor Steenerson for re-election to office, for he puts his shoulder to the wheel and transacts business from the word go, and he at all times represents the best interests of the common people. But if there is any one thing that is disgusting to us it is to see men like Taft and Eberhart appoint tools of the corporations to office and then come bellyaching around asking the people for votes, thinking they are so ignorant that they have not caught onto their game.

Are Ever At War.

There are two things everlastingly at war, joy and piles. But Bucklen's Arnica Salve will banish piles in any form. It soon subdues the itching, irritation, inflammation or swelling. It gives comfort, invites joy. Greatest healer of burns, boils, ulcers, cuts, bruises, eczema, scalds, pimples, skin eruptions. Only 25 cts at All Druggists.

The rate for publication of political announcements in this columo is only $5.00 payable strictly in advance. No credit given on this class of work.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

I am a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds of Pennington county, and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primaries to be held September 17th 1912. Nels J. Anderson.

FOR CLERK OF COURT.

I wish to announce to the voters of Pennington County that I will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Clerk of the District Court for Pennington County, subject to the decision of the voters at the Republican Primary, September 17th, 1912.

We have occupied the position since the organization of Pennington County and have tried to the best of my ability to be strictly impartial and as efficient as my ability would allow. I will be pleased to have the votes and support of all citizens who believe that I have filled the position in an honest and efficient manner.

If nominated and elected I hereby promise to give the office my personal attention and my best efforts to honestly administer the affairs of the office in a strictly impartial and efficient manner.

Harry E. Ives.
Thief River Falls

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, [illegible]

FOR COUNTY TREASURER.

I wish to announce that I am a candidate for County Treasurer subject to the ratification of the Republican voters at the primaries, September 17, 1912. Being that political parties have always regarded it as important to have their members elected to all offices it must be for aid in promoting party politics, for so far as the work in the county offices is concerned it can make no difference whatever, what the officer, [illegible] his affiliations are, so the idea must be that he is expected to talk and work and use the advantage of his public position, in aiding the party to which he belongs. I believe that it is of the utmost importance to have the Republican party control at least one branch of congress in order to maintain the average of prices. While the price-level does not prove that times are good, theoretically, yet we know that with the enormous debt of the country, it will be harder to pay it with low prices than with high, steady prices. I believe that because one can not support the whole Republican ticket, it is no reason at all to quite supporting candidates for congress and the legislature, which is by far more important than the office of president, so far as party politics is concerned. These are my ideas, and I shall use my influence to help along on those lines, no matter whether I am nominated or not.

Sincerely for the success of the party.

Andrew Trovaton.

FOR SHERIFF.

I wish to announce that I am a candidate for the office of sheriff, subject to the will of the voters of Pennington county at the primaries September 17. I have held the office one term, or since the organization of the county, having been appointed by the board of county commissioners. If my conduct of the affairs of the office have met with your approval, an endorsement at the primaries would be greatly appreciated.

Jesse La Bree.

COUNTY ATTORNEY.

I wish to announce to the voters of Pennington county that I am a candidate for the office of County Attorney on the Republican ticket, and solicit your vote and support at the primaries to be held on Sept. 17, 1912.—J. M. Bishop, Thief River Falls, Minn.

COUNTY TREASURER.

I am a candidate for the office of County Treasurer of Pennington County and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primary election to be held on Sept. 17, 1912.—John T. Gullingsrud, Thief River Falls.

REGISTER OF DEEDS

I wish to announce to the voters of Pennington County that I am a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds of Pennington County and respectfully solicit your votes and support.

Geo. W. Elder.

COUNTY AUDITOR.

I wish hereby to announce to the Voters of Pennington County, that I am a candidate for the Republican Nomination for the Office of County Auditor, at the September 17th, 1912 primaries; Since my appointment to this office, at the time of the organization of Pennington County, I have given the office my whole time and my very best efforts. Should I be favored with the nomination and election, I believe with the experience gained, I will be still better prepared to serve you the coming term.

If our services have met with your approval I earnestly solicit your consideration and support.

Very truly yours,
A. H. Fasel

A Good Listener.

"Do you and your wife ever have words?" "She has. I never do."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Baldness.

According to a Parisian physician premature baldness is the result of [illegible] trouble.

JUDGE OF PROBATE

I hereby announce that I am a non-partisan candidate for reelection to the office of Judge of Probate in and for Pennington County, Minnesota. I respectfully solicit your vote and support at the Primary Election to be held on Tuesday Sept. 17th., 1912.

Wilhelm Michelet
Judge of Probate
Thief River Falls Minn.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Aug. 9, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. August 7th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given, that May Arndt, of Highlanding Minn., who on May 15th, 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No 06150 for S. E. ¼, Section 33 Township 15[illegible] N. Range 40 W. 5th Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 16th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

John M. Johnson, Bernt Johnson, Marga Vaughan, John Guinan, all of Highlanding Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

The Worm Turned.

"William," said Mrs. Peckem sternly, "did you ever stop to think that some one might steal me when you were away?"

"Well," responded the poor husband, with a faraway look, "I was a little alarmed when a horse thief was prowling through these parts last week."

Mrs. Peckem stiffened up haughtily. "A horse thief, eh?"

"Yes! I heard that he carried off two or three nags from this district."

And then Peckem made a bee line for the club.

Flying Men Fall

victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles just like other people, with like results in loss of appetite, backache, nervousness, headache, and tired, listless, run down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that as T. D. Peebles, Henry, Tenn proved. "Six bottles of Electric Bitters" he writes, "did more to give me new strength and good appetite than all other stomach remedies I used," So they help every body. Its folly to suffer when this great remedy will help you from the first dose. Try it. Only 50 cents at All Druggists.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Aug. 9th, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. August 5th, 1912.

NOTICE is hereby given that Grace M. Pinkerton, of Torgerson Minn., who on May 15th 1911, made homestead Entry No. 06180 for S. E. ¼ Section 22 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 16th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

A. T. Rice, of Germantown Minn. John Markuson, E. H. Besancon, of Torgerson Minn. J. H. Hay, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Aug. 9.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Aug. 7th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Knudt C. Shirliny, of Thief River Falls Minn. who on Oct. 8, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 617. Serial No. 01100 for S.E.¼ Section 6 Township 154 N. Range 41 W. 5th Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 24th day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Charl C. Gyerum, of Thief River Falls Minn. Hans Jurstad, of Thief River Falls Minn. Ole Shirley, of Thief River Falls, Minn. Carl [illegible], of [illegible], Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

C.GOTZIAN&CO.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF GROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9,40 a. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Aug. 23rd, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. August 20th. 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Paul Henriksen, of Esplee Minn., who on September 20th, 1910, made Homestead Application Serial No. 05657 for S.½ N.E. ¼, S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼, & N. E. ¼ S.W. ¼ Section 7 Township 165 N. Range 39 W. 5th Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn, on the 27th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Fred Solley, John U. Nilsod, Carl T. Hanson, Paul Sund, all of Esplee Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

A Wonderful Machine.

The machine by which railway tickets are printed gives an exhibition of intelligence or what looks very like it. Railway tickets are not, as might be supposed, printed in large sheets and afterward cut up. The cardboard is cut into tickets first and printed one by one afterward. The little blank cards are put in a pile in a kind of perpendicular spout, and the machine slips a bit of metal underneath the bottom of the spout and pushes out the lowest ticket in the pile to be printed and consecutively numbered. It is of no use trying to print a bad ticket. The machine finds out an imperfect blank in an instant and flatly refuses to have anything to do with it. Tear off the corner of one of the bits of card and put it into the spout with the others in order to see what will happen and it refuses to budge again until somebody comes and removes the impostor. Pull out the damaged ticket and the mechanism will set briskly to work again.—Philadelphia Record.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGlon Block,
Thief River Falls.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

THE L[illegible]

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

S. L. Holmn now has his ferry in good order at Highlanding and teams can be ferryed there at any time.

Local news are rather scarce this week.

E. A. Mostue and Andrew Trovaton are out campaigning and made this office a pleasant call to day.

Walter McAndress made a business trip to Thief River Falls last Saturday returning Sunday.

Miss Marie and Ella Cousins made Miss Myrtle Hunt a pleasant call on Sunday afternoon.

Krist Larson shipped three car loads of cattle to St. Paul market, bought in this territory, this week.

Miss Rosella Dunning left for her home in Superior Wis., this morning after an extended visit with her aunt Mrs. C. L. Clark.

Mr. Dahle started up his threshing machine on the farm of S. L. Holmn this week and has been threshing some oats for feed.

We received the announcement of Congressman Steenerson too late for publication this week, but it will appear in our next issue.

Julious Halverson has been buying cattle in this locality the past week, and incidently looking up votes for his nomination for sheriff of Pennington County.

The Farmers' Club Meeting at Kratka next Sunday is likely to be attended by a large number of candidates for county office for you know our officials always love us just before election.

Some of the candidates for governor are sending out long strings of political press notices for publication in the country newspaper, we wonder if they think the country editor gets his type set for nothing or is of the opinion that the state will turn bottom side up if they are not elected to office.

The weather has been very unfavorable for stacking grain and hay the past week, There has not been any heavy rains, but that little local shower comes along about every day.

The American Press Association do not seem to have much call for their free boiler plate matter booming Taft, from the country publisher, but it is not necessary to publish anything about Taft, as the Minnesota farmers all know him.

Read over the political announcements published in another column and make up your mind who you will vote for on election day, so as to be sure and not make a mistake and vote for some man who has not asked you for a vote either by word of mouth, or through the columns of your local paper.

There are always some candidates for office that have a fine spree before election. They usually gather about ten or fifteen "drys" around them and meet at a saloon an "set um up" and the drys shout for them as long as they pay the expense of wetting their whistles, and when the votes are counted they wonder how it happened that they only got so few votes when their praise was shouted so loud at the saloon bar just before election.

A Missouri editor asks: "Are there any sweeter words in the English language than "I love you!" To which the Odessa, [Mo.,] Democrat replies: "Perhaps not, but the words "here is a dollar and a half I owe on subscription" are not lacking in delightful association to the ear of a newspaper man.

The Difficulty.

The First Worker—Mannie,born to blowed! D'you mean ter say if me an you come into a bit o' money, we couldn't keep our end up with these 'ere dooks and people?

His Doubting Friend—Oh, we should be all right, but our missuses 'd give the game away, yer know.—London Sketch.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS.

Paid Advertising.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The undersigned take this means of announcing to the voters of Pennington County that he is a candidate for re-election as Superintendent of Schools subject to the ratification of of the voters there of at the Primary Election to be held on Tuesday, Sept. 17th, 1912.

Your vote and support are respectfully solicited.

E. A. Mostue.

Candidate For Sheriff.

I desire to announce to the voters of Pennington county that I will be a candidate for the office of sheriff, and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primaries, September 17, 1912.

Julious Halverson.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

I hereby announce to the voters of Commissioner District No. 5 that I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for County Commissioner of said district at the Republican primaries Sept. 17th. Vote for a man that lives in the eastern part of your territory that will take an interest in getting you roads and bridges.

Lars Lee
sec. 4
Town of Hickory.

FOR CLERK OF COURT.

I hereby announce that am a Republican candidate for the office of Clerk of District Court of Pennington County, and respectfully solicit your vote and support at the primaries to be held on Tuesday, September 17, 1912.

Yours Truly
E. J. OVERLAND
Thief River Falls.
Minn.

Having received the nomination of the Public Ownership Party for candidate for County Commissioner of the 5th commissioner district, I will, if elected, consider myself at the service of the people and use all my efforts in the interests of the tax payers of Pennington County.

I earnestly solicit the support of the voters at the final election November 5th.

Respectfully
George Lemmers.

COUNTY SURVEYOR

I hereby announce that I am a candidate for the Republican Nomination for County Surveyor, of Pennington County, and solicit your votes and support at the primaries on Sept. 17 1912.

C. H. Mars.

Indian Killed On Track.

Near Rochelle, Ill., an Indian went to sleep on a railroad track and was killed by the fast express. He paid for his carelessness with his life. Often its that way when people neglect coughs and colds. Don't risk your life when prompt use of Dr. King's New Discovery will cure them and so prevent a dangerous throat or lung trouble. "It completely cured me, in a short time, of a terrible cough that followed a severe attack of Grip," writes J. R. Watts, Floydada, Tex.," and Iregained 15 pounds in weight that I had lost." Quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at All Druggists.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.

PRICE 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

He Knew a Thing or Two.

Mrs. Exe—It isn't right to charge Willie with taking that money out of your pocket. Why don't you decline me? Mr. Exe—Because it wasn't all taken.—Boston Transcript.

Very Much In Love.

Waiter (waiting for his order)—Have you made your choice, sir? Lovesick Diner—Oh, yes; it's Laura.—Fliegende Blaetter.

Good counselors are the most instructive because they are heard with patience and reverence.—Johnson.

[illegible] NEWS

[illegible] will soon start in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. James Alric from Plummer were guests at Mr. Con. Shorts and Walkers on Sunday.

Mrs. A. Rolandson and children spent Sunday at Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hofstad.

Miss Florence Hanson and sisters spent Sunday with Miss Annie Bell Rolandson.

Mr. E. V Carlson and Mrs. Hanson spent Sunday at Mrs. Ed. Rustad.

Mr. Carl Rindahl left for Oklee on Saturday and went for Hill River on Sunday to take in a grand picnic there.

Mr. Gust Iversen from Rofand cycled to Erie to visit with his brother and sister and also took in the ball game.

Mrs Lynch and son Clarence spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Castello.

Miss Caroline Iverson from Erie came home on a short visit with her mother and brothers near Rofand.

Miss Short, and Miss Hemly, spent a few hours with Miss Rolandson on Friday.

CONGRESSMAN AT LARGE

Hon. F. M. Eddy, is a candidate for Congressman at Large from Minnesota. He has well and truly represented this district in Congress for two terms and will undoubtly receive strong support from his old friends in the 9th District. Here is hoping that F. M. finds the plum

The Trials Of A Traveler.

"I am a travelling salesman," writes E. E. Youngs, E. Berkshire, Vt., "and was often troubled with constipation and indigestion till I began to use Dr. King's New Life Pills, which I have found an excellent remedy." For all stomach, liver or kidney troubles they are unequaled. Only 25 cents at All Druggists.

Order Limiting Time to File Claims, and for Hearing Thereon.

ESTATE OF Nettie Cady.

STATE MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF Pennington, IN PROBATE COURT:

In the Matter of the Estate of Nettie Cady Decedent.

Letters of Administration this day having been granted to Henry D. Cady

It is Ordered, that the time within which all creditors of the above named decedent may present claims against his estate in this court, be, and the same hereby is, limited to three (3) months from and after the date hereof; and that Thursday the 14th, day of November 1912, at Ten (10) o'clock A. M., in the Probate Court Rooms at the Court House at Thief River Falls, in said County, be, and the same hereby is, fixed and appointed as the time and place for hearing upon and the examination, adjustment and allowance of such claims as shall be presented within the time aforesaid.

Let notice hereof be given by the publication of this of this order in "THE SUNBEAM" a weekly newspaper, as provided by law

Dated August 9th, 1912

Wilhelm Michelet
(Court Seal) Judge of Probate.

Stanton & Rowberg, Attorneys for Estate, Thief River Falls, Minn.

On Pa.

"My son," said [illegible] to the fly in front of the [illegible] ways be like the [illegible]."

The little boy was thoughtful.

"I don't think I'd want to be like that [illegible]," he remarked seriously.

"[illegible] why not, Tommy?"

"'Cause if I was I'd be a porch climber."—Chicago News.

Take One Pain Pill, Then—Take It Easy.

To Head-Off a Headache

Nothing is Better than

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

They Give Relief without Bad After-Effects.

"For four years I was subject to almost constant headache. At times so severe I was unfitted for work. Through the advice of a friend I was persuaded to try Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills and the result has been that I have entirely eradicated my system of those continuous headaches that followed a hard and continuous mental strain."—O. L. Russell, Agt. C. & N. W. Ry., Early, Ia.

For Sale by All Druggists.
25 Doses, 25 Cents.
MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

HOUSE KEEPER WANTED.

I desire to employ the services of a house keeper on my farm in the town of Kratka. Good conveniences and steady employment. Salary $4.00 a week and board. Call on or address,

John Quirk,
Highlanding Minn.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

ANIMAL SUPERSTITIONS.

Chief Among Them In Japan Is the Fear of the Fox.

Chief among Japanese animal superstitions is the fear of the fox, which is believed to have supernatural power. Shrines called "Inari Jinsha," in which the fox is enshrined as a deity, are numberless. The name of the deity written in Chinese characters signifies fox, and from this it came to be generally accepted that the god was really a fox. Its natural cunning is greatly enlarged upon, and it is believed to be capable of misleading and deceiving human beings, which causes many to pray to placate the fox god.

The badger is the next most dreaded animal in the superstitious mind. It is believed to have power to annoy people, its particular habit being a transformation into a Buddhist priest, in which disguise it is guilty of various deceptions and impositions. The crying of weasels and the baying of dogs are considered evil omens, and such insignificant happenings send a shudder over the believers.

On the other hand, a light colored mouse in the house is a sign of happiness, good omens are presaged by what are considered the pleasant cries of crows in the morning, while the so called unpleasant notes forecast death and other dire disasters. If a spider falls from the ceiling in the morning he brings pleasure, but if at night it is thought reverses will follow. To see a centipede at night means happiness.—Pearson's Weekly.

A POOR TYPE OF CITIZEN.

The Good Man Who Lives by and Exclusively For Himself.

I know a certain type of man who poses as a good citizen, says Bert Walker. He breaks no laws, lives morally, pays his honest debts and is never tangled up in lawsuits. But he lives of himself, by himself and for himself only.

When a call is issued for volunteers to take hold of the car of progress and give a lift he never answers. When calamity has befallen people in a certain locality and charitable humanity flies to their rescue he is never one of their number. When money is needed to gild the spire of public enterprise his name is never on the list. When he sees some neighbor stuck in the mud he goes around to avoid him. In fact, were he standing on the shore and should observe the ship of state fast sinking in the surf, never a life line would he throw. He didn't bore the hole in the side of the vessel that lets in the water; so it is none of his concern what happens.

But were all mankind made of this kind of clay have you ever thought what would happen? There would be no churches, no hospitals for the sick, no institutions for the unfortunate, no rest rooms for the weary. [illegible] would [illegible]

NEW BANK.

FIRST
STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Gileau Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abraham Parquine, T. L. Cruson.
J. A. Duffy, Cashier. T. L. Cruson, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You
Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this section of the Country.

Don't Buy Eleswhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.
Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

Ask for Catalogue 167.

THE VICTOR
SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offer to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the usual retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

Nails, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

[illegible]

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

SERIAL STORY

EXCUSE ME!

Novelized from the Comedy of the Same Name

By Rupert Hughes

ILLUSTRATED From Photographs of the Play as Produced By Henry W. Savage

Copyright, 1911, by H. K. Fly Co.

11

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Ira Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Mallory decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding hazing. Marjorie is distracted. Ira Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Anne Gattle, a fellow passenger. Mallory vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Mallory reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Mallory finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train.

CHAPTER XVI—(Continued).

Eventually, the car quieted, and nothing was heard but the rumble and click of the wheels on the rails, the creak of timbers, and the frog-like chorus of a few well-trained snorers. As the porter was turning down the last of the lights, a rumpled pate was thrust from the stateroom, and the luscious-eyed man whispered:

"Porter, what time did you say we crossed the Iowa state line?"

"Two fifty-five a. m."

From within the stateroom came a deep sigh, then with a dismal groan: "Call me at two fifty-five a. m.," the door was closed.

Poor Mallory, pyjamaless and nightshirtless, lay propped up on his pillows, staring out of the window at the swiftly shifting night scene. The state of Illinois was being pulled out from under the train like a dark rug.

Farmhouses gleamed or dreamed lampless. The moonlight rippled on endless seas of wheat and Indian corn. Little towns slid up and away. Large towns rolled forward, and were left behind. Ponds, marshes, brooks, pastures, thickets and great gloomy groves flowed past as on a river. But the same stars and the moon seemed to accompany the train. If the flying witness had been less heavy of heart, he would have found the reeling scene full of grace and night beauty. But he could not see any charm in all the world, except his tantalizing other self, from whom a great chasm seemed to divide him, though she was only two windows away.

He had not yet fallen asleep, and he was still pondering how to attain his unmarried, unmarriable bride, when the train rolled out in air above a great wide river, very noble under the stars. He knew it for the Mississippi. He heard a faint knocking on a door at the other end of the car. He heard sounds as of kisses, and then somebody tiptoed along the aisle stealthily. He did not know that another bridegroom was being separated from his bride because they were too much married.

Somewhere in Iowa he fell asleep.

CHAPTER XVII.

Last Call for Breakfast.

It was still Iowa when Mallory awoke. Into his last moments of heavy sleep intruded a voice like a town-crier's voice, crying:

"Lass call for breakfuss in the Rining Rar," and then, again louder, "Lass call for breakfuss in Rininrar," and, finally and faintly, "Lass call breakfuss r'rar."

Mallory pushed up his window-shade. The day was broad on rolling prairies like billows established in the green soil. He peeked through his curtains. Most of the other passengers were up and about, their beds hidden and beddings stowed away behind the bellying veneer of the upper works of the car. All the berths were made up except his own and number two, in the corner, where Little Jimmie Wellington's nose still played a bagpipe melody, and one other berth, which he recognized as Marjorie's.

His belated sleep and hers had spared them both the stares and laughing chatter of the passengers. But this bridal couple's two berths, standing like towers among the seats, had provided conversation for everybody, had already united the casual group of strangers into an organized gossip-bee.

Mallory got into his shoes and as much of his clothes as was necessary for the [illegible] to the washroom, and took on his arm the rest of his wardrobe. Just as he issued from his lonely [illegible] Marjorie appeared from [illegible] disheveled [illegible] heavy [illegible] hurried to [illegible]

The [illegible] and [illegible] of the tenants [illegible] he was reduced to [illegible] yesterday's linen as well as yesterday's beard. This was intolerable. A brave man can endure heartbreaks, loss of love, honor and place, but a [illegible] hide the traces of time in his toilet. Lieutenant Mallory had seen rough service in camp and on long hikes, when he gloried in mud and disorder, and he was to see campaigns in the Philippines, when he should not take off his shoes or his uniform for three days at a time. But that was the field, and this car was a drawing room.

In this crisis in his affairs, Little Jimmie Wellington waddled into the men's room, floundering about with every lurch of the train, like a cannon loose in the hold of a ship. He fumbled with the handles on a basin, and made a crazy toilet, trying to find some abatement of his fever by filling a glass at the ice-water tank and emptying it over his head.

These drastic measures restored him to some sort of coherency, and Mallory appealed to him for help in the matter of linen. Wellington effusively offered him everything he had, and Mallory selected from his store half a dozen collars, any one of which would have gone round his neck nearly twice.

Wellington also proffered his safety razor, and made him a present of a virgin wafer of steel for his very own.

With this assistance, Mallory was enabled to make himself fairly presentable. When he returned to his seat, the three curtained rooms had been whisked away by the porter. There was no place now to hide from the passengers.

He sat down facing the feminine end of the car, watching for Marjorie. The passengers were watching for her, too, hoping to learn what unheard-of incident could have provoked the quarrel that separated a bride and groom at this time, of all times.

To the general bewilderment, when Marjorie appeared, Mallory and she rushed together and clasped hands with an ardor that suggested a desire for even more ardent greeting. The passengers almost sprained their ears to hear how they would make up such a dreadful feud. But all they heard was: "We'll have to hurry, Marjorie, if we want to get any breakfast."

"All right, honey. Come along."

Then the inscrutable couple scurried up the aisle, and disappeared in the corridor, leaving behind them a mighty riddle. They kissed in the corridor of that car, kissed in the vestibule, kissed in the two corridors of the next car, and were caught kissing in the next vestibule by the new conductor.

The dining car conductor, who flattered himself that he knew a bride and groom when he saw them, escorted them grandly to a table for two; and the waiter fluttered about them with extraordinary consideration.

They had a plenty to talk of in prospect and retrospect. They both felt sure that a minister lurked among the cars somewhere, and they ate with a zest to prepare for the ceremony, arguing the best place for it, and quarreling amorously over details. Mallory was for one of the vestibules as the scene of their union, but Marjorie was for the baggage car, till she realized that Snoozleums might be unwilling to attend. Then she swung round to the vestibule, but Mallory shifted to the observation platform.

Marjorie had left Snoozleums with Mrs. Temple, who promised to hide him when the new conductor passed through the car, and she reminded Harry to get the waiter to bring them a package of bones for their only "child," so far.

On the way back from the dining car they kissed each other good-bye again at all the trysting places they had sanctified before. The sun was radiant, the world good, and the very train ran with jubilant rejoicing. They could not doubt that a few more hours would see them legally man and wife.

Mallory restored Marjorie to her place in their car, and with smiles of assurance, left her for another parson-hunt through the train. She waited for him in a bridal agitation. He ransacked the train forward in vain, and returned, passing Marjorie with a shake of the head, and a sour countenance. He went out to the observation platform where he stumbled on Ira Lathrop and Anne Gattle, engaged in a conversation of evident intimacy, for they jumped when he opened the door, as if they were guilty of some plot.

Mallory mumbled his usual, "Excuse me," whirled on his heel, and dragged his discouraged steps back through the Observation Room, where various women and a few men of evident unclericality were draped across arm chairs and absorbed in lazy conversation or bobbing their heads over magazines that trembled with the motion of the train.

Mrs. Wellington was busily writing at the desk, but he did not know who she was, and he did not care whom she was writing to. He did not observe the baleful glare of Mrs. Whitcomb, who sat watching Mrs. Wellington, knowing all too well who she was, and suspecting the correspondent—Mrs. Whitcomb was tempted to spell the word with one "r."

Mallory stumbled into the men's portion of the composite car. Here he nodded with a sickly cheer to the sole occupant, Dr. Temple, who was looking less ministerial than ever in an embroidered skull cap. The old [illegible] was sitting far back in his [illegible] One of his hands [illegible]

[illegible] with a long black cigar. The smoke [illegible] round the old [illegible] fumes of a [illegible] with the [illegible] was one of [illegible] bliss.

Mallory's eyes were [illegible] from this picture of beatitude by the entrance, at the other door, of a man who had evidently swung aboard at the most recent stop—for Mallory had not seen him. His gray [illegible] crowned with a soft black [illegible] his spare frame was swathed in a frock coat that had seen [illegible] His soft gray eyes seemed [illegible] kindly the smoke-cloudy atmosphere, and he had a [illegible] Mallory translated as one of diffidence in a place where liquors and cigars were dispensed.

With equal diffidence Mallory advanced and in a low tone accosted the newcomer cautiously:

"Excuse me—you look like a clergyman."

"The hell you say!"

Mallory pursued the question no further.

CHAPTER XVIII.

In the Composite Car.

It was the gentle stranger's turn to miss his guess. He bent over the chair into which Mallory had flopped, and said in a tense, low tone: "You look like a thoroughbred sport. I'm trying to make up a game of stud poker. Will you join me?"

Mallory shook his heavy head in refusal, and with dull eyes watched the man, whose profession he no longer misunderstood, saunter up to the blissful Doctor from Ypsilanti, and murmur again:

"Will you join me?"

"Join you in what, sir?" said Dr. Temple, with alert courtesy.

"A little game."

"I don't mind," the doctor smiled, rising with amiable readiness. "The checkers are in the next room."

"Quit your kiddin'," the stranger coughed. "How about a little freeze-out?"

"Freeze-out?" said Dr. Temple. "It sounds interesting. Is it something like authors?"

The newcomer shot a quick glance at this man, whose innocent air he suspected. But he merely drawled: "Well, you play it with cards."

"Would you mind teaching me the rules?" said the old sport from Ypsilanti.

The gambler was growing suspicious of this too, too childlike innocence. He whined: "Say, what's your little game, eh?" but decided to risk the venture. He sat down at a table, and Dr. Temple, bringing along his glass, drew up a chair. The gambler took a pack of cards from his pocket, and shuffled them with a snap that startled Dr. Temple and a dexterity that delighted him.

"Go on, it's beautiful to see," he explained. The gambler set the pack down with the one word "Cut!" but since the old man made no effort to comply, the gambler did not insist. He took up the pack again and ran off five cards to each place with a grace that staggered the doctor.

Mallory was about to intervene for the protection of the guileless physician when the conductor chanced to saunter in.

The gambler, seeing him, snatched Dr. Temple's cards from his hand and slipped the pack into his pocket.

"What's the matter now?" Dr. Temple asked, but the newcomer huskily answered: "Wait a minute. Wait a minute."

The conductor took in the scene at a glance and, stalking up to the table, spoke with the grimness of a sea-captain: "Say, I've got my eye on you. Don't start nothin'."

The stranger stared at him wonderingly and demanded: "Why, what you drivin' at?"

"You know all right," the conductor growled, and then turned on the befuddled old clergyman, "and you, too."

"Me, too?" the preacher gasped.

"Yes, you too," the conductor repeated, shaking an accusing forefinger under his nose. "Your actions have been suspicious from the beginning. We've all been watching you."

Dr. Temple was so agitated that he nearly let fall his secret. "Why, do you realize that I'm a—"

"Ah, don't start that," sneered the conductor, "I can spot a gambler as far as I can see one. You and your side partner here want to look out, that's all, or I'll drop you at the next tank." Then he walked out, his very shoulder blades uttering threats.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Minute Men.

The so-called organization of Minute Men came into existence shortly before the outbreak of the Revolution. The patriots of Massachusetts and other New England colonies banded themselves together, obtained arms and pledged themselves to the defense of the colonies "at a minute's notice." From this pledge to take up arms "at a minute's notice" they got their name.

The Minute Men were enrolled in pursuance of the act of the Provincial congress, which was passed on November 23, 1774. Many names that were destined to become famous in the Revolution appeared in this roster of patriots. In the beginning they were expected to serve only in the New England colonies, but when the conflict came no thought was taken of this. The Massachusetts Historical society has a list of the patriots who were enrolled as Minute Men.

Comprehensive Summing Up.

If a horse's legs are no good, the horse is no good. If a man's word is no good, the man is [illegible]

SAND HILL TURNED INTO REAL MONEY

An Investment in a College Education Brings Quick Returns.

BY DAVID C. GALE.

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

"I've lived on this farm the biggest part of my life," grumbled Mr. Whitcomb, "and what have I got to show for it? It's growing worse every year, if anything. I thought 'twould be different after you went to the farming college, but what you got out of books don't seem to help it any."

"Blame the farm, father, don't blame the books. This soil is hardly good enough for pasturage. That sand hill lot is worse than nothing. You can't expect science to do it all—there must be something to start with."

"But other farms have been brought back into shape again. They say there's a way to make 'em over when they're all run down," persisted Mr. Whitcomb.

"To make them over, yes, but not to make them. This place isn't run down—there never was anything here to run down. It was worthless in the beginning."

"Then you think I'd ought to sell it and buy another?"

"You couldn't do it. What you could get for it wouldn't buy another—one that you want, I mean. Good farms are high these days."

Mr. Whitcomb could think of nothing to say in reply, so he pulled the barn door together and walked off toward the house. There was an almost pitiful stoop to his shoulders, a stoop which told of years of fighting with the rocks and sand. He paused in the middle of the yard to ask another question.

"When are you going away?" he called out.

"In about a month," replied the younger man.

There had been a position waiting for Don Whitcomb at the end of his course in college. It was a good position, too, and he felt confident there were better things ahead of him. The old people had never taken very kindly to his ideas concerning scientific farming. It was only after long-continued argument that they ceased to oppose his plans.

"Good Farms Are High These Days."

Even then they could lend him no aid. The family pocketbook was hardly able to supply the necessities; there was no provision for the cause of education. Consequently, the success which came as a result of his four years' work gave him the right to believe that he had chosen wisely.

"I suppose father thinks I ought to stay here," he mused, "but it's asking too much of a fellow. The only thing I can do is to save up money and send it home."

Mr. Whitcomb was unusually silent at the supper table that evening. Don noticed something in his face that he had never seen before. It was the expression a man wears when he is about to give up the fight. His eye was listless, his head bowed, in short, his whole attitude suggested defeat.

The following morning Mrs. Whitcomb appeared in Don's room at an early hour.

"You'll have to see to things today," she said. "Your father is sick."

"What's the matter?" he queried, sleepily.

"I don't know," replied his mother. "I can't find out as he's in any pain, and he don't seem to be feverish. He just says he's sick."

A week passed—two weeks—the third one began to unfold itself drearily. It found Mr. Whitcomb still in bed.

"Physically, he's all right as far as I can see," the doctor had told them. "He's just lost his grip, that's all. Keep him quiet and try to encourage him all you can."

"You mean that medicine won't do him any good?" asked Don.

"Not a particle. You can't bring back a man's will power with medicine."

"And if we keep him quiet—what then?"

"It's impossible to say. It may [illegible]

[illegible] him all the good news you can. That's the kind of tonic he needs."

That afternoon Don drove to Welden for the weekly supply of groceries. Welden was a town built around the marble quarries. [illegible] It seemed that the people there could see or talk about nothing but marble. It was piled up on all sides of them—tons of it—in an inconceivable variety of shapes and sizes.

Nevertheless, Don made his way to the store without once giving a thought to the marble industry.

As he set out to return home, the horse began to dance at sight of the tramway, with the moving chain of buckets.

"I'm ashamed of you, Gyp," he mumbled. "Think how many times you've seen this thing. Strange how they never get used to it," he said to a man beside the road.

"It won't scare horses a great while longer. That's one sure thing."

"Why?"

"Because there won't be anything to run it for. This can't hold out more than two years, at the most. It's getting poor now."

"That's what I should like to know," returned the man. "It's hard stuff to pick up when you want it."

"Hard stuff to find, is it?" mused Don as he drove away. "Well, there's plenty of it up our way—too much of it. The whole thing is for sale, too," he exclaimed, glancing up the hill in the direction of the Whitcomb farm.

Late that night Mrs. Whitcomb went upstairs to see if her son had fallen asleep and had left his lamp burning. She found him sitting at a table, bending over a maze of figures.

"What are you doing up so late?" she asked.

"I'm trying to find a way to build up the farm," came the evasive reply.

"You'll never do it by breaking into the night, this way," she murmured.

"It is rather late, isn't it?" he said smilingly. "I guess I'll go to bed."

A whispered goodnight floated back to him from the hallway. He turned the lamp lower and sat down at the table again. His bed was unoccupied that night.

Daybreak found him ready for a second trip to Welden. In order to gain added information, he visited the shops and mills during the early part of the day. Then there were more figures and a final survey of the facts at his command. The afternoon was nearly half gone when he entered the president's office.

"I called to see you about your sand supply," he said, as Mr. Gordon turned in his chair.

"What's the matter with it?" The president thought there must be something wrong with the tramway.

"It's running out, isn't it? What you have in sight will soon be exhausted. I have two or three million tons of it for sale, if you would care to consider the matter."

"Where is it?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"Up on our farm."

"You mean that sand hill? Will you deliver it?"

"No, but you could extend the tramway. It's in almost a direct line up over the hill. Our thirty-acre lot would keep you supplied for 15 years at least—probably longer."

"And how about the price?"

"Two hundred dollars an acre."

"Six thousand dollars!" ejaculated the president. "I shouldn't consider your whole farm to be worth more than half that amount."

"Perhaps not as a farm, but how about the value of the sand? Wouldn't you be getting it at a pretty low price?"

"There may be something in the scheme," continued the president, apparently unaware that anyone had been speaking. "I am not prepared to say at present. I should want to have our engineers look into it. Perhaps you may hear from me later."

The days traveled by without bringing any word. The engineers had come and gone, leaving nothing to sustain the hope which their arrival had enkindled. There was only silence and uncertainty.

On the eighth morning, however, the tension was relieved by a call at the door, and a thin, impressive-looking envelope was ushered in. Don scanned the contents excitedly. Then, thrusting it into his pocket, he swung open the door of his father's room.

"Do you want to sell the thirty-acre lot?" he said.

"The sand hill?" There was skepticism in the voice. "Who'd ever want to buy that?"

"The Welden Marble company will buy it. They'll give you $5,000 for it."

Mr. Whitcomb turned about uneasily. "Don't bother me—I don't feel like joking."

Slipping up behind him, Don held the open letter where the old man could read it. As the import of the message became clear, the bent shoulders seemed to straighten and regain a portion of their lost strength.

"Five thousand dollars for sand!" he exclaimed.

"They need it for their mills, and they're going to build a tramway over the hill. I'll give you the details later. Will you sell?"

"Will I? Why, boy, that money would put me on my feet again. Did you bring all this about?"

"I found out they were getting short and went to see them about it. They did the rest," replied Don.

"I was wrong about the farming college," Mr. Whitcomb went on. "This shows how good an investment it was. I never should have thought of this thing, and if I had, I couldn't follow it up as you've done."

Generally Speaking.

The typewriter is mightier than the [illegible]

[illegible] mind.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

And many a girl who starts out with the intention of making a name for herself winds up by turning the job over to some man.

CURES ITCHING SKIN DISEASES.
Cole's Carbolisalve stops itching and makes the skin smooth. All druggists, 25 and 50c.

The Natural Inference.

While out motoring the other day, I ran across an old friend of mine."

"Was he much hurt?"

The woman who cares for a clean, wholesome mouth, and sweet breath, will find Paxtine Antiseptic a joy forever. At druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

Appropriate.

"That angling friend of yours certainly has a fitting physique."

"In what way?"

"I noticed he has fishy eyes and a decided catch in his voice."

Minnesota Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital

Located on White Bear Lake, 30 min. from St. Paul, convenient to street car on Lake Shore Station, N. P. Ry. Modernly equipped for the treatment of diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. Steam heated and electric lighted. Accommodations for 45 patients. Rates reasonable. For further particulars apply to MISS SWAN, Head Nurse, White Bear Lake, Minn., or Attending Physicians, 833 Lowry Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Cause of the Delay.

"Strange those two nations do not declare war."

"They are haggling about what percentage each is to get of the moving picture receipts."

Sounds So.

"How oddly that man cleaning the machinery talks."

"How do you mean?"

"I heard him telling his helper to save the waste."

Diplomacy.

"Mrs. Jinks always has such a good time when she goes anywhere. How does she manage to convey the impression she is a widow?"

"She always makes an allusion to her tardy husband as 'my late husband.'"

Sparrow Sets House Ablaze.

An English sparrow was the cause of three houses catching fire at Lawrenceburg, Ind., recently, and had it not been for the prompt work of the neighbors and friends all would have been destroyed. The sparrow was building a nest under the eaves of the home of Mrs. Mary Webber, and it picked up a long cotton string from a pile of rubbish that had just been burned. With the burning string in its beak, the sparrow flew to the roof of Mrs. Sophia Shafer's house, then to Otto McCright's house and then to the roof of Emanuel Wuest's home, where it dropped the burning string. A fire started in the shingles of each building. Each was extinguished by neighbors before much damage was done.

Everybody in Hard Luck.

Suddenly he stepped up to a gentleman, who was waiting for the tram, and, tapping him lightly on the shoulder, said: "Excuse me, but did you drop a five-pound note?" at the same time holding out in his hand the article.

The gentleman questioned gazed a moment at the note, assumed an anxious look, made a hasty search of his pockets, and said: "Why, so I did, and I hadn't missed it," holding out an eager hand.

The elderly hunter took the name and address of the loser and, putting the note in his pocket, turned away.

"Well," said the other, "do you want it all as a reward?"

"Oh, I did not find one," remarked the benevolent one with another beam; "but it struck me that in a big place like London there must be a quantity of money lost, and upon inquiry I found that you are the one hundred and thirty-first man who lost a five-pound note this morning."—London Answers.

A Large Package Of Enjoyment—

Post Toasties

Served with cream, milk or fruit—fresh or cooked.

Crisp, golden-brown bits of white corn — delicious and wholesome —

A flavour that appeals to young and old.

"The Memory Lingers"

Sold by Grocers.

Postum Cereal Company, Limited, Battle Creek, Mich.

PEARL CULTURE IN JAPAN

AMONG the many wonders of the orient there is none more interesting than culture pearls.

These gems of the sea should not be confounded with the so-called artificial pearl, for they are true pearls in every sense of the word. The pearl-bearing oyster is made to produce pearls by a scientific process in four years.

In early times people had all kinds of ridiculous and extravagant ideas about the way in which pearls were produced. Even so learned a man as Pliny believed that they were drops of dew, which, falling into the gaping mouth of the mollusc, were transformed by the animal's power, into pearls.

From Ariel's song in "Tempest":

> Full fathom five thy father lies;
> Of his bones are coral made;
> Those are pearls that were his eyes:
> Nothing of him that doth fade.

INSPECTING THE OYSTER-BEDS BY WOMEN DIVERS

WOMEN DIVERS AT REST

WOMEN DIVERS AT WORK

"TATOKU" ISLAND, THE MIKIMOTO PEARL CULTURE STATION

> But doth suffer a sea change
> Into something rich and strange.

We see that in Shakespeare's time men had peculiar notions about the wonders wrought by the animals of the sea. Again, in Moore's poem, "Peri and the Pearl," we find:

> And precious the tear as that rain from the sky
> Which turns into pearls as it falls in the sea.

Aelian thought that pearls were produced by lightning flashing into the open shells.

Turning from these fantastic, though interesting, theories let us glance at the modern explanations of the formation of these beautiful products of nature.

You have, no doubt, often seen shells of molluscs lined with a smooth and iridescent coating, which is called nacre or mother-of-pearl. This coating, like the rest of the shell, is produced by the animal, and is made up mostly of carbonate of lime and an organic matrix which usually presents a laminated texture. You must have noticed that the color and brilliancy of this layer differ in various species of shells. For instance, in the ordinary oyster it is of a lustreless white, and in a kind of shell called abalone or ear shell (Haliotis), the nacre is of a greenish blue tinge, changing to purple as you turn it in your hand. In another kind, known as the black-lipped-shell, (Margaritifera), the mother-of-pearl is of a greenish black color. In the shells of the true pearl-oysters the nacre is of a clear, delicate white, which has the sheen of floss silk faintly tinted with azure, exhibiting a beautiful play of color—a quality which makes these shells of great value in commerce.

Now it often happens that foreign substances, such as sand grains, microscopic organisms of various kinds, parasitic worms, crabs, or sometimes even small fishes become introduced by accident or otherwise inside the shell or into the tissues of the mollusc's soft body. In such cases, the animal sometimes begins to deposit a part of the material which goes to form the nacreous layer of the shell around or over these foreign objects and as new material is added year after year in the form of layers these concretions which may at first be very tiny grow to be of a considerable size. And when this takes place in a shell with specially beautiful nacre such as that of the pearl-oyster, the result may be an object of great beauty, prized from ancient times as a priceless jewel. In this strange way, pearls, the handsomest products of nature are produced.

Such being their origin, pearls may be formed in any kind of mollusc, bibalved or spiral. And just as the nacre of different kinds of shells differs, so the pearls themselves vary according to the shell, which produces them. Thus the pearls of the common oyster, the scallop and the giant clam, are milky white and not very bright, while those of the sea mussel are usually black.

Perhaps you have noticed that pearls are of many different shapes, some round, some pear-shaped, some egg-shaped and some of all manner of fantastic shapes. The round, pear-shaped and egg-shaped ones are known as oriental or virgin pearls, while those of irregular shapes are called baroque pearls. These are sometimes found in the shapes of fishes, birds, wings, or creeping worms. The seed pearls which [illegible] use for medicinal purposes [illegible] always [illegible]

Sometimes two pearls will be found joined together by the nacreous substance, thus forming what is known as "twin pearls."

All of these kinds of pearls are called free pearls, because they are found in the tissues of the animal's body and are not joined to the shell.

In the same way that twin pearls are joined together it sometimes happens that pearls are found attached to the inner surface of the shell. This position interferes with the symmetry of the pearl so that when it is taken out of the shell it is flat on one side, making what is known as a "perle bouton." The attached pearls are not always of inferior quality but are often highly valued. The world-renowned "Southern Cross," which was valued at £10,000 by the company to which it belonged, was found at Cossack, Western Australia, attached to the central part of the inside of a shell.

When once the nature of pearls was understood, it was but natural that many experiments were made to produce the precious objects at will. In fact, much attention has been paid to this very problem by scientific men, and they are still at work upon it.

It is well known that Linnaeus, the father of natural history, claimed that pearls could be procured by piercing holes in the shell of an oyster with a fine auger, making a small wound, and afterwards "parking" the oysters for many years. But his suggestions do not seem to have been clearly understood and no one has been able to pursue his method successfully. The Chinese, as is well known, have been specially successful in raising pearls by inserting grains of clay between the shell and the thin outer membrane which covers the soft body of the freshwater mussel, but the best of these are of very inferior quality, and are valuable merely as curios.

At the International Fisheries exhibition, held in Berlin in 1880, some pearls were shown which had been cultivated in Germany. From looking at these one could see that the plain relief might be covered with nacreous substance, but the result was of little value. Mr. Saville Kent, late naturalist to the government of Queensland and to that of Western Australia, undertook the same experiment with the large pearl-oyster, and a gentleman on Thursday island tried inserting a shot through a hole in the shell.

The most important of such experiments are probably those of Dr. Louis Boutan of Paris, who succeeded some seven years ago in producing pearls in the abalone shell. The public was naturally greatly interested, and the newspapers in Europe and America applauded his success and called it a great discovery.

It may perhaps come as a surprise to many that before Dr. Boutan's attempts, a very extensive and successful system of pearl-oyster cultivation had been carried on in Japan by a Mr. Mikimoto, and "culture pearls" had not only been produced, but placed regularly on the market. Even at the present day, it may be claimed, that this is the only pearl-oyster farm in the world which undertakes the extensive cultivation of the precious mollusc and produces "culture pearls" on a commercial scale. An account of the successful enterprise may, therefore, be not wholly devoid of interest.

At the Third National Industrial exhibition, held in Tokyo in 1890, Mr. Mikimoto exhibited in the aquarium of fisheries section some living specimens of the pearl-oyster. This made him acquainted with Dr. Mitsukuri, professor of zoology at the Imperial university, who first suggested to him the possibility of cultivating pearl-oysters and of making them produce pearls by the use of [illegible] stimulus. Being deeply interested in the [illegible] learned from him many facts concerning pearl formation and the natural history of the pearl oyster.

Mikimoto's home was Toba in the province of Shima, one of the localities in Japan famous for large yields of pearls. Directly after his return there he began experimenting on his newly acquired idea. At first it seemed almost like pursuing a fleeting shadow and his friends laughed at him for "throwing his money into the sea." He, however, persisted, trying all sort of experiments and changing his methods from time to time, relying on suggestions and advice from Prof. Mitsukuri and Dr. Kishinone. At the end of four years of hard work, disappointment and renewed efforts, some results were obtained which seemed to promise success. In 1896 things had so far progressed that the experimental stage was a thing of the past and the enterprise was put on a commercial basis. A patent for the new method was obtained from the government, and the cultivation of the pearl-oyster on an extensive scale was begun at the Island of Tatokujima, in the Bay of Ago. At the end of 1899 the first, though small, crop of pearls was harvested and placed on the market.

The methods practised at the pearl-oyster farm are as follows:

Every year during the months of July and August, small pieces of rock and stone are placed in a spot where the larvae of the pearl-oysters have been found to be most abundant. Soon small oyster-spat are found attached to them. As this takes place in the shallow waters of not more than a few fathoms, they would die from cold, if left there during the winter, so together with the rocks to which they are anchored they are removed to deeper waters and carefully laid out in the beds prepared for them. Here they lie, until they reach their third year, when they are taken out of the sea, and undergo an operation which leads to pearl formation. This consists chiefly in introducing into them the small pearls or round pieces of nacre which are to serve as the nuclei of pearls. The shells are then put back into the sea and left undisturbed for at least four years more. At the end of that time, they are taken out, and it is found that the animal has invested the inserted nucleus with many layers of nacre and has in fact produced a pearl.

A large part of the submarine work, such as the transplanting of the oysters, spreading them out on the beds, taking them out of the sea or putting them back there is done by women divers. This is universal in the Ago Bay and many other parts of Japan. There has been a belief from time immemorial that women can work better and longer under water than men, the the women divers of Ise are often mentioned in classic literature.

These women divers are trained from a very early age, and they seem to have inherited through many generations a special aptitude for the water life. It is said that they are able to save enough money by the time they are of age to pay for their wedding expenses.

The oysters secured while under water are dropped into a wooden bucket of moderate size, which is connected to the diver by means of a rope attached to her waist. The average dive occupies rather less than a minute. In that time several mollusks being cropped.

A day's work consists of from four to six hours, in which time 500 oysters can easily be gathered at a depth of two to six fathoms. On coming up and preparing for another plunge, the diver takes a deep and quick breath which produces a shrill whistling sound. When 50 or more are working together this peculiar noise is almost incessant.

As a considerable part of their life is spent in the sea, the prolonged exposure to water and sunshine makes their skins very dark and their hair reddish.

The water is fairly cold and it is necessary for the women divers to go ashore several times during the day to warm themselves [illegible]

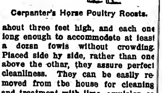
POULTRY

KEEP POULTRY HOUSE CLEAN

Given Plenty of Good Food and Well-Kept House Hen Will Solve the Winter Egg Problem.

Experience has led me to conclude that cleanliness is a profitable virtue in poultry raising. Give the hen plenty of good food and clean quarters and she will give no occasion for worry over the winter egg problems. We who have followed the chicken business either for pleasure or profit, for pin money or income, have heard this time-old advice repeated with religious regularity every new moon, writes Dennis H. Stovall of Oregon in the Northwest Farmstead. When we give it heed, we win; when we let it pass, we lose.

Cleanliness in the henhouse and the poultry yard is a very simple thing, for the reason that it depends upon simple things. A few years ago I experimented with fancy roosts, patent drop boards, intricate nest shelves, and various other contrivances calculated to make the hen lay, and to make chicken raising easy. These have all been discarded. They entailed too much care, and involved far more labor than the simple, common sense methods. I have found nothing better for roosts than those of the saw-horse pattern. This gives a roost about three feet high, and each one long enough to accommodate at least a dozen fowls without crowding. Placed side by side, rather than one above the other, they assure perfect cleanliness. They can be easily removed from the house for cleaning and treatment with lime, emulsion or lye. With a smooth board floor this allows a chance for cleaning the henhouse perfectly; and I have found it a good plan to give the house such a cleaning twice a week.



Carpenter's Horse Poultry Roosts.

The nest boxes are also removable, so as to allow a thorough cleaning and change of straw, the old being burned.

CURE FOR DROOPY POULTRY

Dip Made of Strong Bacon Grease and Warm Water Will Cause Feathers to Drop Easily.

Save all the strong bacon grease, especially the grease from fried bacon. When your fowls sit around picking themselves and looking droopy and shabby, get a large deep can or bucket; from its shape a large candy bucket is best; fill it nearly full of warm water; on this pour melted grease until it forms a thick scum over the water; catch your fowls, take them one by one, by their wings, and with the head held straight up, dip them down, pretty hard, two or three times into the water; let the head go completely under once; do this quickly to avoid strangling the fowl; then turn it loose.

After waiting a few hours for the water to drip from the feathers, drive them into the shade, so the sun will not blister them. For a short time they will be a sorry looking lot of fowls.

This treatment causes the feathers to fall apart, so the body of the fowl is cool, the water softens the skin; the grease-laden feathers fall out easily, and the new ones push their way through the skin and grow in masses instead of one or two in a place; the time of moulting is shortened; the fatty grease kills all vermin on the fowl, while the grease-saturated feathers are death traps to any vermin that may get on them.

Keep the bucket filled with water and pour more grease on the water from time to time.

The fowls should be dipped early in the morning and made to roost under shelter for several nights.

By dipping fowls in the early fall they become healthy and free from pests, hence stand the winter better, and in the spring have little or no vermin to annoy them and get on and kill their little ones.

Killed by Kindness.

More brooder chicks are killed by kindness than die of any other complaint. A chick that is a little hungry will take exercise sufficient to keep in good health. Make your ration for chicks about one-third cracked cane seed, and you will not have much bowel trouble, and sprinkle the floor of the brooder with good clean sand every day or two.

Vermin in Hot Weather.

Vermin breeds much faster in warm weather than in cool weather. [illegible]

No Concern.

"Mr. Mips must be a singularly pure and upright man."

"Why do you think he is unusually so?"

"Somebody told him there were well-defined reports that a Burns detective had been operating secretly in the neighborhood he frequents, and he said it was nothing to him."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Comparative Possession.

"I have an abstract theory."

"That's nothing. I've got a concrete cellar."

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age, How It May Be Passed in Safety.

Odd, Va.:—"I am enjoying better health than I have for 20 years, and I believe I can safely say now that I am a well woman. I was reared on a farm and had all kinds of heavy work to do which caused the troubles that came on me later. For five years during the Change of Life I was not able to lift a pail of water. I had hemorrhages which would last for weeks and I was not able to sit up in bed. I suffered a great deal with my back and was so nervous I could scarcely sleep at night, and I did not do any housework for three years.

"Now I can do as much work as any woman of my age in the county, thanks to the benefit I have received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I recommend your remedies to all suffering women."—Mrs. MARTHA L. HOLLOWAY, Odd, Va.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for woman's ills.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Make the Liver Do its Duty

Nine times in ten when the liver is right the stomach and bowels are right.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS gently but firmly compel a lazy liver to do its duty.

Cures Constipation, Indigestion, Sick Headache, and Distress After Eating.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

50,000

FARM LABORERS

wanted to gather immense grain harvest of Western Canada. Exceptionally low rate of one cent per mile can be procured from ticket agents of the Canadian Railway lines at Fort Francis, Gretna, Emerson and North Portal. Rates go into effect on September 1st and will continue for fourteen days.

A Good School

LARGE ATTENDANCE, LOWEST RATES

Thorough Work. Practical Courses. Accredited. Courses: Preparatory, Commercial, Shorthand, Stenotypy, Teachers, High School, Scientific, Music, Penmanship, Agriculture, Steam and Gas Engineering. Regular tuition, $1.00 per week; board, $1.50. Free Tuition to one student from each postoffice. Write for catalog. Address

SOUTHERN MINNESOTA NORMAL COLLEGE, BOX 830, AUSTIN, MINNESOTA

KODAKS AND FINISHING

Any size 6 exp. film developed 10 cents. 10 or 12 exp. or film pack 20 cents. KREGEL PHOTO PARLORS, 629 Hennepin Ave., Minn., 46 E. 7th St., St. Paul

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Prevents hair falling. 50c and $1.00 at Druggists.

Eastman Kodaks and Supplies

We do developing and printing and do it right. Send for catalogues.

E. B. MEYROWITZ, INC.,

602 Nicollet Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

THOMPSON'S [illegible]

The Corrector of Destinies

Being Tales of Randolph Mason as Related by His Private Secretary, Courtland Parks

MADAME VERSAY

By Melville Davisson Post

Copyright by Edward J. Clode

I was suprised on a morning in early February to find Bishop Simonton's carriage before Randolph Mason's house. I have known churchmen to appeal to Mason in desperate straits, perhaps upon a theory that one should try all temporal doors before knocking on the gates of alabaster. But that the esthetic and venerable Bishop of New York should require profane assistance was quite beyond belief. I pulled up short by my ancient friend, the crossing policeman.

"Scally," I said, "I believe the ravages of age are beginning to mark me. Can it be Bishop Simonton's carriage I see yondar?"

The great Celt rapped himself gently on the belt plate with his club. "Sure," he said, "it's not the ravages of age that's doin' ye any harm this mornin', Misther Parks. 'Tis his nib's wagon, all right."

"Some aldermen must be squatting on the Church lands," I said, "to bring this good man out at a quarter before ten on a winter morning."

"Wist!" replied the Irish king half covering his mouth with his gloved hand; "'tis a woman." Then he crossed the street to stop a line of drays.

The mystery was now beyond conjecture. I walked on slowly to the gate and up the flag-path to the house. Certain airy, nebulous conceptions had, from the pleasantries of early Italian letters and recent scandalous posters along the book stalls, presented themselves with piquant explanations. Within the house a second and greater surprise awaited me. Pietro met me at the door saying that Randolph Mason wished instantly to see me. I gave Pietro my coat and hat and went at once to the private office. My state of mental flippancy had little prepared me for the type of woman who arose as I entered. I have not seen her like in New York. If the word elegant were not so thumbed, I should write it here as descriptive of her—not in a tinseled or bedizened sense, but as the panther is elegant, as the red silken horses of a rajah are elegant. High breeding, down an immemorial line, produces such animals, time, through a hundred generations, carving carefully, like a gem engraver. Tall, supple and straight; the eye steady, calm, reserved, fearless, the nose straight and thin; the lips fine, delicate and resolute; the chin up; the black, glossy hair parted in the middle and brushed back. She was gowned in well-fitting black. This woman was perhaps fifty years old. I instantly fitted her into the frame of a casement window along the battery in Charleston, or the white columns of an estate on the James. I bowed as she turned toward me. I think the statue of Nathan Hale, outside in the flurry of snow, would also have bowed had it been standing in my shoes. She did not speak to me at all, but waited in dignified silence for Mason to say what was necessary to be said.

Mason was standing by his table, tapping it impatiently with the tips of his long, sensitive fingers. I thought the lines along his mouth were broken a bit, his eyes a trifle warmer. But this was certainly a fancy, for when he spoke it was in his usual cold voice.

"Parks," he said, "you must find a certain variety actress, calling herself Madame Versay. She has in her possession a case of pearls belonging to Miss Caroline Pickney. She will demand ten thousand dollars in cash for the return of these jewels. You will say to her that Miss Pickney has finally arranged to pay her this money. That on the tenth day of February at ten o'clock, the vault officer of the Jefferson Trust company, in the city of Richmond, in the presence of Miss Pickney here and you, will deliver to her ten thousand dollars in currency. She must bring with her the case of jewels and hand it over to the vault officer, who, upon the payment of the money, will give it to Miss Pickney. This Madame Versay is said to be under the protection of one Robert Henderson, a police detective of New York. This person may also be present, if Madame Versay wishes him to be. You will arrange for this purchase with Madame Versay. You will then accompany Miss Pickney to Richmond and be present with her at the transfer of the money. Miss Pickney will personally attend to the other details of the matter."

When Randolph Mason had finished speaking, the woman picked up a long coat from her chair and began to put it on. I helped her with the collar of it. She thrust her black-gloved hands in the deep pockets, then she turned to Mason.

"These jewels were brought from India by my great-grandfather," she said, "they were worn by my great-grandmother at her wedding; by my grandmother; by my mother. Their value to me is beyond estimate. Still I do not wish to violate either the laws of Virginia or those of the United States in order to recover them. I do not greatly fear the laws of Virginia. It cannot be that my fathers have made laws that would permit a creature like this actress to [illegible] inheritance. But I wish to [illegible]

Mason's face showed annoyance. "Madame," he said, "a rubber of whist could not be safer."

"Then," said the woman, "I bid you good-morning."

A little snow was falling, and I accompanied Miss Caroline Pickney to Bishop Simonton's carriage, tucked in the skirts of her great coat and closed the door. I think she must have taken me for a sort of upper servant, since she gave no evidence of my presence, except a stately nod at the carriage window.

Here was a fine bundle of mysteries, coupled with the direction of Mason to go out and find Madame Versay. Find an unknown variety actress, only the devil's imps knew where. Such birds had no marked tree to roost in; besides, this person was probably Madama Gladys by now, or Estella something or other. I could not go back to Mason for further light. He would stare at me and walk away. My directions were accurate; find Madame Versay first and then go to Richmond.

I turned up the collar of my great coat, and went down for a conference with the omniscent Scally. I found him directing commerce with the gestures of a Roman praetor. I darted past the row of cabs to his island of safety and seized his hand. A moment later, when the tide had passed, he took my bill from between the fingers of his glove and held it under his broad thumb; then he smiled benignly.

"Misther Parks," he said, "'tis the speed limit you are after wishin' to exceed?"

"No," I said; "I am the King of the Golden Mountain on the quest of a fairy."

"Go along; you're foolin'," he said.

"By no means," I answered; "I want to find Madame Versay."

He whistled softly. "Madame Varsay, is it! 'Tis only the devil that knows where she is now, but where she'll be at one tonight, 'tis Scally that knows as well as the devil. In a dago cafe on the Bowery, which is next door to Paddy Moran's dance hall, she will be atin' and drinkin' and carryin' on. She's a bad one, this Madame Versay. 'Tis back to the tall weeds your friend Scally would advise you to be goin'."

At half-past twelve that night, I found Madame Versay, and the cafe called "dago" by my friend Scally. It was a fragment of Paris, transplanted to the Bowery by Monsieur Popinot, an oily, obsequious little creature from the Montmartre. He came running out to the curb to bow me in—the coming of a hansom was an event. He enumerated his wares with true Latin enthusiasm. His caviare had arrived that very day. It was "magnifique," and his wines! ah, monsieur, he alone in all this raw land had wines! His brother Anselem hunted France, nosed it, fingered it, tasted it, that he, Popinot, might have champagne, fragrant like those little meadowe nestling at the foothills of the Pyrenees. Burgundy, red like the poppies in the wheat fields of the Oise; and absinthe—here language failed him. He clasped his hands, "Ravissante, monsieur!"

Madame Popinot, who presided over the cash drawer by the door, beamed upon me as I entered. She was a daughter of the little shops along the Seine, fat and vigilant, knowing instantly if the newcomer had the price of a glass of wine in his pocket. A virtue of the highest order to her; doubtless the only one remaining.

I selected a little table by the wall, and, not wishing to be poisoned, ordred a bottle of bass ale and and a plate of dry biscuits, wiping out Popinot's disgust with a generous tip. The place was evidently a Bohemian rendezvous of a low order. The atmosphere was a stench of tobacco and sour wine, the floor was freshly sprinkled with new sawdust. The chairs and tables were of metal. Iron alone could resist large primitive emotions when they got in action. The crash of an elbow, the heave of a heavy boot-toe, did not wreck a wire chair. It could be straightened presently in the crack of a door. The place was filling up with jetsam from the undercurrents of New York. Gentlemen going swiftly down to the sill of the world, beasts coming up from it, get somehow into evening clothes, sat well together under Monsieur Popinot's many-colored lights. It was the depravity of Paris without a touch of its seductive esprit. The naive, mischievous greeting of the Moulin Rouge and the Folie Bergere, "Je vous aime, donnez-moi cinq francs," was not here. This place was an oak for crows. I wondered on what limb of it perched Madame Versay.

I was about to summon the good Popinot to my assistance, when a young man, very drunk, came in, accompanied by a woman in a superb opera coat. They took the table opposite to mine. The young man wore a soft slouch hat, which he promptly threw on the floor. Then he began to hammer on the table with the ferrule of his walking stick and shout, "Heah, heah, Popinot, you old dog, a bottle of Burgundy for Madame Versay. It's the wine of love and laughter." [illegible]

[illegible] throat [illegible] most of the low gown of black velvet. Her complexion was the usual sort to be had from boxes and paint pots. Her mouth was a perfect cupid's bow, and exquisite. Her nose was bourgeois, but not obtrusive and not bad. Her eyes, however, were utterly bad. They reminded me of cold tallow. Her bright yellow hair was coiled on the top of her head to give an effect of height and to lengthen her face. While her companion was unspeakably drunk, this woman was coldly sober. She constantly refilled the man's glass, but scarcely tasted her own. I was evidently spectator at the epilogue of a quarrel which Madame Versay was striving to drown in the mixture of alcohol and claret that Popinot sold for Burgundy. She spoke almost in whispers, but now and then the man broke out in a voice that I could hear.

"No, I won't wait no moah. I want them back. You said you only wanted them to star in. That's what you said; to star in."

Madame Versay patted him on the arm and cooed over him, but her face was as cold as a wedge. The man harped on the one idea. "No; I was drunk. Didn't I tell you I was drunk when I did it? and they've got to go back to her."

Madame Versay suddenly changed her tactics. She leaned over, seized the young man by the collar and shook him. What she said I could not hear, but the effect on the drunken youth was marked. He pleaded in blabbering slobbers: "That's all right, you keep them; they're yours. You dissolve them in vin'ger and drink 'em like Cle-patra. You're good lil' thing, you're a good, lil', sweet thing."

The man's drooling grew gradually inarticulate, his head wobbled. Presently he made an ineffectual effort to pat Madame Versay's porcelain cheek, and fell forward with his arms outstretched on the table. Popinot's Burgundy was indeed distilled from the poppies of the Oise!

The woman ordered a tumbler of whisky and drank it like water. My hour had arrived. I arose and threaded a way to her table.

"Have I the honor," I said, "to address Madame Versay?"

A further light came into the cold, tallow eyes. "Not so loud," she said. "Are you a plain-clothes Johnnie?"

I assured her that I had attained to no such dignity as that. I was merely one coming under a flag of truce with a message from Miss Caroline Pickney.

I said this over several times and in a variety of ways before Madame's suspicions were soothed down. Then I laid before her the offer to pay ten thousand dollars cash for the jewels. A clean cut trade and no questions. The money in her hands for the jewels in ours. I did not go further into the place or details of payment, that would better follow a little later on.

"I'll stand for that," said Madame Versay, "if it's straight goods; but you will have to show it to Henderson. If he don't flag it, the old hen can have her shiners."

I wondered mildly if we might find Henderson somewhere.

"Sure," said Madame Versay. Then she summoned Popinot. "Call up Henderson's Detective Agency," [illegible]

[illegible] Bobbie. I drew the [illegible] out a little on the subject of the slumbering youth. He was an only nephew of Miss Caroline Pickney, and her half-brother, Bishop Simonton of New York. He was an orphan and a very ebon sheep. Having fallen a victim to Madame Versay's charms, he had shouldered the onerous duties of an "angel," "burned his money," and finally "swiped" the jewels from his relative and bestowed them on this Dulcinea. These jewels Madame Versay thought it advisable to retain, since the law could not "take a fall out of her" without "jugging" the youth. She appealed to me to affirm the moral soundness of her attitude in this. A poor girl must look out for herself.

I was spared the embarrassment of a decision on so vexed a question by the arrival of Bobbie Henderson. I was also glad of all the people in the Cafe la Lune d'Or when he came bursting in it. He was a person with a variegated waistcoat, many seals and yellow diamonds, and a face that would have convicted him before any jury in America without a word of evidence for the state. He sailed down upon me with the bluster of the east wind.

"Flash your star," he said, "or jar loose from the lady." His language was beyond me, but his manner admitted of no doubt.

Madame Versay sprang up and thrust her elbow vigorously into the region of his diaphragm. "Cut it out, Bobbie," she said, "you ain't wise to the gent. He's no plain-clothes Johnnie. This thing's business."

Mr. Robert Henderson was illumined. He drew up a chair and expressed his desolation at the error. Then the three of us got down to the details of Madame Versay's "business." The offer to pay cash was pleasing to Mr. Henderson. It "sounded good;" but he would take no chance on a "double cross" being "handed out." The money must be paid in his presence at a bank. No "meet me under the oak tree" for him. He was "onto" the iniquities of the human family.

By gradual, indirect suggestions, I uncovered the plan to pay at the Jefferson Trust company in Richmond under his eye. He took to that. It was "the old hen's nest" to be sure, but doubtless the only place where she could gather up so large a "wad of dough." And thus, after many glasses of vile brandy, which, on my part, I managed to tip out deftly into the sawdust, we got the "business" closed. Mr. Robert Henderson nearly crushed my hand at parting. It was so rare a thing, he said, to meet one of his "kind of gentlemen" nowdays. Madame Versay beamed, and we parted in genial fashion.

I had a word with Popinot at the door, after oiling the itching in his palm with a silver dollar. "Poof!" he said, Madame Versay was less French than his cafe cat. She was born in Harlem under a shamrock. She had heard him, Popinot, name the divine Versailles in a flood of longing for his native country. The name pleased her; she implored him to say it again and yet again, until she got it and so came "Madame Versay." "Mon Dieu! one's sides split themselves with laughter. A grisette named for a palace! Monsieur Villon would die to ex[illegible] [illegible] until one saw instantly the aimess of it." He, Popinot, was a genius of the first order.

And so I left him, shaking in the door, and calling upon Olympus to send down his meed of bay leaves. Incomparable Popinot of the Golden Moon!

Shortly before ten o'clock on the tenth day of February, I walked from my hotel over to the Jefferson Trust company in the city of Richmond. I was taken at once into the vault of the safety deposit boxes, where I found Miss Caroline Pickney and the vault officer, Mr. Montague Thomas. This young man greeted me courteously, but I had only another stately nod from Miss Pickney. She would never come to understand the social order of a commercial civilisation. One who took directions from another, no matter in how exalted a sphere that other sat, was a variety of servant. It was the theory of the master bred in deep, and persisting into commercial age.

Promptly at ten, Mr. Robert Henderson arrived. He wore a large checked ulster, a top hat and astonishingly yellow gloves. He greeted me as a lost neighbor discovered in a distant country, shook vigorously the rather limp hand of Mr. Montague Thomas, but went back on his heels before Miss Caroline Pickney. She did not see him, she never saw him.

I appreciated the need to get the matter speedily over, and requested Mr. Henderson to allow Miss Pickney to examine the jewels. He threw open his ulster, revealing a small leather handbag, secured to his waist by a chain, such as is used by bank messengers. He opened the bag and took out an ancient black leather case, which he also opened and held in his hand. In it, lying coiled up against the lining of old purple velvet was a pyramid pin, two drop earings and a strand of oriental pearls. Miss Pickney expressed satisfaction to Mr. Montague Thomas and directed him to open the safety deposit box. The young man fitted the key into the lock of box number 320, and drew down the door, showing the little steel vault packed with banknotes. He took out the money in packages each enclosed by a printed slip, such as are commonly used by banks, and marked "Two thousand dollars."

Mr. Robert Henderson handed me one end of the jewel-case to hold, and, with his free hand, he stowed these five packs of bills into the little handbag. When he had the last one safely in, he relaxed his grip on the jewel-case, locked his handbag and hurried out of the bank. I handed the case to Miss Caroline Pickney. She opened it and caressed the jewels lovingly. But she said no word, and gave no evidence of the great emotion tugging at her except the trembling of her hands. Then she put the case in her bosom and went down to her carriage in the company of Mr. Montague Thomas.

I went out behind the pair of them. Not in all my life had I been so thoroughly puzzled. What did this woman need with Randolph Mason if she intended to pay a painted actress the full value of the jewels. Any police-sergeant could have done as well as he. What need was there to send me scouting into the Tenderloin and then here? The thing was idiotic. I had been waiting to see the iron lid of some hidden trap fall swiftly and crush Madame Versay. Instead, I had carried out Mason's directions to the final letter, only to see the money paid, the incident closed, the thing ended. For Randolph Mason it was not a defeat only, it was a capitulation, a rout. His standard had been dragged off the field by a variety actress and a red-light detective. I was unspeakably bitter and depressed.

My train to New York left over the Southern at twelve o'clock. I would go to the post office for some letters sent after me, get a little lunch and hurry out of this city. I went into the post office, got my letters, and was coming out when a deputy marshal touched me on the elbow and asked me to come up to the district attorney's office. I knew then that Mason's trap had sprung, and I hurried with the little man up the iron stairway.

Mr. Robert Henderson was boiling in picturesque expletives when I entered the ante-room of the prosecutor for the government. His collar was wilted down, his wonderful waistcoat crumpled, tiny threads of perspiration lay along the fat folds of his chin. He broke out louder when he saw me. "That's him. That's one of the gang," he shouted. "Now get the other one. Get this Caroline Pickney woman, and we'll land them in the penitentiary."

At this moment, a tall, gracious man with a soft, drawling accent that purred dangerously like a cat's, appeared in the doorway of the district attorney's office. "May I inquire," he said, "who it is that is about to send Miss Caroline Pickney to the penitentiary?"

"It's me," said Henderson. "Her and this yegger have been shovin' the queer."

"Your language is unintelligible," said the man.

"Why, green goods," growled Henderson. "Passin' counterfeit money, that's what I mean."

It was my turn to be astonished. So the packs were counterfeit! Surely Mason could not have made so dangerous a blunder. He knew the laws of the United States. He could not have opened the doors of the penitentiary wider to us. The mere possession of counterfeit money was a crime. Perhaps he did not believe that Madame Versay would dare come to the officers of the law with it. Perhaps some other arm of his plan had broken down. I was amazed and alarmed. The man in the door looked inquiringly at me. I took out my card and handed it to him. He bowed. "I am the district attorney," he said. Then he spoke to the deputy marshal. "Go outside, close the door and see that I am not interrupted." He turned then to the detective. "Now, my man," he continued, "what is all this furore about?"

Henderson gave the matter swiftly in detail, translating his Tenderloin terms as he proceeded. When he had concluded the narrative, the district attorney asked to see the money. Henderson unlocked his satchel, took out a pack, stripped off the gum band at either end of it, and, holding the end of the pack in his fingers, shook out the bills before the district attorney.

The lawyer had been listening with the closest attention, his face clouded and distressed. Now, it cleared like a summer morning. "Are the others like this?" he said.

"The same," replied Henderson, "a good tenner on the top and bottom and the rest queer."

"Then," said the district attorney, "the laws of the United States have not been violated. These bills are not counterfeit."

Mr. Henderson mopped his wet face. "What!" he ejaculated. "It ain't good money; is it?"

"No," replied the lawyer; "it is not money at all."

Astonishment drove Mr. Henderson to his primal tongue. "Hell, man!" he said. "'Taint good! 'Taint bad! You're stringin' me."

The district attorney was amused. He took the pack of money and spread it out on the table. "These," he said, "are bills of the Confederate States of America. They are in no sense counterfeit. The passing of these bills for money of the United States is no crime against its laws. The Federal courts have time and again so decided, although these bills closely resemble certain bank-note issues of the Federal government and have been more than once complained of by the treasury department."

Then he added, with a courtly bow to Henderson, "My dear sir, you have in your hands the promise of a vanished republic to pay you some ten thousand dollars. Once upon a time, these bills might have purchased you an excellent lunch and perhaps a cigar with it. I doubt it a little, now. You might try Moseby Taylor on the corner below. Mention Jubal Early."

Then he turned to me. "Mr. Parks," he said, "as you have not these potent tokens of a great sentiment to assist you, I must beg the honor of your presence at luncheon with me. I have heard of Randolph Mason."

"Flash your star," he said, "or jar loose from the lady."

For the legal principle involved in this story see United States v. Barrett, 111. Fed., 369.

Before and After.

This is the conversation we heard at the athletic club the other evening:

"Did you see that motocycle race?"

"I did. It took ten minutes for one machine to pass my house. Slowest race I ever saw."

"Quit kidding! It never took any one motocycle ten minutes to pass your house."

"It's a fact. I could hear the darned thing five minutes before it got there, and I could smell it five minutes after it got by."

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1912. NO. 24.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Treasury Clerks Are Caged Like Camorrists

THESE ECONOMY CRANKS MAKE ME SICK— THEY OUGHT TO HANG 'EM !!

WASHINGTON—When one looks on the picture of the Camorrists in their cage in Viterbo, where they were being tried as instigators of crimes and members of criminal organizations, it comes right home to the clerks who work in the treasury department in Washington. Since the economy cranks got to work they have turned the old treasury department upside down. The secretary of the treasury has a little walk of his own, a little elevator of his own and a driveway made through a portion of the treasury plaza purposely for him, none of these to be used by the common herd at all. All are protected by gates of wrought-iron from invasion of the clerks or any of the assistants about the treasury department. Before the economy commission got in their licks there was a sort of placita in the heart of the treasury, the white stone walls being built up around it. When so many of the corridors and other rooms had to be taken up by private elevators, drive and runways for higher officials, this placita was fixed up as a sort of a glass house, and several hundred clerks fired out into that. Of course, the sun beats down on this glass house from the time that it rises until it sets, and the result was that about half the clerks were ill all of the time from the heat last summer. So this summer they have put a great canvas over this glass house, and keep water running on it all the time. The poor clerks that work under this are turned in in the morning, and the iron gates are closed like a stone prison, and to get out to get a bite to eat in the 30 minutes they have at noon they have to tell their name, age, nativity, place of residence and a lot of other family history. At least those who have to eat say that it seems to them it takes up enough time to give their pedigree from the Revolution to now before they get out without having to do the same things to get back in, and that takes up at least 10 minutes from their scant half hour from eating. It is said the iron cages are necessary for the safety of the money which the clerks are counting, but the treasury department has been running for about 100 years with no such safeguards, and there hasn't been $100 lost in the whole 100 years. So, after all, the clerks in that section of the treasury department haven't anything over the Camorrists who were shut up in steel cages every day.

Alexander Bluffs Ajax In a Hymeneal Mix-Up

HE CUSSED WUSSER DEN ANY YALLER NIGGER I EBBER SEED —YASSER

ALEX Power and Ajax Tobey, two leading members of the colored back alley 400, who were related by marriage, inasmuch as Alex had led Ajax's sister to the hymeneal altar and promised to provide board and lodging for the rest of her natural days, were arraigned before Judge Douglas of the police court on a number of charges ranging from "cussing" to "scrapping."

The statement made by Alex was, that the lightning defier invaded his domicile and in the presence of his copper colored spouse had used language of a very tabascoitic variety

"What brought about the difficulty" queried the Highland chieftain, who is presiding over the police court in the absence of Judge Hugo (to) L.

"De langwidge dat nigger used was de wust ah is ever heead."

"What did he say?"

"He say d—n an' h—ll an' er heap mo' sich words."

"How about you, Mythology?" asked Judge Douglas of Ajax.

"Ah ain't never seed him, Jedgo; he ain't in cote."

"I mean did you use the profanity as charged by Alexander."

"Ah belongs ter de 'Tobacca class' of de fust African church, an' ah don't nevah use no 'fanity whatsumever. Hit are a mistake, Jedge; dat nigger Alex he done lied erbout hit."

"In the language of a popular song, 'Somebody Lied' in the case," said the court."

"However, that is neither here nor there, and much as I regret the necessity of imposing a penalty on such distinguished personages, you will be required to deposit $5 each in the hands of Clerk Bill."

Capital City Post-Office Cats Always on Job

"ARE the post-office employes here doing their duty?"

"Yes," said Postmaster N. A. Merritt curtly.

"How about the cats?" he was asked.

"They are on the job, too."

Then Mr. Merritt stopped to consider whether Washington had any cats on the official pay roll or not. He wasn't sure, but insisted that they were working overtime, provided they were recognized civil service employes.

Whereupon, a copy of a scandalous report concerning Philadelphia cats was shown to him.

Philadelphia has had her post-office supplied with a collection of high class cats. As soon as these cats reported for duty at Uncle Sam's office there they immediately contracted a bad case of Philadelphia hookworm. Although on the official pay roll, so runs the story, they fell into line, formed a union, and announced themselves old-time Philadelphia conservatives. The mice have recovered from their scare and the cats are taking graft.

An immediate investigation was ordered at which Assistant Postmaster Louis Robinson presided.

When summoned before the investigating committee, the cats did not come.

"Always hustling in the interest of the service," chuckled the division chief.

Uncle Sam's Official Fish Guesser Is Let Out

THAT FISH WEIGHS JUST -AH- UM-M-AH TEN POUNDS

THE official guesser for the United States government has lost his job. For years the government has bought live salmon upon the good eye of a veteran fisherman, who took a squint at each fish and then put down in his book what he guessed to be the right weight.

Every year the government buys from 600 to 1,000 live salmon for breeding from the weir owners on the Bucksport, Verona, Orland and Penobscot shores. The price paid is the market rate, from 20 to 25 cents a pound, with 60 cents bonus for each fish for the trouble of keeping them alive.

To get at the exact weight of a live salmon is practically impossible, for it is very delicate work at best in dipping them from the "pound" in the weirs to the "car," which is an old dory filled with water, carefully lined with cotton flannel and covered with a netting, which is covered outside with canvas. The utmost caution is necessary, for in the spring the salmon is [illegible] that weighing them is entirely out of the question.

The government has for years hired a veteran fisherman to make the rounds of the weirs on the little power boat and keep account of the fish. All the man had to go by was his judgment, but he could tell by a glance at a fish, even in the semidarkness of the car, about what it would weigh—ten, twelve, fourteen or perhaps sixteen or eighteen pounds. It was guessing.

Perhaps the government officials in Washington didn't approve of paying out money by guess. Whatever may have been the conclusion, the government guesser has lost his job. Hereafter [illegible]

WHO'S WHO—and Why

MAKES BIG GIFT ON KRUPP CENTENARY

In honor of the centenary of the great Krupp works at Essen the company has donated $3,500,000 to be distributed as gratuities to the 70,000 workmen, as welfare funds for citizens of Essen and for the army and navy.

Dr. Sydow, the Prussian minister of commerce, who attended the celebration, announced that a large number of orders would be conferred on Krupp employees by the emperor.

Frau Bertha Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach, the richest woman in Germany, whose wealth is estimated at $70,000,000, was hostess to kings.

The celebration, for which preparations have been going forward for nearly two years, was attended by Emperor William at the head of a brilliant galaxy of his fellow German sovereigns, generals, admirals and civic dignitaries.

The festivities lasted an entire week and were of a most imposing and memorable character. The chief feature was a great pageant, which symbolized the substitution of firearms for the old weapons of the middle ages. The principal scene of the pageant was an episode from the life of Emperor Maximilian I., and 250 retired officers of the German army played the parts of knights.

During the period of the celebration the emperor and other royal guests were quartered at the Villa Hugel, the splendid country house of Herr Krupp von Bohlen-Halbach, who by marrying the elder daughter of Herr Krupp, became the head of the firm. The villa is located just outside Essen. The other notable guests at the celebration were accommodated at the hotel in Essen maintained by the Krupp company exclusively for the accommodation of foreign buyers of their guns, armor and ships, who are always at Essen in large numbers.

The strong personal interest that the emperor manifested in the celebration was not surprising in view of the fact that the firm of Krupps is almost a government institution. The armament branch of its business is in direct touch with the German army and navy and studies their interests before anything else. The firm is, in short, an integral part of the German empire.

JUDGE SWANN ON THE "INNER CIRCLE"

"They worship no God save graft, and they bow down at the shrine of their idolatry!"

In these words Judge Edward Swann of the court of general sessions in New York, summed up the police situation. Judge Swann has been a careful and patient student of the police system for many years. He has upon numerous occasions seen fit to speak about police matters from the bench.

He has listened, with astonishment at times, to the testimony given by policemen and police detectives at the trials of men charged with being common gamblers. And upon more than one occasion he has heard the foreman of a jury return a verdict of "Not guilty" in gambling cases where the district attorney had to rely almost exclusively upon the testimony of policemen and their stool pigeons.

Judge Swann was asked if in his opinion and from information that had come to him in his official capacity gambling houses and disorderly resorts could exist unless the police stood for such places and for the violation of the law.

"You cannot make me believe that such resorts could run wide open, or run at all, for any length of time, unless the police knew about it," he said. "I wish to say right here that the police department is as a rule is made up of a lot of honest, courageous, fearless men. I am very fond of the every-day policeman. But in this present inquiry that has been brought about by the brutal murder of Herman Rosenthal it is shown that graft exists in the police department today.

"There exists in this city what is known as a 'graft committee.' It has also been referred to as the 'inner circle.' They are the men who are responsible for the system."

Judge Swann was asked whether, in his experience, the average juror would believe the testimony given under oath by a policeman.

"Speaking for myself," he replied, "I believe the average policeman when he comes to the witness stand to give testimony. But my experience shows only too often jurors will throw the testimony of a policeman out and acquit a defendant, although I felt certain, and so did the district attorney, that the defendant was guilty and that a verdict of guilty should have been rendered in accordance with the evidence presented to the court and jury.

"I must say, however, that my opinion is that only a certain few connected with the police department indulge in graft."

VINCENT ASTOR SENDS ROSES TO J. J. VI

According to the announcement given out by Dr. Cragin, the Astor family physician, John Jacob Astor VI. is getting along beautifully. The lusty infant's mother is also doing well. As for the little heir, he is phenomenally healthy and picking up weight amazingly.

The servants of the great Astor mansion at Sixty-fifth street and Fifth avenue continue in a state of strenuous activity receiving presents for the heir and multitudes of messages of congratulations for the mother.

William Vincent Astor acknowledged the arrival of a half-brother by cabling to a Fifth avenue florist to send Mrs. Astor a magnificent bunch of American Beauty roses. Other members of the Astor family have also sent flowers and presents.

There was also a cablegram from Vincent Astor congratulating his stepmother. The young head of the American branch of the Astor family, who [illegible]

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

Dr. H. Bolte of Sapulpa, Okla., Is Still Waiting.

CINCH
THEM FELLERS SEEMED TO HAVE HONEST FACES—

NEW YORK.—Dr. H. Bolte of Sapulpa, Okla., may find some satisfaction in a notice sent to him the other day by Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty to the effect that Thomas Brown is under arrest here and will be held for Dr. Bolte's identification. Mr. Brown said his arrest was an outrage and that he never swindled a dentist or anybody else out of $1,500 by a variation of the good old wire tapping game.

This was the tale of the dentist: He came from Oklahoma to New York to get to Europe. He had over $500 in cash and a check for $1,000. He met a nice fellow in a Broadway bar room who called himself Walter Sims and said he was a planter from Jackson, Miss. Sims introduced the doctor to J. W. Walsh, a "millionaire grain speculator of Buffalo." The two took Dr. Bolte to a "club" at 128 West Forty-fifth street, where one might bet on the races.

Millionaire Walsh pried a wallet from his pocket, unstrapped the same and produced $20,000 in cash and a certified check for $20,000. He bet the whole $40,000 on one race. Strange to say, he won $30,000. Despite the warning and caution of Dr. Bolte he bet $70,000 on another race and won again, at even money. Dr. Bolte's eyes almost bulged out of his head. Millionaire Walsh sauntered over to the cashier to collect his $140,000.

"Sorry," said the cashier, "but we will have to investigate that $20,000 check before we pay your bet."

Mr. Walsh was much put out. He took Dr. Bolte and the planter over in the corner and confided in them.

"That blamed check is not good," he informed them. "There is only $6,000 back of it. I have got to get it back before they look it up. If you fellows can lend me enough to take it up I will pay you $20,000 bonus apiece."

Planter Sims produced $500 in cash and a check for $12,000. Dr. Bolte, thinking of what he could do with that $20,000 in gay Paree and in the concert halls of Vienna, could not contribute his $500 and his check quick enough. Millionaire Walsh put in a check for $6,000, representing his actual cash balance.

The dangerous overdrawn check was withdrawn.

"But," said the cashier, "of course, you must wait until we have heard from these checks. That will take a week."

Dr. Bolte is still waiting.

Woe Confronts Women Golfers With High Heels

IS THAT SO—
YOU CAN'T WEAR THEM THINGS HERE !!!

CHICAGO.—The French heel, the military heel, the Cuban and all the other leather prongs of fashion have been discriminated against by the South Park commissioners in favor of the low, squat, broad, commonplace heel—that is, on the Jackson Park golf course.

The park commissioners, who have no soul for art and no eyes for beautiful heels, are enforcing this rule only for the sake of their horrid old golf links, say the women.

Six hundred owners of fancy heels the other day were refused admission to the course.

There were many protests from women who hesitated between their love for the game and appearance.

The "common-sense" heel, as the attendants insisted on calling it, despite feminine pouts and frowns and "I just don't cares," is not liable to do any damage, while any other kind will cut up the turf.

So it was that many were angry when turned away from the grounds, but a glance at the sign convinced them that their only recourse was to the cobbler. The sign reads as follows:

Men and women may not use this golf course while wearing high-heel shoes.

Only low and broad heels such as are commonly used in the practice of sports will be permitted.

Games attendants are instructed to enforce this rule.

"Just about one-third of the would-be players have the right heel," said an attendant.

Preacher Aids Bashful to Meet Future Wives.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—"If any poor, bashful man in my audience has fallen in love with some worthy woman, and wants to meet her for a wife, I will see that he is introduced, has a place to court, will help him get his license, pay for it if necessary, marry him free of charge, and furnish him with a wedding certificate which he may hang over the motto, 'God Bless Our Home.'"

This is the offer made the other Sunday by Rev. G. L. Morrill, a prominent Minneapolis pastor, in his sermon on "The Masher Mashed."

Mr. Morrill termed a masher "a biped who roosts on the corner and by look, gesture and speech takes familiar advantage of women who pass by."

"And if the fellow seems to want a hot time, girls," the pastor advised, "wallop him with your bag and then throw red pepper in his eyes."

Regarding eugenics, Rev. Mr. Morrill said:

"Woman was made to marry, and not be a religious recluse, old maid or stenographer, unless she possesses some defect of mind or body which would result in degenerate offspring."

Following the sermon Rev. Mr. Morrill was approached by several young men of his audience, who sought him to introduce them to women they thought "worthy." Unhesitatingly, their request was granted, and they were told to go ahead "with their courting and then come back for their marriage licenses."

When Is a Lap Dog? Owner Solves the Question

HE WONT DARE HURT YOU, ROMEO DEAR—

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—When is a lap dog? Lap dogs are carried free of charge on Los Angeles street cars, and the rule defines the limits and boundaries of such a canine as "one which may be carried in the arms and kept in the lap in such a way that other passengers will not be annoyed," or words to that effect.

"She" came from somewhere out yonder and when the Arcade station was clear of her ample bulk there was so much room left that the waiting room looked like a church on Tuesday afternoon.

She had a dog with her. A dog built upon good, old-fashioned substantial lines, long, low and rakish and a leg on each corner; a zoological specimen weighing perhaps 50 pounds. All know every dog has his day. The animal had a kindly, open countenance—it was open anyway—and the glittering array of teeth would have been the pride of any dentist.

"She" and the dog started to mount the [illegible] street car. The conductor obligingly threw out a life line to the struggling passenger, and then aimed a well-meaning kick at the dog which was blightly climbing aboard.

"Howdareyou doathinglikethat? I'll report youtothecompany. Neverheard ofsuchathingtheveryidea," said "She." "Come Romeo," this to the dog. Romeo "came," snapping happily at the open work sox on the street car man.

Then the "dog" rule was explained to "She." "Oh, very well," was the response with a Laura Jean Libby inflection. "I shall hold Romeo upon my lap," and hold Romeo she did.

Which brings us back to the original proposition, when is a lap dog? [illegible]

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN

VALUE OF NEATNESS.

The fixed habit of presenting always a neat and cleanly appearance to the world is sure of a double reward. It not only creates a favorable impression but begets a sustaining self-respect. It is scarcely reasonable of a man who does not respect himself to look for much consideration from others. It is not the cost of clothing but the scrupulous care of it that counts. The man of slender means should be neither "toppy" nor "sloppy," but always tidy and neat in his attire, seeing himself with the coldly critical eye of a possible employer, who is bound to remark the significance of a soiled shirt front, a wilted collar, and to whom an applicant's dress may mean much more than his address or politest deportment. Style in writing, as defined by the fastidious Chesterfield, is the dress of thoughts; so the true style of the average man may be correctly surmised from the care he takes of his personal appearance. He needs not be finicky but should always be free of grease spots and dust; he should like his bath, even if it has to be taken by means of a bucket; he should never neglect to brush his hair, his shoes, his teeth, his coat, trousers and hat; if he can't afford a pressing iron he should put coat and trousers over the mattress and sleep upon them; if laundry is serious item he should wash his own handkerchiefs, dry them on the window panes and never, by any chance, be seen with a soiled one.

It appears to be the decree of fashion that a considerable amount of false hair shall be worn by women during the coming season, and it is perhaps well that there should be a clear understanding of where the hair comes from. It appears to be admitted that almost any American woman combs out enough hair from her own head to meet all requirements, but she will not take the trouble to save the combings, says the Manchester Union. An expert in the hair business stated in Chicago recently that "Americans live too fast to save their combings." Probably he was correct, but it is also probable that the average American woman gives no thought as to where her supplementary supply of hair comes from. It appears that America imports its false hair from Europe and Asia. The European hair is rated as first class, although there may be some misgivings as to its source in some cases, but 70 per cent. of it comes from China, from the heads of saving Chinese women, who are eager to swap their tresses for copper coins. It is worth while to save hair from combings in China, which the average American woman totally ignores until she pays a good price in the market.

The old palace in St. Petersburg which burned recently should not be confounded with the Peterhof. It was a log structure, on an island, the great czar's first home in his new capital, but had been long used as a Greek chapel. Europeans do not pull down buildings as ruthlessly as is the practice in the United States; so this primitive historic structure, its interior rich with bejeweled ikons, remained, a link between the past and the present, religious services being held in it several times a day, and many of these services being largely attended. Its destruction will remove an interesting landmark of the great Czar Peter.

In the American quarter of the city of Berlin a musical conservatory is to be erected with sound-proof walls, so that pupils undergoing instruction in the art of piano-playing shall not drive the neighbors crazy with their din. People the world over who are nervously sensitive to dissonant sounds will heartily approve the idea and hope for its general adoption. Much has been said and written in praise of the soothing influence of music, but there are many individuals so constituted that it is the reverse of delightful to them to hear hour after hour—sometimes at the time of night when they would woo sleep—the din of a neighbor's piano. There may be a soothing influence of music, but it is not brought out by beginners practicing the scales nor by convivial parties playing ragtime.

Verily, the life of the weather man is not a happy one. A few months ago the farmers were kicking about floods and now they are complaining about the drought.

Oil on the roads is a blessing in that it lays the dust, but it has its drawbacks. Residents of Montclair, N. J., and surrounding towns say that robins, bluebirds, starlings and even the hardy sparrows are dying at an unprecedented rate this summer, and the mortality is attributed to thirst, occasioned by the aversion of the birds to drinking water tainted by the oil used on the roads. Perhaps the situation can be remedied by a system of drinking troughs for the feathered tribes.

RECALL DISCUSSED

AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION ACCEPTS RESIGNATION OF NEGRO LAWYERS.

SUTHERLAND MAKES ATTACK

Utah Senator Raps Progressive Ideas While Kellogg Goes After the Trust Question—Lewis Suggests Plan for Recall of Federal Judges.

Milwaukee, Aug. 30.—The center of the interest in the American Bar association convention here on Wednesday was the recall and the trusts, together with the fulfillment of the prophecy that the negro members of the association, after winning their fight for membership, would voluntarily resign and leave the color line fight of the present convention a closed incident.

Senator Sutherland of Utah capped the report of the recall committee with a vigorous attack not only upon the recall, but upon other Progressive ideas, while the trust question was centered in the speech of Trust Buster Kellogg.

The day was filled with important developments. A bitter fight was made against President Taft's efforts to obtain increased salaries for federal judges; a report was filed proposing to simplify legal procedure; third-degree inquisition, the use of the dictagraph and the detention of innocent witnesses in criminal cases were criticized; the uniform law committee's report proposing to stop the recognition of common law marriages was approved. These marriages, if the lawyers can secure the desired laws, will not be legal henceforth.

Col. J. Hamilton Lewis of Chicago proposed a solution of the question of the recall of federal judges, which met the approval of the majority of those in the convention. He suggests that United States district judges be elected for terms by the people and that circuit judges be selected for seven-year terms, subject to continued reappointment as long as the judges are efficient, these judges to be appointed by the president.

The American Bar association adopted a resolution Tuesday requiring that hereafter when negro attorneys apply for membership their race must be made known in the application.

LOEB IS AID TO ROOSEVELT

Asserts Cortelyou Told Him Standard Oil Did Not Give to Campaign Fund.

New York, Aug. 28.—William Loeb, Jr., collector of the port of New York by appointment of President Taft, came out boldly here Monday in a vigorous defense of Col Roosevelt against the attacks being made upon the ex-president in the double barreled controversy raging over the contributions to the Roosevelt campaign fund of 1904 by the Standard Oil company and by E. H. Harriman.

He says it was he, and not President Roosevelt, whose secretary he then was, to whom George B. Cortelyou, as chairman of the Republican national committee, gave positive assurance that the Standard Oil company had made no contribution to the campaign. Mr. Loeb also makes the further statement that instead of Roosevelt asking Harriman for assistance, the latter at the famous White House interview had urged the president to cause National Chairman Cortelyou forthwith to give financial help to the New York state committee in order to save the state ticket.

MUSSELMAN IS NOMINATED

Victory Considered Prohibitionist Success—Nine Aldermen Arrested for Grafting Renominated.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 30.—The returns were not complete Wednesday, but unless Fred C. Martindale of Detroit, Republican candidate for governor, gets a much bigger majority in the upper peninsula than the present returns indicate for him, his Grand Rapids rival, Amos Musselman, has landed the Republican nomination. Mr. Martindale beat Musselman in Detroit by about three to one, but the lower peninsula rolled up a margin of nearly ten thousand. Musselman's victory is a Prohibitionist victory, he having appealed to the "dry" element and the saloon interests backing Martindale.

Nine of the aldermen arrested for grafting were renominated through the strength of their political machines, among them Tom Glinnan, the chief boodler. Prosecutor Shepard was renominated by an overwhelming majority.

Big Tank Steamer Burns.

Santa Barbara, Cal., Aug. 29.—The tank steamer Rosecrans, carrying oil, was burned to the water's edge off Gaviota Tuesday. The steamer was taking on oil at Gaviota when a boiler blew up.

700 Killed in Chinese Mutiny.

Peking, China, Aug. 29.—In an uprising at Changsha, Hunan province, Tuesday, soldiers killed 700 persons and looted the government offices and treasury. The governor, Tan, Yeng Kai, escaped.

U. S. Transport Liscom Sinks.

Shanghai, China, Aug. 29.—The United States transport Liscom sank here Tuesday beside the wharf, where she was lying in forty feet of water. The cause of the accident [illegible] ascertained. [illegible]

SESSION IS FINISHED

CONGRESS ADJOURNS—PENROSE RESOLUTION PASSED.

Charges of Bribery Made Against Senators Chilton and Watson of West Virginia.

Washington, Aug. 28.—The second session of the Sixty-second congress came to an end at 4:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. One hour before that time the senate bowed to the house and struck out of the general deficiency bill the state claims of Oregon, Texas, Virginia and Maryland, aggregating $600,000.

The president came to the capitol to sign the measure which provides for an expenditure of $9,000,000.

Senator La Follette brought up the Penrose campaign investigation resolution early in the session and with the threat of a long filibuster succeeded in forcing it through. The resolution was passed without a roll call.

Charges of bribery and corruption against Senators Chilton and Watson of West Virginia, which were signed by the governor of West Virginia, were referred to the committee on privileges and elections after a lengthy discussion.

In the house the adjournment ceremony was uneventful.

Prior to the speaker's address Chairman Fitzgerald of the appropriations committee and former Speaker Cannon, the ranking Republican members, indulged in a verbal duel. Both agreed that the total appropriations for the year were $1,019,000,000, as against $1,026,000,000 of the last Republican congress. Cannon maintained that the Republicans had been as economical as the Democrats but that the total budget of the last Republican congress was increased by the $45,000,000 which they allowed for the Panama canal.

President Taft shortly after the adjournment started for Beverly, Mass., where he is to spend his vacation.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRE

Newcastle, Del., Aug. 29.—The suburb of Dobbinsville, near here, was terror-stricken Tuesday following the "shooting up" of the town by members of the Eighty-first coast artillery. None of the inhabitants were hurt.

St. Louis, Aug. 27.—Six persons were killed and eight others seriously injured by lightning which accompanied a severe electrical storm here Sunday. Much property damage also was done on both sides of the Mississippi river.

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 30.—The state Republican council overruled the new state Republican committee in its demand that the Roosevelt presidential electors be removed from the Republican column on the Kansas ballot and that standpat electors be placed there instead.

Douai, France, Aug. 30.—Lieut. Louis Felix M. Chandenier of the aviation corps was burned to death Wednesday while flying in his aeroplane. He was en route to the city of Cholons when the tragedy occurred.

PROTESTS FOR FREE CANAL

Britain Sends Another Formal Note to State Department—May Appeal to Hague.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Great Britain on Wednesday reaffirmed its protest against the Panama canal bill. In a note filed with the state department by A. Mitchell Inness, charge of the British embassy here, it was asserted that if a satisfactory agreement could not be reached Great Britain would appeal to the Hague tribunal for arbitration.

The note submitted says Great Britain will give careful consideration to both the bill and the message President Taft sent to congress relating discrimination in favor of American coastwise shipping in the canal. If, after due consideration, it is found that no satisfactory agreement can be reached Great Britain declares it will be necessary to appeal to arbitration.

WILL TRY DARROW OCT. 21

Judge Willis Sets Date for Second Trial of Labor Lawyer for Alleged Bribery.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 29.—Presiding Judge Willis on Tuesday set the second trial of Clarence S. Darrow, the labor attorney of Chicago, under indictment for the alleged bribing of Juror Robert Bain in the McNamara case, for October 21. This will be the second attempt to convict Darrow for alleged jury bribing in the famous dynamite case, he having been acquitted, after a hearing lasting three months, of bribing Talesman Lockwood.

Tragedy Follows a Quarrel.

New York, Aug. 30.—Following a quarrel with her husband Wednesday, Mrs. William Fyther locked herself and four children in a room and turned on the gas. Three are dead. The mother and fourth child are dying.

Assassins Secure $8,000.

Muscatine, Ia., Aug. 30.—Harlo McDermid and J. F. Brinby of the Summit Lumber Co., a Muscatine concern, owned by H. W. [illegible] at Randolph, [illegible] Wednesday [illegible]

AMBITION FOILED, SHE DISAPPEARS

MRS. JOHN S. BOGGES of Chicago, whose picture is here presented, is believed to have drowned herself because her plans for completing her musical education in Europe could not be carried out. Recently she had a stroke of paralysis which disabled her hands, and she became very despondent, and disappeared a few weeks ago.

WILL QUELL REVOLT

ARMY HELD READY BY TAFT TO INVADE NICARAGUA AND AID AMERICANS.

RUSH MARINES TO MANAGUA

Fighting Force of 2,000 United States Men Will Be in Republic by Tuesday Next—Tenth Regiment Prepared for Service.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 30.—From his private car in the Rochester yards on Wednesday, President Taft telegraphed to the acting secretary of war at Washington, rescinding his order of twelve hours previous for the immediate dispatch of the Tenth infantry from Panama to Nicaragua.

The president took this action following advices from the state, war and navy departments concerning the present situation in Nicaragua. He said there would be 2,000 United States troops on Nicaraguan soil by next Tuesday and he expressed the opinion that this number would be sufficient to insure the safety of American lives and property without the aid of the Tenth infantry.

The president was advised that the rebel leaders have given assurances that they will open the lines of communication from Corinto to Managua. The Nicaraguan government itself asked for assistance from the United States and stands ready to aid in opening the railway line to the coast from the capital.

The president has been greatly disturbed over the situation. In Managua, Corinto and other towns Americans are not in any special peril, but in other parts of the country the revolution is not in hand and pillaging has been going on.

The people of Nicaragua, the president was informed, are suffering untold horrors and Americans are suffering, in many instances with them.

To friends Mr. Taft declared that if the senate had agreed to the proposed treaty with Nicaragua which he advocated on his long trip last fall the misery existing today would never have arisen.

COL. WILSON DIES IN PRISON

Former Head of Wireless Company, Convicted of Defrauding the Mails, Succumbs at Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 28.—Col. C. C. Wilson, sixty-seven years old, former president of the United Wireless company, died at the United States penitentiary on Monday, where he was serving a three-year sentence for using the mails in an attempt to defraud. Uraemic poisoning was given as the cause of death. Wilson was stricken while reading in the prison library.

Postoffices Close Sundays.

Washington, Aug. 28.—All first and second-class postoffices will be closed Sundays as a result of one provision of the new postal appropriation bill passed by congress and signed by President Taft.

Black Damp Kills Four.

Linden, Wis., Aug. 28.—Four men were overcome by black damp in the Frontier Lead and Zinc mine, near here, Monday, and perished before it was known that they were in any [illegible]

OFFERS TO APPEAR

ROOSEVELT DEMANDS THAT HE BE PERMITTED TO TESTIFY.

John D. Archbold Says, "I Am Not a Liar and Will Not Endure It Lightly."

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Aug. 27.—To refute the testimony of John D. Archbold concerning his knowledge of an alleged contribution of $100,000 by Mr. Archbold to the Republican campaign fund of 1904, Col. Theodore Roosevelt announced Sunday that he wanted to go before the senate committee investigating campaign contributions.

"It is a most unheard of thing," he said in commenting on Mr. Archbold's testimony and his departure for Europe, "that Mr. Archbold should depart without testifying about the $25,000 he gave Senator Penrose. It is a most peculiar thing that the committee should allow him to depart without so testifying. There are no dead men concerned in that transaction. He could be sure of what he was testifying to in that."

New York, Aug. 27.—"I am not a liar, I am not accustomed to being so accused, and will not endure it lightly."

Just before he sailed for Europe Saturday this statement was read by John D. Archbold to interviewers.

MAY INTERVENE IN MEXICO

Rebels Kill an American—Band of Insurrectos Steal 100 Horses in United States.

Washington, Aug. 30.—With the situation in Mexico darker Wednesday than it has been for some time, and with Emiliano Zapata, the leader of the southern rebels, threatening Mexico City, the United States, while denying that intervention is contemplated, is making further preparations for such an eventuality.

General Steever reported that a band of rebels had crossed the line into the United States and had stolen 100 horses from a ranch near Culbersen, Tex. Troop C of the Third cavalry fired on the Mexicans.

Chihuahua, Mex., Aug. 30.—William Jackson Stevens, an American colonist at Pacheco, state of Chihuahua, was killed Wednesday while defending his home and family.

Gen. Booth's Funeral Held.

London, Aug. 30.—Funeral services for the founder of the Salvation Army, Gen. William Booth, were held at the Olympia Wednesday night. In accordance with the traditions of the organization, they were without pomp or symbols of mourning, but were carried out with moving fervor and impressiveness. Thirty-four thousand persons participated in the function.

Hygiene Congress Opens Sept. 23.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 28.—Installation of health exhibits to be shown in connection with the fifteenth international congress on hygiene and demography, to be held here September 23-28, began here.

Jersey Recluse Leaves $200,000.

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 29.—Michael Kiley, an aged recluse who occupied a ramshackle house on Bright street here for many years, died possessed of a fortune which the appraisers estimate at $200,000.

INDICT OIL HEADS

ARCHBOLD AND FOLGER AMONG THOSE NAMED BY FEDERAL GRAND JURY.

CHARGE LAW VIOLATION

Charge the Outcome of Long Probe—Quick Action in Texas Is Surprise to Washington Officials.

Dallas, Texas, Aug. 30.—The federal grand jury of the northern district of Texas has returned indictments against a number of prominent oil men connected with the Standard Oil company. The charge is restraint of trade and commerce and unlawful conspiracy and combination in violation of the anti-trust laws.

It is alleged that individual defendants, the Standard Oil company and the Magnolia Petroleum company conspired to destroy the business of the Pierce-Fordyce Oil association of Texas.

The specific offense is alleged to have occurred June 29, 1912. The names of the following persons appear in the indictment:

Calvin N. Payne, Titusville, Pa.; John D. Archbold, New York; Henry C. Folger, Jr., New York; John Sealin, Galveston; A. C. Eble, Dallas; E. H. Brown, Corsicana, Texas; W. S. Teagle, Plainfield, N. J.; The Standard Oil company of New York, the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, and the Magnolia Petroleum Company of Texas.

Government Complainant.

Washington—The indictment of the Standard Oil officials at Dallas, it is said at the department of justice, is the result of a three months' investigation of charges that the decree dissolving the so-called trust had been violated. The government, it is added, has not yet decided whether it will proceed on the question of the violation of the decree, which would involve contempt proceedings. The Texas grand jury considered the question under the criminal section of the Sherman law.

Contempt proceedings would have to be undertaken directly before a federal court. Such action is beyond the function of a grand jury. The indictment returned, however, it is pointed out, will not bar the government from prosecuting for contempt of court in case that course is considered desirable. Officials of the department of justice believe, it is declared, that the initial move in the case should be made through a grand jury and then if it developed that an indictment did not promise to satisfy the law's demands, they could resort to contempt proceedings as well.

The special grand jury which returned the indictment has been working on the case since last Tuesday, when it was convened to consider the government's allegations and evidence. The celerity with which it concluded the inquiry surprised officials here.

The present action constituted the federal government's first move against the Standard Oil since it was dissolved last November under the mandate of the supreme court of the United States into its 33 component parts, to restore competition. A fight between Standard Oil interests and the Waters-Pierce Oil company, now pending in the federal court at St. Louis, involves the faithfulness of the Standard Oil in carrying out the decree of dissolution.

Besieged by Insurgents.

Washington, D. C.—The Mexican government has ordered federal troops to hasten to a point between Hermosillo and Nogales, in the state of Sonora, for the protection of two Americans, Frank B. Curtis and Arthur Cunningham, who are beset by rebels thirsting for revenge. The Americans had been left in charge of a mining camp at El Oro and had killed several rebels in trying to protect the company's property from raids.

DAILY MARKET REPORT.

Twin City Markets.

Minneapolis, Aug. 30.—Wheat, Sept., 91¾c; Dec., 92¾c; No. 1 northern 92¾c@93¾c; No. 2 northern, 85¾@95¾c; No. 1 durum, 94c; No. 3 corn, 78c; No. 3 white oats, 31½c; barley, malting, 61c; No. 2 rye, 64½c; No. 1 flax, $1.89.

Duluth, Aug. 30.—Wheat, Sept., 94½c; Dec., 93¾c.

South St. Paul, Aug. 30.—Cattle—Steers, $6@7; cows, $3.60@5; calves, $4@8.50; hogs, $8.10@8.50; sheep and lambs, $3.75@5.50.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Cattle—Receipts, 3,500 head; market steady to strong; beeves, $5.85@10.55; Texas steers, $5@6.85; western steers, $6.25@9.50; stockers and feeders, $4.30@7.25; cows and heifers, $2.75@8.15; calves, $6.50@10.75. Hogs—Receipts, 15,000; market slow at yesterday's average; light, $8.25@8.90; mixed, $8.10@8.90; heavy, $7.90@8.75; rough, $7.90@8.15; pigs, $5.65@8.20; bulk of sales, $8.25@8.70. Sheep—Receipts 38,000; market steady to 10c lower; native, $3.40@4.50; western, $3.50@4.55; yearlings, $4.50@5.55; lambs, native, $4.50@7.15; western, $4.50@7.10.

Wisconsin Solon Stricken.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin—A special to the Sentinel from Escanaba, Mich., says: United States Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin was stricken with heart failure when on a fishing trip 50 miles north of Escanaba. His camp is 15 miles from the nearest telegraph station and though a special train of doctors was sent to his assistance there is no further word as to his condition since. There are only foot trails across the 15 miles from the Stephenson camp to the telegraph station.

SERIAL STORY

EXCUSE ME!

Novelized from the Comedy of the Same Name

By Rupert Hughes

ILLUSTRATED From Photographs of the Play as Produced By Henry W. Savage

Copyright, 1911, by H. K. Fly Co.

12

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Ira Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Mallory decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding hazing. Marjorie is distracted. Ira Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Anne Gattle, a fellow passenger. Mallory vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Mallory reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Mallory finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train. Mallory again makes an unsuccessful hunt for a preacher. Dr. Temple poses as a physician.

CHAPTER XVIII—(Continued).

Dr. Temple stared after him, but the gambler stared at Dr. Temple with a homage. "So you're one of os," he said, and seizing the old man's limp hand, shook it heartily: "I got to slip it to yoo. Your make-up is great. You nearly had me for a comeon. Great!"

And then he sauntered out, leaving the clergymon's head swimming. Dr. Temple turned to Mallory for explanations, but Mallory only waved him away. He was not quite convinced himself. He was convinced only that whatever else anybody might be, nobody apparently desired to be a clergymon in these degenerate days.

The conductor returned and threw into Dr. Temple the glare of two basilisk eyes. The old man put out a beseeching hond and began:

"My good man, you do me a grave injustice."

The conductor snapped back: "You say o word to me and I'll do you worse than thot. And if I spot you with a pack of cards in your hand ogain, I'll tie you to the cow-ketcher."

Then he marched off again. The doctor fell back into a chair, trying to figure it oot. Then Ashton and Fosdick and little Jimmie Wellington and Wedgewood strolled in and, dropping into choirs, ordered drinks. Before tha doctor could ask anybody to explain, Ashton was launched on a story. His mind was a soitcase full of anecdotes, mostly of the smoking-room order.

Wherever three or four men are gathered together, they rapidly organize a clearing-house of off-color stories. The doctor listened in spite of himself, and in spite of himself he was amused, for stories that would be stupid if they were decent, take on a certain verve and thrill from their very forbiddenness.

The dear old clergyman felt that it would be priggish to take flight, bot he could not make the corners of his mouth behave. Strange twitchings of the lips and little steamy escapes of giggle-jets disturbed him. And when Ashton, who was a practiced raconteur, finished a drolatic adventure with the epilogue, "And the next morning they were at Niagara Falls," the old doctor was helpless with laughter. Some superior force, the devil no doubt, fairly shook him with glee.

"Oh, that's bully," he shrieked, "I haven't heard a story like that for ages."

"Why, where hava you been, Dr. Temple?" asked Ashton, who could not imagine where a man could have concealed himself from such stories. But he laughed loudest of all when the doctor answered: "You see, I live in Ypsilanti. They don't tell me stories like that."

"Thay—who?" said Fosdick.

"Why, my pa—my patients," the doctor explained, and laughed so hard that he forgot to feel guilty, laughed so hard that his wife in the next room heard him and giggled to Mrs. Whitcomb:

"Listen to dear Walter. He hasn't laughed like that since he was a—a medical student." Then she buried her face guiltily in a book.

"Wasn't it good?" Dr. Temple demanded, wiping his streaming eyes and nudging the solemn-faced Englishman, who understood his own nation's humor, but had not yet learned the Yankee quirks.

Wedgewood made a hollow effort at laughter and answered: "Extremely —very droll, but what I don't quite get was—why the porter said—" The others drowned him in a roar of laughter, but Ashton was angry. "Why, you blamed fool, that's where the joke comes in. Don't you see, the bridegroom said to the bride—" then he lowered his voice and diagramed the story on his fingers.

Mrs. Temple was still shaking with sympathetic laughter, never dreaming what her husband was laughing at. She turned to Mrs. Whitcomb, but Mrs. Whitcomb was still glaring at Mrs. Wellington, who was still writing with flying fingers and underscoring every other word.

"Soma people seem to think they own the train," Mrs. Whitcomb raged. "That creature has been at tha writing desk an hour. The worst of it is, I'm sure she's writing to my husband."

Mrs. Temple looked shocked, but another peal of laughter came through the partition between the male and female sections of the car, and she beamed again. Then Mrs. Wellington finished her letter, glanced it over, addressed an envelope, sealed and stamped it with a deliberation that maddened Mrs. Whitcomb. When at last she rose, Mrs. Whitcomb was in the seat almost before Mrs. Wellington was out of it.

Mrs. Wellingtoo paused at another wave of laughter from the men's room. She commented petulantly:

"What good times men have. They've formed a club in there already. We women can only sit around and hate each other."

"Why, I don't hate anybody, do yoo?" Mrs. Temple exclaimed, looking up from tha novel she had found on the book shelves. Mrs. Wellington dropped into the next chair:

"On a long railroad journey I hate everybody. Don't you hate long journeys?"

"It's the first I ever took," Mrs. Temple apologized, radiantly, "and I'm having the—what my oldest boy would call the time of my life. And dear Walter—such goings on for him! A few minutes ago I strolled by the door and I saw him playing cards with a stranger, and smoking and drinking, too, all at once."

"Boys will be boys," said Mrs. Wellington.

"But for Dr. Temple of all people—"

"Why shouldn't a doctor? It's a shame the way men hava everything. Think of it, a special smoking room. And women hava no place to take a puff except on the sly."

Mrs. Temple stared at her in awe: "The woman in this book smokes!—perfumed things!"

"All women smoke nowadays," said Mrs. Wellington, carelessly. "Don't you?"

The politest thing Mrs. Temple could think of in answer was: "Not yet."

"Really!" said Mrs. Wellington. "Don't you like tobacco?"

"I never tried it."

"It's time you did. I smoke cigars myself."

Mrs. Temple almost collapsed at this double shock: "Ci—cigars?"

"Yes; cigarettes are too strong for me; will you try one of my pets?"

Mrs. Temple was about to express her repugnance at the thought, but Mrs. Wellington thrust before her a portfolio in which nestled such dainty shapes of such a warm and winsome brown, that Mrs. Temple paused to stare, and, like Mother Eve, found the fruit of knowledge too interesting once seen to reject with scorn. She hung over the cigar case in hesitant excitement one moment too long. Then she said in a trembling voice: "I—I should like to try once—just to see what it's like. But there's no place."

Mrs. Wellington felt that she had already made a proselyte to her own beloved vice, and she rushed her victim to the precipice: "There's tha observation platform, my dear. Come on out."

Mrs. Temple was shivering with dismay at the dreadful deed: "What would they say in Ypsilanti?"

"What do you care? Be a sport. Your husband smokes. If it's right for him, why not for you?"

Mrs. Temple set her teeth and crossed tha Rubicon with a resolute "I will!"

Mrs. Wellington led the timid neophyte along the wavering floor of the car and flung back the door of the observation car. She found Ira Lathrop holding Anne Gattle's hand and evidently explaining something of great importance, for their heads were very close together. They rose and with abashed faces and confused mumblings of half swallowed explanations, left tha platform to Mrs. Wellington and her new pupil.

Shortly afterward Little Jimmie Wellington grew restive and set out for a brief constitutional and a breath of air. He carried a siphon to which he had become greatly attached, and made heavy going for the observation room, but reached the door in fairly good order. He swung it open and brought in with it tha pale and wavering ghost of Mrs. Templa, who had been leaning against it for much-needed support. Wellington was stupefied to observe smoke pouring round Mrs. Temple's form, and he resolved to perform a great life-saving feat. He decided that tha poor little woman was on fire and he poised the siphon like a fire extinguisher, with the noble intention of putting her out.

He pressed the handle, and a stream of vichy shot from the nozzle.

Fortunately, his aim was so very wobbly that none of tha extinguisher touched Mrs. Temple.

Wellington was about to play the siphon at her again when he saw her take from her lips a toy cigar and emit a stream of cough-shaken smoke. The poor little experimentalist was too wretched to notice even so large a menace as Wellington. She threw the cigar away and gasped:

"I think I've had enough."

From the platform came a voice very well known to Little Jimmie. It said: "You'll like the second one better."

Mrs. Temple shuddered at the thought, but Wellington drew himself up majestically and called out:

"Like second one better, eh? I suppozhe it's tha same way with husbandsh."

Then he stalked back to the smoking room, feeling that he had annihilated his wife, but knowing from experience that she always had a comeback. He knew it would be good, but he was afraid to hear it. He rolled into the smoking room, and sprawling across Doctor Temple's shoulders dragged him from the midst of a highly improper story with alarming news.

"Doc, your wife looks kind o' seedy. Better go to her at once."

Dr. Templa leaped to his feet and ran to his wife's aid. He found her a dismal, ashen sight.

"Sally! What on earth ails you?"

"Been smok-oking," she hiccoughed.

Tha world seemed to be crashing round Dr. Temple's head. He could only gurgle, "Sally!"

Mrs. Temple drew herself up with weak defiance: "Well, I saw yoo playing cards and drinking."

In the presence of such innocent deviltry he could only smile: "Aren't we having an exciting vacation? But to think of you smoking!—and a cigar!"

She tossed her head in pride. "And it didn't make me sick—much." She clutched a chair. He tried to support her. He could not help pondering: "What would they say in Yp-hip-silanti?"

"Who cares?" she laughed. "I—I wish the old train wouldn't rock so."

"I—I've smoked too much, too," said Dr. Temple with perfect truth, but Mrs. Temple, remembering that long glass she had seen, narrowed her eyes at him: "Are you sure it was the smoke?"

"Sally!" he cried, in abject horror at her implied suspicion.

Then she turned a pale green. "Oh, I feel such a qualm."

"In your conscience, Sally?"

"No, not in my conscience. I think I'll go back to my berth and lie down."

"Let me help you, Mother."

And Darby and Joan hurried along tha corridor, crowding it as they were crowding their vacation with belated experience.

CHAPTER XIX.

Foiled!

It was late in the forenoon before the train came to tha end of its iron furrow across that fertile space between two of the world's greatest rivers, which the Indians called "Iowa," nobody knows exactly why. In contrast with the palisades of tha Mississippi, the Missouri twists like a great brown dragon wallowing in congenial mud. The water itself, as Bob Burdette said, is so muddy that the wind blowing across it raises a cloud of dust.

A sonorous bridge led the way into Nebraska, and the train came to a halt at Omaha. Mallory and Marjorie got out to stretch their legs and their dog. If they had only known that the train was to stop there the quarter of an hour, and if they had only known some preacher there and had had him to the station, tha ceremony could have been consummated then and there.

The horizon was fairly saw-toothed with church spires. There were preachers, preachers everywhere, and not a dominie to do their deed.

After they had strolled up and down the platform, and up and down, and up and down till they were fain of their cramped quarters, again, Marjorie suddenly dug her nails into Mallory's arm.

"Honey! look—look!"

Honey looked, and there before their very eyes stood as clerical a looking person as ever announced a strawberry festival.

Mallory stared and stared, till Marjorie said:

"Don't you see? stupid! It's a preacher! a preacher!"

"It looks like one," was as far as Mallory would commit himself, and he was turning away. He had about come to the belief that anything that looked like a parson was something else. But Marjorie whirled him round again, with a shrill whisper to listen. And he overheard in tones addicted to the pulpit:

"Yes, deacon, I trust that the harvest will be plentiful at my new church. It grieves ma to leava tha dear brothers and sisters in tha Lord in Omaha, but I felt called to wider pastures."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Sterilized Coal.

Coal in the mines is one of the things freest from germs. Old-time doctors used to notice coal miners' wounds healed fast, though begrimed and besmeared with coal dust. For a long time it has been thought that breathing in coal dust caused lung diseases in miners. Some experts find fresh coal is as good as sterilized, and say miners have lung trouble because they do not take the trouble to put off their damp and sweaty clothing before going from the mine to their homes, thus taking cold in the open air walk. Experts say our miners ought to put on warm and dry clothes at the mouth of the mine. But it seems the miners have minds of their own, and although the coal companies in some places fixed up hot and cold water baths and dressing rooms at the mouth of the mines the men would not use them, but went home to wash and dress, as had been their custom for generations.

Must Be So.

"Sadie," said a mother to her small daughter, "why is it that you and your little brother are always quarreling?" "I don't know," replied Sadie, [illegible]

FARM and GARDEN

PREPARE FOR WINTER WHEAT

Grain Farmers Plow Immediately After Barley or Oats Is Harvested —Prevent Evaporation.

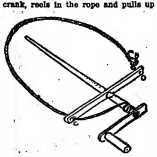
Oats and barley stubble land intended for winter grain and to be seeded to grass should be plowed early and harrowed soon after plowing, so the ground can settle. Heavy land should be plowed with three horses. We use the sulky plow, set to cut an even furrow and a good depth. Harrow and roll before the plowed ground dries out. A fine, mellow top soil will prevent evaporation of moisture and it can be put in nice order for drilling with a second or third working with the spring-tooth harrow and roller, says a writer in the Baltimore American. Land plowed just before sowing is too spongy; it should be plowed at least two weeks before the train is drilled. Expert grain farmers plow immediately after the barley or oats is harvested and then harrow and roll. When oats or barley precede a crop of winter wheat the land is much dryer than a properly managed summer fallow, and if the season should be dry and hot it is difficult to get such land mellow and moist enough for germination of grain. If barnyard manure is to be spread over the field it will pay to hire a spreader for the manure can be spread so much better, as the spreader cuts the manure fine and spreads an even and a regular coat over the entire ground. Two active men with a two-horse spreader will haul and spread a large pile of manure in a day. The regular price for the use of a spreader is 50 cents per day. If a spreader cannot be had, haul and spread direct from wagon or cart. The manure spread one day should be harrowed into the ground the next; there is no loss of plant food from the manure drying out from action of sun and wind. Spread 12 two-horse wagon loads of rooted manure and drill the gain in with 250 pounds of a good animal bone fertilizer to the acre. The manure and fertilizer will give a larger yield of grain and a better quality of straw than either manure or fertilizer used alone.

BINDER FOR SHOCKING CORN

Little Device Contrived by Nebraska Man So That Band May Be Put on With Much Ease.

In describing a contrivance for shocking corn, a Nebraska man writes in the Missouri Valley Farmer as follows:

I have worked out a little device to help with the large shock, so that the band may be put on with ease. The device consists of a tapering shaft 3½ feet long to which a crank is attached. C and D is a crossbar or washer through which a rope passes after being attached to the other end, and fastens to the crank. E is the loop in the rope to fasten to the hook after the rope has been carried around the shock. The operator takes hold of tha crank, reels in the rope and pulls up tha stalk so the second man has no trouble in putting a hand on a large shock.



For Shocking Corn.

To Kill Wire Grass.

The so-called wire grasses are many. Such grasses, as propagate by means of creeping root-stalks constantly reproduce new plants at the rooting joints, as conch or quack grass, Johnson grass, Bermuda grass and members of the blue-grass family. This pasture, if adapted to tillage, should be completely pulverized to the depth of four inches with a cutaway or disk harrow in July and kept harrowed once a week so long as the soil remains dry during tha remainder of the season, allowing no green spear of grass to get a foothold.

By fall the mass of roots will be practically lifeless if the season has been normally dry and hot. The whole should then be turned under ten inches deep, using a jointer. In the spring, harrow every week until time to plant a cultivated crop, then keep perfectly clean and the battle will be won.

Kohl-Rabi.

In most sections of the north a good crop of kohl-rabi may be grown if seed is sown not later than the middle of August. White Vienna is a good variety. See that the soil is well enriched with rotten manure before sowing the seed.

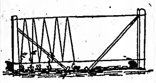
CULTURE OF THE LIMA BEAN

Dwarf or Bush Variety Is One of Best Vegetables That Can Be Grown for Home or Market.

(By J. W. GRIFFIN.)

The Lima beans, both the pole (those that require poles or trellises for support) and the dwarf or bush forms that do not make any vine, are of the best vegetables that we grow in the garden, either for home use or for market.

There are many varieties of each. By some, the small-seeded varieties are preferred, as the flavor is finer and the bean is not so large and coarse. I think this rather a matter of custom, for I was very much in favor of the small variety until I tried the larger ones and I find if there is any difference in quality, flavor and texture, the large one excels.



A Good Trellis.

The dry beans are just the same as those just matured, the only difference is, there is a greater per cent. of water in the green ones than there is in the dry.

This water may be returned to the beans by soaking them over night in lukewarm water. In the morning the beans will look just as they did when just full grown and when served like green beans the difference will be difficult to tell.

There are many varieties of each kind—the running and the dwarf, or those of the bush form. I grew the King of the Garden, one of the large pole varieties, for several years and found it very good as to yield and quality.

Lima Beans Ready for Market.

The pole Limas are better yielders than the bush variety, but there is more labor attached in growing the pole variety; however, the difference in yield overcomes this to a great extent.

I find that the best methods of growing Lima beans is to use a trellis. In constructing these trellises, the end posts should be set deeply and well braced. The bottom wire may be of No. 12 or 14 (any light wire will do), but the top one must be of No. 9 or 10, as the weight of the vines is great.

Brace the end posts well and set small posts every 10 or 15 feet and staple the wires to these. When more than one trellis is to be made side by side, the distance between them should be six feet and the trellises should run north and south—this will give sunshine to each side, and will insure more perfect fruit.

GARDEN and FARM NOTES

The ordinary farmer will gain by stacking his grain.

The clover should be cut as soon as it is in blossom.

Deep-plowed land has a great capacity for storage of moisture.

A heavy crop of weeds will check the growth of the clover a great deal.

The grain binder is the most satisfactory implement for cutting timothy seed.

Sow some clover; if nowhere else, sow in corn after the cultivation is over.

The most important factor in soil improvement is growing leguminous crops.

The easiest way to eradicate weeds on the farm is to prevent their going to seed.

Silage made of corn and soy beans is more digestible than that made from corn silage alone.

One of the qualities of the soy bean that commends it to the stock feeder is its protein richness.

Much of the feeding value of the clover depends upon how the crop is managed after it is cut.

The best stock pea for grazing in the field is the black. Everlasting, Red and Red Ripper are also good.

The silo means excellent feed stored in small space. Just what is needed when the grass in the pasture is dry.

Protein that is grown upon the farm is often more palatable than that which is purchased in concentrated form and it is also cheaper.

BACKACHE AND ACHING JOINTS

Together Tell of Bad Kidneys.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Much pain that masks as rheumatism is due to weak kidneys—to their failure to drive off uric acid thoroughly. When you suffer achy, bad joints, backache, too; with some kidney disorders, get Doan's Kidney Pills, which have cured thousands.

An Oklahoma Case

John T. Jones, 213 S. Pine St., Pauls Valley, Okla., says: "I was confined to bed for days with sciatic rheumatism and kidney trouble. I was weak and debilitated and tormented almost to death. Not improving under the doctor's treatment, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was entirely cured. I have had no trouble since."

Get Doan's at any Drug Store, 50c. a Box

Doan's Kidney Pills

Cautious.

Hobson—I understand that you patronize Snips the tailor. Does he suit you?

Harduppe—Not unless I pay him something in advance.

To Reproduce Riot Scenes.

The recent riot at the Federal building, Los Angeles, will be reproduced at the trial of those arrested by motion picture films, and shown to the jury on a screen. It will be the first time in the history of jurisprudence that such evidence will have been introduced. While the riot was at its height a moving-picture company, with the newest model machine, had an operator on the scene, and his films show the entire actions of those persons who are charged with having caused disturbance.

Cause for Consternation.

The inexperienced district school teacher had exhausted all other expedients for the maintenance of discipline. Going out into the school yard, she broke off a good-sized switch that was growing there and administered primitive punishment to Jimmy Kelloy.

There were strange expressions of horrified amazement on the faces of the children, and when school was dismissed at noon they gathered in excited groups and talked in whispers. Finally the teacher's curiosity could stand it no longer. Calling Henry Thomas to her, she demanded the cause of the discussions.

"Why—why—why, teacher," he stammered, "that—that switch you licked Jimmy with—that was the tree we all set out last Arbor day."—Harper's Magazine.

Not Necessary to Leave Home.

In an effort to stop the migration of dying consumptives to the Southwest, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis will ask physicians to be more careful in ordering patients to go away, and will also ask railroads to discontinue their practice of selling "charity" tickets to those who cannot afford to pay full fare. "No consumptive should go to Colorado, California, or the West for his health," says the association, "unless he has a good chance for recovery from his disease, and unless especially he has at least $1,000 to spend for this purpose, over and above what his family may need.

"Tuberculosis can be cured in any part of the United States, and it is not necessary for a tuberculosis patient to go West. Whenever possible, the National Association urges tuberculosis patients who have not ample funds to go to a sanatorium near home, and if they cannot do this, to take the cure in their own homes, under the direction of a physician."

THIRTEEN YEARS

Unlucky Number for Dakota Woman.

The question whether the number "13" is really more unlucky than any other number has never been entirely settled.

A So. Dak. woman, after thirteen years of misery from drinking coffee, found a way to break the "unlucky spell." Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the drug in coffee. She writes:

"For thirteen years I have been a nervous wreck from drinking coffee. My liver, stomach, heart—in fact, my whole system being actually poisoned by it.

"Last year I was confined to my bed for six months. Finally it dawned on me that coffee caused the trouble. Then I began using Postum instead of coffee, but with little faith, as my mind was in such a condition that I hardly knew what to do next.

"Extreme nervousness and failing eyesight caused me to lose all courage. In about two weeks after I quit coffee and began to use Postum I was able to read and my head felt clear. I am improving all the time and I will be a strong, well woman yet.

"I have fooled more than one person with a delicious cup of Postum. Mrs. S. wanted to know where I bought my fine coffee. I told her my grocer had it and when she found out it was Postum she has used it ever since, and her nerves are building up fine.

"My brain is strong, my nerves steady, my appetite good, and best of all, I enjoy such sound, pleasant sleep."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Get the little book in pkgs., "The Road to Wellville."

"There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879.

STEENERSON'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

In announcing my candidacy for re-election as Representative in Congress I desire first of all to thank the people of the district for the honor bestowed upon me in the past and to assure them that, if it shall please them to continue me in their service, I shall in the future, as I have in the past, put forth every effort to serve them faithfully to the best of my ability.

I am a Republican—a progressive republican—and have supported all progressive legislation for the more complete government regulation and control of railroads and interstate commerce, the policy of conservation of water powers and other natural resources in the interest of the people, and the development of unsettled lands on liberal terms to actual settlers.

While I voted against the Payne Aldrich Tarriff Bill and Canadian Reciprocity becense, in my jedgement they were against the best interests of my constituents, I am a protectionist and favor a tariff high enough to preserve the home market to American industries, bet not so high as to make it a shield for exorbitant prices.

I voted for the amendments to the Constitution recently passed by Congress, providing for election of Senators by the people, and an income tax, which now await ratification by the states.

I aided in the elimination of railroad and ship subsides from postal expenditures, and the improvements and extension of the postal service including parcel post and rural free delivery, and am trying to get improved laws to prevent using mails to promote fraudelent schemes.

I favor strict government regulation of interstate commerce, as well as transportation; supervision of corporations and capitalizaton, and, if necessary, even limitation of prices; and workmans' compensation for the benefit of victims of industrial accidents, and all legislation in favor of temperance and morality.

Liberal pensions in their declining years is due from a grateful nation to its gallant defenders, the veterans of the Civil War, as a matter of right and justice. While I believe in due military preparation on the part of the leading civilized powers of the world, I believe the time has come when there should be renewed efforts to substitute international arbitration for war in the settlement of disputes among nations, and to limit armaments, thus saving immense sums for more useful purposes in the serving of humanity.

Halvor Steenerson.

Mr. Mostue is the only candidate for office from the Eleven Towns and the people of the city of Thief River Falls are trying to defeat him and we suppose that every Automobile in the city will be used to carry ladies to the voting places so hitch up your teams and take your wife with you to Election so as to even up this vote a little.

The farmers should take time to go to the primaries on September 17th, and vote. The Poles are kept open until 9 o'clock and if you can not spare the time to go in the day time drive up in the evening and cast your vote.

Remember that you can vote for your first and second choice for governor, but be sure and not make a mistake and vote for Eberhart, unless you want that present Game and Fish Commission to hold their job.

Read over the political annoucements and pick out the different candidates that you desire to see nominated before election and then be sure to go to election and vote on September 17th 1912.

All indications now point to the election of Theodore Roosevelt as the next president, and we feln confident that from his past record that he will not apoint that Engineers outfit at St. Paul, for another term, except it be a term in stillwater where they properly belong for falsifying reports made regarding the conditions on Red Lake River.

What We Never Forget

according to science, are the things associated with our early home life, such as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruptions, cuts, sprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit, unrivaled for piles, corns or cold-sores. Only 25 cents at all druggists.

The rate for publication of political announcements in this column is only $5.00 payable strictly in advance. No credit given on this class of work.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

I am a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds of Pennington county, and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primaries to be held September 17th 1912. Nels J. Anderson.

FOR CLERK OF COURT.

I wish to announce to the voters of Pennington County that I will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Clerk of the District Court for Pennington County, subject to the decision of the voters at the Republican Primary, September 17th, 1912.

We have occupied the position since the organization of Pennington County and have tried to the best of my ability to be strictly impartial and as efficient as my ability would allow. I will be pleased to have the votes and support of all citizens who believe that I have filled the position in an honest and efficient manner.

If nominated and elected I here by promise to give the office my personal attention and my best efforts to honestly administer the affairs of the office in a strictly impartial and efficient manner.

Harry E. Ives.

Thief River Falls

REGISTER OF DEEDS.

I hereby, wish to announce to my friends and neighbors that I am a candidate for re-election to the office of Register of Deeds. I maintain that for accuracy and efficiency my office has few equals in the state.

Very Sincerely Yours

Earnest L. Quist.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

Ruse of a Woman Who Was Scared, but Who Kept Her Wits.

The following is a true story of an incident that happened in an English village:

A husband had gone out for the evening and left his wife and child at home. The woman was about to retire for the night when, to her amazement, she perceived the foot of a man beneath the bed. Instead of calling for assistance, as some would have done, she coolly went to the child's cot and sat and sang till the child went to sleep. Two hours then remained before her husband came in. He was surprised to find her waiting up, but when his wife handed him an envelope, saying, "You might run and post this," the cause of her waiting was revealed. Instead of a letter the following was written on the envelope: "A burglar is under our bed. Run; fetch police." The husband returned in a minute with a policeman, and the man was arrested. The burglar when brought up before the magistrate remarked that he had come across a few brave women in his time, but this one must have had a nerve like iron, for she sat there for three solid hours. He had the impression that she didn't know he was there till the policeman pulled him out.—Exchange.

TALK TO YOUR HORSE.

It Will Make the Animal More Intelligent and More Friendly.

Talk to your horse and teach him to obey your voice as well as the reins. This may prove valuable if, as sometimes happens, the lines break or become unbuckled. Besides, the horse likes the sociability of it. He easily learns a dozen or more words, but be careful to use them only for exactly what you mean. For instance, "Whoa" means to stop at once and stand perfectly still, "get up" to go straight ahead and at once, "back" to step backward, "easy" or "steady" to slow up.

These words the horse readily learns and takes kindly to. "Walk" means to change at once to a walk, and "all right," spoken in a calm, reassuring tone, means "don't be afraid—that won't hurt you," and it is wonderful to see what a calming effect it has. Speak firmly, but not harshly, to the horse, for they are nervous creatures. Talking to your horse will make him more intelligent and more friendly. [illegible]

FOR COUNTY TREASURER.

I wish to announce that I am a candidate for County Treasurer subject to the ratification of the Republican voters at the primaries, September 17, 1912. Being that political parties have always regarded it as important to have their members elected to offices, it must be [illegible] in promoting party politics, for so far as the work in the county offices is concerned, it [illegible] difference [illegible] whatever [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] and work and [illegible] the advantage of his public position, in aiding the party to which he belongs. I believe that it is of the utmost importance to have the Republican party control at least one branch of congress in order to maintain the average of prices. While the price-level does not prove that times are good, theoretically, yet we know that with the enormous debt of the country, it will be harder to pay it with low prices than with high, steady prices. I believe that because one can not support the whole Republican ticket, it is no reason at all to quite supporting candidates for congress and the legislature, which is by far more important than the office of president, so far as party politics is concerned. These are my ideas, and I shall use my influence to help along on those lines, no matter whether I am nominated or not.

Sincerely for the success of the party.

Andrew Trovaton.

FOR SHERIFF.

I wish to announce that I am a candidate for the office of sheriff, subject to the will of the voters of Pennington county at the primaries. September 17. I have held the office one term, or since the organization of the county, having been appointed by the board of county commissioners. If my conduct of the affairs of the office have met with your approval, an endorsement at the primaries would be greatly appreciated.

Jesse La Bree.

COUNTY ATTORNEY.

I wish to announce to the voters of Pennington county that I am a candidate for the office of County Attorney on the Republican ticket, and solicit your vote and support at the primaries to be held on Sept. 17, 1912.—J. M. Bishop, Thief River Falls, Minn.

COUNTY TREASURER.

I am a candidate for the office of County Treasurer of Pennington County and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primary election to be held on Sept. 17, 1912.—John T. Guiiingsrud, Thief River Falls.

REGISTER OF DEEDS

I wish to announce to the voters of Pennington County that I am a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds of Pennington County and respectfully solicit your votes and support.

Geo. W. Elder.

COUNTY AUDITOR.

I wish hereby to announce to the Voters of Pennington County, that I am a candidate for the Republican Nomination for the Office of County Auditor, at the September 17th 1912 Primaries. Since my appointment to this office, at the time of the organization of of Pennington County. I have given the office my whole time and my very best efforts. Should I be favored with the nomination and election, I believe with the experience gained, I will be still better prepared to serve you the coming term.

If our services have met with your approval I earnestly solicit your consideration and support.

Very truly yours,

A. H. Fasel

Coal Mines.

Coal mines cannot be worked to a greater depth than 4,000 feet because of the high temperature that prevails.

His Protest.

Mrs. Benham—Before you married me you said that I was a queen. Benham—Well, I no longer believe in [illegible] [illegible]

JUDGE OF PROBATE.

I hereby announce that I am a non-partisan candidate for reelection to the office of Judge of Probate in and for Pennington County, Minnesota. I respectfully solicit your vote and support at the Primary Election to be held on Tuesday Sept. 17th., 1912.

Wilhelm Michelet

Judge of Probate

Thief River Falls Minn.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Aug. 9, 1912. Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. August 7th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given, that May Arndt, of Highlanding Minn., who on May 18th, 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 06160 for S. E. ¼, Section 23 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet. U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 16th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

John M. Johnson, Bernt Johnson, Morgan Vaughan, John Guinan, all of Highlanding Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,

Register.

Grocers Who Dressed In Colors.

In the early part of the fifteenth century it is recorded that the "grocers' guild appeared in livery of scarlet and green." A few years later scarlet and black were adopted. Funeral services of deceased members "were attended with much show of pegeantry." At the burial of Sir Philip Sidney, who was a member of the grocers' guild, his worship the mayor, aldermen and other civic officials were present, "rydinge in purple."—London Telegraph.

The Men Who Succeed.

as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success to day, demands health. to ail is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak, run-down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas. B Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well." Try them. Only 50 cents at All Druggists.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Aug. 9th, 1912. Department of the Interior. U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. August 5th, 1912. NOTICE is hereby given that Grace M. Pinkerton, of Torgerson Minn., who on May 15th. 1911, made homestead Entry No. 06180 for S. E. ¼ Section 29 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 15th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

A. T. Rice, of Germantown Minn. John Markuson, S. H. Beseecon, of Torgerson Minn. V. H. Hay, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,

Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Aug. 9.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Aug. 7th. 1912. Notice is hereby given that Knudt C. Shirley. of Thief River Falls Minn., who on Oct 8, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 617. Serial No: 01108 for S. E. ¼ Section 6 Township 154 N. Range 41 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 24th day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Charl C. Overum, of Thief River Falls Minn. Hans Jorstad, of Thief River Falls Minn. Ole Shirley, of Thief River Falls, Minn. Carl Carlson, of Germantown, Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,

Register.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF GROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9.40 a. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m,

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Aug. 23rd, 1912. Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. August 20th. 1912. Notice is hereby given that Paul Henriksen, of Espelee Minn., who on September 20th, 1910, made Homestead Application Serial No. 05057, for S. ½ N. E. ¼, S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼, & N. E. ¼ S. W. ¼ Section 7 Township 155 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn, on the 27th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Fred Solley, John G. Nilson, Carl T. Hanson, Paul Sund, all of Espelee Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,

Register.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

[illegible]

Scientific American.

[illegible] New York

Degrees of Love.

"That young couple must love each other thoroughly."

"Oh, I don't know. I envied the husband—he doesn't seem to get a bit of pleasure out of hearing anybody else sing well."—Washington Star.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.

McGinn Block,

Thief River Falls.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More Dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE

236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

[illegible]

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

THE LOOAL NEW

Cal and see as, when yon are read to make your final proof.

We ave a fine farm for sale in Deer ark for township only $21 per ac

S. I. Holmn now has his ferry in gooorder at Highlanding and teamsan be ferryed there at any time.

Reathe annoucement of Congressm Steenerson published in anoth column.

Wo on ditch 58 has been stopp and the mosquitoes have been iting in an inning the past week

Nois the time of year that the votebegina to be flooded wit polial records.

T farmers who takes any intercin who is to be his county offils for the next two years shd go to the primary electioand vote.

pples ure said to be a heavy cr this year and the price will below the reach of a ten foot p.

he weather has been very rm this week, which has been y favorable for the corn and e sown flax.

There has not been wheat ough tnreshed to tell how it rn ont per acre in this locality it the qulity is number one.

Te had rather a warm time dering a wild three year old steer Highlanding yesterday which s the entire printing force and cook.

ter. We delivered the steer to ttle buyer Halvorson and receid his check in payment, and this urning he was at home in his unbeam pasture.

Andrew Nelson started his machine shock threshing on the farm of P. P. Palmer yesterday. Edan Davis, Mrs. Ole Overtum, Alfred Hammersteen, and Wm, Cousins will thresh their grain from the shocks.

Oscar Swanson started np his threshing machine on the furm of M' E. Hyland. In Deer Park township today. There are several farmers in that neighborhood who will thresh out of the shock.

There has been quite a large sum of money paid for young stock in this territory the past two weeks which with the reports from the Highlanding Creamery published in another column would indicate that our farmers had some source of income besides what they seil grain for.

Gunder Evendson living in the town of Kratka died very suddenly on Monday evening, from the effects of alcohol. The county coroner was called out but we did not learn whether he held an inquest or not but he took a sample of the liquor drank down to have it analyzed. The saloon keepers should be careful about to large quantities of that squirrel whisky to farmera.

Anna Connelly, of Thief River Falls, has filed for the office of County Superintendent of Schools. This lady may be qualified for the office, but she will not receive much support from eastern Pennington county. Supt. Mostue is the only candidate for county office from this territory and has worked hard for the interests of the rural schools. He is a man who has made a splended record during the past two years and the voters should unite in giving him their hearty support for a second term. —Eleven Towns.

The Farmers Club Meeting at Kratka last Sunday was well attended by candidates for office. The attendance by farmers were rather light owing to the unfavorable weather. Mr. and Mrs. Slinger assisted by the lady members of the club prepared a very fine lunch which was served in the grove. After dinner W. G. Hunt acted as toast master and several of the candidates present responded to the toast, of why I should be elected to office.

REPORT OF HIGHLADING CREAMERY, FOR JULY.

Pounds of cream rec'd	26997
Pounds of butter fat	7202.9
Average test of cream	26.7
Pounds of butter made	8887.
Pounds of butter shipped	8728
Pounds of butter sold patrons	109
Pounds of butter sold others	50
Price paid per lb. for butter fat	26½c
Pounds of overrun	1684.1
Percent of overrun	23 and 3tenths
Receipts
Bal. from last month	29657
Rec'd for butter shipped	208551
Rec'd for butter sold patrons	25.94
Rec'd for butter sold elsewhere	1249
Rec'd from other sources	1216
	2432.67
Disbursements
Paid patrons by check	1802.02
Paid patrons by butter and milk	33.34
Paid patrons by hauling	12.17
Paid patrons by supplies	.55
Running expen	140.15
Paid into sinking fund	6088
Paid cream haulers	6.83
Paid supplies	2165
Paid state inspector	230
Bal. at end of month	352.78
	2432.67

Names of patrons having checks for $40 or more.

Sjur Stolaas	54.35
T. S. Jacobson	53.20
O. O. Howard	42.10
T. S. Dahle	43.81
J. Quirk	47.00
Olof B. Hanson	69.64
Olof O. Omlid	54.44
Nic Meyers	42.45
Halvor Swenson	50.23
Kaut Ytesund	43.84
H. Waste	45.97
C.J. Eckwold	78.49

Wm. Vaughan.
Sec'y

SUPERINTEDENT OF SCHOOLS.

Paid Advertising.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The undersigned take this means of announcing to the voters of Pennington County that he is a candidate for re-election as Superintendent of Schools subject to the ratification of of the voters there of at the Primary Election to be held on Tuesday, Sept 17th, 1912.

Your vote and support are respectfully solicited.

E. A. Mostue.

Candidate For Sheriff.

I desire to announce to the voters of Pennington county that I will be a candidate for the office of Sheriff, and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primaries, September 17. 1912.

JULIOUS HALVERSON.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

I hereby announce to the voters of Commissioner District No. 5 that I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for County Commissioner of said district at the Republican primaries Sept. 17th. Vote for a man that lives in the eastern part of your territory that will take an interest in getting you roads and bridges.

Lars Lee
sec. 4
Town of Hickory.

FOR CLERK OF COURT.

I hereby announce that am a Republican candidate for the office of Clerk of District Court of Pennington County, and respectfully solicit your vote and support at the primaries to be held on Tuesduy, September 17, 1912.

Youts Truly
E.J. OVERLAND
Thief River Falls.
Minn.

Having received the nomination of the Public Ownership Party for candidate for County Commissioner of the 5th commissioner district, I will, if elected, consider myself at the service of the people and use all my efforts in the interests of the tax payers of Pennington County.

I earnestly solicit the support of the voters at the final election November 5th.

Respectfully
George Lemiers.

COUNTY SURVEYOR

I hereby announce that I am a candidate for the Republican Nomination for County Surveyor, of Pennington County, and solicit your voter and support at the primaries on Sept. 17 1912.

C. H. Martz.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

I hereby announce that I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for County Commissioner of the 5th Commissioner District of Pennington County and solicit your votes at the primary election to be held on September 17th.

A. B. Mandt,
Kratka,
Minn.

ROLAND NEWS.

Threshing is in full blast this week.

Miss Lillie Broin from Hill River is clerk at Roland while Mr. Dahl is at the State Fair this week.

Mrs M. Lillo and Mrs Bourman left for Minneapolis last Friday to take in the State Fair.

Mrs Low Green left for Plummer on Monday where she will teach the fall month of school.

Miss Marie Lindberg is working for Gundersen near Garnes.

Mrs. Con Short spent Sunday with the family of John Olson near Rudell.

The young peoples meeting which was held at Gunder Anderplace Sunday was well attended and all had a good time.

August Lillo made a business trip to Oklee on Saturday.

Misses Carrie and Stella Green left for Red Lake Falls on Monday where they will attend High School.

Miss Tilda Rindal returned to her home near Lillo after working for Dahl this summer.

Mrs. Brekke and daughter Anna from Nilaville came up for a visit with the family of A. W. Brekke near Lillo post-office.

Mrs. James Aldrick returned to her home at Plummer on Friday after a few days visit at the homes of Short and Walker.

Remember when you go to Primary election that the candidate for office who dees not think enough of your vote to ask you for it either by word of mouth, or through the columns of your local paper. Thinks he can get along without your vote. So let him do it.

Uncle Ezra Says

"It don't take more'n a gill uv effort to git folks into a peck of trouble" and a little neglect of constipation, billiousness, indigestion or other liver derangement will do the same. If ailing, take Dr. King's New Life Pills for quick results. Easy, safe, sure, and only 25 cents at All Druggists

Many Driven From Home.

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climate, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles, find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by. All Druggists.

Order Limiting Time to File Claims, and for Hearing Thereon.

ESTATE OF Nettie Cady.

STATE MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF Pennington, IN PROBATE COURT:

In the Matter of the Estate of Nettie Cady Decedent.

Letters of Administration this day having been granted to Henry D. Cady

It is Ordered, that the time within which all creditors of the above named decedent may present claims against his estate in this court, be, and the same hereby is, limited to three (3) months from and after the date hereof; and that Thursday the 14th, day of November 1912, at Ten (10) o'clock A.M., in the Probate Court Rooms at the Court House at Thief River Falls. in said County, be, and the same hereby is, fixed and appointed as the time and place for hearing upon and the examination, adjustment and allowance of such claims as shall be presented within the time aforesaid.

Let notice hereof be given by the publication of this of this order in "THE SUNBEAM" a weekly newspaper, as provided by law

Dated August 9th, 1912

Wilhelm Michelet
(Court Seal) Judge of Probate.

Stanton & Rowberg, Attorneys for Estate, Thief River Falls, Minn.

Easier.

Wilkins—You've never worked a day in your life, have you? Blinkins—No, but I've worked lots of people.

Take One Pain Pill, then Take It Easy.

To Head-Off a Headache

Nothing is Better than

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

They Give Relief without Bad After-Effects

"For four years I was subject to almost constant headache. At times so severe I was unfitted for work. Through the advice of a friend I was persuaded to try Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills and the result has been that I have entirely eradicated my system of those continuous headaches that followed a hard and continuous mental strain."—O. L. Russell, Agt. C. & N. W. Ry., Early, Ia.

For Sale by All Druggists.
25 Doses, 25 Cents.
MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

HOUSE KEEPER WANTED.

I desire to employ the services of a house keeper on my farm in the town of Kratka. Good conveniences and steady employment. Salary $4.00 a week and board. Call on or address,

John Quirk,
Highlanding Minn.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

ANIMAL SUPERSTITIONS.

Chief Among Them in Japan Is the Fear of the Fox.

Chief among Japanese animal superstitions is the fear of the fox, which is believed to have supernatural power. Shrines called "Inari Jinsha," in which the fox is enshrined as a deity, are numberless. The name of the deity written in Chinese characters signifies fox, and from this it came to be generally accepted that the god was really a fox. Its natural cunning is greatly enlarged upon, and it is believed to be capable of misleading and deceiving human beings, which causes many to pray to placate the fox god.

The badger is the next most dreaded animal in the superstitious mind. It is believed to have power to annoy people. Its particular habit being a transformation into a Buddhist priest, in which disguise it is guilty of various deceptions and impositions. The crying of weasels and the baying of dogs are considered evil omens, and such insignificant happenings send a shudder over the believers.

On the other hand, a light colored mouse in the house is a sign of happiness, good omens are presaged by what are considered the pleasant cries of crows in the morning, while the so called unpleasant notes forecast death and other dire disasters. If a spider falls from the ceiling in the morning he brings pleasure, but if at night it is thought reverses will follow. To see a centipede at night means happiness.—Pearson's Weekly.

A POOR TYPE OF CITIZEN

The Good Man Who Lives by and Exclusively For Himself.

I know a certain type of man who poses as a good citizen, says Bert Walker. He breaks no laws, lives morally, pays his honest debts and is never tangled up in lawsuits. But he lives of himself, by himself and for himself only.

When a call is issued for volunteers to take hold of the car of progress and give a lift, he never answers. When calamity has befallen people in a certain locality and charitable humanity flies to their rescue he is never one of their number. When money is needed to gild the spire of public enterprise his name is never on the list. When he sees some neighbor stuck in the mud he goes around to avoid him. In fact, were he standing on the shore and should observe the ship of state fast sinking in the surf, never a life line would be thrown. He didn't bore the hole in the side of the vessel that lets in the water, so it is none of his concern what happens.

But were all mankind made of this kind of clay have you ever thought what would happen? There would be no churches, no hospitals for the sick, no institutions for the unfortunate, no rest rooms for the weary. Civilization would roam in jungles and savagery would rule. He is not a good citizen, but gets mad if you say so.—Kansas City Journal.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.

NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Giteau Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abraham Parquine, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Eleswhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Calalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

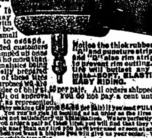
YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).



NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

Victoria Cross Stories

by Allen Stephens

© The Ridgway Co.

IT IS simply a bit of bronze, cast in the shape of a Maltese cross, one and one-half inches in diameter, and worth about nine cents in our money—ribbon included. And yet, up to date, five hundred and fifty-two British subjects have courted what seemed to be certain and sudden death in order that they might wear one of these bits of bronze and become privileged to append the letters "V. C." to their names; and of these, fifteen never lived to enjoy their honors—they died to win.

When Queen Victoria instituted the Order of the Victoria Cross by her Royal Warrant of January 29, 1856, it is more than likely that she was inspired by the immortal Charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava some two years before. At any rate, she felt that a new naval and military order was necessary in order to distinguish those brave men who, by their valor, particularly signalized themselves during the Crimean war.

Nothing save "the merit of conspicuous bravery gives claim for the decoration, and it must be evinced by some signal act of devotion or valor in the presence of the enemy."

It would be a hard matter to decide which particular deed out of the five hundred and twenty-two was the noblest. In fact, in some instances the cross was awarded for a series of gallant actions on the part of a single individual, each act worthy of a V. C. itself. This fact tends to complicate the difficult if not impossible task of making a selection. True, some of the deeds which won a cross have been more spectacular than others. Thus the lancers, hussars, and dragoons who earned a V. C. during the brief but memorable Charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava will, in all probability, be better known to posterity than the civilian clerk "Lucknow" Kavanagh, the brave Irishman who earned a Victoria Cross by his wonderful daring in leaving Lucknow with dispatches and plans, picking his way through a country infested by 60,000 vigilant, murderous Sepoy troopers, that aid might be summoned to the besieged city.

The Indian mutiny was in full swing. Early in 1857 the mysterious chopatis of unleavened bread had been passed from village to village, together with the sinister message, "Everything will become red." Misled by treacherous and designing native princes, the Sepoys had turned upon the English.

Fresh from Hongkong after the news of the outbreak at Meerut, H. M. S. Shannon disembarked a body of bluejackets at Calcutta and all haste was made to the relief of the English garrison at Cawnpore. Sir William Peel, who had gained distinction and a V. C. during the Crimean war, was in command of the bluejackets; and among the latter was one William Hall, a negro captain of the foretop who had seen service in the Crimea.

Pulling their 24-pounders over the rough roads, the naval brigade joined Havelock's relieving column, and every nerve was strained to reach Cawnpore in time, for it was known that about six hundred Europeans were cooped up in the city, including many English women and children.

Cawnpore was reached upon the 16th of July, and a crushing blow dealt the bloodthirsty hosts of the unspeakable Nana Sahib. But the effort was wasted in the main, for scarcely twenty-four hours before, while Havelock's column was within a day's march, the massacre which startled the civilized world had been perpetrated. Four hundred-odd men had surrendered, owing to the blunder of a senile and weak-kneed general, and more than two hundred women and children had been left to the mercies of the fiendish foe under Nana Sahib.

The men of the garrison had been cruelly decoyed to their deaths—wantonly shot down in cold blood after the surrender, several weeks before the arrival of General Havelock and his men. The women and children had been triumphantly inspected by Nana Sahib and then locked up in a gloomy chamber. There they were kept for some time, during which their numbers were swelled by the arrival of fresh prisoners to a total of two hundred and eighteen. The Nana had been in no hurry to slaughter them, but the near approach of the avenging forces hastened his action, and on the 15th of July his edict went forth for the massacre.

The Nana commanded the Sepoys to shoot through the windows into the closely packed masses of women, but even his men, hardened as they were to their leader's atrocities, could not bring themselves to murder the women and children in cold blood. They contented themselves with firing a single volley over their heads. But other less scrupulous instruments were quickly found, and five brutal-looking natives, each armed with a glittering tulwar, entered the crowded chamber and closed the door behind them.

To the listeners outside came the sound of low wailings, of running feet, and the dull thuds of the butchers' swords.

To picture the scene within the room would baffle the imagination of Dante. The mind recoils from a scene at once so hideous and appalling.

The next morning the bodies were [illegible], stripped, and thrown into a [illegible] many the spark of life still lingered, but living and dead were remorselessly cast together into the pit. The horror of it! With Havelock barely a score of miles away!

Scattered like chaff before the wind, the followers of Nana dispersed before the onslaught of the avengers; and upon the afternoon following the battle, the negro Hall and a group of his bluejacket shipmates heard the horrible story as related above, from the lips of a half-caste woman convert who spoke English fluently. Hall and his friends gazed upon the floor of the death-chamber, fully two inches deep with blood and gore and tufts of hair. They noted tulwar gashes in the walls the height of a woman's neck. Then they turned away, sick at heart, but swore to be avenged.

Forty-five miles away another desperate siege was being conducted. At Lucknow, one of the most beautiful cities in India, a handful of Englishmen were holding out against the fierce hordes of Sepoys who hemmed them in on every side.

Havelock set out for Lucknow with the greater part of his force, leaving Cawnpore in charge of Colonel Neill. Among others left behind under Neill were Hall and some of his shipmates. Quite naturally they were furious at not being permitted to accompany the first relief, but it was necessary to leave guns and men to hold Cawnpore.

They relieved the monotony of their situation and vented a part of their pent-up vengeance by forcing a number of high-caste Brahmin prisoners to clean up the blood-stained death-chamber. Men were set over them with whips to see that they did not shirk their task. The Brahmins, thus ceremoniously defiled, were then hanged and buried in a ditch.

As the world knows, General Havelock and his command reached the Residency at Lucknow in due time, after having been obliged to fall back upon Cawnpore by reason of the extreme heat and the dreaded cholera. The gallant Neill was with him when he finally succeeded in cutting his way into Lucknow, but the negro Hall and other bluejackets were not present. Their opportunity was to come later.

Havelock and his men, though strong enough to reinforce the besieged troops in Lucknow and save the English garrison from destruction, were not strong enough to cut their way to safety, hampered with women and children and wounded amounting to 1,500 souls. Thus the siege continued upon a larger scale.

Meanwhile, Sir Colin Campbell had arrived in India. He was to assume the chief command of the forces in India, and his first task was to rescue the garrison at Lucknow. Upon the 9th of November he led an army of five thousand men and thirty guns out of Cawnpore, and among these was the naval brigade under William Peel.

The Sikandarbagh, a formidable-looking structure about 130 yards square and surrounded by a thick brick wall about twenty feet high, was the first nut to crack before Lucknow could be relieved. It sheltered upward of two thousand well-armed Sepoys, who poured a galling fire into the English from the flat roof of a pavilion on top of the structure.

Little could be done until a breach had been made in the wall, so the infantry lay down and sheltered themselves as best they could while the men of the naval brigade dragged their guns up under the wall. Across the deadly zone of bare ground the negro and his shipmates dragged their guns as coolly as if laying alongside an enemy's frigate. Man after man dropped under the cruel fire until each gun was short-handed.

Once up under the wall, the gallant men were in a measure protected, but as the 24-pounders kicked back after each discharge, it became necessary for the men to enter the danger zone to drag them back into position. At each recoil the Sepoys concentrated their fire upon the little detachment, and each discharge cost a human life.

Encouraging his shipmates by his fearless example, the negro was always the first man to dart out of the sheltered angle to drag back his gun. He called upon them to remember the bloody room at Cawnpore. He seemed to bear a charmed life.

After an hour's perilous work, during which the detachment of bluejackets was all but wiped out, the 24-pounders succeeded in hammering a hole in the wall about three feet square. A bugle call sounded. The infantrymen sprang to their feet and rushed at the little hole in spite of the fact that certain death awaited the foremost.

The enemy, having been driven out of the courtyard by the intrepid English aided by the loyal native troops, made for the gateway of the main structure. As they attempted to close the heavy doors behind them, a Punjabi Mohammedan, Mukarrab Khan by name, thrust his left arm between them. As a tulwar nearly severed his hand at the wrist, he withdrew the wounded arm and immediately thrust in the other!

By this time, other men had reached the spot and torn the doors open. For this brave act, Mukarrab Khan was decorated with the Order of Merit, the Indian equivalent of the Victoria Cross.

Meanwhile other serious work had been cut out for William Hall and the other bluejackets, for a thousand yards away, in the direction of the Residency, loomed the frowning outlines of the Shah Najaf, a white-domed tomb, surrounded by high walls of solid masonry. While the Highlanders tore off the roofs of the surrounding huts and drove the Sepoys before them like sheep, other troops were "remembering Cawnpore" while attending to the enemy in the Sikandarbagh, and the naval detachment dragged their guns into position before the Shah Najaf.

A solid shot from the enemy struck a naval ammunition wagon, exploding its contents. Hall, with the blood streaming down his face where a piece of shell had grazed him, stood by his gun and urged his fellow bluejackets on by word and deed.

Throughout the long afternoon the men hammered away at the twenty-foot wall. Gun after gun was abandoned as their crews were shot down, but the negro hero was game to the last. Shortly before dark the commander gave the order to collect the killed and wounded and retire for the night, but Hall had to be peremptorily ordered to retire by his superior before he obeyed.

Meanwhile, Lieutenant Salmon of the naval brigade had climbed a tree and discovered a small aperture in the wall. The enemy saw him and volleyed at him. Badly wounded, he fell into the arms of his men and reported what he had seen. For this brave act he was rewarded with a Victoria Cross.

The English were quick to take advantage of the information, and among the first men to rush the breach was William Hall, wounded, but hacking right and left with his cutlass. Early upon the following morning, the Residency was relieved and a second massacre averted.

In due time, Hall received his Victoria Cross, as both his commanding officers and shipmates were agreed that his gallantry had been the most conspicuous event of a day memorable for its many brave actions.

Hall lived to take part in the bombardment of Alexandria many years later, and was awarded the Egyptian medal and its inseparable companion, the Khedive's Star. With his Crimean and Egyptian medals, his Victoria Cross and Khedive's Star, this brave negro finally retired from service and took up his residence in a small Nova Scotian village, far away from the grim scenes of his early days.

In all, three negroes have been awarded the Victoria Cross: Samuel Hodge and W. J. Gordon of the West Indian regiment, and William Hall of the Royal Navy; and possibly the bravest of these is the white-haired, black ex-captain of the foretop, William Hall, V. C.

Baron Roberts of Kandahar and Waterford has the insignia of the Order of the Garter. It was presented to him by Queen Victoria [illegible] two weeks before her death. When the German Emperor came to London to attend the funeral he was pleased to decorate Lord Roberts with the Order of the Black Eagle. The gallant Irish soldier of Indian nativity has also received the thanks of the British Parliament together with a grant of 100,000 pounds sterling; and is entitled to the letters K. C. B., G. C. B., G. C. I. E., G. C. S. I., and K. P.

Best of all, he is affectionately known to every soldier in the British army as "Bobs." He is also the proud wearer of a Victoria Cross, and the possessor of a second cross for which his only son stained the South African veldt with his life-blood.

The idol of the British army was but a lieutenant when he won his cross in the bloody days of the Indian Mutiny, and at the time was serving on the staff of Sir Colin Campbell, the commander-in-chief of the British forces in India. He had already been mentioned in dispatches, had been wounded, and also knocked over by the "windage" of a round shot.

A column was moving upon Fategarh to restore order through a strip of disordered territory, so that communication might be opened up between the Punjab and Bengal. Riding with the horse artillery and cavalry, "Bobs" came upon a large body of the enemy occupying the village of Khundaganj. It became necessary to dislodge and destroy this force if possible, as it was understood that in the ranks of this particular body of Sepoys were many who had taken a more or less prominent part in the Cawnpore slaughter.

Three guns were pushed across a partly destroyed suspension bridge over a stream. They engaged the enemy while planks were laid across the stringers for the passage of the main body of the column.

Fearful lest Sir Colin Campbell should favor the Highlanders by ordering them to lead, the 53d regiment, composed mostly of impulsive Irishmen, charged the village without waiting for orders. Nothing remained but to support them.

As the yelling troops advanced upon the village calling upon one another to "Remember Cawnpore!" the Sepoys wavered, then hastily limbered up their guns and retired. This gave the mounted troops an opportunity to follow up the retreat and inflict a summary punishment.

"Threes left—trot—march!" came the order.

And with "Bobs" well in the vanguard, the 9th Lancers led the pursuit. When within three hundred yards of the Sepoys the "charge" was sounded, and within another minute came the shock. Seven guns were taken within five minutes.

The line thundered on, overtaking groups of the enemy, who every few moments paused to kneel and fire into the British. Finally the last body was overtaken. The Sepoys halted and fired a volley at close range.

Lieutenant Younghusband, riding near "Bobs", fell; but the future field marshal could not ride to his assistance at that moment, for close by him a Sepoy was attacking one of his men with a fixed bayonet. With a stroke of his saber "Bobs" put the Sepoy out of commission and was about to give his attention to the fallen officer when he saw two Sepoys running away with a regimental standard in their possession.

Putting spurs to his horse, he overtook the mutineers and ran one of them through. He was wrenching the flag out of the hand of the man he had cut down, when the other Sepoy placed the muzzle of his musket close to Roberts' breast, and pulled the trigger. Fortunately for the gallant lieutenant it missed fire, and he lived not only to receive the Victoria Cross from the hands of the Queen at Buckingham Palace in June of 1859, but also to receive from the same hands, some forty years later, a Victoria Cross awarded to his dead son, killed upon the battlefield of Colenso in a desperate attempt to save a battery from falling into the hands of the Boers.

In writing of these heroes of the Cross, it would not be fair to dismiss the subject without mentioning the exploits of Field Marshal Sir George Stuart White, who in 1870 won a cross, and the following year was awarded a clasp in addition, equivalent to a second cross.

White, who succeeded "Bobs" as commander-in-chief in India, became an ensign of the 27th Inniskilling regiment in 1853. Ten years later he became a captain in the famous 92d regiment of Gordon Highlanders. A major in 1879, he and his regiment formed part of the avenging column ordered to Afghanistan to punish the murderers of Cavaguari.

At the battle of Charasiah, with a mere handful of Highlanders, he won his first cross and undying fame by charging a strongly fortified hill. The men in the kilts were outnumbered in the proportion of ten to one; but inspired by their gallant major, they pressed on and captured the position, much to the surprise and satisfaction of General "Bobs."

A year later, during the famous trot of the 10,000 from Kabul to Kandahar, it became necessary to take an Afghan position. A battery of screw guns had been shelling the Afghans for some time without tangible results. Supported by a regiment of fighting Gurkhas, the Highlanders scampered up the hill behind Major White. At the point of the bayonet they drove the Afghans away from their guns; and the first man into the enclosure was the gallant major, who lived to become a field marshal.

Years later, he defended Ladysmith throughout a siege lasting one hundred and ten days, and delighted the British public by his stern refusal to entertain Sir Redvers Buller's suggestion that he surrender to the Boers.

A Picture of Contentment

All men look pleased when they smoke this choice tobacco—for all men like the rich quality and true, natural taste of

Liggett & Myers

Duke's Mixture

Smoked in pipes by thousands of men—everywhere known to smokers as "the makings."

We take unusual pride in Liggett & Myers Duke's Mixture. It is our leading brand of granulated tobacco—and every sack we make is a challenge to all other tobacco manufacturers. Every 5c sack of this famous tobacco contains one and a half ounces of choice granulated tobacco, in every way equal to the best you can buy.

If you have not smoked Duke's Mixture, made by the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. at Durham, N. C., try it now.

Get a Camera with the Coupons

Save the coupons. With them you can get all sorts of valuable presents—articles suitable for young and old; men, women, boys and girls. You'll be delighted to see what you can get free without one cent of cost to you. Get our new illustrated catalog. As a special offer, we will send it free during September and October only. Your name and address on a postal will bring it to you.

Coupons from Duke's Mixture may be assorted with tags from HORSE SHOE, J. T., TINSLEY'S NATURAL LEAF, GRANGER TWIST, coupons from FOUR ROSES (10c tin double coupon), PICK PLUG CUT, PIEDMONT CIGARETTES, CLIX CIGARETTES, and other tags or coupons issued by us.

Address—Premium Dept.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

$3.00 $3.50 $4.00 $4.50 AND $5.00

FOR MEN AND WOMEN

Boys all wear W. L. Douglas $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 School Shoes. Best in the world

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more $3.00, $3.50 and $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world because they look better, fit better, and wear longer than ordinary shoes.

CAUTION.—When you buy shoes be sure W. L. Douglas name is stamped on the bottom. It guarantees protection to you against inferior shoes. Beware of substitutes. W. L. Douglas shoes are sold in 78 own stores in large cities and retail shoe dealers everywhere.

Fast Color Eyelets. Write for Catalog. W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.

To Operate Canal by Electricity.

The Panama canal will be operated almost exclusively by electric power. Approximately seven per cent. of the minimum water supply will be diverted for hydro-electric development, and this will be the excess which is not required for lockages, evaporation and leakage. The hydro-electric station will be located adjacent to the north wall of the Gatun spillway and the plant will have a capacity of 6,000 kilowatts. The average hydraulic head throughout the year will be about 75 feet.

How She Managed It.

"Sarah," said Mr. Jollihoy to his wife, as he finished his breakfast, "I shall not be home to dinner tonight. My old friend Bill Peters is in town."

"Good!" said Mrs. Jollihoy. "That suits me to a T. I'm not going to be home to dinner myself. My old friend George Watkins telephoned me yesterday——"

Both dined at home.—Harper's Weekly.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Without woman man would be rough, rude, solitary, and would ignore all the graces, which are but smiles of love.—François Auguste de Chateaubriand.

A CURE FOR PILES.

Cole's Carbolisalve stops itching and pain—and cures piles. All druggists. 25 and 50c.

Every time a man makes a bluff at paying attention to a woman she begins to look for something in him to reform.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

A man has no use for a woman who attempts to convince him that he is wrong and succeeds in doing it.

Don't Persecute Your Bowels

Cut out cathartics and purgatives. They are brutal, harsh, unnecessary. Try

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Purely vegetable. Act gently on the liver, eliminate bile, and soothe the delicate membrane of the bowel. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Sick Headache and Indigestion, as millions know.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

50,000 FARM LABORERS

wanted to gather immense grain harvest of Western Canada. Exceptionally low rate of one cent per mile can be procured from ticket agents of the Canadian Railway lines at Fort Francis, Gretna, Emerson and North Portal. Rates go into effect on September 1st and will continue for fourteen days.

SOUTH GEORGIA

I would like to tell you something about the best section of the country and the best town in South Georgia. Many Northern and Western people live here. If you want a factory location, a farm or just a home write me fully. I have nothing to sell but want good citizens to come here to live and be happy. A. B. COOK, Mayor of Fitzgerald, Ga., Prest. 3d Nat'l Bank

Pettit's Eye Salve QUICK RELIEF SORE EYES

ACCIDENT IS FATAL

SON OF E. W. BACKUS SUCCUMBS TO INJURY RECEIVED WHILE HUNTING.

TRIPPED OVER A RIFLE.

Twelve Miles From International Falls—Family Had Been in House boat on Rainy Lake.

Minneapolis. — Edward Reymond Backus, who would have been twenty-two years old in September, was killed on the houseboat of his father, E. W. Backus, president of the Backus-Brooks lumber company and Minnesota & Ontario Power company, by tripping over a loaded shotgun on the deck of the boat, both barrels of which were discharged into his body. He died several hours after the shooting. His mother and brother, Seymour Backus, aged 17, and Mr. and Mrs. Mac Martin of Minneapolis, were on the houseboat at the time.

E. W. Backus, his father, was in International Falls. He immediately started up the Rainy river twelve miles to where the houseboat, which had been plying Rainy lake, was anchored. W. F. Brooks of Minneapolis received a message saying that Raymond Backus, as he was intimately called, had been shot, but that he was still alive. This was sent from International Falls. It said that his father had gone up to the houseboat. Mr. Brooks received another message announcing the death of Raymond Backus, and saying that members of the family had returned to International Falls and were making preparations to bring the body to Minneapolis.

General Manager W. H. Gemmill of the Minnesota & International railway, upon learning of the accident, placed his private car at the disposal of the Backus family. The body will be taken to the home of E. W. Backus, 75 Oak Grove street, and the interment will be at Lakewood.

Three years ago he entered Yale and graduated this year with honors in the engineering class. He returned to Minneapolis prepared to enter business with his father in the management of the properties at International Falls with the development of which his father was connected.

ASK SUFFRAGE VIEWS.

Women Want Roosevelt to Take Definite Stand.

Minneapolis. — Theodore Roosevelt will be asked by the Minnesota Woman Suffrage association to include in his state fair address a definite statement of his views concerning woman suffrage. He will be asked to make this statement explicit.

The executive board of the association, at a meeting at the West hotel, decided to request Colonel Roosevelt to discuss woman's suffrage in his address. The board decided against asking him to join in the parade, which is to be a feature of the state suffrage convention during fair week.

"Our action does not mean that the board indorses the Roosevelt candidacy," said Mrs. A. H. Bright. "It means that as a presidential candidate we want him to give his views on the subject. That is all."

Plans for a campaign in the interest of woman suffrage were outlined. A tent is to be pitched on the fair grounds and prominent speakers are to make addresses during the week. The state convention, which meets Sept. 5, in the Minneapolis courthouse, will adjourn at noon and the delegates will leave in decorated autos for the fair grounds. The parade will pass up Third avenue to Tenth street, to Nicollet avenue, down Nicollet and across the river to University avenue and to the fair grounds.

The list of speakers for the fair grounds and the two morning sessions of the convention has not yet been announced. Governor A. O. Eberhart will speak at one of the meetings at the fair grounds. G. F. James of the college of education at the university, will speak at the meeting to be held Sept. 4. Others who will probably address the meetings during fair week are Rabbi Rypins of Chicago, Rev. H. N. Wilson, Grant van Sant and Dr. Thomas McDavitt. The following clubs will each have charge for one day of the headquarters at the fair grounds: The Duluth Political Equality club, the Minneapolis Scandinavian Equal Suffrage Political Equal-Paul and Minneapolis Political Equality clubs.

Caswell Resigns.

Minneapolis. — I. A. Caswell, Republican national committeeman for Minnesota, has resigned. He sent a letter to Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican national committee, tendering his resignation. He made no comment on his action.

Hurled Fifty Feet.

Winona. — A threshing machine boiler explosion on the farm of Guy Ford, three miles southwest of Witoka in this county, resulted in the instant death of Edward Waldo, aged forty, an engineer and the severe scalding of Lynn Higgins, a tank man. More than a dozen farmers and helpers who were near escaped injury by being on the side of the boiler where only escaping steam went. The middle section of the boiler was blown westward fifty feet and went through the roof of a barn, killing a hog.

P. M. RINGDAL

Crookston, Minnesota, has a candidate in the field for the Democratic nomination for governor, in the person of P. M. Ringdal.

GERMAN DAY SUCCESS

15,000 Visitors Crowd New Ulm and Witness Parade.

New Ulm. — German day Sunday proved a fitting climax to a week's celebration commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the Indian massacre. The date was set apart many months ago for the German-American Central society of Minnesota and the Junior Pioneers of New Ulm.

Early in the day thousands of people began pouring into the city. Towards noon the Minneapolis & St. Louis and North-Western railways ran five excursion trains to this place. Each was packed, swelling the crowd to at least 15,000. It was the largest number ever brought here on a Sunday.

At 1 p. m. a grand civic parade, composed of four divisions marched through the principal streets at Hermann Heights, where the program was carried out. Except for the Fort Snelling troops the parade was similar to the one of Wednesday. In addition to six Hermann warriors garbed in the ancient uniform of the Teutons, the Deutscher and Austrian-Hungarian Krieger Verein accompanied by fife and drum corps, were features worthy of note.

The Second Regiment band, St. James Cornet band, Sleepy Eye Cornet band and the St. Paul Cornet band furnished music. German societies from Minneapolis, St. Paul, Mankato, St. James, Le Sueur, Shakopee, Henderson, Hamburg and Young America participated. The Brown county agricultural societies had arranged for horse and motorcycle races and baseball games.

Mayor L. A. Fritche welcomed the visitors and presented a large key to Julius Moersch, president of the German-American Central society. Mr. Moersch, in response, expressed the hope that German customs and traits would be perpetuated by the sons of the Fatherland.

The principal address was made by Albert Pfaender of this city.

Hanns von Gruenw, the German consul in St. Paul, spoke of efforts which should be made to perpetuate friendly relations between Germany and the United States. Edgar Prochelk, the Austro-Hungarian consul, spoke in a similar vein, dwelling upon the close relations between Germany and Austria-Hungary.

TOWER ENTERTAINS

St. Louis County Club Members Enjoy a Day's Outing.

Tower. — On invitation of the local commercial club the St. Louis County Club held a special meeting here Thursday. A large delegation arrived from Duluth and Mesaba range points, a number arriving also by automobiles. The delegates assembled at 1 P. M. at the opera house for a brief business session. They were invited to take a trip on Lake Vermillion and the crowd proceeded to the lake side docks of the various navigation companies and there embarked on the steamers Mary Bell, Olive and Erma D. for a tour of the lakes.

About 150 enjoyed the hospitality of the local club. Bouillon and roast mutton were served in a pavilion at Woodman's point. The party returned to Tower about 9 p. m.

Railway to Go from Bay to Gulf.

Bemidji. — Surveyors are at work in Hubbard county laying out an extension for the Minneapolis & St. Louis and Minnesota & International railroads to connect with a Canadian trunk line on the other side of the border. The work is part of a plan by Newman Erb and his associates to establish railroad connections between the Gulf of Mexico and Hudson Bay.

New Railroad Planned.

Bemidji.—Prospects are Northern Minnesota is to have a new railroad, cutting through Hubbard, Clearwater and Beltrami counties, to connect with a Canadian trunk line, according to the plans of Newman Erb as discovered by farmers in the Mallard district of Hubbard county, who have talked with men in automobiles who are outlining and surveying for the proposed Minnesota and International extension. As now planned the road would cut across the northern end of Itasca and a new town at this point is [illegible]

SIX BUILDINGS ARE STRUCK

TWIN CITIES AND NORTHWEST VISITED BY HEAVY RAIN.

Communications Are Cut and Threshing Further Delayed.

Minneapolis. — Six different places were struck by lightning, an excursion party on the Mississippi river was thrown into a panic, telegraph and telephone wires were more or less affected, and theater-goers and others belated were soaked as the result of a severe electrical shower which swept over the Twin Cities.

But far more severe, according to meager reports, were the effects of the storm in the vicinity of New Richmond, Wis., and the Red River valley. Telegraph and telephone wires were down in that territory and the service was poor, but a few reports which reached the Twin Cities stated that the threshing was probably delayed for at least a week.

Storm Breaks at 10 O'clock.

The storm burst upon Minneapolis, and St. Paul as well about 10 o'clock, and for a few moments, its fury was supreme. Sheets of rain swept the streets, and flash upon flash of vivid lightning came in close succession, while the thunder, for about 15 minutes, seemed to be everywhere. The mercury took a sudden slide downward, but only descended four to five degrees.

Later, after the storm had departed, or at least its fury had, the mercury began to climb upwards, and at midnight was two degrees higher than the mark to which it descended during the storm.

MAY SIGN PETITION.

May Help Get Presidential Electors on Ticket.

St. Paul. — That voters at the primary may also sign petitions for presidential electors to be placed on the ballot, is held in an opinion by Attorney General Smith. The new primary law states that any one who has voted in the primary election cannot sign a petition to place candidates on the general election ballot, but the attorney general holds that this does not apply to presidential electors.

"Nominees for presidential electors were not voted for at the primaries this spring, and are not to be voted upon at the primaries to be held September 17," ruled Attorney General Smith. "The primaries held in the spring were to elect delegates to county conventions and county conventions elected delegates to the state convention and the state conventions nominated the presidential electors. A delegate to a convention has the power of independent action and occupies a position very similar to a representative in the Legislature.

"The delegates to the county convention were the electors of the delegates to the state convention and the members of the state convention nominated the presidential electors.

"The participation of a person in a primary by casting a nonpartisan ballot does not affect his right to sign petitions for the nomination of presidential electors. It must be borne in mind that this opinion is based wholly upon the fact that the primary election law excludes presidential electors from its operation."

The number of petitioners necessary to put upon the official ballot a candidate for a state office, cannot exceed 4,000, Mr. Smith ruled, but must be at least 2,000.

CLOTHES OF BATHERS

All Burn When Camp Is Destroyed by Fire.

Albert Lea. — Harold Remore, Glen Thompson and Roy Whitcomb, all of Northwood, were placed in an embarrassing position while camping on the banks of the Cedar river, when their camping tent, three valuable watches and every stitch of clothing burned while they were bathing.

After wandering around, shivering and being eaten by mosquitoes, hoping in vain for someone to come to their rescue one of them, dressed in Garden of Eden clothes, went to the nearest farm house where he telephoned for assistance.

W. L. Thompson and Arthur Gerdner of that place took an auto and clothing, arriving at the camp before dark. The origin of the fire which destroyed their camp is a mystery.

GIRL ENDS LIFE

She Recently Attended a Summer School in St. Paul.

Duluth. — Miss Elizabeth Sjostrom, the twenty-year-old daughter of Andrew Sjostrom, a well known farmer of Barnum, ended her life by hanging herself to a tree. She only recently returned from St. Paul, where she had been attending a summer school. No reason is known for the act. In a note she only said "Good-bye." and gave no clue as to the cause.

OFFICER IS OUSTED

O. F. Collier Succeeded by C. E. Bornbach as Treasurer.

Duluth. — O. F. Collier who was imperial treasurer of the Modern Samaritans, was ousted from office at a meeting of the imperial council, and C. E. Bornbach elected to his place. The action is the outcome of a war for control within the order, the leaders of the factions being John [illegible] head of the order, and Mr. Collier. Other officials who sided with [illegible] [illegible]

AWFUL.

The Listener—That fellow plays the cornet to beat the band.

The Musician—That's right; he can't keep time.

ECZEMA IN RED BLOTCHES

205 Kanter Ave., Detroit, Mich.—"Some time last summer I was taken with eczema. It began in my hair first with red blotches, then scaly, spreading to my face. The blotches were red on my face, dry and scaly, not large; on my scalp they were larger, some scabby. They came on my hands. The inside of my hands were all little lumps as though full of shot about one-sixteenth of an inch under the skin. Then they went to the outside and between and all over my fingers. It also began on the bottoms of my feet and the calves of my legs, and itch, oh; my! I never had anything like it and hope I never will again. The itching was terrible. My hands got so I could scarcely work.

"I tried different eczema ointments but without results. I also took medicine for it but it did no good. I saw the advertisement for a sample of Cuticura Ointment and Soap and sent for one. They did me so much good I bought some more, using them as per directions, and in about three weeks I was well again. Cuticura Soap and Ointment entirely cured me." (Signed) Benj. Passage, Apr. 8, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

Proof.

Mrs. Casey (sitting up in bed)—Mike, did yez put out the cat?

Mr. Casey—Oi did.

Mrs. Casey—Oi don't belave it!

Mr. Casey—Well, if yez think Oi'm a liar, get up and put 'er out yerself.

SYMPATHY, BUT NO APOLOGY

Lawyer's Tart Remarks Not Greatly Softened by His Rejoinder When "Called Down."

Andrew Lipscomb, who practices law before the courts of Maryland, was trying his first case before a judge named Merrick. Lipscomb, wishing to impress the judge, was, in the language of the bar, right tippy in his remarks to the eminent gentleman. Finally, Merrick lost patience and exclaimed:

"Sit down! Sit down, sir! If you don't sit down I'll fine you for contempt of court."

Lipscomb sat down, but turned to a young lawyer beside him, and remarked, in an undertone:

"That's the crustiest, most opinionated old judge I ever saw. I'll show him where he gets off. He's an old fool."

"If you talk like that, I'll beat up up!" replied the young lawyer. "He's my father!"

"How sad!" said Lipscomb, smoothly. "How sad."—Popular Magazine.

A Booklet for Investors.

The Harris Trust and Savings Bank, Harris Trust Building, Chicago, has issued a booklet entitled "Why Bonds Are Safe Investments," intended for the use of persons planning to invest in bonds for the first time. Its aim is to explain in simple terms the purposes and uses of various classes of bonds, and to indicate the value of bonds as safe investments for individuals as well as institutions. Copies may be had free on application.

Saving Trouble.

"Have you read the platforms of the different political parties?"

"What's the use wastin' time doin' that?"

"I should think you would want to find out how to vote intelligently."

"How to vote intelligently? My grandfather found that out years ago, so what's the use of my botherin' about it?"

A very successful remedy for pelvic catarrh is hot douches of Paxtine Antiseptic, at druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet, Co., Boston, Mass.

Stanley in the Arabian Nights.

Morgiana poured oil on the forty thieves.

"They will be worth more after they are dissolved," she cried.—New York Sun.

CURES BURNS AND CUTS.

Cole's Carbolisalve stops the pain instantly. Cures quick. No scar. All druggists, 25 and 50c.

Lucky Woman.

Wife—There are so very few really good men in the world.

Hub—Yes; you were mighty lucky to get one.

NERVOUS DESPONDENT WOMEN

Find Relief in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Statements So Testify.

Platea, Pa.—"When I wrote to you first I was troubled with female weakness and backache, and was so nervous that I would cry at the least noise, it would startle me so. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies, and I don't have any more crying spells. I sleep sound and my nervousness is better. I will recommend your medicines to all suffering women."—Mrs. MARY HALSTEAD, Platea, Pa., Box 98.

Here is the report of another genuine case, which still further shows that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be relied upon.

Walcott, N. Dakota.—"I had inflammation which caused pain in my side, and my back ached all the time. I was so blue that I felt like crying if any one even spoke to me. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I began to gain right away. I continued its use and now I am a well woman."—Mrs. AMELIA DAHL, Walcott, N. Dakota.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine is that of Therapion, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it seems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say, miraculous cures, should send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. LeClerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng. and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 is what they require and have been seeking in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness. Therapion is sold by druggists or mail $1.00 [illegible] Co., 90 Beekman St., New York.

"Bull" Durham Smoke Curls Up from Millions of Pipes and Cigarettes

Every year for over 52 years the number has increased. Every day new smokers discover "Bull" Durham.

There is something about it that all smokers hanker for, whether for the friendly pipe or rolled into a "Bull" Durham cigarette. Nothing else seems to satisfy the man who once tries

GENUINE
"BULL DURHAM
SMOKING TOBACCO

Forty "rollings" in each 5c muslin sack

The flavor that has pleased three generations—that is still pleasing millions of smokers—is the pure, wholesome, natural "Bull" Durham flavor, unchanged by manufacturing processes. There is nothing artificial about "Bull" Durham. It contains no coloring, no dressing, no adulterants of any kind. It comes to you in the plain muslin sack just as generous Nature made it.

Try this grand old tobacco today. See for yourself why so many million men prefer it—why men smoke more of it than of all other high-grade tobaccos combined. See why they go on smoking it year after year—and will not be satisfied with anything else.

Sold by practically every tobacco dealer in the U. S.

A book of "papers" free with each 5c muslin sack.

Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co.

The Corrector of Destinies

Being Tales of Randolph Mason as Related by His Private Secretary, Courtland Parks

The Copper Bonds

By Melville Davisson Post

Copyright by Edward J. Clode

I knew that Jean Balduc was from the far north the moment Pietro brought him in from the door. There is a close-sitting air of the provinces on all those who come from there into New York. The smartest tailors, the most Parisian modistes cannot dislodge it. It is the atmosphere of his own land minted into the man, lying deeper than the cut of his coat. I put Jean Balduc up in British America—his big, lank, hard body belonged in the open, a rugged, roomy, primeval open. His light blue eyes were from remote spruce forests reflected on the glimmering snow-crust. His hair was that blue-black which the French carried for violent contrast into the white north. His manner and speech were abrupt and direct.

He demanded an audience with Randolph Mason. I tried first to get a little history out of the big fellow from which to determine the advisability of such an audience. I got only a few craggy fragments. He had come to New York to even up a score with Barnsfield, the copper emperor on Broadway.

He wished to get at the man within the purlieus of the law, if such a thing was possible. If not, he knew another way, very common in his country and direct—and, if not productive of monetary results, at least the balm of Gilead to one's injured sensibilities. He had some other business to settle with Barnsfield (not his own affair), which would require dancing-steps and truce flags; but, when that was cleaned up and ended, it would be the Indian cheek on the stock of the Winchester and all white flags down.

I took him to Randolph Mason, and he told his story, walking up and down the length of the room and driving, now and then, his clenched right hand into the palm of his left for emphasis. He was from Huron county on the south shore of Lake Superior. Earlier he had come from the Jacques Cartier river in the Dominion. He had been a factor in the affairs of Huron county; he knew every man, woman and child in it, every tract of land, every nook and corner of it. Three years before he had made a house-to-house, man-to-man canvass of the county for treasurer, and got it, with a majority to spare. He had gained, too, the good-will of the people, their confidence and their hospitable friendship. Then, like the locusts of Biblical record, came the emissaries of Barnsfield to purchase the mineral rights under all the lands in the county.

It was not known that there was any copper in Huron county. Indeed, eminent geologists and practical prospectors had long agreed that the county was barren. These emissaries of Barnsfield explained that he was not misled about the sterility of the land. He knew that he was paying out good money for worthless rock, clay and gravel; but his plan was to corrupt the prospecting engineer of the Great Lakes Railroad company—have him secretly report to the company the existence of copper in this county. Then he, Barnsfield, would come generously forward and offer to transfer to the railroad the entire mineral rights of the county, provided the company would build a line through it to his wharf at Plymouth on the south shore of Lake Superior. This would enable him to load ore from the known copper regions directly on cars from the lake boats at Plymouth, and shorten the haul to his market by two hundred miles.

This story was gladly swallowed by the natives. They hoped for the coming of a railroad into the county, as the advent of a sort of commercial Messiah. Once or more they had voted large bond subscriptions to lure in such an enterprise, but it was of no avail. Lake Superior remained the only path of commerce.

In a few months these agents had obtained the mineral rights of almost the entire county. A few land-owners along the lake held out against them, and finally, after exhausting their ingenuity, Barnsfield's men came to Jean Balduc for assistance. They explained that these land-owners were blocking the prosperity of the whole people. The only chance of an iron highway to the south was being elbowed out.

Balduc said he would go to these men and induce them to join in the sale, if he were assured from headquarters that the railroad plan would be carried through. They took him to Duluth, and to Barnsfield. He had the plan from Barnsfield's mouth. He was shown maps and profiles of the proposed route, elaborate plans and specifications of a great wharf and warehouses which Barnsfield expected to build at Plymouth when the railroad came, drawings for an addition to the town—indeed, all the paper details for a city. Balduc was introduced to the engineer of the Great Lakes Railroad company and read his report.

Barnsfield talked very frankly. His plan was not philanthropic. He would get back his money in a year from lessened shipping rates from the lakes. At present, his ore was at the mercy of one line; a rival would mean competition and a fair tariff; it would make his town of Plymouth a commercial [illegible] the lake, and this would [illegible] profits to him. He did not want Jean Balduc's assistance for mere good-will. He was quite willing to pay a thousand dollars for each land-owner whom Balduc could induce to sell, the money to be paid when his deeds were made to the railroad company. The strength of the plan lay in having the entire county in shape for direct transfer to the Great Lakes railroad. So large a bait could not fail of success, nor was there any moral wrong in foisting these worthless mineral rights on the company. The directors of it were notorious land thieves; a hair-shirt was due them.

Jean Balduc was convinced and elated. He would gladly have lent his aid to the scheme without compensation, out of interest in the people of the county; but here was Barnsfield about to reap enormous sums from the venture, and he might as well have the money which was offered. They agreed, then, that Barnsfield should pay him one thousand dollars for every land-owner who made a deed for the mineral rights under his land, the money to be paid when the transfer was made by Barnsfield to the Great Lakes Railroad company. There were thirty-four of these men.

Balduc's popularity, the reputation he had established with the people and his prestige as county treasurer gave weight to his words. He went back to his people, assured them that he had investigated Barnsfield's plan and that it would certainly be carried out. He had seen the very surveys for the road, the estimates, the profiles. Finally he secured the deeds of nineteen of these recalcitrant land-owners. The others could not be induced to sell. Barnsfield marked their names off his list, expressed himself satisfied with the matter and put all his deeds to record. The county, now at the gateway of its fortunes, rejoiced. A great mass meeting was held in the court house; a vote of thanks was awarded Jean Balduc; he was carried to his home on the shoulders of his admiring fellows; tar-barrels were burned on the hills; horses were paraded; the local papers ran their election roosters and eagles.

Then came the gray morning, and the gradual rising of the sun. The minions of Barnsfield vanished. Months passed, and no engineer of the Great Lakes railroad sighted his transit into Huron county. No carts were trundled across her rivers, no Italian came to make a footpath for the iron beast; but, instead, a little man in spectacles arrived from Marquette and staked out a shipping wharf at Plymouth for the Lake Shore Steamship company. To inquiries he replied that Barnsfield wished to take the copper out of Huron county, and the steamship company must have a wharf from which to load it. Copper! The county sat literally with its jaws agape. But was this merely another subterfuge of Barnsfield? It was not. A little later a well-known superintendent from the regular mining region came with workmen and uncovered the copper-bearing strata. It was copper territory! The whole county richer than the Indies!

Jean Balduc stopped here in his narrative, drew down the muscles of his face until his eyes narrowed to pale slits. He crushed and ground the flaps of his coat pockets in his big hands. His mind was evidently crammed with incidents—vivid, crowding incidents: A flood of indignation poured over Jean Balduc. He was cursed, waking and sleeping, as with a Roman anathema. Even Barnsfield, chuckling in his den in New York, goaded him. He would pay the nineteen thousand dollars when the deeds were transferred to the Great Lakes Railroad company—if he were living then.

Exile was the only solution. Jean Balduc determined to close up his affairs as treasurer of the county, come to New York, collect from Barnsfield the twenty-eight thousand dollars which he owed Huron county for taxes on his mineral rights, transfer it to the county, and then settle his own affair with Barnsfield. After that, if he got away, he would go back to the Jacques Cartier river; but he would likely not get away.

"Have you seen Barnsfield?" said Randolph Mason.

"Yes," replied the man; "I went to him yesterday to collect these taxes, and he tried to beat me even on that. He was hard up, he said, he had no ready money; but he would give me bonds of the Empire Copper company if I would take these bonds at par and turn over the tax receipts to him. I refused, and he asked me to come back today at one o'clock."

Randolph Mason turned to me. "What are these bonds worth?" he said.

"They are not listed on the stock exchange," I answered; "but there is a curb market for them at seventy-five cents."

Randolph Mason walked over to the window and stood looking out at the heavy snow-flakes driving against the glass. The big northerner waited, but Mason remained motionless, his hands behind him. Finally, the man took up his hat and put it on.

"Well," he said, "is there any trail [illegible]

"Sit down, you puffy varmint," he said.

Mason turned abruptly. "Go back to Barnsfield," he said, "and take his bonds at par for the taxes. Mr. Parks will accompany you and write into the tax receipts that these taxes are paid in full by the delivery to you of the bonds, setting out the number and denomination, as you receive them. Give Barnsfield the receipts, and come back to me."

The man was aghast. "Why, sir," he said, "you cannot mean that! I would be a damned fool to do that. The county would be losing ten thousand dollars to take the bonds at par."

"Obey me," said Randolph Mason, and he turned back to the window.

"All right," said the big fellow; "you're the doctor. What you say goes, but it certainly does sound damn fool."

I went with him to Barnsfield. We crossed the snow-clad street, walked in under a gigantic granite arch and took a steel cage to the twenty-fourth floor. A limp youth led us to the copper magnate in a wing of the building above Broadway. Barnsfield was inclined a little to display in his setting. There was a silk Oriental rug on the floor, on the walls were rare prints, with here and there a gross imitation of a master. Barnsfield evidently took his art as prescribed by the foreign agents. The only table in the room was a huge piece of shining mahogany heavy with carvings in atrocious taste, the sort of thing which the full pocket gets when it leaves its selection to the dealer. Behind it was Barnsfield. I got the impression of something cold and pudgy, when I looked at him. A like impression awaits the spectator before the glass box at the end of the line in the National Aquarium at Naples—a deep-sea thing in a nest of weeds.

He was a tall man, fattened out of shape, fat crowding his eyes back, distending his jowls, sagging his chin, His hair was light and thin, brushed smooth to his poll. His eyes were dull, the eyes which Victor Hugo warned against, the cloudy eyes covering mines, rifle-pits, trenches manned with cannon shotted to the muzzle and the fuse smoking. A fat hand, illuminated by a great Kafir diamond, flopped about on the mahogany table. He showed no apparent interest at the arrival of Balduc, but he was a bit uneasy over me. His fingers wandered to an electric button, the nails scratching the rim of it.

"Mr. Barnsfield," began Balduc, "I came back about those taxes."

Barnsfield looked inquiringly at me. "Yes," he said. He wished to know who I was before his answers became more than monosyllabic.

"That's my lawyer's secretary," said Balduc. "I have concluded to take your chips and whetstones. They are better than nothing; but I want Mr. Parks to look at them."

The explanation cleared Barnsfield's face. If Balduc was bringing Huron county up to be quietly sheared of ten thousand dollars, a lawyer's secretary, merely to examine the wording of the bonds, was a detail to be pleased over. He dived down into the drawers of his desk, fished out a package of bonds and laid them on the table.

"Good five per cent [illegible]," he said, "secured by [illegible] on all the copper properties in the county, including plants, tram-roads and improvements to be hereafter made. In six months they will be worth a hundred and twenty."

I looked carefully at the bonds. They were in the usual form of such securities, printed on bank-note paper, with a picture on the back of a huge copper pot, tipped over, pouring out a stream of gold pieces. They were of a first issue of the Empire Copper company, limited to a million dollars, and in denominations of one thousand. I smiled at the confidence of Barnsfield. There were exactly twenty-eight of these in the pack. He had pinned them up for Balduc.

Barnsfield patted the bundle of securities with his fat hand. "There are the bonds," he said; "now give me the tax receipts signed by you as treasurer."

Balduc took a big leather pocket-book from his coat and handed me the tax receipts. I wrote into them, "Paid this day by the delivery to the treasurer of Huron county of twenty-eight bonds of the Empire Copper company, numbered three hundred and fifty to three hundred and seventy-seven inclusive." Then Balduc signed them and handed them over to Barnsfield.

He placed the package in a pigeon-hole of his desk, and came up from behind it transfigured. The chill in the air was gone; the hidden ice-floes were melted; the low-lying fogs were golden in the sun. He had not imagined that the thing could be done so easily. He had looked for long wrangling, delays, a siege. It was like the answer to prayer put into one's hands while they were still clasped. One ought to go wreathed in smiles when events waited at one's beck so courteously.

He chortled softly in his throat when he was well back into his chair, and beamed on us; then he talked. He was glad to see Jean Balduc again, pleased to meet me. He was athirst for news from the copper land, aching with wonder about the inexplicable delay of the Great Lakes railroad in building its line. It was his dearest, most closely cherished hope to see the citizens of Huron county wax rich from the development which he intended should be made on the south shore of Lake Superior. He hinted vaguely at large good fortune which the future held for Balduc, a future of which he, Barnsfield, was in some esoteric way the directing overlord. He wanted a long, intimate, personal talk with Balduc. He must come that night with him to dine, and I, too; he especially wished me to come. I had found favor in his sight. There would be only the three of us—his family was in Florida. It would be an informal, friendly dinner.

I looked to see the deep fires in Jean Balduc break through; but he accepted the invitation on the spot for the two of us at eight o'clock that evening.

Barnsfield lighted us to the door with smiles, and there we left him, kneading his pudgy hands and thanking Providence that the human game, like no other, lacked instinct to protect it.

We went back to the office without a word. Randolph Mason looked at the bonds, and then directed me to go out and sell them for what I could get. I sold the bonds on the curb for seventy-five cents on the dollar and got the cash in large bills. Randolph Mason handed this money to Jean Balduc and told him to go back to the Jacques Cartier river. The man was puzzled and angry. Was this all that Mason could do—cause him to collect the taxes of Huron county at a loss of some nine thousand dollars, embezzle the money and hide out for the rest of his life? He could do better than that. The open way of the great north was a better one. He would send the money to Huron county; then he would go to Barnsfield's little informal dinner and square the account with him.

I came forward then, and begged Mason to explain what he meant by his plan. As the matter stood, Balduc could not do even as he himself suggested. He could not send the money to Huron county, and leave New York clear. The sum he had lacked nine thousand dollars of paying the taxes. He had surrendered and receipted for the taxes in full, twenty-eight thousand dollars. If he sent back nineteen thousand, he would be instantly charged with theft of the other nine. Explanations would hardly avail him. He would certainly be extradited and imprisoned.

Randolph Mason went over to a bookcase, got down a volume of Reports of the State of Michigan, and sat down with it between the two of us as a tutor might do with puzzled little boys. He read the case, marking with his finger in the book, very carefully to us. I saw instantly the intent of his plan, but he went on, explaining in lucid detail the effect of it on Balduc, on Barnsfield, on Huron county, the equities which it adjusted, the necessity of government which it imposed, the penalties which it evaded, and the ancient, correct, accurate doctrine of law upon which this decision of the Michigan courts is founded.

The tension in Jean Balduc's big body relaxed, the pressure in his face ebbed. He understood the whole scheme to the end now. I do not know of any emasculated language which could give the force and directness of Balduc's own words. He got slowly to his feet, stretched out his arms, filled his big lungs. "By God," he said, "you have got the fat thief on the cross!"

Then he turned to me. "Mr. Parks," he went on, "I suppose you despised me down to the ground when I agreed to eat with that puffy-throated viper; but I only wanted to get a last chance at him, to tell him what I thought of him, and then to jam his head on the table among his pots. We will go up there tonight, you and I. We will show him how he has caught his own legs in his man-trap. I will tell him some things which he needs to hear; but we will not eat with him. If I were starving in the snow-drifts of Hudson bay, and he came to find me with a load from the company store, I would not eat with him. I would eat; but I would kill him first."

Barnsfield, like every parvenu, wished to point out for our admiration all the treasures in his hideous, showy palace before we went in to dinner. The place might have been the storehouse of Kidd in the golden days of the Spanish Main. A carved wood ceiling from some chateau in Normandy, a marble vase from Sardinia, new Italian bronzes, old Dutch chairs mingled with Chippendale, Hepplewhite, and atrocious things in gilt, tables of the empire beside colonial consoles, Moorish corners with old arms, rugs, banners—all the indiscriminate loot of a barbarian with money-sacks.

I admired with discrete and evasive generalities. Balduc said nothing and finally we went in to dinner. I had not seen its like, except at Thanksgiving in a New England farm-house. A turkey on his golden back in a huge platter, a saddle of mutton, trussed fowls, food enough for a ship's crew piled hot and steaming on the biggest table in New York.

We sat down, and Barnsfield put his hands on the tablecloth, closed his puffy eyes, and made ready to invoke a blessing on his house.

Jean Balduc spoke then. "Mr. Barnsfield," he said, "I am sick."

Barnsfield sprang up, got a decanter of brandy from a sideboard and set it down by Balduc. "There," he said, "that'll fix you."

"No," said Balduc, "nothing will do me any good but to get outside in the air."

Barnsfield started toward a door. "Come right here," he said, "on this balcony."

Balduc got up then. "No," he said, "I will go out into the street with Mr. Parks; but, before I go, I want to hand you this six hundred dollars that I owe you," and he took a roll of bills from his waistcoat pocket and laid them on the tablecloth.

Barnsfield saw instantly that some climax had arrived, but what he did not know. He came back and sat down in his chair.

"What do you mean?" he said.

"I mean," replied Balduc, "that I got only nineteen tracts of land for you in Huron county, so you owe me just nineteen thousand dollars. You paid me today, nineteen thousand, six hundred, which was six hundred too much."

Barnsfield's face began to pale. "I don't understand," he said. "I paid the taxes to you. I gave you twenty-eight bonds for them and got the receipt. I did not pay you; I paid the taxes."

"Yes," said Balduc, "you thought you paid the taxes; but you didn't. You paid me. The bonds brought nineteen thousand, six hundred dollars. I give you back the six hundred now, and our account is square."

Barnsfield got up. "I paid the taxes," he said. "I got the tax receipts."

"No," said Balduc, "taxes can only be paid in money. That's the law. You can't pay taxes with property. Your tax receipts are not worth hell-room. They acknowledge the payment in bonds."

Barnsfield turned to me. "What's all this rot?" he said.

I got up then, and walked around the table. "What Mr. Balduc has said," I answered, "is quite true. Taxes can be paid only in money. If one owing taxes delivers property to the tax-officer for them, he does it at his own risk. He does not thereby pay his taxes. If the tax-officer keeps the property, the other must repay the taxes in money. The state accepts only money for taxes."

"It's embezzlement of taxes," cried Barnsfield. "If I have to repay them, he'll have to go to the penitentiary!"

"No," I said, "it is not embezzlement of taxes. It is not any crime at all, for the reason that the tax-officer is authorized to collect only money. He has no authority to receive property. Property, if delivered to him, is at its owner's peril. He is not chargeable with embezzlement if he appropriates this property to his own use, nor are his bondsmen liable for it, because they guarantee only a proper accounting of money which the officer receives as taxes."

Barnsfield jumped up and started toward a little telephone at the corner of the sideboard. Balduc darted across the room, smashed the telephone with his knuckles and confronted Barnsfield.

"Sit down, you puffy varmint," he said. "Into your chair with you!" And, seizing the man by the shoulders, he whirled him around and forced him down into his chair. Balduc stood over him a moment, his fingers working with restrained savagery. His jaws clamped; his eyes narrowed to a thin line of blue. Then he turned to me. "Let us go," he said, "before I tramp the creature's face out of shape on the floor."

We left Barnsfield, wheezing with excitement, his breath gone and his fat hands webbling about on the arms of his chair.

In the street, Balduc took a deep breath and shook himself like a dog coming out of a slime-vat. "I had to get out of there," he said, "or kill him. Good-by. If you ever need a slave with steel fingers, send word of it to Jean Balduc on the Jacques Cartier river," and he was gone.

I took a hansom to the Dresden for a little dinner.

For the legal principle involved in this story see People vs. Seeley, 117 Mich., 263; 75 N. W. R., 609.

A collector of taxes can receive nothing but money in payment of taxes. If he receive property in lieu thereof and appropriate it to his own use, he is not guilty of embezzlement, and his bondsman are not liable.—People v. Seeley, supra. A collector of taxes can receive nothing but money in payment of taxes.—Miller v. Wesener, 45 W. Va., 59.

[illegible] Reporter

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1912. NO. 25.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY,

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Tale of Treasure Trove; Hans Sure Was a Bird

NEW YORK.—Here is a tale of treasure trove. Not the treasure trove of pirates bold, but a yarn of the sea, just the same.

The good ship Cincinnati set sail at one o'clock the other afternoon from her pier at Hoboken.

On the second class deck at the rail stood a comely German woman. She was Mrs. Anna Luepp of Wilkesbarre, Pa. On the dock stood Rudolph, her husband. Fifteen years ago they came to this country, and by their thrift and industry amassed a snug income, and now the wife was returning for a visit to the home of her girlhood. Their happy union had not been blessed with any branches of the family tree.

Longing for prattling babes at the hearth, they compromised on the adoption of a green parrot. They called the big bird Hans, and that he is a bird, all right, all right, you shall see.

Mrs. Anna couldn't think of parting with Hans, so it was decided that she would take Hans across the sea. As she stood at the rail, a wet handkerchief in her right hand, she swung Hans over the rail in a newly gilded cage.

"Goodby, papa," she cried, and waved to Herr Leupp.

"Goodby, papa," repeated Hans, who talks English with a slight German accent.

As they were about to cast off the stern line, Frau Anna got mixed in her gesticulations. Her right hand was raised to her eyes to dash the tears away. She forgot that she held the parrot, and disengaged her left hand from the cage to help her right hand out. With fluttering feathers and indignant screams Hans went tumbling to the dock in his gilded cage.

"Donner and blitzen!" yelled the enraged bird.

Two longshoremen put a pole through the ring in the top of the cage and hoisted it to a porthole.

"Donner und blitzen!" yelled the bird again as the cage was dented in against the ship's side. "Pretty Hans," cooed Frau Leupp, stretching forth her hands.

"Pretty h——!" returned the pious bird. "Donner und blitzen! Goodby, papa! Goodby papa!"

"Goodby, Hans," shouted Rudolph. "Goodby, Mamma."

John Yonker Is Official Neighborhood Chaperon

THAT ROUGH NECK COTTON HEAD KOHN TRIED TER KICK ME SLATS IN AN' STUCK HIS KNOB IN ME LAMP

CHICAGO.—Hamilton park, one of the prettiest public playgrounds on the extreme south side, claims among its other attractions a model policeman. His name is John Yonker, and all the boys and girls of that section of the city swear by him. A policeman who is popular among children has a pretty good certificate of efficiency.

Although nominally a patrolman, Yonker really has half a dozen other jobs. He is arbiter in chief of all the youngsters' disputes of the neighborhood, director general of their sports and umpire and court of last resort to their games. But the job which requires the most tact and diplomacy and which has won him his chief fame is that of official neighborhood chaperon.

Rules of the park require that no children remain there after 9 o'clock in the evening. It is Yonker's duty to see that this is enforced. The business of getting children to go home to bed is a delicate one, but Yonker succeeds at it without exciting enmity.

There are six baseball diamonds at Hamilton park. On a Saturday afternoon teams of boys are playing all day on these diamonds. Yonkers presides over these activities. He knows the baseball rules as well as Johnny Evers, and when a dispute arises that proves too much for the boys Yonkers settles it by the hook.

Incidentally, Yonker is a bureau of information. He answers a thousand questions a day. How he stands it without becoming a confirmed grouch no one knows.

Pop Bottle Answers to "Oh, You Beautiful Doll"

DETROIT, MICH.—To inculcate music into unresponsive souls of some of the folks of Cork town is a thankless, if not hopeless task, as Louis Fuchs, who plays the bass fiddle in the German band experienced the other night.

There he was, and his four fellow artists poured forth their sweetest strains at Sixth and Abbott streets.

With dreamy eyes Fuchs had just finished the intricate movements of Mascagni's immortal Intermezzo and had with ecstatic mien gone into the depths of Beethoven's divine Moonlight Sonata, when shouts of derision unnerved his aesthetic ear. Even that brilliant little musical gem, "Oh, You Beautiful Doll," which is said to have moved Mozart to tears even in his grave, struck an unresponsive chord in that unmusical crowd.

And when the little fellow with the second fiddle passed the hat, he collected jeers instead of shekels.

Truly, the lot of a wandering minstrel is a thankless one in this twentieth century.

The orchestra moved away, seeking more congenial audiences.

Just then somebody hurled a pop bottle. It struck Louis Fuchs' bass violin in its vital part, smashing it in the region of the bridge.

There was an uproar in a minute. Orpheus soothed and tamed the wild beasts with his lyre, but to calm this crowd with even a hand organ was quite impossible. And so the street artists beat a hasty retreat.

Athletic Cat Visits an Ohio Temple of Justice

CLEVELAND, O.—A Maltese cat, with a mangy, rat-bitten tail and a hankering for the beautiful in art and architecture, entered and upset the tranquillity of the county's $5,000,000 courthouse the other day.

The cat made a hasty but complete tour of the building, led Custodian Clay's guides and subguides a merry chase through marble corridors and closed the performance with a "leap of death" act from the marble railing which overlooks the forum in the center of the building. The guides dared not follow.

How the cat entered the building is a mystery. Guides on the lower floor and at the entrances denied that it passed them. Chief Watchman O'Connor found it reclining against a bunch of grapes which form part of the $90,000 decorations on the upper floors of the building.

He approached with caution and a volume of Ohio state reports. The latter he held behind his back. The cat scented trouble and vanished. O'Connor spread the alarm. Guides responded from all sections of the building. The chase was on.

It took in offices and courtrooms, interrupted trials, scattered jurors and frightened court witnesses. Then pussy, after touring the two upper floors, decided to parade around the marble railroad which overlooks the forum. It was high and dangerous. The guides called foul, but the cat paid no heed.

O'Connor volunteered to crawl out and capture it. He traveled with more caution than speed. The cat traveled ten feet ahead of him for a while, then leaped to the floor below and disappeared.

In the PUBLIC EYE

MRS. FISH'S DOVE AND BUTTERFLY BALL

The Louis XVI. ball given by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish at Newport the other night, in honor of her niece, Miss Helena Fish, daughter of Hamilton Fish of New York, was the greatest ball that Newport has seen in a generation.

More than 400 invitations had been issued and Mrs. Fish had a large addition, 50x60 feet, built to the east of the ballroom at Crossways, her Newport home. The addition was left open on the west side. Beyond it was a bower of roses of delicate pink and red hue. In the arbor was a fountain, in which swam myriads of goldfish, and there were gorgeous tropical water plants floating on the surface and bending over the brink of the fountain.

The ballroom was decorated with numerous Louis XVI. baskets and garlands, blue and pink. In the corners were large orange trees, laden with fruit, and large French mirrors also played an important part in the most magnificent decorative scheme.

CARDINAL IS GENIAL AND DEMOCRATIC

"The most popular man in Baltimore, bar none, is Cardinal Gibbons," says a newspaper reporter who served a term of six years in that city. "He is also the most democratic man and maybe that's the reason for his popularity. He is not only revered for his learning and his wisdom, but liked personally by every one, Jew and Gentile, Roman Catholic and Protestant. And the children—they put him next to Santa Claus in their affections. The cardinal is as fond of the children as they are of him.

"Some of the cardinal's best friends are newspaper men. All of them have the greatest respect and liking for him. He is always open and frank with them. He has been interviewed thousands of times and I don't think he has ever been misquoted or his confidence betrayed. He was wont to receive the reporters on Saturday afternoon, when they desired to get his sermon for the next day. He would bring out his sermon, written in a composition book and let them go to work.

GLADYS GRACE, LAST OF "FOUR GRACES"

Gone is the last of the Graces—"The Four Graces," as London calls the four beautiful daughters of Michael P. Grace, brother of the late William R. Grace, mayor of New York two decades ago.

Three of the sisters have already made brilliant marriages. Now the fourth and the fairest, as well as the youngest, Miss Gladys Grace, is to marry Capt. Hamilton Grace of the Eleventh Hussars. The gallant officer is no relative of his bride-to-be, but both originally came from the same old Irish stock. The wedding takes place toward the end of the year, when the great estate, Battle Abbey, leased by Mr. Grace, will be the scene of as splendid a wedding as any of the three that have preceded it, as one by one the fair Americans wedded power, title or wealth—matches equally as important as this newest one is to be.

The eldest daughter, Elisa Mercedes Grace, married the Hon. Hubert Beaumont, member of Parliament, and an important man in politics, the younger son of Viscount Allendale and brother of the present holder of the title. The second daughter, Elena Grace, became the wife of the Earl of Donoughmore, formerly under secretary of war, and now chairman of committees of the House of Lords. The third daughter, Miss Margharita Grace, is Mrs. John S. Phipps, son of the Pittsburg multimillionaire, Henry Phipps. And the last of the quartet, the most beautiful of the four beauties, now goes to the British army.

JAMES R. MANN, THE "GREAT OBJECTOR"

Hon. James R. Mann, the Republican leader in congress, is known as the "great objector." Whenever he rises the house expects his opening words will be "I object," or "I reserve a point of order," and the house is usually justified in its expectation. Probably in recent years no one has surpassed Mr. Mann's record in this respect. He will filibuster indefatigably to make his point, and appears to be no respecter of persons.

From the standpoint of the parliamentary tactician Mr. Mann's selection as leader is commendable, for with the exception of Mr. Hinds there is probably no man among the Republicans who is more a walking encyclopedia of precedents and decisions than Mr. Mann, and he will have Mr. Hinds at his side. He has given Speaker Clark many uneasy hours, for the gifted Missourian is not so strong as he might be in parliamentary law. Oratory is his forte, whereas Mr. Mann is only an ordinary speaker, who speaks for his purpose. That purpose in the house was to embarrass the speaker, within the limitations of legitimate parliamentary warfare.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Myiarchus Crinitus Is Champion Bug Catcher

IF HE SEES ME ITS ALL OFF

WASHINGTON.—The department of agriculture, in a long biological treatise, whatever that is, claims credit for discovering the one omnivorous fly swatter of the country. Of course the department doesn't call it that. It is known by a long scientific nomenclature, printed in italic. Translated, this devolves itself into "fly catcher," or words to that effect.

The "catcher," according to the department's experts, is widely different from the generally accepted "swatter." It is a long, thin-shanked bird about the size of a robin, and wears a tuft of black feathers in the general vicinity of its wishbone.

The best thing this bird, the "great crested fly catcher," they call it, does, is sit on a fence rail and survey the landscape. This it does dolefully and without enthusiasm. By and by a fly or some other insect comes flying along. A short spurt, a click of a pointed beak, and it is exit insect.

The pamphlet issued by "Tama Jim" Wilson's department contains a study of the life and habits of the great American fly catcher. Departmental experts, on adventure bent, went forth into the rural sections armed with butterfly nets and six-shooters and captured a large number of these desperate birds, thereby causing a large increase in the fly population. Bringing the birds to Washington in cold storage, the stomachs of some 3,398 were examined. These stomachs, according to the report, were about five per cent. stomach and 94.99 per cent. obnoxious insects. Or, at least, the 94.99 per cent. thing represents the portion of obnoxious insects on their daily bill of fare. Whether they take them a la carte or table d'hote was not dwelt upon in the report.

There are seventeen species of these birds. The aggregate benefits of their depopulation of the insect kingdom are enormous. Under these conditions farmers will hardly begrudge them the 5.1 per cent of vegetable food they filch from the cherry and grain crops.

But insect killing is only one of the fly-catcher's accomplishments. He is the bravest bird in the air, and fearlessly attacks crows and hawks many times his size.

Ban on Kissing One's Wife at Park Resort

"IF YOU kiss your wife in Glen Echo park on Sunday you will lose five pounds of tobacco.

"If you kiss some other man's wife it will cost you your life."

This was the disconsolate wail of Manager Schloss of the park the other day.

"What is the trouble, Mr. Schloss?" he was asked.

"Guess," said the manager.

"Blue laws?"

"Righto," said Mr. Schloss, as cheerfully as a crutch.

Schloss is aggrieved that Montgomery county is now playing in the Blue Law league, and he says it hurts the batting average of the park.

"Why, just think; there was a time not so far distant, when the turnstiles at the amusement places clicked until they resembled the exhaust of a motor boat.

This little conversation with the manager took place just after Sheriff ing second. Howard of Montgomery county gave an imitation of making an arrest. When the sheriff had finished his little act he had four violators. They were Miss [illegible] Smith and Viola Collins, ticket sellers, and Cissel Husband, who operates a "wicked" merry-go-round, and Leroy Hill, who runs the miniature railroad.

Sheriff Howard personally had collected evidence against the resort. His methods would have done credit to Sherlock Holmes. He purchased tickets and took a ride.

There may have been dryer places in the world than Glen Echo, but they are not mentioned in the afternoon meetings of the Dorcas society. If any fellow took his girl to the park expecting to cut up and buy lemonade or soda pop, he gets caught steal-

Government Is Willing to Pay Money for Bugs

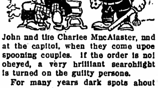
IF MR. ZIMMER WILL STAY HERE ONE NIGHT HE'LL GET MORE BED-BUGS THAN HE CAN USE

THERE has been found a man who not only wants bedbugs, but is willing to pay five cents each for them if delivered alive.

This unique demand comes from G. M. Zimmer, superintendent of the United States agricultural experiment station at Vienna, Va. He has hung out a sign advertising the fact that bedbugs are worth just a nickel a piece at his establishment, and promises to buy all that are offered up to the value of $5. Strange to say, Mr Zimmer has been unable heretofore to buy all the bedbugs he desires for his purpose, which is to set them to work exterminating another insect which is destroying an orchard on the experimental farm. It is believed that the residents of Virginia are shy about admitting that they are familiar with the habitat of bedbugs by bringing in any captives, even at the price of five cents each.

The postoffice department, on the other hand, is opposed to bug conservation, and is seeking some method of exterminating "water bugs." It has been found that water bugs have an abnormal appetite for the glue on postage stamps, and are rapidly consuming the "stickum" in many postoffices. The use of poison is not allowed, because of the danger to human beings who are accustomed to moisten their stamps by licking them. Neither do the authorities dare to turn loose in the postoffices any bug enemy of the water bug. Consequently, they are in a quandary and would like to have some one point the way out.

Turn a Bright Searchlight on Capital Spooners



"NO more spooning on the upper decks in the dark corners," is the edict that has gone out from the offices of the St. John and the Charles MacAlaster, two pleasure boats that ply the Potomac river between Washington and Marshall Hall.

"Stop promiscuous hugging, kissing and flirting on the approaches to the capitol," is an order issued to capitol policemen.

The new rules on the St. John and the Charles MacAlaster prohibit kissing of all kinds—the ordinary catch as catch can, as well as the soul kiss, which becomes an endurance contest. The rules also prohibit:

"Embracing, means a slight squeeze or the grapple of the to-have-and-to hold kind.

"Holding hands, if the grasp is not too tight, and the resting of the arm on the back of the chair occupied by the object of its affection, are permitted."

"Break away, there," is the command given by the officers on the St. John and the Charles MacAlaster, and at the capitol, when they come upon spooning couples. If the order is not obeyed, a very brilliant searchlight is turned on the guilty persons.

For many years dark spots about the approaches to the capitol have been used by courting couples. It was not unusual to see as many as 25 couples hugging at once in the cozy nooks that flank the senate and house wings of the building. The officers will try to check this. There is no objection, they say, to gentle cooing of the turtle dove variety.

The river men and the capitol officers caught the spirit of reform about the same time.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE SUNBEAM.
W. G. HUNT, Publisher.
SUNBEAM, - - MINN.

AEROPLANE GUNS.

The experiments by Captain Lewis of the United States army, and the more recent tests of the British army at Farnborough show that machine guns can be fired from flying aeroplanes with a greater degree of accuracy than has yet been attained at shooting along the ground. A target was struck at almost the rate of nine times out of ten, which means that very little ammunition was wasted. The accuracy of plunging fire is notable in military annals. At Sedan the encompassing cannon of the Germans planted on elevations compelled Louis Napoleon's capitulation under threat of annihilation. In the Russian-Japanese war Port Arthur was doomed when the Japanese poured into the city their galling fire from the great heights above. The fact that the Japanese worked long to gain those elevations again proved the recognized value of plunging fire. The war in Tripoli has shown that great damage can be done by mere bombs dropped from directly overhead. This being demonstrated, the military authorities of Europe are now using machine guns. These can be aimed and fired more accurately than anything that is dropped. There is less waste of ammunition and more ammunition can be carried. The experiments combine to make a powerful argument for peace.

The conclusion is reached by a London journal from observation of the increasing number of American women who go to Europe alone that "American husbands are a drag on their women folk when traveling abroad." Why only "when traveling abroad?" Many American husbands will be disposed to indorse the statement without the qualifying clause. These are the husbands who find themselves generally in the way except when bills are to be paid, says the New York World. They are those who prefer the slippered ease of their homes to the allurements of the cabaret show, who refuse to learn the turkey trot, though everybody in their "set" is doing it; who play auction bridge under compulsion, and otherwise impede domestic happiness. Husbands exist as a necessary encumbrance in the present social scheme, but doubtless they will have to be borne with until some automatic method is devised for making the money to pay for automobiles and clothes and tuition fees, as well as the rent.

Experiments have recently been carried out in Germany with the object of discovering methods and means for rendering walls and ceilings capable of effective resistance to sound transmission. One of the more recently devised methods involves the use under the ceiling, or parallel to the wall, as the case may be, of a network of wire stretched tightly by means of pulleys secured into adjacent walls and not touching at any point the surface to be protected against sound. Upon the wire network is plastered a composition formed of strong glue, plaster of paris and granulated cork, so as to make a flat slab, between which and the wall or ceiling is a cushion of confined air. The method described is said to be good in two respects; first, the absence of contact between the protective and protected surfaces, and, secondly, the colloid nature of the composition recommended for the plaster.

Wonders in electric development follow one another with marvelous rapidity. The latest is a wireless system much faster than those now in use and so precise that it can be employed in the transmission of pictures. At present wireless messages are transmitted by intermittent waves. The improvement makes possible the control of a continuous wave, and, so the English inventor asserts, will enable operators to send two hundred words a minute.

The story comes from California that a monster whale caught its tail in the rigging of a schooner and, naturally, it rocked the boat. But this sort of finny fun is no improvement on the original method.

New York may try a device for stimulating the wits of defective children in the schools by electricity. Of course, plenty of conservatives will rise at protest against this move as shocking.

Among the exciting events of the metropolis was the one recorded in the current news of ancient car horses running away. It deserves record, for such an occurrence is, indeed, of the most startling nature in these motor days.

The Russian Empire is the second in the world in area and the third in population, but only little Finland kept it out of the Paraguay class in the Olympic games.

PLAGUE HALTS KANSAS HARVEST

ON MANY FARMS ALL HORSES HAVE DIED AND DISEASE IS SAID TO BE SPREADING.

FARMWORK IS UNDONE.

Until Experts Ascertain a Remedy, People Hesitate to Purchase Stock and the Situation Is Consequently Critical.

Topeka, Sept. 9.—Farm work is going undone in western Kansas for lack of horses killed by the plague. Crops remain ungathered and fall plowing is weeks behind. On many farms all the horses have died. Until experts ascertain positively a remedy for the disease, the farmer is unwilling to purchase more horses.

The disease is rapidly spreading eastward, according to reports received by J. C. Mercer, state live stock sanitary commissioner.

Mr. Mercer has sent out warning that horses all over the state should be kept off pastures and given no water except from wells. The streams and ponds are said by experts to swarm with diplicocci, which cause menigitis.

The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad took a hand in the fight on the disease when its officials sent two trained veterinarians to the plague stricken district. All agents of the company in Kansas were instructed to report on the number of horses that have died of the plague in their district and whether the horse was kept off the pasture before taking sick. This information, experts say, will be of great aid in determining the exact nature of the malady.

A conference of all the veterinarians, pathologists and bacteriologists now treating horses afflicted with the mysterious disease has been called by Gov. Stubbs and Mr. Mercer.

Telegrams asking the men to assemble in Topeka have been sent out. It is hoped to organize for a systematic fight on the plague and action is expected that will result in every horse in the state being kept from pasture for an indefinite period.

Dr. R. Sophian, a meningitis expert from New York, told Gov. Stubbs that in the disease affecting the horses he had noticed conditions similar to those attending infantile paralysis in humans, and that the malady was dissimilar to meningitis.

27 ARE ARRESTED.

Twin City Police Take Rioters Into Custody.

Minneapolis, Sept. 9.—Twenty-seven persons were jailed in the Twin cities Saturday night following battles with the police, who sought to disperse two crowds of several thousand each which were blocking the streets. The Minneapolis police arrested nineteen persons, while the St. Paul police captured eight. The action of the Minneapolis police prevented what might have been a riot such as never had been witnessed before when several thousands gathered on Bridge Square gave utterance to inflammatory doctrines, shouted, screamed, cheered and threatened, blocked the streets and sidewalks and defied the police to do their worst. The nineteen persons arrested were charged with failure to obey the commands of the police to move.

Rate Hearings To Begin Soon.

Washington, Sept. 9.—The early return to Washington of members of the United States supreme court is taken to indicate an important decision will come shortly after the court convenes in October. Justice McKenna is now in New York on his way back from a trip abroad, while Chief Justice White and three or four other members are expected to be in Washington at least two weeks before the court convenes. Most of the cases under advisement are state rate cases.

Explosion Wrecks Homes.

Minneapolis, Sept. 9.—Fire starting from the explosion of a five-gallon gasoline tank completely destroyed three two-story frame houses in Ontario street southeast, near Fulton street, and left four families destitute.

Mrs. Charles Carlson, wife of a teamster, lost $300 in currency, in addition to all her household goods, which were valued at $300.

Buried Miners Believed Alive.

Biwabik, Minn., Sept. 9.—The rescuers nearly have succeeded in reaching the two imprisoned miners in the Ruddy pit. They are believed to be alive.

Yaqui Indians Kill Many People.

Tucson, Ariz., Sept. 9.—Yaqui Indians favoring the Mexican rebellion have taken to the warpath, adding new terrors to the rebel harassed residents of Sonora along the Southern Pacific railroad.

Painting In Capitol Falls.

St. Paul, Sept. 9.—A painting valued at $10,000 fell from the dome of the state capitol. The hot, moist weather is said to have loosened the white lead paint gum that held it to the walls of the dome.

INDIANS ENTERTAIN TAFT PARTY IN GLACIER PARK

Just before the last number on the war dance program at Two Medicine Lake, Glacier National Park, on the Great Northern railway. Helen Taft is standing to the left of two Indians wearing war bonnets. The man in fur chaps standing by the horse on the right is Scotty, guide for the Taft camping party.

VERMONT HITS G.O.P.

FINAL RETURNS SHOW THAT REPUBLICANS HAVE SUSTAINED HEAVY LOSSES.

THIRD PARTY WINS ON COAST

Progressives' Victory in California State Primary Election Is Complete—Electoral Vote Will Go to Roosevelt and Johnson.

White River Junction, Vt., Sept. 6.—From revised and practically complete returns from the 24 cities and towns, an accurate conception of the strength of the Democrats and Progressives in the balloting in Vermont was to be gained here Wednesday. As no candidate for a state office received a majority of the votes, the legislature, under the law, will elect. With only six towns still to report, the vote for governor stood:

Allen F. Fletcher of Cavendish (Rep.), 25,561.

Harlan B. Howe of St. Johnsbury (Dem.), 19,787.

Rev. Frazer Metzger of Randolph (Prog.), 15,546.

Clement F. Smith of Morrisville (Pro.), 1,516.

Fred W. Suiter of Barre (Soc.), 1,054.

The six missing towns cast a total vote two years ago of 1,178, of which the Republicans polled 789 and the Democrats 364.

Returns for senators and representatives from three-quarters of the cities and towns showed that the Republicans will have no difficulty in seating their candidates for governor and other state officers.

San Francisco, Sept 6.—The Progressives won a sweeping victory in the state primary election of Tuesday. Of the one hundred nominees for the state legislature, more than eighty are pledged to vote for Roosevelt electors in the state convention to be held three weeks hence. This means that the Republican electoral ticket in California will be made up of men who in the electoral college will cast California's thirteen electoral votes for Theodore Roosevelt for president and Hiram Johnson for vice-president.

4 DIE; 26 HURT IN WRECK

Passenger Train Plunges Into River When Bridge Near Camp Douglas, Wis., Is Washed Away.

Camp Douglas, Wis., Sept. 4.—Four persons were killed in the wreck of passenger train No. 10 on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railroad, which plunged into the Lemonweiter river near Camp Douglas at five o'clock Monday morning.

Every car, including the sleepers, with passengers still in their berths, was hurled into the stream, whose waters, augmented by the cloudburst of the previous night, had made it a torrent.

The accident was due to the washing away of a bridge over which the train had passed safely a short time before.

Government Chemist Resigns.

Washington, Sept. 7.—Dr. F. L. Dunlap of the bureau of chemistry and associate chemist under Dr. Harvey W. Wiley while the latter was chief of the bureau, resigned Thursday to accept a commercial position in Chicago.

Indictments Hit Iowans.

Clinton, Ia., Sept. 7.—Thirty-one indictments against three county officials, two former officials and three contractors were returned Thursday by the grand jury in the Clinton county courthouse scandal.

MILITIA STOPS RIOT

"SHOOT TO KILL" ORDER GIVEN AT MICHIGAN PRISON.

Frenzied Convicts Fight Desperate Battle With Guards Before State Soldiers Are Called.

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 4.—Five companies of militia are patroling the corridors of the state prison here, where 75 frenzied convicts, crazed with the probability of battling their way to freedom and mad with hunger, broke from the bull pen and fought a desperate battle with the small force of prison guards.

The militiamen are under orders to use formaldehyde if the convicts make any outcry or offer resistance. This would tend to render the men unconscious. They are also authorized to "shoot to kill" should it become necessary.

That part of Jackson in the vicinity of the prison is under martial law. Governor Osborn and Adjutant General Vandercook have arrived to take charge of the situation.

The rioting began when a number of prisoners released seventy-five others from the prison bull pen where they had been confined for causing disorder among the inmates of the prison. Within a few minutes the rioters had the place in an uproar. Attacking the outnumbered guards with knives and clubs they tried to force a way to liberty. In response to a telephone message from the prison superintendent Governor Osborn ordered every available militia company to reinforce the prison guards. Five companies were soon on the scene.

OHIO PROGRESSIVES' TICKET

Arthur L. Garford Named for Governor —Platform Modeled After Chicago Plan—Johnson Makes Speech.

Columbus, O., Sept. 7.—Placing Arthur L. Garford, Elyria, manufacturer, at the head of their state ticket, the Ohio Progressives Thursday chose a platform modeled after the national platform chosen at Chicago, picked a list of presidential electors and listened to an eloquent exposition of Progressive principles by Gov. Hiram Johnson of California, Progressive candidate for vice-president.

Governor Johnson, in his address to the convention, declared Taft the most humiliating character in the United States.

"Do not for a minute consider that he is in the race," said Johnson. "He is a negligible quantity."

The Progressives selected L. J. Tabor of Belmont county, editor and agriculturist, for lieutenant governor and nominated John L. Sullivan for secretary of state and William Kirtley, Jr., for treasurer. The two latter are candidates on the Republican state ticket, but made the announcement that they would resign, not caring to be affiliated with the regulars.

Bishop Leaves But $1,000.

Fond do Lac, Sept. 7.—The will of the late Bishop Charles Chapman Grafton of the Protestant Episcopal church, filed Thursday for probate by Archbishop B. T. Rogers as executor, lists the personal property as $1,000.

Aviator Mars Badly Hurt.

Olean, N. Y., Sept. 6.—"Bud" Mars, the aviator, is in the Olean General hospital with dangerous injuries, the result of a fall while he was making a flight at the county fair Thursday. His biplane crashed into a fence.

Fear of Dentist Fatal.

York, Pa., Sept. 7.—The fear of pain caused by having a tooth extracted caused the death Thursday of Anna Henry, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Henry. As gas was about to be given she died.

M. P. TRAIN ROBBED

PASSENGERS HELD UP BY LONE BANDIT AT POINT OF PISTOL.

ESCAPES WITH HIS BOOTY

Dying Thief Who Held Up Southern Train Tells Police Story That May Lead to Capture of His Confederates.

Osage City, Kan., Sept. 7.—Boarding Missouri Pacific train No. 1, near here, Thursday, a lone bandit at the point of a revolver robbed the conductor and news agent. He forced them to accompany him through the chair car, holding a sack into which the passengers were compelled to put all their money and valuables. The porter in another car saw the robber and pulled the bell cord. When the train stopped the man escaped. The amount he secured is not known.

New Orleans, Sept. 7.—Suffering from a severe fracture of the skull, the bandit who, single-handed, robbed the New York Limited train on the Louisville & Nashville railroad twelve miles east of New Orleans and later was felled by the locomotive driver, was brought to New Orleans Thursday and placed in the charity hospital.

The bandit said that his name was Howard E. Edwards and that his family lived in Jupiter, Fla. He gave the police information that is expected to lead to the early capture of three other members of a gang which is believed to have been responsible for a series of sensational train robberies in this section.

Edwards is in a precarious condition and attendants at the hospital declared it probable that he would not recover from his injuries.

KAREL PICKED BY BADGERS

Former Football Star Is Chosen Democratic Candidate for Governor of Wisconsin.

Milwaukee, Sept. 6.—Judge John C. Karel, former Wisconsin football star, won the Democratic nominee Tuesday for the governorship of Wisconsin. Anti-La Follette Republicans sided in his nomination, defeating Adolph J. Schmitz. Republicans were so active on both sides of the Democratic quarrel that it is doubtful whether there will be a Republican ticket in the field this fall. The state law requires that at a primary a party must poll at least 10 per cent. of its vote at the preceding election to hold its organization. Returns today indicate that the Republicans may have failed to do this.

Rebellious Michigan Convicts Flogged.

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 7.—Their teeth gnashing with rage and their faces filled with a hatred akin to those lost to all sense of value of life, nine of the sixty-two rebellious convicts confined in the bull pen at the state prison were taken out and flogged here Thursday. Others will receive their share and the work will go on till all have been punished.

Manuel Meets Pretender.

Munich, Sept. 7.—Former King Manuel of Portugal had a conference here Thursday with Dom Miguel de Braganza, the Portuguese pretender. The king discussed the situation of the royalists in Portugal with Miguel.

French Ambassador Injured.

Montfort, France, Sept. 7.—Camille Barrere, French ambassador to Rome, was badly injured in a collision between two automobiles near here Thursday. One man in the party was killed and another fatally injured.

MEXICAN IRE AROUSED

INTERVENTION IN NICARAGUA CAUSES BITTER FEELING.

Standard Oil Company Is Accused of Fomenting Revolution in Mexico.

Mexico City, Sept. 5.—A most bitter feeling has been engendered among the lower classes of Mexico against Americans since the United States landed marines on Nicaraguan soil.

The inflammatory papers, Multi Color, El Paladin and others among the weeklies, and El Pais, an influential daily of large circulation, are doing all they can to arouse the peon class against the Americans. In a long first page story El Pais declares that the Standard Oil company fomented the Orozco revolution and is aiding Zapata in order to depreciate the stocks of the National railways and to injure the credit of Mexico.

The depreciation of Mexican paper currency two cents on the dollar is charged to the Standard's action in aiding the revolutionists.

Multi Color, an influential political weekly, says:

"The cowardly Americans have dared to land marines in Nicaragua, because our sister republic is a weak nation, but they do not dare to intervene in Mexico."

Everywhere on the street one hears the expression "Cowardly Americans," handed from lip to lip among the lower classes who, since the overthrow of Diaz, have become arrogant beyond endurance. They flaunt their half-clothed, unbathed persons up and down the principal street of the city and have so terrorized the police that it is difficult to secure an arrest.

5,000 HOMELESS FROM FIRE

Flames Sweep Ocean Park at Los Angeles and Destroy the Beach City.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 5.—Five thousand people were homeless in Santa Monica Tuesday night as the result of a fire which originated in the kitchen of the Casino cafe at five o'clock Tuesday evening and burned uncontrolled until nearly nine. The loss is said to be $2,500,000.

Six solid blocks of cottages and apartment houses, crowded with summer visitors, were destroyed.

The famous Frazer's Million Dollar pier, with all its concession buildings, was totally destroyed, except for the concrete piling of the pier itself.

The Decatur hotel, famed to all who have traveled to the Pacific coast in the last ten years, was leveled, along with the long string of small business houses along the "Pike" and the bath house, one of the finest and largest on the coast, rests in its own ashes.

One Japanese is known to be dead. He jumped into the ocean while trying to escape from the blazing pier, and was drowned. Seven other Japanese are reported to have lost their lives in the holocaust.

GENERAL M'ARTHUR IS DEAD

Former Army Chief Stricken Suddenly While Speaking at Reunion of Old Regiment.

Milwaukee, Sept. 7.—Gen. Arthur MacArthur, retired, former commander-in-chief of the army, was suddenly stricken with acute indigestion while speaking at the reunion of his old regiment, the Twenty-ninth Wisconsin, here Thursday. He had been in ill health, the heat was intense, and he sank back in his chair, saying he couldn't continue. He lapsed into unconsciousness and died in a few minutes.

General MacArthur was born in Springfield, Mass. He was sixty-seven years old and began his army career with the Twenty-fourth Wisconsin infantry, of which he was appointed commander in 1862. He took part in the battle of Missionary Ridge and in the Atlanta campaign, being awarded a congressional medal for seizing the colors of his regiment at a critical moment and planting them on Missionary Ridge.

FLASHES OFF THE WIRE

Boston, Sept. 5.—William M. Wood, president of the American Wool company, pleaded not guilty in the superior court Tuesday to an indictment charging him with conspiracy to distribute dynamite in Lawrence strike.

Amoy, China, Sept. 4.—A typhoon swept Fuchow Monday, causing great loss of life and damage to property. Steamships from the north report the sea off the mouth of the Min river strewn with bodies.

Cuba Election Riot Fatal.

Havana, Sept. 6.—One liberal was killed, two probably fatally injured and one conservative slightly injured as the result of a political battle fought in the streets at Mariel, thirty miles from Havana, Wednesday.

U. S. Marines Seize a Steamer.

Washington, Sept. 6.—American bluejackets from the cruiser Glacier, under Ensign Robert G. Coman, recaptured Wednesday from the Nicaraguan revolutionists a small steamer the rebels had seized at Corinto.

SERIAL STORY

EXCUSE ME!

Novelized from the Comedy of the Same Name

By Rupert Hughes

ILLUSTRATED From Photographs of the Play as Produced By Henry W. Savage

Copyright, 1911, by W. K. Fly Co.

13

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Ira Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Mallory decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding hazing. Marjorie is distracted. Ira Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Anne Gattle, a fellow passenger. Mallory vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Mallory reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Mallory finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train. Mallory again makes an unsuccessful hunt for a preacher. Dr. Temple poses as a physician. Mrs. Temple is induced by Mrs. Wellington to smoke a cigar.

CHAPTER XIX—(Continued).

And a lady who was evidently Mrs. Deacon spoke up:

"We'll miss you terrible. We all say you are the best pastor our church ever had."

Mallory prepared to spring on his prey and drag him to his lair, but Marjorie held him back.

"He's taking our train, Lord bless his dear old soul."

And Mallory could have hugged him. But he kept close watch. To the rapture of the wedding-hungry twain, the preacher shook hands with such of his flock as had followed him to the station, picked up his valise and walked up to the porter, extending his ticket.

But the porter said—and Mallory could have throttled him for saying it:

"'Scuse me, posson, but that's yo' train ova yonda. You betta mova right smaht, for it's gettin' ready to pull out."

With a little shriek of dismay, the parson clutched his valise and set off at a run. Mallory dashed after him and Marjorie after Mallory. They shouted as they ran, but the conductor of the east-bound train sang out "All aboard!" and swung on.

The parson made a sprint and caught the ultimate rail of the moving train. Mallory made a frantic leap at a flying coat-tail and missed. As he and Marjorie stood gazing reproachfully at the train which was giving a beautiful illustration of the laws of retreating perspective, they heard wild howls of "Hi! hi!" and "Hay! hay!" and turned to see their own train in motion, and the porter dancing a Zulu step alongside.

CHAPTER XX.

Foiled Again.

Mallory tucked Marjorie under his arm and Marjorie tucked Snoozleums under hers, and they did a sort of three-legged race down the platform. The porter was pale blue with excitement, and it was with the last gasp of breath in all three bodies that they scrambled up the steps of the only open vestibule.

The porter was mad enough to give them a piece of his mind, and they were meek enough to take it without a word of explanation or resentment.

And the train sped on into the heart of Nebraska, along the unpoetic valley of the Platte. When lunch-time came, they ate it together, but in gloomy silence. They sat in Marjorie's berth throughout the appallingly monotonous afternoon in a stupor of disappointment and helpless dejection, speaking little and saying nothing then.

Whenever the train stopped, Mallory watched the on-getting passengers with his keenest eye. He had a theory that since most people who looked like preachers were decidedly lay, it might be well to take a gambler's chance and accost the least ministerial person next.

So, in his frantic anxiety, he selected a horsey-looking individual who got on at North Platte. He looked so much like a rawhided ranchman that Mallory stole up on him and asked him to excuse him, but did he happen to be a clergyman? The man replied by asking Mallory if he happened to be a flea-bitten maverick, and embellished his question with a copious flow of the words ministers use, but with a secular arrangement of them. In fact he split one word in two to insert a double-barrelled curse. All that Mallory could do was to admit that he was a flea-bitten what-he-said, and back away.

After that, if a vicar in full uniform had marched down the aisle heading a procession of choir-boys, Mallory would have suspected him. He vowed in his haste that Marjorie might die an old maid before he would approach anybody else on that subject.

Nebraska would have been a nice long state for a honeymoon, but its four hundred-odd miles were a dreary length for the couple so near and yet so far. The railroad clinging to the meandering Platte made the way far longer, and Mallory and Marjorie felt like Pyramus and Thisbe wandering along an eternal wall, through which they could see, but not reach, one another.

They dined together as dolefully as if they had been married for forty years. Then the slow twilight soaked them in its melancholy. The porter lighted up the car, and the angels lighted up the stars, but nothing lighted up their hopes.

"We've got to quarrel again, my beloved," Mallory groaned to Marjorie.

Somehow they were too dreary even to nag one another with an outburst for the benefit of the eager-eyed passengers.

A little excitement bestirred them as they realized that they were confronted with another night-robeless night and a morrow without change of gear.

"What a pity that we left our things in the taxicab," Marjorie sighed. And this time she said, "we left them," instead of "you left them." It was very gracious of her, but Mallory did not acknowledge the courtesy. Instead he gave a start and a gasp:

"Good Lord, Marjorie, we never paid the second taxicab!"

"Great heavens, how shall we ever pay him? He's been waiting there twenty-four hours. How much do you suppose we owe him?"

"About a year of my pay, I guess."

"You must send him a telegram of apology and ask him to read his meter. He was such a nice man—the kindest eyes—for a chauffeur."

"But how can I telegraph him? I don't know his name, or his number, or his company, or anything."

"It's too bad. He'll go through life hating us and thinking we cheated him."

"Well, he doesn't know our names either."

And then they forgot him temporarily for the more immediate need of clothes. All the passengers knew that they had left behind what baggage they had not sent ahead, and much sympathy had been expressed. But most people would rather give you their sympathy than lend you their clothes. Mallory did not mind the men, but Marjorie dreaded the women. She was afraid of all of them but Mrs. Temple.

She threw herself on the little lady's mercy and was asked to help herself. She borrowed a nightgown of extraordinary simplicity, a shirt waist of an ancient mode, and a number of other things.

If there had been anyone there to see she would have made a most anachronistic bride.

Mallory canvassed the men and obtained a shockingly purple shirt from Wedgewood, who meant to put him at his ease, but somehow failed when he said in answer to Mallory's thanks:

"God bless my soul, old top, don't you think of thanking me. I ought to thank you. You see, the idiot who makes my shirts, made that by mistake, and I'd be no end grateful if you'd jolly well take the loathsome thing off my hands. I mean to say, I shouldn't dream of being seen in it myself. You quite understand, don't you?"

Ashton contributed a maroon atrocity in hosiary, with equal tact:

"If they fit you, keep 'em. I got stung on that batch of socks. That pair was originally lavender, but they washed like that. Keep 'em. I wouldn't be found dead in 'em."

The mysterious Fosdick, who lived a lonely life in the Observation car and slept in the other sleeper, lent Mallory a pair of pyjamas evidently intended for a bridegroom of romantic disposition. Mallory blushed as he accepted them and when he found himself in them, he whisked out the light, he was so ashamed of himself.

Once more the whole car gaped at the unheard of behavior of its newly wedded pair. The poor porter had been hungry for a bridal couple, but as he went about gathering up the cast-off footwear of his large family and found Mallory's shoes at number three and Marjorie's tiny boots at number five, he shook his head and groaned.

"Times has suttainly changed for the wuss. If this is a bridal couple, gimme divorcees."

CHAPTER XXI.

Matrimony to and Fro.

And the next morning they were in Wyoming—well toward the center of that State. They had left behind the tame levels and the truly rural towns and they were among foothills and mountains, passing cities of wildly picturesque repute, like Cheyenne, and Laramie, Bowie, and Medicine Bow, and Bitter Creek, whose very names imply literature and war whoops, cowboy yelps, barking revolvers, another redskin biting the dust, cattle stampedes, town-paintings, humorous lynchings and bronchos in epileptic frenzy.

But the talk of this train was concerned with none of these wonders, which the novelists and the magazinist have perhaps a trifle overpublished. The talk of this train was concerned with the eighth wonder of the world, a semi-detached bridal couple.

Mrs. Whitcomb was eager enough to voice the sentiment of the whole populace, when she looked up from her novel in the observation room and, nudging Mrs. Temple, drawled: "By the way, my dear, has that bridal couple made up its 'second' night's quarrel yet?"

"The Mallorys?" Mrs. Temple flushed as she answered, mercifully. "Oh, yes, they were very friendly again this morning."

Mrs. Whitcomb's countenance was cynical: "My dear, I've been married twice and I ought to know something about honeymoons, but this honeyless honeymoon—" she cast up her eyes and her hands in despair.

The women were so concerned about Mr. and "Mrs." Mallory, that they hardly noticed the uncomfortable plight of the Wellingtons, or the curious behavior of the lady from the stateroom who seemed to be afraid of something and never spoke to anybody. The strange behavior of Anne Gattle and Ira Lathrop even escaped much comment, though they were forever being stumbled on when anybody went out to the observation platform. When they were dislodged from there, they sat playing checkers and talking very little, but making eyes at one another and sighing like furnaces.

They had evidently concocted some secret of their own, for Ira, looking at his watch, murmured sentimentally to Anne: "Only a few hours more, Annie."

And Anne turned geranium-color and dropped a handful of checkers. "I don't know how I can face it."

Ira growled like a lovesick lion: "Aw, what do you care?"

"But I was never married before, Ira," Anne protested, "and on a train, too."

"Why, all the bridal couples take to the railroads."

"I should think it would be the last place they'd go," said Anne—a sensible woman, Anne! "Look at the Mallories—how miserable they are."

"I thought they were happy," said Ira, whose great virtue it was to pay little heed to what was none of his business.

"Oh, Ira," cried Anne, "I hope we shan't begin to quarrel as soon as we are married."

"As if anybody could quarrel with you, Anne," he said.

"Do you think I'll be so monotonous as that?" she retorted.

Her spunk delighted him beyond words. He whispered: "Anne, you're so gol-darned sweet if I don't get a chance to kiss you, I'll bust."

"Why, Ira—we're on the train."

"Da—darn the train! Who ever heard of a fellow proposing and getting engaged to a girl and not even kissing her."

"But our engagement is so short."

"Well, I'm not going to marry you until I get a kiss."

Perhaps innocent old Anne really believed this blood-curdling threat. It brought her instantly to terms, though she blushed: "But everybody's always looking."

"Come out on the observation platform."

"Oh, Ira, again?"

"I dare you."

"I take you—but" seeing that Mrs. Whitcomb was trying to overhear, she whispered: "Let's pretend it's the scenery."

So Ira rose, pushed the checkers aside, and said in an unusually positive tone: "Ah, Miss Gattle, won't you have a look at the landscape?"

"Oh, thank you, Mr. Lathrop," said Anne, "I just love scenery."

They wandered forth like the Sleeping Beauty and her princely awakener, and never dreamed what gigglings and nudgings and wise head-noddings went on back of them. Mrs. Wellington laughed loudest of all at the lovers whose heads had grown gray while their hearts were still so green.

It was shortly after this that the Wellingtons themselves came into prominence in the train life.

As the train approached Green River, and its copper-basined stream, the engineer began to set the airbrakes for the stop. Jimmie Wellington, boozily half-awake in the smoking room, wanted to know what the name of the station was. Everybody is always eager to oblige a drunken man, so Ashton and Fosdick tried to get a window open to look out.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Truly a "Nervy" Youth.

A New York barber says he has discovered the nerviest man alive. He is young yet, but when he is fully developed with a mature growth of nerve he will be a startling prodigy.

"This fellow came into my shop the other day," said the barber, "and asked me to shave his neck. I speedily accomplished the gentle task, and called out, 'Next.' While I was adjusting a towel around the neck of the next customer I saw the other youth going out the door.

"'Haven't you forgotten something?' I asked him.

"He felt in his pockets and said he had all that belonged to him.

"'I mean you forgot to pay me for that shave.'

"'Pay for that! Just shaving my neck!' he said, with astonishment. 'I never heard of paying for so little a thing as that. I could have done it myself with my safety razor, only I couldn't reach back there.'"

"Big Seller" of 1758.

In more hardy days than these snuff was used as an eye liniment. "The Compleat Housewife, or Accomplished Gentlewoman's Companion," which had run into 16 editions by 1758, extols its virtues. Accomplished gentlewoman who find their sight failing with advancing years are advised to rub "the right sort of Portugal snuff into the eyes night and morning, and take it also through the nose." This treatment, it is asserted, "cured Sir Edward Seymour, Sir John Houblon and Judge Ayres, so that they could read without spectacles after they had used them for many years." Some people would prefer spectacles.

IN BLACKBERRY TIME

Love and Fate Figure in Side-Lines.

By JOHN PHILIP ORTH.

Mr. Fred Islington was not referred to in the papers as a Napoleon of finance, but yet he held a responsible and well-paid position in an important bank.

Miss May Cranston was not mentioned as a second Patti, but it was admitted that she had a fine voice for song, and might some day become an operatic star.

It would seem to the logical reasoner, that Mr. Islington and Miss Cranston ought to have kept clear of side-lines, and not have been tempted into risks. He took a few lessons in drawing, fitted up a garret studio and then went into turning out landscapes in his spare hours. They were not Corots nor Rembrandts. He was satisfied, for the time being, to play second fiddle to them.

Miss Cranston selected sculpture as her side-line. She worked on ice-cold butter. The same was 45 cents a pound, but cheaper at that than marble. Butter is also much easier to cut. She didn't astound the whole United States, but she was content to feel that every time she finished a new bust there was a decided gain. It was a diversion now, but the profits would come later on.

One day, at the house of a friend, Mr. Islington was shown a butter bust of what was called George Washington. He felt it his duty to remark that it could just as well have been called Nero, Columbus, Napoleon or Shakespeare. That is a privilege artists have—to bat each other, but it is always in a good-natured way.

A few days later Miss Cranston was shown one of Mr. Islington's landscapes, by a young friend who had received it as a gift on her birthday. Her criticisms were very frank.

And later on came Fate. That butter-artist and the landscape painter met, and admired, and fell in love. Neither had anything to say about their side-line for some time, and then there was a row at once. Other parties had repeated their criticisms, and they had naturally been added to. It is hardly fair to say there was a row. It was more a chilliness, as if the wind had suddenly changed to the north.

Yes, He Had Sat Where She Sat to Sketch.

"Miss Cranston," (she had been "May" the day before), began Mr. Islington, "I understand you have harshly criticized some of my work as a landscape artist."

"I thought I was justified, Mr. Islington," (he had been "Fred" the day before), was the frigid reply. "I have also been informed that you criticized my efforts in sculpture very freely."

"If we both have what they call the artistic temperament—"

"Yes?"—

"It would be better—better—"

"Yes?—"

"I should not want to give up my work."

"No?"

"And you would not want to give up yours?"

"Certainly not."

"Then, Miss Cranston—then—"

"Then you have an important engagement this evening, and I will not detain you!"

That was all. That "Artistic Temperament" never gives in once it gets its back up. The possessor may realize that he or she is in training for an idiot asylum, but they must stick to it. A month later, without having seen each other again, both went on a summer vacation. Mr. Islington went down to loaf at his brother's, and Miss Cranston took herself down to Granny White's to read and swing in a hammock, and think and wonder. She had sculped—she had loved—she had lost! Grandma gave her joyful welcome, and though she saw that something was amiss she was discreet enough to ask no questions. She offered a four-pound cake of butter to be made into a bust of Cleopatra, but when it was allowed to melt in the sun she made no comments.

It was blackberry time, and half a dozen times Granny had donned her sun-bonnet, and taken her basket on her arm, and gone down the creek to gather the toothsome fruit, but on this particular afternoon she said:

"Now, my dear, it's your turn. Go down to the creek and cross and turn to the left and follow it up till you reach an old field. You'll find more berries there than you can pick in half a day. I'd go myself, but am expecting a tin peddler along any minute, and I must have a new dipper."

The place was easily found. There was not only an old field, but the ruins of a dam and a sawmill that Granny had forgotten to mention. As Miss May stood looking around her she felt that she had visited the place before. Yes? No? It had a familiar look, but she had never before been within miles of it. She sat down on the turf and looked again, and then she gave a little gasp.

The landscape by Mr. Fred Islington, warranted all-wool-and-a-yard-wide, and true to nature in every detail, was before her. Yes, he had sat where she sat to sketch it. And, as if that was not enough, the painter himself broke his way through the branches and stood before her.

"Miss Cranston!"

"Mr. Islington!"

"I—I did not know—"

"Nor I, either."

He sat down about five feet away, and for two long minutes was interested in the life and adventures of the grasshopper. Miss Cranston maintained a steady gaze on her feet.

"I have been thinking," he finally said.

"Yes?"

"We have been too hasty."

"Oh, I don't know."

"You see, your unjust criticisms provoked me."

"But they were not unjust. Your sketch shows an old mill with the roof half gone. There is no roof at all here."

"Um!"

"The creek flows to the right, as you see. In your sketch you have it flowing to the left or up-hill."

"Um!"

"In your sketch you show an old water-wheel. There is none here. If there was one it could not ever have turned with the water flowing the wrong way."

"Ahem!"

"Your sketch," continued the young lady, "has a sunrise or sunset in it, Which is it?"

"Sunset."

"But why do you have it set in the east? The top of a picture is like the top of a map—it's the north. Figuring from this, your sun has wobbled around!"

"That's queer," replied the painter.

"In an artistic way, and one proudly pointed out, you cover some of the fallen stones and stumps with what you mistake for brambles."

"You—you must be mistaken."

"There they are, and they are hazel bushes. I have no more to say, except that your sketch purports to be an autumn scene, and yet you have the maples all red, and two or three apple trees over there of a vivid green. I now yield you the floor to criticize my butter bust of Washington!"

"I thought—thought," began Mr. Islington, and then paused.

"Are you a good judge of butter?" asked the girl with a smile.

"Why, I thought that particular butter was all right."

"So it was. The trouble was with me. I sculped Shakespeare and called it Washington. If I had tried to sculp Nero people would probably have called it Xerxes. I am ready to admit that I am a dead failure in sculpture."

"And I don't believe it is in me to be a landscape artist."

There was nothing further said for the next two minutes. Then the young man cautiously queried:

"Wasn't there something said about the 'Artistic Temperament?'"

"Why, there might have been."

"Do you think we have it?"

"Not being artists, how could we have?"

"That's so. That's so. And not having got it, what becomes of the vows—the vows—"

"To be continued at the house!" laughed the blushing girl, as she extended her hand to be helped to her feet.

"How many quarts did you pick?" asked Granny, as she reached for the empty berry basket.

"My stars, but I forgot all about 'em!" was the reply.

"Never mind, deary. I didn't expect you to pick a single one—not a one."

"But—but—"

"You see, he was here the other day while you were taking a nap, and he told me all about it, and I told him I'd send you down by the creek, and he and you and the blackberries and the old mill and—and—and don't you let him get away while I am getting supper!"

And Mr. Fred Islington didn't get away.

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Looking Forward.

The husband and wife were making a call on friends one evening. The wife was talking. "I think we shall have Marian take a domestic science course along with her music and regular studies when at college."

"Ah," said a man present, who had been a stranger until that evening, "you look rather young to have a daughter ready for college."

"Oh," said the mother naively, "she isn't old enough now; she is just eight months old, but I do so like to look forward!"

Uncle Pennywise Says:

A young man who has bought nothing but bonbons and violets for five years can hardly be expected to be a good judge of asparagus right after marriage.

MEANING OF "AT HALF MAST"

At First Universal Symbol Was Token of Submission and Respect For Enemy.

Perhaps you have noticed that whenever a prominent person dies, especially if he is connected with the government, the flags on public buildings are hoisted only part of the way up, remarks the Toronto Mail and Express. This is called "half mast." Did you ever stop to think what connection there could be between a flag that was not properly hoisted and the death of a great man?

Ever since flags were used in war it has been the custom to have the flag of the superior or conquering nation above that of the inferior or vanquished. When an army found itself hopelessly beaten it hauled its flag down far enough for the flag of the victors to be placed above it on the same pole. This was a token not only of submission, but of respect.

In those days when a famous soldier died flags were lowered out of respect to his memory. The custom long ago passed from purely military usage to public life of all kinds, the flag flying at half mast being a sign that the dead man was worthy of universal respect. The space left above it is for the flag of the great conqueror of all—the angel of death.

Motor Cars and Mosquitoes.

Mosquitoes, flies and gnats of every description are said to be more numerous in Paris this year than ever before. It has become a veritable invasion. The explanation usually given is that the swallows are much fewer this summer, and also that the ubiquitous sparrow is notably on the decrease. Nobody can find a reason for the desertion of the swallows, but the reason of the scarcity of sparrows is not far to seek. The enemy is mechanical traction, which is supplanting the use of the horse. Before long horses will practically have disappeared in Paris and when their nosebags go there will disappear one of the principal staples of food for the Paris "pierrot," who is taking wing for the country in search of the grains on the boulevards and avenue. on the boulevard and avenues.

Child's Popularity Explained.

A winning lottery ticket of $100,000, in connection with the Nobles Bank was recently presented for payment at the State Bank in St. Petersburg, and it now transpires that the owner is an eight-year-old orphan, an inmate of the orphanage at Pskoff. The lottery ticket was her sole possession. Her relatives have hitherto done nothing for the child, but when the news of her good fortune became known they were one and all eager to adopt her. The authorities have placed her in the charge of an arch-priest, a distant connection of her father.

German Farmer Good Business Man.

Under a seemingly generous offer of hospitality, a North German farmer has managed to include a good stroke of business for himself. In a Hanover paper recently appeared an advertisement that from fifteen to twenty women and girls (not under twelve years of age) who needed recuperation could have free board and lodging on a country estate. But in exchange they would be required to pick peas from eight to ten hours daily. Industrious pickers might also be paid cash for their labor.

Electric Fans in India.

Although it costs but 6 cents a day in India for men to have fans to keep the air circulating in houses, they are gradually being replaced by electric fans as cheaper and more reliable.

If you would win life's battle you must be a hard hitter and a poor quitter.

A FOOD CONVERT
Good Food the True Road to Health.

The pernicious habit some persons still have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve stomach trouble keeps up the patent medicine business and helps keep up the army of dyspeptics.

Indigestion—dyspepsia — is caused by what is put into the stomach in the way of improper food, the kind that so taxes the strength of the digestive organs they are actually crippled.

When this state is reached, to resort to tonics is like whipping a tired horse with a big load. Every additional effort he makes under the lash diminishes his power to move the load.

Try helping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easily digested, full of strength for nerves and brain, in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.

"I am an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts and consider it an ideal food," writes a Maine man:

"I had nervous dyspepsia and was all run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From reading an advertisement I tried Grape-Nuts food, and, after a few weeks' steady use of it, felt greatly improved.

"Am much stronger, not nervous now, and can do more work without feeling so tired, and am better every way.

"I relish Grape-Nuts best with cream and use four heaping teaspoonfuls as the cereal part of a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn., under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

STEENERSON'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

In announcing my candidacy for re-election as Representative in Congress I desire first of all to thank the people of the district for the honor bestowed upon me in the past and to assure them that, if it shall please them to continue me in their service, I shall in the future, as I have in the past, put forth every effort to serve them faithfully to the best of my ability.

I am a Republican—a progressive republican—and have supported all progressive legislation for the more complete government regulation and control of railroads and interstate commerce, the policy of conservation of water powers and other natural resources in the interest of the people, and the development of unsettled lands on liberal terms to actual settlers.

While I voted against the Payne Aldrich Terriff Bill and Canadian Reciprocity because, in, my judgement they were against the best interests of my constituents, I am a protectionist and favor a tariff high enough to preserve the home market to American industries, but not so high as to make it a shield for exorbitant prices.

I voted for the amendments to the Constitution recently passed by Congress, providing for election of Senators by the people, and an income tax, which now await ratification by the states.

I aided in the elimination of railroad and ship subsides from postal expenditures, and the improvements and extension of the postal service including parcel post and rural free delivery, and am trying to get improved laws to prevent using mails to promote fraudulent schemes.

I favor strict government regulation of interstate commerce, as well as transportation; supervision of corporations and capitalizaton, and, if necessary, even limitation of prices; and workmans' compensation for the benefit of victims of industrial accidents, and all legislation in favor of temperance and morality.

Liberal pensions in their declining years is due from a grateful nation to its gallant defenders, the vaterans of the Civil War, as a matter of right and justice. While I believe in due military preparation on the part of the leading civilized powers of the world, I believe the time has come when there should be renewed efforts to substitute international arbitration for war in the settlement of disputes among nations, and to limit armaments, thus saving immense sums for more useful purposes in the serving of humanity.

Halvor Steenerson.

Next Tuesday will end the suspense of a large number of candidates for office, who will drop on that date.

Polk County only has eight candidates for the republican nomination for sheriff. It will be a case of one chosen and seven left.

This week closes up the primary campaign and you will soon hear a number of the candidates saying that they never expected to be nominated but just filed for the fun of it.

Pick out the wheat from the chaff, when you go to election next Tuesday. Be sure to vote for Steenerson for Congressman of the 9th District and for Frank M. Eddy for Congressman at Large from Minnesota.

Any man that is at all interested in the election of a Democratic Governor should not vote for Peter M. Ringdahl, as the weakest man the Republican party could nominate would defeat him so bad that he would never know he was in the race.

A teacher in one of the local schools asked her class what would be the first thing Col. Roosevelt would see when he enters the White House next spring. And a bright boy in the back row, whose dad is evidently a Democrat, raised his hand and answered, "President Wilson."—T. R. F. Times.

It begins to look as if the boy was right.

Eberhart is by no means the choice of the Republican party for governor, but with the line-up as it is now he can smile after the primary election and say; "I not only beat one progressive candidate for governor, but I beat four of them. Gordon, Lee and Young." Every one can see this, but each one refuses to step out in favor of the other. Gordon is our first choice and Young second, and perhaps the next progressive you meet will take Lee for first choice and Falk or Spooner, for second choice and there you are voting against each other, and while the cats are fighting the monkey will run away with the cheese. Again Eberhart might strike another streak of his famous political luck, if the decrats nominate that atheist Ringdahl as his opponent.

You often hear it said, what a man will see when he has not got a gun. Now comes the news that, Peterson the opponent of Steenerson has obtained the services of Attorney Halvorson, of Thief River Falls to get votes for him. Isn't it a nice proposition for an Attorney to get down so low that he would ask a farmer of the 9th District to vote for a man for Congress who is a well known supporter of Taft and Canadian Reciprocity! But as we said before what a man will see when he has not got a gun. Vote for Steenerson the man who is fighting Reciprocity, and is representing the interests of the farmers, and be sure to go to election and attend to this.

While we do not expect that Congressman Steenerson is in a very strenuous campaign, with any danger of defeat, yet he likes to feel that you are indorsing his faithful work in congress by giving him your vote on election day.

What We Never Forget

according to science, are the things associated with our early home life, such as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruptions, cuts, sprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit, unrivaled for piles, corns or cold-sores. Only 25 cents at all druggists.

The rate for publication of political announcements in this column is only $5.00 payable strictly in advance. No credit given on this class of work.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

I am a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds of Pennington county, and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primaries to be held September 17th 1912. Nels J. Anderson.

FOR CLERK OF COURT.

I wish to announce to the voters of Pennington County that I will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Clerk of the District Court for Pennington County, subject to the decision of the voters at the Republican Primary, September 17th, 1912.

We have occupied the position since the organization of Pennington County and have tried to the best of my ability to be strictly impartial and as efficient as my ability would allow. I will be pleased to have the votes and support of all citizens who believe that I have filled the position in an honest and efficient manner.

If nominated and elected I hereby promise to give the office my personal attention and my best efforts to honestly administer the affairs of the office in a strictly impartial and efficient manner.

Harry E. Ives.
Thief River Falls

Genius and Eccentricity.

"You can't have genius without eccentricity."

"That may be so, but I've noticed that it's possible to have a good deal of eccentricity without much genius."—Chicago Record-Herald.

FOR COUNTY TREASURER.

I wish to announce that I am a candidate for County Treasurer, subject to the ratification of the Republican voters at the primaries, September 17, 1912 Being that political parties have always regarded it as important to have their members elected to all offices, it must be for aid in promoting party politics, for so far as the work in the county offices is concerned, it can make no difference whatever, what the officer,s political affiliations are, so the idea must be that he is expected to talk and work and use the advantage of his public position, in aiding the party to which he belongs. I believe that it is of the utmost importance to have the Republican party control at least one branch of congress in order to maintain the average of prices. While the price-level does not prove that times are good, theoretically, yet we know that with the enormous debt of the country, it will be harder to pay it with low prices than with high, steady prices. I believe that because one can not support the whole Republican ticket, it is no reason at all to quite supporting candidates for congress and the legislature, which is by far more important than the office of president, so far as party politics is concerned. These are my ideas, and I shall use my influence to help along on those lines, no matter whether I am nominated or not.

Sincerely for the success of the party.

Andrew Trovaton.

FOR SHERIFF.

I wish to announce that I am a candidate for the office of sheriff, subject to the will of the voters of Pennington county at the primaries. September 17. I have held the office one term, or since the organization of the county, having been appointed by the board of county commissioners. If my conduct of the affairs of the office have met with your approval an endorsement at the primaries would be greatly appreciated.

Jesse La Bree.

COUNTY ATTORNEY.

I wish to announce to the voters of Pennington county that I am a candidate for the office of County Attorney on the Republican ticket, and solicit your vote and support at the primaries to be held on Sept. 17, 1912.—J. M. Bishop, Thief River Falls, Minn,

COUNTY TREASURER.

I am a candidate for the office of County Treasurer of Pennington County and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primary election to be held on Sept. 17, 1912.—John T. Gullingsrud, Thief River Falls.

REGISTER OF DEEDS

I wish to announce to the voters of Pennington County, that I am a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds of Pennington County and respectfully solicit your votes and support.

Geo. W. Elder.

COUNTY AUDITOR.

I wish hereby to announce to the Voters of Pennington County, that I am a candidate for the Republican Nomination for the Office of County Auditor, at the September 17th. 1912 Primaries; Since my appointment to this office, at the time of the organization of of Pennington County. I have given the office my whole time and my very best efforts. Should I be favored with the nomination and election, I believe with the experience gained, I will be still better prepared to serve you the coming term.

If our services have met with your approval I earnestly solicit your consideration and support.

Very truly yours,
A. H. Fasel

Competent.

Garside—Women ought not to be allowed to vote. Could a woman sit on a jury? Hillside—Could she! A woman like my wife could sit on the jury and the judge and the lawyers and the whole department of justice if she took the notion.—Newark News.

JUDGE OF PROBATE

I hereby announce that I am a non-partisan candidate for reelection to the office of Judge of Probate in and for Pennington County, Minnesota. I respectfully solicit your vote and support at the Primary Election to be held on Tuesday Sept. 17th., 1912.

Wilhelm Michelet
Judge of Probate
Thief River Falls Minn.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Aug. 9, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. August 7th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given, that May Arndt, of Highlanding Minn., who on May 15th, 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 06150 for S. E. ¼ Section 32 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet. U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 16th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses

John M. Johnson, Bernt Johnson, Morgan Vaughan, John Guinan, all of Highlanding Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

The Difficulty.

The First Worker—Manner born be blowed! D'joo mean ter say if me an you come into a bit o' splosh we couldn't keep our ends up with these 'ere dooks and people?

His Doubting Friend—Oh, we should be all right, but our missuses 'd give the game away, yer know.—London Sketch.

Human foresight often leaves its proudest possessor only a choice of evils.—Colton.

The Men Who Succeed,

as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success to-day, demands health. to ail is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak, run down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas. B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well." Try them. Only 50 cents at All Druggists.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Aug. 9th, 1912

Department of the Interior, U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. August 5th, 1912.

NOTICE is hereby given that Grace M. Pinkerton, of Torgerson Minn., who on May 15th, 1911, made homestead Entry No. 06180 for S. E. ¼ Section 22 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 16th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

A. T. Rice, of Germantown Minn. John Markuson, E. H. Besancon, of Torgerson Minn. J. H. Hay, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Aug. 9,

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Aug. 7th. 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Knudt C. Shirley of Thief River Falls Minn. who on Oct. 8, 1904. made Homestead Entry No. 617. Serial No. 01106 for S E ¼ Section C . . . Township 154 N. Range 41 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 24th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Charl C. Overum, of Thief River Falls Minn.
Hans Jorstad, of Thief River Falls Minn.
Ole Shirley, of Thief River Falls, Minn.
Carl Carlson, of Germantown, Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9,40 a. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Aug. 23rd, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. August 20th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Paul Henriksen, of Espiee Minn., who on September 20th, 1910, made Homestead Application Serial No. 05657, for S.½ N.E. ¼, S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼, & N. E. ¼ S.W. ¼ Section 7 Township 155 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn, on the 27th, day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Fred Solley, John G. Nilson, Carl T. Hanson, Paul Saad, all of Espien Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year: four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

An Eye to Business.

"I want to marry you," said the rising young author bluntly.

"Why?" coyly [illegible] the [illegible]ess, preparing to listen to his impassioned confession.

"Well," he replied, "it would be a good advertisement for me."

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

[illegible]

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

We have a fine farm for sale in Deer Park township for only $21 per acre.

The rain last night has put a stop to threshing and stacking grain for a few days.

S. L. Holmn now has his ferry in good order at Highlanding and teams can be ferryed there at any time.

Stephen Singer passed by here Tuesday on his way east looking for votes for his nomination for County Commissioner.

Take your local paper and pick out the candidates that you want to vote for before you go to election and avoid the rush.

The warm weather of the past week has pushed the corn forward at a rapid rate, and the prospects now are that it will be a bumper crop.

P.C. Wold had the misfortune to have one of his hands badly smashed in a ditching machine this week which will lay him up for some time.

There are two threshing machines running in the same neighbor-hood on the north side of the river, which makes help rather scarce.

Edward Singer will put in a new country store up on Mud River, in Marshall County, in the new opened up lands that have been reclaimed by state ditches.

The Young Peoples Society will meet at the residence of Tobias Olson 1½ miles south of Highlanding on Sunday afternoon. It is expected that Congressman Steenerson will be at this meeting to address the young voters of the Eleven Towns.

The school board of Highlanding district are having lots of trouble getting a first grade teacher for their school, but may land one by Monday from St. Paul.

George Singer the Rhoda merchant made a trip to St. Paul last Friday to buy his winters stock of goods. He was accompanied by his son Edward Singer. They returned Monday well pleased with their trip.

Notwithstanding we have not had any heavy rains, there is now plenty of water in Red Lake River. Don't vote for the gang next Tuesday who indorsed the lumber companies in shutting off this river. Remember to steer clear of Taft and Eberhart.

Any of the petitioners on ditch 47 who want to join with us to commence action against the bonding company for not completing the contract on this ditch will let us know before Sept. 28th, as we want to have the papers ready for service on Oct. 22d, as we propose to test the drainage law and see if a contractor can hold up a ditch as this one has been held up.

Mr. Feyen was up yesterday to look at the floating dredge on ditch 47. They only have a few more looks coming, at that old machine, before October 1st, after which time the petitioners will make a move to get that ditch let to some contracter who will dig it. The company that now have the contract have plenty of good dredging machines that they could do this work with but are of the opinion that any old thing is good enough for ditch 47. But they will hear something drop after October 1st that may wake them up a little.

Uncle Ezra Says

"It don't take more'n a gill uv effort to git folks into a peck of trouble," and a little neglect of constipation, billiousness, indigestion or other liver derangement will do the same. If ailing, take Dr. King's New Life Pills for quick results. Easy, safe, sure and only 25 cents at All Druggists.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS.

Paid Advertising.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The undersigned take this means of announcing to the voters of Pennington County that he is a candidate for re-election as Superintendent of Schools subject to the ratification of of the voters there of at the Primary Election to be held on Tuesday, Sept. 17th, 1912.

Your vote and support are respectfully solicited.

E. A. Mostue.

Candidate For Sheriff.

I desire to announce to the voters of Pennington county that I will be a candidate for the office of Sheriff, and solicit the support of the voters at the Republican primaries, September 17. 1912.

Julious Halverson.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

I hereby announce to the voters of Commissioner District No. 5 that I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for County Commissioner of said district at the Republican primaries Sept. 17th. Vote for a man that lives in the eastern part of your territory that will take an interest in getting you roads and bridges.

Lars Lee
sec. 4
Town of Hickory.

FOR CLERK OF COURT.

I hereby announce that am a Republican candidate for the office of Clerk of District Court of Pennington County, and respectfully solicit your vote and support at the primeries to be held on Tuesday, September 17, 1912.

Yours Truly
E.J. OVERLAND
Thief River Falls.
Minn.

Having received the nomination of the Public Ownership Party for candidate for County Commissioner of the 5th commissioner district, I will, if elected, consider myself at the service of the people and use all my efforts in the interests of the tax payers of Pennington County.

I earnestly solicit the support of the voters at the final election November 5th.

Respectfully
George Lemers.

COUNTY SURVEYOR

I hereby announce that I am a candidate for the Republican Nomination for County Surveyor, of Pennington County, and solicit your voter and support at the primaries on Sept. 17 1912.

C. H. Martz.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

I hereby announce that I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for County Commissioner of the fith Commissioner District of Pennington County and solicit your votes at the primary election to be held on September 17th.

A. B. Mandt,
Kratka,
Minn.

Many Driven From Home.

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles, find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by All Druggists.

VOTE FOR STEPHEN SINGER.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER, OF THE 5th, DISTRICT.

Stale Bread Day.

A traveler says that a curious weakness of growning Moors is the love of eating newly baked bread. The caid of Azemmoor, in Morocco, discovered that old bread was thrown away as waste. To waste food is a serious offense in the eyes of a Moslem. The caid of Azemmoor therefore issued a bylaw prohibiting the baking of bread upon one day in each week. The citizens, he declared, must eat up the bread already baked, and he fixed Wednesday as the "bitakh," or holiday.

The Long And Short Of It.

Hon. Ira B. Mills, who is a candidate for Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner should receive the solid support of the farmers of the northern part of the state, as he has always been their stead fast friend when any question came up between them and the Railroad Companies.

* * * *

One of the candidates for County office called on a farmer last week and found him absent from home, and the farmers wife asked him what his business was, and the candidate said: "Oh not much of anything only I wanted to see Ole and ask him to vote for me." "Oh" answered his wife, "Of course he will promise to vote for you, for he always tells every one that he will vote them. The other fellow that is running for the same office was here the other day and he promised to vote for him and he surely will promise to vote for you."

* * * *

As a rule the farmer is willing to stay to home, attend to his work and let some one else attend to politics. This year it makes a differeace to the farmers who is their congressman from this district. Steenerson has introduced a bill in congress for the repeal of Reciprocity. His opponent favors it. If Reciprocity is ratified by Canada it makes from 15 to 20 cents differance in the price of your wheat and all other products in proportion. Take time to attend to your own interests. Go to election and vote for Steenerson.

* * *

The opposition of Attorney Halvorson to Steenerson in Thief River Falls is not likely to cut ice as the majority of the citizens of that city are wide awake enough to look after the interest of their own home town, and we can inform them that Halvor Steenerson will be the next Congressman and that he will get that new Federal building for our wide awake county seat.

— — — —

Wilheim Michelet, non-partition candidate for Judge of Probate, practically has no opposition for his nomination and election. He has made a first class official, and should receive the indorsement of the voters for another term.

— — — —

If anyone sees a Red Lake River farmer, who melted snow for his stock last winter, voting for Taft, and thus indorsing his government engineers, we will give one years subscription for his picture for publication, just to let the people see what he looks like.

— — — —

We see by the Bemidji Sentinal that D. P. O'Neil has announced himself as a candidate for re-election. Perhaps his opponent from Bemidji might let the fact be known through the Pennington County papers that he is after his scalp. It makes no difference whether a democrat or republican is elected for Representative, since the United States Senators are to be elected by the people.

— — — —

Remember that your political opinion don't amount to much if you don't go election and vote it. When you are handed your ticket and go into your booth, take time enough to look it over and vote for the different candidates for office of choice from top to bottom. Be sure to go to election.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE,
Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

"I am all right now, thanks to Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy."

The same relief is ready for you. Are you sure you do not need it? If Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy helped Charles Holmes, why won't it help you?

"I was troubled with heart disease, and after reading about Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy, I got a bottle. Before I got the Heart Remedy I had to sit up most of the night, and felt very bad at my stomach. Whatever I would eat made me feel worse, and my heart beat very fast. But thanks to Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy, I am all right now. I eat good, sleep good, and feel like a new man, although I am almost 68 years old. I have been a soldier in the late war of the rebellion, and was badly wounded." CHARLES HOLMES, Private Co. B, 54th N. Y. Infantry Volunteers, Walton, Delaware Co., N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

is kept in thousands of homes as a friend always to be relied upon in time of need.

Sold by all Druggists. If the first bottle fails to benefit, your money is returned. Ask any Druggist.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart

HOUSE KEEPER WANTED.

I desire to employ the services of a house keeper on my farm in the town of Kratka. Good conveniences and steady employment. Salary $4.00 a week and board. Call on or address,

John Quirk,
Highlanding Minn.

Paid advertising.

REGISTER OF DEEDS.

I hereby, wish to announce to my friends and neighbors that I am a candidate for re-election to the office of Register of Deeds. I maintain that for accuracy and efficiency my office has few equals in the state.

Very Sincerely Yours
Earnest L. Quist.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.

PRICE 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Curious Power of Charcoal.

It has been found that the power of charcoal to absorb gases is vastly increased at very low temperatures, so that it can be employed for exhausting incandescent lamp bulbs and Crookes tubes and also for separating mixed gases. Experiment has shown that at the freezing point of water and at normal atmospheric pressure one gram of charcoal absorbs four cubic centimeters of hydrogen and eighteen cubic centimeters of oxygen, but that at 182 degrees centigrade, the temperature of boiling air, one gram of charcoal absorbs 135 cubic centimeters of hydrogen and 250 cubic centimeters of oxygen. When several gases are mixed the charcoal absorbs some of them much more freely than others, so that by multiplying the operation gases can be separated from mixtures in sufficient quantity for industrial uses.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Expurgating It

"Elfrida, what did your father say when he heard that I had been here calling on you?"

"He said you were a numskull, a mollycoddle and a jolterhead."

"Is that all?"

"That's all, Guy—except the adjectives."—Chicago Tribune

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.

NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Gileau Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abraham Parquine, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. Duffy, Cashier. T. L. Cruzon, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Eleswhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

Ask for Catalogue 167.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.80 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.80 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.80 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

A SIXTH SENSE FOR VESSELS

Hiram Maxim Has Plan to Prevent Collisions at Sea.—Takes Lesson from the Bat

SIR HIRAM STEVENS MAXIM famed already as the inventor of the Maxim gun, cordite smokeless powder, devices for aeroplanes and other ingenious things, now comes forward with a new and startling original idea for preventing collisions at sea.

Briefly stated, he wishes to provide ships with a "sixth sense," represented by an apparatus that will send out vibrations and record minutely the "echoes" caused by them if they strike against any hard object near the ship — an iceberg, for example. Sir Hiram got his idea of this sixth sense from the bat, which, according to him and other scientists, possesses such a sense, and is able by means of it to find its way about in the dark with perfect ease.

The inventor explains his invention in a pamphlet just published by him in London. "The wreck of the Titanic was a severe and painful shock to us all," he writes. "I asked myself: 'Has science reached the end of its tether? Is there no possible means of avoiding such a deplorable loss of life and property?' At the end of four hours it occurred to me that ships could be provided with what might be appropriately called a sixth sense, that would detect large objects in their immediate vicinity without the aid of a searchlight."

Then Sir Hiram set to work to study the bat's peculiar possession in an endeavor to apply it to preventing marine collisions, and soon hit upon the idea which he now makes public. Before describing the new Maxim apparatus it is well to set down what he has to say about that which inspired it, the sixth sense of the bat.

"Every naturalist that has either experimented on bats or writes on the subject," he says, "seems to admit that the extraordinary appendages attached to the bat's face are organs of perception more or less allied to the sense of feeling, but not one of them, so far as I can learn, has ever suggested that these organs are for the purpose of receiving the echo from the vibrations of the wings. I think I was the first to discover this

The inventor goes on to show that the wings of the bat are extremely sensitive and very well provided with nerves, which is also true of the various organs of the bat's face. These nerves, he maintains, are intimately connected with each other and with the brain. Thus a bat, flying about in total darkness, sends out, by means of its wings, a series of pulsations or wave-like sound waves, but too low to be considered a sound. These waves, striking against all surrounding objects, are reflected back to their source, just as sound and light are, and these reflections of the vibrations, being received by the sensitive organs on the face of the bat, enable it to judge the distance to any object by the lapse of time between the sending out and the receiving of the waves.

Coming, then, to his collision-preventer, Sir Hiram says:

"Suppose now that we construct an apparatus that will produce atmospheric vibrations of about the same frequency as those produced by the bat, but instead of using the infinitesimal amount of energy employed by the bat, we use 200 or 300-horsepower—that is, we send out waves that have an amplitude and energy at least 300,000 times as great as those sent out by the bat. These vibrations, although of great energy, will not be audible to our ears, but they will shake up and agitate light objects for a considerable distance, and will travel at least 20 miles, so that they could be received and recorded by a suitable apparatus at that distance, and would be able to travel at least five miles and send back to the ship a reflected echo that would be strong enough to be detected."

Sir Hiram point out that in providing a ship with a "sixth sense," three distinct devices must be combined: one for producing and sending out the necessary sound waves, one for receiving the reflected waves and making them audible by ringing bells and another apparatus for recording the amplitude of the waves. Here is his description of the apparatus he has invented:

"For producing the vibrations of waves I prefer to use a modified form of siren, the disk being rotated at a suitable speed by a motor of some kind, preferably an electric motor. I prefer to use a very high pressure of steam, to have all the parts large and strong, and to produce about 14 or 15 vibrations per second. These will not come within the range of the human ear, consequently they cannot be considered as sound, and as they are of great amplitude and power they are able to travel over great distances, and when they come in contact with a body the waves are reflected back to the ship in the same manner that sound would be reflected back, but this echo would not be audible to the human ear.

"I therefore provide an apparatus which might be considered as an artificial ear. It is provided with a large diaphragm tightly drawn over a drum-shaped cylinder, and so arranged that the atmospheric pressure is always the same on both sides, quite irrespective of any air blast. It is therefore always able to vibrate freely in response to the waves of the echo, and its vibrations are made to open and close certain electrical circuits which ring a series of bells of various sizes. If, for example, the object is very small or at a very great distance from the ship, a very small bell rings, while a large object at a distance of two miles would ring a larger bell, and a very large object a still larger bell. This apparatus gives an audible notice if anything is ahead of the ship.

"The other apparatus is similar, but instead of ringing a bell it produces a diagram of the disturbances in the air—that is, when there is no noise except that due to the action of the ship or the sea waves, a wavy line is produced, but whenever the vibrations sent out by the vibrator strike an object and return, the wavy line on the paper becomes very much increased in amplitude, so as to be easily observed, and the distance that the object is from the ship can be measured by the length of the paper strip between the giving off of the vibrations and the receiving of the echo; therefore, the distance can be determined with a considerable degree of nicety, and the size of the object may be determined by the amplitude of the waves that return.

The inventor says that the apparatus for producing the atmospheric vibrations should be placed well forward on the main deck of the ship or in any position where it can be turned about from port to starboard. It should be secured to the deck very firmly, and connected, by means of a three-inch pipe, with a high-pressure boiler. A straightaway valve should be placed in the pipe near the boiler, and some means should be found of preventing the accumulation of water in the pipe leading to the apparatus.

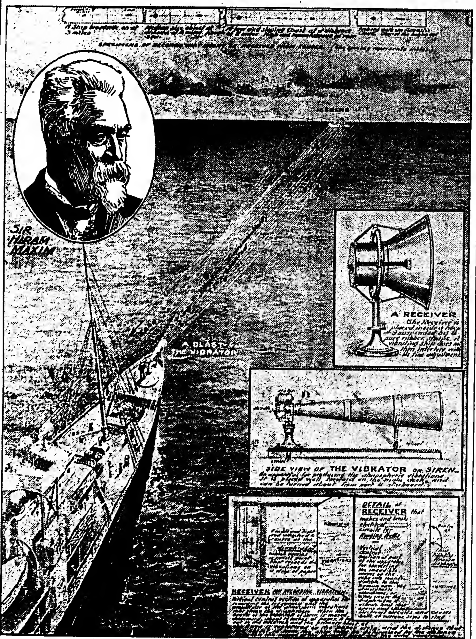
Except in foggy or stormy weather, the apparatus would be merely ornamental, of course, until it were used for communicating with other ships. But just as soon as darkness set in and the captain began to suspect that icebergs or other dangerous objects were close at hand, it would become useful. Of its operation under such circumstances Sir Hiram says:

"It should be used constantly sending out the blasts in every direction. If the sea were perfectly clear, the blasts sent out would be recorded at the very instant of their production, but no echo would be returned other than that due to the waves of the sea, which would provide a zigzag line of small amplitude; but if there should happen to be an object of any considerable size at a distance no greater than two or three miles, the zigzag line on the paper would be changed, the amplitude of the waves would be greater and would be very noticeable.

"To make sure, the blasts could be repeated several times; and then, if the result should be always the same, it would indicate the presence of some object, and the length of paper between the primary blast and the echo would indicate the distance that the object was from the ship. It might be so arranged that one inch of paper represented a mile.

"The receiving instruments can be placed anywhere on the ship where they can be turned in the same direction that the siren is turned, and there may be as many of them as desirable."

Sir Hiram points out that there are vastly more accidents to ships caused by running ashore than by collision, and that a coast does not need to present a very bold sea front to produce a very strong "echo" on his apparatus. If a ship provided with his apparatus was approaching the coast of Ireland, he says, the echo would be sufficiently strong to show itself over a distance of at least ten miles.



SIR HIRAM MAXIM
A BLAST OF THE VIBRATOR
A RECEIVER
SIDE VIEW OF THE VIBRATOR OR SIREN
DETAIL of RECEIVER RECEIVER

WAR MEDALS NOT CLAIMED

Only Decoration That the British Soldiers Value Highly Is the "Victoria Cross."

The fact that there are no fewer than 50,000 medals stored at Woolwich awaiting claimants causes one to wonder whether the soldier puts so high a value on medals as is usually supposed.

Nearly all of these medals are for the Boer war, and there is a special government department with a staff of clerks endeavoring to trace the owners. Besides these Boer war medals, there are 4,000 medals for the Zulu war which have never been claimed, and even to this day belated claims are still put in for medals for the Crimea and Indian mutiny.

A short time ago, for example, a veteran named James Crystal applied for and received a medal for Afghanistan, after a lapse of thirty years.

Most of the Boer war medals at Woolwich belong to irregulars, who joined on the outbreak of the war, and, after it was over, scattered all over the world. But many regulars have not troubled to claim the medal, alleging that it is too cheap, and considering that 750,000 of the medals were struck, it is certainly never likely to become a rarity.

Before the days of Waterloo very few medals were issued. The first medal ever issued was that given to the Elizabethan seaman who defeated the Armada, and the earliest military decoration was a silver badge issued by Charles I in 1643 for presentation to soldiers who had distinguished themselves in forlorn hopes.

Waterloo was the first occasion when there was a general issue of medals, and since that time, instead of issuing too few medals, England has gone, perhaps to the other extreme. Soldiers point out that the same decoration is awarded to the man who has been fighting at the front and carrying his life in his hands for months, as to the man in a regiment which has never stirred from the base of operations or so much as seen the enemy.

Every effort is made by the authorities to see that medals reach their owners, and if the owner of a medal happens to be dead, the medal is forwarded to his next of kin. Yet there are still large numbers unclaimed, and according to the regulations now in force, at the end of ten years' time the medals will be broken up and the silver debited to the mint.

The Victoria Cross, of course, is a decoration of quite another character, and a soldier would as soon think of parting with his life as with his Victoria Cross. But this is far from being the case with other medals, and Rudyard Kipling tells how he has seen soldiers wager their Indian general service medal on the toss for the price of a pot of beer.—Pearson's Weekly.

Parthenon in Danger of Collapse.

A shock will be given to lovers of antiquity by the suggestion made in the Revue des Beaux Arts that the Parthenon is in serious danger of collapse. Within the last twenty years the columns seem to have lost their rigidity, and unless the work of strengthening the foundations is taken in hand disaster may follow. The cause of the threatened collapse is the removal by archæologists of sculptured ruins of an earlier temple on the Acropolis which served as foundations for the Parthenon, and which have been taken to various museums for display and preservation. No effective precautions were taken to replace these relics by fresh masonry. Modern Greece has no money to spare for the necessary work of restoration, but it should not be difficult for those countries which have benefited from the spoliation of the treasures of Athens to raise funds to prevent the destruction of one of the wonders of the world.—Westminster Gazette.

THESE SIX LETTERS

From New England Women

Prove that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Does Restore the Health of Ailing Women.

Boston, Mass.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from hemorrhages (sometimes lasting for weeks), and could get nothing to check them. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound (tablet form) on Tuesday, and the following Saturday morning the hemorrhages stopped. I have taken them regularly ever since and am steadily gaining.

"I certainly think that every one who is troubled as I was should give your Compound Tablets a faithful trial, and they will find relief."—Mrs. GEORGE JUBY, 802 Fifth Street, South Boston, Mass.

Letter from Mrs. Julia King, Phœnix, R.I.

Phœnix, R.I.—"I worked steady in the mill from the time I was 12 years old until I had been married a year, and I think that caused my bad feelings. I had soreness in my side near my left hip that went around to my back, and sometimes I would have to lie in bed for two or three days. I was not able to do my housework.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me wonderfully in every way. You may use my letter for the good of others. I am only too glad to do anything within my power to recommend your medicine."—Mrs. JULIA KING, Box 282, Phœnix, R.I.

Letter from Mrs. Etta Donovan, Willimantic, Conn.

Willimantic, Conn.—"For five years I suffered untold agony from female troubles causing backache, irregularities, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It was impossible for me to walk up stairs without stopping on the way. I was all run down in every way.

"I tried three doctors and each told me something different. I received no benefit from any of them but seemed to suffer more. The last doctor said it was no use for me to take anything as nothing would restore me to health again. So I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see what it would do, and by taking seven bottles of the Compound and other treatment you advised, I am restored to my natural health."—Mrs. ETTA DONOVAN, 762 Main Street, Willimantic, Conn.

Letter from Mrs. Winfield Dana, Augusta, Me.

Augusta, Me.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured the backache, headache, and the bad pain I had in my right side, and I am perfectly well."—Mrs. WINFIELD DANA, R.F.D. No. 2, Augusta, Me.

Letter from Mrs. J. A. Thompson, Newport, Vt.

Newport, Vt.—"I thank you for the great benefit Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I took eight bottles and it did wonders for me, as I was a nervous wreck when I began taking it. I shall always speak a good word for it to my friends."—Mrs. JOHN A. THOMPSON, Box 3, Newport Center, Vermont.

Letter from Miss Grace Dodds, Bethlehem, N.H.

Bethlehem, N.H.—"By working very hard, sweeping carpets, washing, ironing, lifting heavy baskets of clothes, etc., I got all run down. I was sick in bed every month.

"This last Spring my mother got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and already I feel like another girl. I am regular and do not have the pains that I did, and do not have to go to bed. I will tell all my friends what the Compound is doing for me."—Miss GRACIE B. DODDS, Box 133, Bethlehem, N.H.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine, made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Adulation Pleased Rousseau.

Rousseau, whose bicentenary celebration occasioned a riot in Paris the other day, created a sensation when he visited England in 1766. "Rousseau and his Armenian dress," wrote Lord Charlemont, "were followed by crowds when he first arrived in London, and as long as this species of admiration lasted he was contented and happy. Garrick not only gave a supper in his honor, but played two characters specially to please him. Rousseau was highly gratified, but Mrs. Garrick declared that she had never spent a more unpleasant evening in her life, the philosopher being so anxious to display himself, and hanging over the front of the box so much, that she was obliged to hold him by the skirts of his coat to prevent him from falling over into the pit."

Golfer's Grand Army Score.

A golfer playing his first game of the season reported downtown the next day that he had made a Grand Army score—he went out in 61 and came back in 65.—Chicago Evening Post.

In Gotham.

"I know a policeman who always puts by something every week of what he earns."

"Humph! I know one who always puts by every week more than he earns."

His Weapon.

"Did you see where an escaping maniac somewhere struck down his pursuer with a cake of soap?"

"Then I suppose he made a clean getaway."

A Booklet for Investors.

The Harris Trust and Savings Bank, Harris Trust Building, Chicago, has issued a booklet entitled "Why Bonds Are Safe Investments," intended for the use of persons planning to invest in bonds for the first time. Its aim is to explain in simple terms the purposes and uses of various classes of bonds, and to indicate the value of bonds as safe investments for individuals as well as institutions. Copies may be had free on application.

The Likeness.

"This free pulling of teeth has some features in common with big social functions."

"What are they?"

"Charity bawls."

YOU CAN CURE CATARRH
By using Cole's Carbolisalve. It is a most effective remedy. All druggists. 25 and 50c.

Soda to Brighten China.

Soda will brighten china that has been burned or darkened by long use.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

The palmist can read your future off-hand.

HAPPY THOUGHT.

WE KNOW YOUR FATE! WE KNOW THE COLOR OF YOUR EYES BY LOOKING AT THEM 25¢

Fortune Teller—Yes, you will be very wealthy. With my inward eye I can see heaps of money all around you.

Mr. Verywise—Well, suppose you take your fee out of it with your inward fingers.

Collective Housekeeping.

An English paper tells of an experiment in collective housekeeping in what is known as Brent Garden village. The dwelling houses contain all improvements except a kitchen. Meals for everybody are cooked at a central hall, and may either be eaten there or sent home. A four-course dinner costs only 1 shilling and 6 pence. Servants are supplied, when needed, from the central hall at a cost of about ten cents an hour.

Time!-
One of the Principal Advantages of a Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen
is that you have a pen that will always respond immediately wherever you want to write. The Spoon Feed regulates an even and steady flow and prevents overflow. Gold Pens to suit every hand.
Sold Everywhere
173 B'way, N.Y.
"The Pen That Big Men Use"

KODAKS AND FINISHING
Any size 6 exp. film developed 10 cents. 10 or 12 exp. or film pack 20 cents. KREGEL PHOTO PARLORS, 629 Hennepin Ave., Minn., 46 E. 7th St., St. Paul

PENSIONS Write Milo B. Stevens & Co., Attys, 633 F St., Washington. Estab. 1864

FOR BACKACHE, RHEUMATISM
KIDNEYS AND BLADDER
FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS
Contain No Harmful or Habit Forming Drugs

T. R. AT STATE FAIR

PROGRESSIVE CANDIDATE SPENDS A DAY ANSWERING CHARGES AND VISITING TWIN CITIES.

THOUSANDS HEAR HIM

Is Guest of Six Hundred Roosevelt Men At Luncheon At the West Hotel—Boosts Cause of Third Party in State.

Minneapolis.—Ex-President Theodore Roosevelt stormed the Twin Cities in characteristic fashion. He made two public addresses, one in the open air to 15,000 people on the state fair grounds, and one to 600 luncheon guests at the West hotel.

Colonel Roosevelt was presented as "our foremost citizen" by C. P. Craig of the state fair board, who also gave the exposition praise as a great educational institution.

"My friends and fellow citizens," said Colonel Roosevelt, "men and women of Minnesota. I have always had a peculiar feeling for your state and your citizens." He was interrupted by a noise in the rear of the crowd and pleaded for a "square deal."

"Eleven years ago I made a speech before you on these grounds. I was then vice president of the United States. I outlined then what I believed should be the principles of governmental action. Within a few days a lamentable mischance made me president. Since then, for eleven years, my program in public and private life has been in carrying out principles advocated at the Minnesota state fair of 1901.

In speaking of the Penrose-Archbold charges, Mr. Roosevelt said, in part:

"Mr. Archbold said that the Spanish inquisition had nothing to compare with the treatment given the Standard Oil company during my administration. That is true. I administered the Abyssinian treatment to them, and if I have the opportunity I will administer it again. They have nothing to fear from the old parties, but they know they have an enemy in the progressive party, and they are doing everything they can to defeat us.

"Mr. Penrose said he advised the Standard Oil company to pay blackmail so as not to incur hostility in certain quarters. If the Standard Oil behaves itself it has nothing to fear, but if it does not it will mean hostility. They are not entirely correct in saying that Mr. Bliss had no influence with me to protect them. Anyone has influence with me if they make a reasonable request, but with an improper request they would have no influence at all.

"They complain not about making a contribution, but they complained that they didn't get the goods."

COLLEGE WON'T OPEN.

Heirs Attack Legality of Transfer by Baptists to Methodists.

Winona.—Because of the raising of the question of the legality of the transfer of the Parker college properties at Winnebago City from the Baptists to the Methodists of the state, that institution will not be opened this fall by the denomination which now holds the title. The property was given to the Free Baptists by the late Mr. Parker, a Minneapolis merchant, for school purposes. The heirs later agreed to the transfer of the property to the Baptists when the denomination should merge with the Free Baptists. The trustees about a year ago disposed of the college to the Methodists and now the heirs have entered a protest.

At a meeting of the Minnesota Methodist conference late this month, according to Rev. Frank Doran of Winona, who is a member, a decision will be reached as to what further action the board will take with reference to the matter. At any rate the college cannot be opened until January. Rev. E. V. Dubois, formerly a pastor at Rochester, who was chosen president of the college, will be given other educational work by the Methodists if the college transfer is found to be illegal.

Nose Bleed Proves Fatal.

St. Paul.—Harry Carlson, 728 Wells street, succumbed to nose bleed which had continued for the last three days when the police ambulance arrived at his home to take him to the city hospital. Carlson was 21 years old and had just returned to St. Paul from the harvest fields.

Dog Bite Fatal to Boy.

Duluth.—Little Thomas Hedican, aged seven years, son of Patrick Hedican, a special officer for the Oliver Iron Mining company in the Higgins mine, near Virginia, died at his home from hydrophobia. The boy was bitten by an unknown dog July 28.

Agriculture Added to Course.

Blue Earth.—The public schools will be opened Monday. The high school teachers are A. C. Tibbetts, superintendent; Amelia L. Wier, high school principal; Jennie M. Owens, domestic science; Emma Hall, latin; Lillian Rosbech, science; Marian Richardson, history; Ray Campbell, manual training; Earl Martin, agriculture; Blanche Seeley, reading and expression; Una Hodson, drawing; Ella Becking, normal department; Clara Gruenhagen, kindergarten. Agriculture is being introduced under the Lee-Benson act.

JUDGE OSCAR HALLAM.

Judge Hallam, Second Judicial District of Minnesota, St. Paul, is a nonpartisan candidate for associate justice of the Supreme court of Minnesota.

LAND GOING UP.

Freeborn County Waste Places Are Being Reclaimed.

Albert Lea.—E. V. H. Brown has been named as engineer for the latest drainage ditch projected in this county. The preliminary work will be taken up at once with a competent force to complete it at as early a date as possible.

There has probably been more money expended in reclaiming low land in Freeborn county than in any other in the state. Thousands of acres have been made tillable that were worthless before. On much of this reclaimed land excellent crops are now produced and the prospect is that it will be as high priced as any in the county. Over a hundred farmers could secure farms of over a hundred acres each on the land added to the tax rolls by the ditches that have already been constructed and more are to follow. The largest project is the Rice Lake ditch which cost about $150,000, and affected over 12,000 acres of land. Between $400,000 and $500,000 has been expended in ditching here, besides the tens of thousands of dollars put in the soil by means of tiling. Freeborn county has come rapidly to the front as a consequence of this activity, and when a few more ditches are constructed waste land will be only a memory here.

Land has taken a big jump and is commanding from $60 to $125 an acre, as compared with $40 to $80 an acre, five years ago. There has been no special boom here, but it is better understood that land is a gold mine, as crop failures are unknown and farmers are making good money, largely, of course, as a result of the creameries. With the reclaiming of the low land, good roads and better farming, it is confidently expected by those who have given the matter attention that $200 acre land is not far distant here, for when properly cultivated the crops will pay good interest on that amount, whereas a few years ago it was difficult to lease land at more than $2 an acre a year.

MINERS TRAPPED.

Three Caught in Shaft Near Biwabik After Cloudburst.

Biwabik.—There was a cloudburst here late Thursday night. Three men were caught in the Ruddy mine, about half a mile from town, and perished.

The big pumps were started to capacity and took water from the mine at the rate of about 1,200 gallons a minute.

Ulo Unlagizec, a Montenegrin, was caught in the bottom. Seranini Dominico and Mike Serano, Italians, were caught in a sub-level, about eighty feet from the surface. The Montenegrin is single the others are married, Sereno being the father of seven children.

The Monica mine also took in a large amount of water. The storm was the worst here in years and did much damage.

Embraces Mother; Almost Arested.

Minneapolis. — A kink was put in the anti-spooning ordinance which is supposed to govern conduct of young people who go canoeing on the lakes under park board control, when an officer at Lake Harriet nearly committed the dreadful deed of arresting a youth for embracing his mother.

Indian Will Test Laws.

Fergus Falls.—The question whether an Indian has a right to hunt and fish, regardless of the state game laws, is about to be tested by John W. Carl in the courts of this county, and the case will eventually go to the supreme court of the state and possibly of the United States.

Wettest August in Years.

Minneapolis. —By far the wettest August in five years ended Saturday. The total precipitation recorded at the local weather bureau from Aug. 1, to 7 p. m. Saturday was 5.56 inches, exceeding the normal rainfall for August by 1.87 inches. The average precipitation for the month of August, since the local bureau was established in 1891, is 3.69 inches. Last year it was 3.65. The heavy rain of Thursday night when 2.02 inches fell in a few hours, helped make the August record a high one.

SEVEN ARRESTED AT MEETING

BLUECOATS USE CLUBS TO DISPERSE SOCIALIST GATHERING.

T. E. Latimer, State Secretary of Party, Is Taken Into Custody.

Minneapolis.—There were seven persons were arrested and traffic was tied up for more than 20 minutes during a near-riot which resulted when patrolmen tried to break up a meeting of Socialists and I. W. W. members at Fourth street and Nicollet avenue.

Acting under orders, about a score of patrolmen, plain clothes men and police officials had their hands full trying to quell the disturbance. The trouble resulted when several hundred men were blocking the street, and traffic was unable to get through. The traffic patrolman ordered the crowd to move on, but was only hooted at and jeered. Several men assumed threatening attitudes and a call for assistance was sent to police headquarters.

At the beginning of the trouble, a Socialist speaker was about to address the crowd, but when he saw what was brewing he discreetly vanished.

Socialists and I. W. W.'s have been holding meetings at this corner for some time, and last week the police issued an order not to hold meetings there during fair week, because of the traffic, but to go to Bridge Square, where there is plenty of room.

T. E. Latimer, president of the Minnesota Socialistic Publishing company and state secretary of the Socialist party, was present with his wife. When Patrolman Lehmeyer ordered him to move on he asked why the patrolman did not tell some of the others. The patrolman said that he had to start somewhere. Latimer refused to move and was taken to the patrol box. When the patrol wagon arrived, Mrs. Latimer refused to be separated from her husband.

Mr. Latimer and other Socialists stamped the conduct of the police last night as "outrageous." They were bitter in their denunciation of the methods of city officials in not allowing them to use the streets for speaking purposes.

HUTCHINSON LINE.

Luce Electric Officers Begin New Survey.

Hutchinson.—Hutchinson may be on the main line of the Electric Short Line, which is building out of Minneapolis.

W. L. Luce, president of the company, Colonel Earle D. Luce, John Westerdahl, civil engineer, and F. R. Roberts, general manager, visited McLeod county last week on a trip primarily to select the most feasible route for a line westward from Winsted, into which town they assert they will be running cars before January next.

They traveled in an automobile, reaching Winsted late in the forenoon and drove on to Silver Lake, where they were met by a committee of Silver Lake and Hutchinson men.

The party later came to Hutchinson and visited the industries here. The engineers admitted that the preliminary line run last year across the country westward from Winsted presented engineering difficulties in the way of cuts and fills that would make it an extremely costly line to construct; that a line running via Silver Lake and Hutchinson would be only four miles longer and of much easier grades; that they could better afford to deviate some from an air line in order to touch two such promising towns as they had just visited, but just what line would be finally adopted it would be impossible as yet to say.

DROPS OUT OF SIGHT.

Drops Out of Sight—Officials Fail to Get Service on Carlston Hudson.

Minneapolis.—Carlston Hudson, the accused Chicago man who is made defendant in a suit charging fraud and blackmail brought by Mrs. Caroline M. King, has disappeared, according to J. F. McGee, attorney for Mrs. King, who returned from Chicago. Effort to secure personal service on him in court proceedings failed.

Mr. McGee returned with an affidavit signed by the man supposed to have sent the threatening letters to Mrs. King in 1906 and for the suppression of which, she says, she paid Hudson $120,000, her entire fortune. This affidavit declares that the man was abroad at the time the letters were sent. According to Mr. McGee, he has promised to come to Minneapolis and testify.

Fireman Killed.

Minneapolis.—A veteran captain of the Minneapolis fire department, William Fraeger, was killed almost instantly and nine other firemen were injured in two collisions between fire trucks and streetcars.

Debs Opens Battle.

Fergus Falls.—Eugene V. Debs delivered his keynote speech at the Lyceum theater here before an audience of about 400, several coming from adjoining towns. Socialism has comparatively little strength here, but the audience listened closely and there were occasional outbursts of applause. The speaker referred to as agitators of the past, Revolutionary leaders and anti-slavery leaders, who were denounced as demagogues and inciters of the rabble in their day.

A VARIATION.

"Your husband frequently misses his dinner."

"Yes. Whenever there is a ball game in town he devotes himself to finding fault with the umpire instead of with the cook."

ERUPTION LIKE PIMPLES

Wathena, Kan.—"My child's scalp trouble became so bad that I was ashamed to have anyone see him. His head had a solid scab on it. He also had a terrible breaking out on his face which was gradually growing worse. The eruption was like pimples which developed into sores when he scratched, which he did almost constantly. Baby would almost scratch himself raw.

"I had used several different kinds of salve, none of them helping in the least bit, when I saw the Cuticura advertisement in the paper and it made me think of the good results my sister had when she used it for her children. I had only used Cuticura Soap and Ointment about two weeks before I noticed that the sores were almost entirely gone, and it must have been a month or six weeks he was troubled before I began the treatment. He would get easy when I would put the Cuticura Ointment on him. Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured him and he has a clear complexion now." (Signed) Mrs. W. H. Hughes, Dec. 31, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

Filial.

"I thought your father looked very handsome with his gray hairs."

"Yes, dear old chap. I gave him those."—London Opinion.

No Kick Coming.

"But the portrait doesn't resemble me!"

"Then what are you kicking about?"

California Woman's Good Shot.

While walking through the woods near Cohasset, Mrs. W. H. Pillsbury of Chico shot a large brown bear that measured six feet from tip to tip.

Mr. and Mrs. Pillsbury were walking from their summer home near Cohasset to the "Promontory," a high point from which an excellent view of the whole valley can be had. Mrs. Pillsbury had a 30-30 carbine. Suddenly she saw a large bear coming down the hill about forty yards away. "It's a bear, shall I shoot it?" she shouted to her husband. Pillsbury answered in the affirmative and his wife asked, "Where shall I shoot him." "In the head," came the answer. With deliberate aim the woman fired, hitting the animal square in the right eye, killing him instantly.

The hide weighed seventy pounds and the weight of the carcass was estimated at 300 pounds.—Chico Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

Ancient Idea of Dancing.

Dancing was originally a means of expressing religious feeling.

Minnesota Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital

Located on White Bear Lake, 30 min. from St. Paul, convenient to street car on Lake Shore Station, N. P. Ry. Modernly equipped for the treatment of diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. Steam heated and electric lighted. Accommodations for 45 patients. Rates reasonable. For further particulars apply to MISS SWAN, Head Nurse, White Bear Lake, Minn., or Attending Physicians, 833 Lowry Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

The Love in Fiction and Life.

A periodical devoted to the drama pleads for plays based on some emotion other than love. The difficulty in producing such plays is that every play must have a hero, and in making a hero the playwright, as well as his audience, almost inevitably adopts the view expressed 2,000 years ago by a scribbler of the dead wall of Pompeii: "He who has never loved a woman is not a gentleman."

Instead of liquid antiseptics, tablets and peroxide, for toilet and medicinal uses, many people prefer Paxtine, which is cheaper and better. At druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

Subtle Admonition.

"Why do you always ask that regular customer if the razor hurts him?" asked one barber.

"Just as a gentle reminder," replied the other, "that if he forgot the tip it's liable to hurt him the next time."

CURES ITCHING SKIN DISEASES.
Cole's Carbolisalve stops itching and makes the skin smooth. All druggists. 25 and 50c.

Korean Arable Land.

It is estimated that the present area of arable land in Korea might be increased 20 to 30 per cent., but not more.

WHAT WILL CURE MY BACK?

Common sense will do more to cure backache than anything else. "Twill tell you whether the kidneys are sore, swollen and aching. It will tell you in that case that there is no use trying to cure it with a plaster. If the passages are scant or too frequent, proof that there is kidney trouble is complete. Then common sense will tell you to use Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended special kidney remedy.

An Arkansas Case

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Henry J. White, 416 N. 3rd st., Ft. Smith, Ark., says: "I suffered everything but death from terrible kidney trouble. I had awful headaches and dizzy spells, urine scalded and my back ached constantly. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me completely and I have had no sign of kidney trouble since."

Get Doan's at any Drug Store, 50c. a Box

Doan's Kidney Pills

Constipation Vanishes Forever

Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable — act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes. SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

A Good School

LARGE ATTENDANCE, LOWEST RATES

Thorough Work. Practical Courses. Accredited. Courses: Preparatory, Commercial, Shorthand, Stenotypy, Teachers, High School, Scientific, Music, Penmanship, Agriculture, Steam and Gas Engineering. Regular tuition, $1.00 per week; board, $1.95. Free Tuition to one student from each postoffice. Write for catalog. Address SOUTHERN MINNESOTA NORMAL COLLEGE, BOX 830, AUSTIN, MINNESOTA

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Prevents hair falling. 50c, and $1.00 at Druggists.

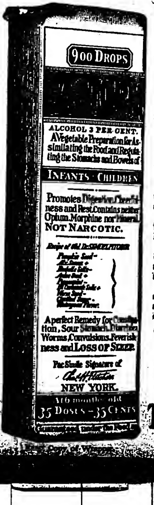
The Pick of Florida Farm Lands in Escambia Co., 8 to 12 miles from Pensacola, at $25.00 per acre. Easy terms. Agents wanted. FISHER-BARBOUR CO., PENSACOLA, FLORIDA

IF IT'S YOUR EYES
PETTIT'S EYE SALVE is what you need

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 37-1912.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.



900 DROPS
ALCOHOL 3 PER CENT.
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of INFANTS CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral.
NOT NARCOTIC.
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES — 35 CENTS
Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. J. W. Dinsdale, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I use your Castoria and advise its use in all families where there are children."

Dr. Alexander E. Mintie, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria and have found it a reliable and pleasant remedy for children."

Dr. Agnes V. Swetland, of Omaha, Nebr., says: "Your Castoria is the best remedy in the world for children and the only one I use and recommend."

Dr. J. A. McClellan, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria for children and always got good results. In fact I use Castoria for my own children."

Dr. J. W. Allen, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I heartily endorse your Castoria. I have frequently prescribed it in my medical practice, and have always found it to do all that is claimed for it."

Dr. C. H. Glidden, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "My experience as a practitioner with your Castoria has been highly satisfactory, and I consider it an excellent remedy for the young."

Dr. H. D. Benner, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria as a purgative in the cases of children for years past with the most happy effect, and fully endorse it as a safe remedy."

Dr. J. A. Boarman, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

Dr. J. J. Mackey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I consider your Castoria an excellent preparation for children, being composed of reliable medicines and pleasant to the taste. A good remedy for all disturbances of the digestive organs."

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

The Corrector of Destinies

Being Tales of Randolph Mason as Related by His Private Secretary, Courtland Parks

The District Attorney

By Melville Davisson Post

Copyright by Edward J. Clode

One of the most disastrous bank failures in the history of the middle west was that of the Patton National Bank of St. Louis. It took down with it almost every one of its correspondents—the Exeter Trust company especially, and Blackwell's bank, one of the oldest in the Mississippi valley. Its New York correspondent, the Amsterhof National, sent west a half-million dollars in gold that never returned to its money vaults. The bank was closed by the national bank examiner on a Saturday afternoon, a few minutes before three o'clock.

I was in the Stock Exchange on Wall street the next Monday, following the fluctuations of some St. Louis securities which the Patton National had been instrumental in placing in New York. It was an ugly morning for anything west of the Ohio. I came out of the Stock Exchange at two o'clock disgusted with securities. The Astors were the longest-headed financiers after all. The earth alone was secure.

As I went down the steps into the street, an old man came out from one of the exits of the gallery to the exchange and spoke to me. "Is this Mr. Courtlandt Parks?" he said. I replied that it was, and hurried on up the crowded street. I was not in a very pleasant mood, and he was evidently a provincial out to see the horned and hoofed beasts of which he had read in his weekly newspapers. He followed me, however, and when I reached the crossing on Broadway he was at my elbow.

I spoke to him then, a bit impatiently. "May I inquire," I said, "who it is that honors me with so close an attendance?"

The old man hesitated a little. "I am Jeremiah Patton," he replied, "the president of the Patton National Bank of St. Louis. I want to see Randolph Mason."

I turned squarely upon him, with no effort to conceal my amazement. He was a tall old man with close-cropped gray hair, mild brown eyes and a kindly mouth. His face was wan and colorless, and one of his legs dragged a little when he walked. I could not stop there on that crowded corner to converse, even with a Magus, although I should not have been more disturbed had I met one of these fabled wise men.

I took him with me to Randolph Mason's house. I wished to hear his story, to learn the details of the failure. The newspapers were not a little puzzled over it; the bank had seemed prosperous, without a shadow upon it, up to the day it was closed by order of the comptroller of the currency. Banks do not commonly drop, some fine morning, suddenly into ruin; whisperings go, usually, before destruction.

I was a bit doubtful of the identity of the tall old man until I saw him bare-headed, without his great coat, in a chair by the fire. Then I instantly recognized him from the newspaper cuts, which represented him seated by a table; but he was more impressive, stronger in this pose. His forehead was broad, his head big and well-covered with thick gray hair; but the face, as I have said, was gaunt, the eyepits and cheek-bones showing the first ravages of disaster.

His story, told to Randolph Mason in a voice that broke now and then and was pieced out with desolate gestures, presented, a situation, in my opinion, beyond human agencies to correct. The matter had proceeded too far. Events, arising in orderly, in infernal sequence, had entirely overwhelmed him.

Jeremiah Patton was seventy-five years old. He had made a fortune as a wholesale merchant, and had retired from active business late in life, with a reputation established throughout the west for fair dealing and highest integrity. He had no family, his wife having been dead for twenty years. It had appeared to him that by establishing a bank, he could usefully employ his wealth, so he had erected a modern office building on a good corner, and founded the Patton Savings bank, of which he was president and almost the exclusive owner. His object was to encourage a spirit of thrift among the middle class of the city, and his method was to allow his depositors every cent that their deposits earned, less the fixed charges of the bank. His own capital yielded a sufficient income for his needs.

The bank quickly sprang into prominence. Its deposits were enormous. Its president found himself under a heavy burden of care and responsibility in the investment of these large sums so they would yield a substantial profit.

About this time, Belmont Lane, the American president of the Russian Oil company, came to St. Louis to acquire, if possible, the producing territory of Missouri, and to establish banking relations. Lane was a man of courtly address, imposing presence, and charming personality. He very soon was on intimate terms with Jeremiah Patton, and he suggested a consolidation of several smaller banks with that of Patton, and the founding of a national bank. This plan was carried out, and the Patton National Bank of St. Louis was the result, Patton advancing sufficient money to acquire the major portion of the stock, while Lane carried, through various employes of his company, a nominal interest. He, therefore, did not appear on the books as an owner of any stock, and his name was in no way connected with the institution. He explained that because of the wide financial relations of the oil company it would be unwise to connect his name with any one bank, since, should the company want to borrow money, he would be asked why he did not get it at his own bank.

Jeremiah Patton remained as the president of this new institution and its nominal head, although its active affairs and virtual control passed into the hands of a board of directors selected from the associates of Belmont Lane.

The old man halted a little in the march of his narrative, searching if he could bring into more vivid outline the figure of Belmont Lane. This man's real character was still a mystery to him. The clue to his charming, persuasive, dominant personality eluded him when he tried to embody it in words. It always so eluded him, he said, when Lane was not before him. In the man's absence, his influence was naught; before one's face, it was irresistible. When Belmont Lane urged a plan, it seemed at once practicable, alluring, filled with promise. He made men gaze with him from his own window, and out of it all things looked good. So, when Belmont Lane suggested a sub-company with an enormous paper capital to acquire leases in Missouri for the Russian company, he readily induced Jeremiah Patton to assume its presidency and to hold in his name almost the entire stock. Again, Lane was not of this company; a few of his employes stood in the charter with Patton, and made a board of directors which revolved around Belmont Lane's finger, as the bank did.

One fine morning, while Mr. Patton was in Chicago, the sub-company borrowed two millions of dollars from the Patton National bank on its note, with its stock as collateral. Ten days later, the National Bank Examiner condemned this loan and declared the collateral worthless. A further examination of the bank's accounts showed extensive overdrafts of the sub-company hidden under dummy notes. The bank was insolvent, and the examiner closed it at the direction of the Federal authorities at Washington.

The assets of this sub-company proved utterly worthless. Belmont Lane could not be found. He was thought to have returned to Russia. Jeremiah Patton was utterly ruined. But this was not the worst feature of the situation; the incensed public demanded that some one be punished for so great a swindle. They instantly erected a guillotine, and found no head to place under it but that of Jeremiah Patton.

At this point in his story the old man arose, took several financial sheets from his pocket and spread them out on the table. Their headlines clamored for Jeremiah Patton's arrest.

"You see," he continued, "I was president of the company which wrecked the bank, and its greatest stockholder. My coming to New York will be considered as a flight from justice. I can hardly hope to reach St. Louis unaccompanied by a United States marshal. I am certain to be indicted by the next Federal grand jury, and certain to be convicted."

Randolph Mason was standing by the fire, his shoulder leaning against the mantel, his arm extended along it. He began to examine the old man with sharp, searching queries—not as to the details of the story he had just related, but with respect to the personnel of the Federal court in this city.

The old man replied that both the judge and the district attorney were products of a recent political upheaval in his state. The former United States judge, a man in but middle life, had died suddenly the previous September. The present judge, more a politician than lawyer, had yielded an election to the senate in order to obtain this life appointment to the bench. He was generally regarded as an honorable man, but one not greatly learned in the law.

The district attorney was a man named Stetheimer, elevated to his position as a reward for conspicuous party service in the last national election. He had organized a certain large element of the city, and held it until a bargain was struck for this position. The man was ambitious and proud. The position of United States district attorney carried with it a general practice of the best value in the Federal courts. This practice Stetheimer was anxious to secure. Jeremiah Patton had heard this criticism of him. Some editors of opposite politics had even accused him of seeking the civil business of large interests under a veiled suggestion of protection against the rigor of certain acts of congress. Mr. Patton thought these corporations were principally those that were said to be constant violators of the interstate commerce laws. Still, the district attorney was reputed to have great influence with the new judge. His advice was usually followed with respect to the conduct of trials. The common impression was that the judge, not yet familiar with the Federal procedure, assumed the advice of the district attorney to be correct. The district attorney was successfully posing as an able lawyer, while, in fact, he was an obscure practitioner of indifferent learning. This was the gist of all that Jeremiah Patton had heard about this court.

Randolph Mason took his arm from the mantelshelf and turned to the banker. "You will at once return to St. Louis," he said. "Employ the best counsel you are able to obtain. When you are indicted, insist upon an immediate trial; oppose every delay, no matter how favorable it may seem to you. Object to it, and put your objection on the record. When you are acquitted—"

The old man interrupted Mason with an appealing protest. "But I won't be acquitted, Mr. Mason," he said. "Stetheimer will arrange his jury for that, if it is necessary. But he won't have to arrange it. The people are mad for a sacrifice. A jury could not be got that would acquit a bank president under such circumstances. Belmont Lane has brought me up to the door of the penitentiary. The United States court will put me inside and turn the key in the lock."

Randolph Mason paid not the slightest attention to the man's words. He merely repeated the last sentence of his statement.

"When you are acquitted," he said, "you will come at once to me, and I will adjust the remaining features of this problem."

Jeremiah Patton returned to St. Louis on that very evening, and I followed the order of subsequent events in the newspapers of that city. The Federal court was at that time opening its session. An indictment was found. Patton's attorneys demurred to this indictment. This demurrer was overruled. They then demanded an immediate trial, and the court ordered the case to a jury. Two weeks were consumed in the examination of talesmen; new panels were obtained and almost wholly rejected. It seemed that every man in the city had conceived an opinion against the prisoner. Finally a curious medley of jurors was secured, and the government began the introduction of its testimony.

The district-attorney was on his feet.

Up to this time, Mason had done nothing. Now he sent for Jacob Solmeyer, a lawyer of considerable prominence, and explained to him what he was to do. I know in detail how Solmeyer carried out his instructions: He went at once to St. Louis and called on the district attorney. He explained that certain large operators of Chicago and Kansas City were laboring to effect a consolidation of all the big firms in a certain line in the west into one gigantic company with a hundred million dollar capitalization, under the laws of New Jersey; that the matter was still in an early, formative state. The bankers who were to furnish the large sums necessary to purchase such plants as would not voluntarily come into the trust, feared that some unfriendly district attorney might attempt to bring the matter into court, and thereby affect the bonds of this syndicate, which they would hold as their security. If, however, the principal office of this great projected company could be placed in some large city of the west, where the district attorney of the United States was a person of conservative ideas, they would furnish the money; otherwise they would not. Solmeyer represented these bankers, and this was the problem they had presented to him for solution. He had gone carefully over the entire field, and finally settled upon the district attorney of St. Louis as filling every requirement of his clients. If he could act, Solmeyer would pay him five thousand dollars as a retainer; then, when the bankers held their meeting in New York, he could come before them and arrange about his annual retainer. The size of this annual retainer Solmeyer hesitated to suggest, but intimated something in the neighborhood of twenty thousand dollars.

The district attorney glowed with joy and increased importance, put the five thousand dollars in his pocket, and Jacob Solmeyer returned to his office in New York.

The trial of Jeremiah Patton continued. All the affairs of the bank were gone into. Masses of documentary evidence were introduced. The district attorney was determined to make his reputation on this case. He burned with dramatic pose every piece of red fire that he could lay his hands on. The courtroom swarmed with reporters. The evidence was printed in detail in all the great dailies. Patton was looked upon as an intolerable scoundrel who had wrecked the bank of which he was president, and looted his depositors by borrowing on worthless securities great sums for a company which he owned.

On a Saturday afternoon, the district attorney closed for the government and rested his case. On the following Sunday Jacob Solmeyer telegraphed the district attorney that there would be a meeting of the bankers on Tuesday evening, and to come at once to New York. Stetheimer called Solmeyer by long-distance telephone, explained his situation in regard to the Patton trial, and asked if the meeting could not be postponed. Solmeyer answered that a postponement was impossible, that some members of the syndicate were the heads of great banking houses in Europe and could not await any man's convenience; that the district attorney must attend the meeting, or return the retainer paid to him and abandon the scheme.

Uncertain what course to follow, the district attorney took counsel with his wife. She advised him to get rich while he could, while the winged hand of opportunity was reached out to him. Money was the only actual power that could be stored away against the time of need. Everything else was like fairy gold—yellow oak leaves on the morning after. Still, Stetheimer feared to abandon the case to subordinates and go out of St. Louis. He would be open to the charge of having been purchased by the defendant; besides that, the assistant district attorney would step up into his place before the public eye. He must find some other way.

In his extremity, he determined to apply to the judge for a postponement of the trial until the next term of court. This would give him an opportunity to meet the bankers in New York, and still conduct the case. He went at once to the judge and explained that he had just discovered a possible connection of several other prominent persons with the wrecking of the Patton National bank, and that, before he cross-examined Jeremiah Patton, he wished thoroughly to investigate this evidence and fortify himself with all the details. This would take considerable time. Stetheimer strengthened his suggestion with excellent arguments—it was a matter of the greatest public importance; thousands of helpless depositors relied wholly on the courts to insure the fidelity of their bankers; swift, complete, ruthless punishment of every person involved, high or low, was their only safeguard. He wished to ferret out every one of the criminals concerned, to run them down, brand them as thieves, and hand them over to the warden of the penitentiary, and the judge must give him ample time in which to do this. In fact, it was a duty owed to the whole people of Missouri. The judge decided finally that, if these were the facts, he would direct a continuance upon the motion of the district attorney.

Stetheimer went then to the attorneys for Jeremiah Patton. He told them that his wife was ill, threatened with appendicitis, it was thought; that he wished to take her at once to Philadelphia; that he would probably be required to remain there during the operation and the convalescence of the patient, and requested them to consent to a postponement of the case until the following term. The attorneys courteously expressed their regret, but replied that this was a criminal trial, and that they could not consent to any order, no matter what. Still, they could not see how their client would be prejudiced by such a continuance, and if the judge wished to enter such an order, they would make no vigorous oral argument against it.

When the court convened on Monday morning, the judge made the continuance upon the motion of the district attorney. This motion was not strenuously resisted by the counsel for Jeremiah Patton. They offered a formal objection for the prisoner, which was overruled, and the exception was entered on the record. The judge discharged the jury, ordered a new panel and took up the trial of some petty revenue cases, the assistant district attorney appearing for the government.

Stetheimer explained the meaning of this continuance to the public by covertly suggesting the story told to the judge. The public was appeased with the promise of more and prominent victims, and the district attorney stood justified in the conduct of his case. Moreover, his reputation for shrewdness was established, and his figure as a far-sighted, incorruptible public servant on the trail of higher thieves lengthened, widened, loomed larger. He left immediately for New York accompanied by his wife, who was taken to the station in an ambulance.

Jacob Solmeyer arranged a meeting of some of the more prosperous looking of his clients and took the district attorney before them. They discussed the problems of the great combine, questioned the lawyer at length upon the status of their rights under the Interstate Commerce Act, the possibility of a Federal investigation, the effect of such a move on the bonds of the trust as a security, and the scope of the act in its criminal features.

The district attorney slurred over the difficulties in the Federal status, pointing out that the section providing individual punishment for violation of the act was already a dead letter, that the act itself was largely a bugaboo to appease the farmer. He urged the combine and promised immunity in Missouri. Solmeyer's "bankers" adjourned without finally determining upon the loan to the contemplated combine. However, they agreed to employ the district attorney, in case the loan was made, and to pay him twenty-five thousand dollars a year. Solmeyer gave the man an additional one thousand dollars, and he returned to St. Louis.

On Thursday morning Jacob Solmeyer reported to Randolph Mason, and told of the transaction in detail. He was puzzled to the finger tips and curious to know Mason's object. But he was a man of discretion, aware of the value of silence and the folly of any query put to Randolph Mason. His theory was that Mason wished to make a case against the district attorney looking to his removal, and in test of this theory he ventured to present his report carefully in writing, attaching to it a sworn stenographic report of the district attorney's speech to the "bankers," including his offer of protection against the Interstate Commerce Act.

Randolph Mason tossed the papers into the grate when Solmeyer had finished, concluded the conference, and dismissed him.

In the hall the old German blinked behind his thick glasses. "Mein Gott! Mr. Parks," he said, "vat does Randolph Mason mean? He pay six thousand dollars to get der district attorney on record, den he burns der record."

"Solmeyer," I replied, "I do not know who was the man in the iron mask. I do not know what melody it was the sirens sang, neither do I know what Randolph Mason means."

And yet I was not in the least puzzled. I thought I saw clearly into the solution of it all. Mason's ruse had failed—that was the reading of the riddle. He had planned to lure the district attorney out of St. Louis and thereby cripple the prosecution; but the shrewdness of the man had forestalled him. Mason had warned Patton to oppose a continuance; he evidently counted upon his counsel to resist with such vigor that the court would go on with the trial; he had not dreamed of a mere objection on the record. The plan had gone to pieces.

I had just pieced out and rounded up my theory as the correct solution of this otherwise inexplicable side-play, when Randolph Mason came out of his room, walked past me in the hall and started up the stairway. He stopped on the third step and looked down at me.

"Parks," he said, "go out to St. Louis at the next term of the court, and move it to discharge Jeremiah Patton. On your table is a citation to the only case you will require." Then he went on up the stairway, his head sliding along the mahogany rail.

Thus my theory, like that of Jacob Solmeyer, was snuffed out.

My train to St. Louis was eight hours late because of floods in the Ohio valley. The case of Jeremiah Patton had been called for retrial when I finally reached the United States courtroom. The building was packed with spectators. The district attorney was inside the rail with a bright new rosebud pinned to the lapel of his coat. The prisoner looked tired out and very old, a wretched, pitiable figure, seated by the table with his attorneys; the clerk was calling a jury. I spoke to the older of the defendant's counsel, giving him Randolph Mason's directions and the reference. He immediately sent a page into the library for a volume, ran his eyes over the syllabus of the case, and at once arose.

"If it please your honor," he said, "I move the court to dismiss the prisoner."

The judge looked up from his calendar. "Is this a dilatory motion, Mr. Scott?" he said. "If so, it may be overruled."

"This is a motion in the nature of a plea in bar," replied the lawyer.

The judge was not interested. He was becoming familiar with the causeless clutching of criminal lawyers at every straw. He turned to the representative of the government. "Mr. District Attorney," he said, "do you wish to argue this motion?"

"No," said Stetheimer, "let us get on with the trial."

"Then," said the judge, "I presume that it may be overruled."

The counsel for Jeremiah Patton was posing a little for dramatic effect. He held up his hand. "Just a moment, your honor," he said; "this question has already been decided in Missouri." He walked over and laid the open volume on the bench.

The judge glanced at the statement of the case, then he turned to the opinion. Apathy faded from his face; the muscles of his jaw grew compact; he settled down in his chair to read the case carefully to the end. Finally he rose and looked a moment over the courtroom; then he said,

"I sustain your motion, Mr. Scott."

The great audience stirred with profound, universal surprise. The district attorney was on his feet. "Your honor," he cried, "this prisoner cannot be discharged. He is under indictment. He has not been tried. The case has been merely continued. There must be an acquittal by a jury. A judge cannot turn a criminal loose on society by a royal edict."

The lines along the judge's mouth curled. "Have you read this decision?" he said.

"No!" shouted the district attorney, now angry and alarmed; "but it cannot annul trial by jury; it cannot unhinge the gates of our penal institutions; it cannot transform a presiding judge into Caesar, holding the issues of life and death in the turn of his thumb. What court would pronounce a decision holding that a continuance of the cause should have the effect of a trial by jury, a verdict of not guilty and a discharge of the prisoner!"

"Sir," replied the judge, "you inquire what court would pronounce such a decree, and I reply the United States District Court for the Western District of Missouri. It holds in the case before me precisely what you say it could not hold, namely that a postponement of a case and the discharge of a jury, after the introduction of the government's evidence and over the objection of the prisoner, without proper reasons therefor, is, in effect, an acquittal, precluding a retrial and working the discharge of the prisoner. Jeremiah Patton has been put to trial, the evidence against him was introduced; then, upon the motion of the district attorney, without any reason given on the record, and over the prisoner's protest, the case was continued and the jury discharged. These facts here are in accordance with those in the case cited. The decision of the associate court is not to be disregarded, and the prisoner must be set at liberty."

The judge paused a moment, took up the volume of reports in his hand and looked down at the packed sea of faces. "It would be folly," he said, "for me to do other than sustain this motion. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals would immediately reverse me. The government would be put to the expense of a useless appeal, and I would be subject to censure as an arbitrary public servant, disregarding the doctrine of law established by an associate court. By curious accident, this prisoner steps outside the power of the law through one of the numerous safeguards which our judicial system throws around a citizen charged with a crime. We do not know whether or not Jeremiah Patton is guilty as charged in this indictment, no jury has decided that; we know only that the law directs that he be discharged from custody, and I so order it."

On Monday morning after the no quittal of Jeremiah Patton, Pietro handed me a cablegram for Randolph Mason. I tore it open and went into Mason's office with it. He looked up from the table as I entered. "Parks," he said, "I am ready to adjust the remaining feature of this bank problem."

"Mr. Mason," I answered, "do you know where Jeremiah Patton and Belmont Lane are today?"

"Yes," he said, "Patton arrived in New York last Friday night and Belmont Lane is now in the custody of the United States consul at Berlin."

"Mr. Mason," I replied, "for once in your life you are mistaken."

"Mistaken!" he said, "I mistaken?"

"Yes," I said; "you are mistaken. Jeremiah Patton is dead at the Dresden of pneumonia; I came this moment from his bedside. Belmont Lane shot himself in the entresol of the hotel Gross Herzog von Wildenhelm in Berlin at seven o'clock Sunday morning, when confronted with your writ of extradition," and I handed him the cablegram.

For the legal principle involved in this story see Ex parte Ulrich, 42 Fed., 587. This case was afterward reversed by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, but not upon the proposition of law here dealt with.

The law as laid down in the case of Ex parte Ulrich, supra, follows the best courts in this country. See Highlands v. Commonwealth, 111 Penn. St., 1; 56 Amer. Rep., 236; State v. Calendine, 8 Iowa; Wight v. State, 5 Ind., 292; Mitchell v. State, 42 Ohio St., 383.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1912. NO. 26.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

Georgia Copper in New York Has Cash in Socks

I'VE GOT MO'N 'AT AN' I'M A GAWGIA COP —

NEW YORK.—He turned out to be a policeman from Awgustah, Gawgia, but he also closely resembled a walking safety deposit box. He was a money-lined cop all right. He came here several days ago and went to Coney Island.

A postal card found in his pocket, which he had forgotten to mail, read: "I am having a great time."

He came up from Coney the other day, and at 14th street and Broadway he smiled a great deal, danced a bit and was telling a crowd how he was enjoying his stay.

Then he met Patrolman Schwartz of the Mercer street station. He flashed his badge on Schwartz, slapped him on the back and became so friendly that Schwartz affably invited him to come around to the "house" and meet Lieutenant Bauer. He gave his name as Thomas Foster.

Bauer said: "I think you had better spend the night here."

"That's real hospitable of you," said the southerner. "I think I'll just do that."

"Perhaps you'd better let us take care of your money," suggested Bauer, giving Schwartz the signal to search him.

"I've got a lot of money, even if I am only an Awgustah cop," he said. But Schwartz, searching his pockets, could only bring forth a $5 bill. It had been thrust far down in the upper outside pocket of his coat.

"Is that all your money?" asked Bauer.

"I got more'n 'ot," declared Foster.

Sure enough, Schwartz found a $20 yellowback pinned to one of his socks.

"More'n 'et," declared Foster.

There was another $20 yellowback in a little pocketbook pinned to the other sock. In the toe of his right shoe was also found a first-class return ticket to Awgustoh.

How Mayor Fitzgerald Picked Out the Right Cow

BOSTON, Mass.—Mayor Fitzgerald, Daniel J. McDonald of the city council, Andrew R. Kelley, the state committeeman from ward 20, and a host of others interested in the development of the Suffolk School for Boys in Rainesford island, visited that place the other day.

The mayor is one who is not given to regretful moods. "To the barn, boys; to the barn," he said. "I want to show you how to milk."

"You don't have to show me," said Committeeman Kelley.

"Nor me," voiced Councillor McDonald.

"Here's a dollar that says that I can show you both," challenged the mayor.

"A cow for each," said Superintendent Ryan, adding, "make your choice."

Each of the contestants picked a cow.

Committeeman Kelley drew first place, but the cow might have been of wood for all the good it did him.

Councillor McDonald, too, labored industriously, but drew no milk.

"Just watch the real farmer," said the mayor laughingly, taking the pail and cautiously approaching the cow with a "soo boss, soo boss."

"Nothing like getting the confidence of the cow first, if for nothing more than safety," he explained. He dropped to the low stool, placed the pail tightly between his knees and as his voice swelled with strains of "I Want to Be in Dixie," the milk began to dash against the bottom of the pail with a noise like steam escaping from an exhaust pipe.

The mayor, of course, was declared the winner and as the superintendent was about to pass the money over to him, he remarked:

"It's a shame to take their money. You couldn't lose."

"No," repeated the superintendent, very gravely, "you couldn't lose, because the other two cows are dry—yes, have been so for nearly a month."

The bets were declared off.

Man Has Warrant Sworn Out for His Own Arrest

GIMME A WARRENT FER SAMUEL WILLIAMS — !!!

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—A man fighting with himself, going through all the motions of a regular ringside fistic encounter and angering his "opponent" to such a white hot rage that he finally pulls himself into a police station and requests the sergeant to arrest himself, is the unique form of outdoor sport by which an absent-minded citizen of St. Louis entertained himself the other night.

Samuel Williams of East St. Louis is the man and is declared by the police to be insane. On this particular night Williams was attacked and beaten by a thug. He arrived at Justice Bell's office the next morning much the worse for wear and asked that a warrant be issued for the arrest of a certain person.

"Whom do you want to arrest?" asked the justice.

"I want to jail Samuel Williams, that's who," shouted Williams.

"What's the charge?"

"I don't know what to charge him with, but I know what he did to me. He attacked me on the street as I was going home and beat me to a pulp."

Williams shuffled out of the police court and wandered back to his home. A half hour later he was surprised to see two husky bluecoats drive up in a patrol wagon and stop at his door.

"You're under arrest," growled the first cop, seizing Williams roughly. "Come along to the station."

Williams did as directed and was held before the justice who signed his own warrant.

Then Williams recalled that he was Samuel Williams and by a mistake had charged himself with disturbing the peace.

Naval Recruits' $20 Bills Cause Money Panic

CHICAGO.—Eighty recruits from the naval training station at Lake Bluff nearly caused a financial panic at Highwood and Highland Park the other day.

The recruits, each bearing a $20 bill received from the naval station, boarded a Chicago and Milwaukee car in the morning. They were all bound for Chicago, from which city they were to leave for their homes on the seven-day furlough. John Hall of Highwood, the conductor, held out a hand invitingly to the first recruit in the car for 35 cents, the fare to Evanston.

The recruit pulled up one trouser leg, unbuttoned the flap of a secret pocket and presented the conductor with a $20 bill.

"Is that the smallest you have?" asked the conductor.

"That's the smallest, the largest and all," said the recruit, "and every one of these eighty men has one just like it."

Hall telephoned to the paymaster of the company, who boarded the train at Highwood with a hand grip full of bills and started to change the big bills into smaller ones. Before he was half way through the car his supply of bills had been exhausted.

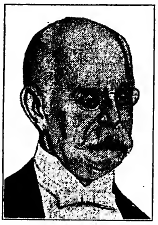
When the car reached Highland Park the paymaster hurried to the bank and threw a bundle of twenties to the teller, saying he wanted a lot of ones, twos and fives.

The teller reached into the drawer and before all the twenties had been changed the second time the small bills of the bank were almost gone.

The eighty recruits had completed their course at the naval station and had been granted a seven days' furlough before reporting for duty aboard their respective ships.

WHO'S WHO AND WHY

CHAIRMAN OF THE EUGENICS CONFERENCE



Darwin's theory of evolution, the survival of the fittest and the influence of environment in the development of organic life, has provoked much controversy, and has sometimes been allowed to remain in the dim domain of speculation like the atomic theory of Epicurus or the Platonic system of ideas. It has at last been recognized as something practical in the social life of the human race. The most sober-minded of physicians, economists, and philanthropists have acknowledged that the improvement of the race, the promotion of its happiness, and the prevention of many moral errors depend very largely upon a recognition of such laws as that of heredity. The parents of the coming generation are to be looked to for the furthering of the race's happiness in the future. It is upon this basis that a new science, Eugenics, has been inaugurated and has claimed the attention of the world.

The First International Eugenics conference, recently held in London, was attended by men and women delegates from America, France, Germany, Norway, Italy, Spain, Greece, and Japan. It is interesting to note that the president of the society was the son of the very Charles Darwin who originated the theory of evolution on which its principles are based.

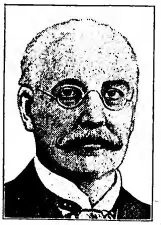
FETE OF THE "400" AT PUBLIC BEACH

Whirling about merry-go-rounds and thrusting at coveted brass ring prizes, howling over "Aunt Sally" or shooting at bobbing balls in the rifle range, more than 300 members of the summer colony enjoyed several hours of amusement the other evening as guests of Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont at Newport's public beach. After 10 o'clock the public was excluded from Newport's miniature Coney Island. From that hour until they became tired, Mrs. Belmont's guests had full possession and enjoyed a night as informal as it was novel.

Mrs. Belmont's reasons for giving a free evening at Easton's beach were threefold, aside from her desire to pay social obligations. Those reasons were a protest against extravagant entertaining, an intention to turn over to a public institution money expended in a social diversion and an argument against the hiring of men waiters.

"In the first place I am in favor of the truly democratic idea in entertaining," said Mrs. Belmont. "I see no reason in the tremendous expenditure of money so common this summer in giving society an evening's diversion."

PROFESSOR MAXWELL'S NEW EXPERIMENT



New York will try an experiment this fall which, if successful, will completely overturn all methods hitherto applied in its schools and introduce a new era in education.

It is so sensational that, at first sight, it seems like the impossible dream of a mad inventor. Yet it has the thorough approval of men who are by no means identified with anything sensational and unpractical, among them Superintendent of Schools William H. Maxwell and Dr. Louis Bian of Columbia university, while the inventor of the scheme, Nikolo Tesla, can point for corroboration of what he claims, to the extremely successful results already obtained by means of his invention in the schools of Stockholm, capital of Sweden.

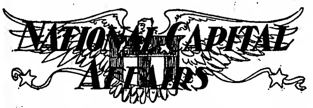
Fifty mentally defective school children will be the first subjects of the experiment. They will enter and seat themselves in what will look, to all intents and purposes, like an ordinary schoolroom. But it will be far from that. Through the walls invisible electrical currents will run, by means of which, it is declared, the brains of the children will receive artificial stimulation to such an extent that they will be transformed from dunces into star pupils.

J. G. SCHURMAN NEW ENVOY TO GREECE

President Taft sent to the senate during the closing days of congress the nomination of Jacob Gould Schurman, president of Cornell university, to be minister to Greece. This nomination created some surprise, since there has been no announcement that George H. Moses, the present minister to Greece, was to leave that post.

It was stated that Mr. Moses voluntarily tendered his resignation for private business reasons some time ago, and that it has been accepted. He expects to leave this post within a short time. Intimations that Mr. Moses was being recalled were without confirmation at either the White House or state department or from members of the New Hampshire delegation.

Dr. Schurman, who has long been a close friend of President Taft, has arranged to take a year's leave from his duties as president of Cornell. In accordance with custom, Mr. Schurman, like all other ministers and ambassadors, will be expected to formally tender his resignation on March 4 next whether President Taft is re-elected or not. Dr. Schurman has been president of Cornell since 1892.



NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Bureau of Fisheries as a Matrimonial Agency

WASHINGTON.—As a matrimonial agency the United States bureau of fisheries has stepped into sudden prominence. The methods of the bureau are unique. The unions are obtained with speed and precision. The bureau embarked in its new line of endeavor the other day. The result of its first attempt is speeding happily westward with a honeymoon in the sweet breezes of the Pribiloff islands as an objective. It all came about in this way.

Out in the Pribiloffs there are few white people, but many Aleuts, and the progeny of the Aleuts are both numerous and ignorant. To the bureau of fisheries, which is the real government of the Pribiloffs and the Aleuts and seals which there abound, has been delegated the task of bringing light where heretofore was darkness. The school system of the Pribiloffs is a division of the work of the bureau of fisheries. It is the intention of the government to have two teachers on each of the large islands of the group. The fisheries people prefer that they have a man teacher and a woman. They also prefer to have them a married couple.

Casting about for new material, the bureau found that Alvin G. Whitney of Groton, Mass., wanted to become an Alaskan school teacher. Mr. Whitney passed the examination in fine style. He was just about to be appointed when it was explained to him that the Pribiloff government, which is the bureau of fisheries, wanted married teachers. The case was explained to him by Dr. C. Hart Merriam, one time biologist of the department of agriculture, whose secretary Mr. Whitney formerly was.

"Do you know any one who could fill the vacancy at the island of St. Paul to which you will be assigned?" asked Mr. Merriam.

"Sure," replied Mr. Whitney, "I'll telegraph and find out about it right away."

Mr. Whitney went to the bureau of fisheries and told Chief Barton W. Evermann of the Alaskan division that he had the candidate for the other teaching vacancy.

"Name, please?" said Mr. Evermann.

"It's Gibson now, but if you don't want to make out the papers until Monday, it will be Whitney," replied the male candidate.

Girls as Messengers? Never in the Capital City

NELLIE THE BEAUTIFUL CLOAK MODEL MESSAGE

GIRL telegraph messengers; good for small towns, not good for Washington and other large cities.

That is the dictum of telegraph men of the capital who were asked the other day if they thought employment of girls to take the places of lads, those swift-footed Mercuries, the cycling allies of the lightning-tongued wire.

"But Pittsburg is a large city, isn't it?" an inquiring reporter asked. "And Pittsburg is using it!"

"Be Pittsburg large or small, I say girls would not do for messenger boys," a postive telegraph man said, smiling at his own "Irish."

"Girls as a rule do their work better than boys," the positive man admitted. "They are generally more conscientious and more careful. They wouldnot be so apt to be distracted by collisions and fights and fusses and other street sights, and—so far as physical ability would permit—they would be more prompt than boys.

"But there the advantages of girl messengers cease. The bad weather we have in Washington would prevent girls from delivering messages. They just could not stand what our boys have to endure.

"It is not necessary to speak of their not being able to go to places where messages have to go. We keep our boys as far from doubtful places as we can, but there are many messages that girls could not carry.

"So far as our patrons are concerned, I think they would be very well satisfied with girl messengers. If we employed girls at such work they would, of course, have to wear a uniform of some kind to distinguish them, and their dress would relieve them of much embarrassment they might feel at having to go into men's private offices. But the patrons would not be embarrassed.

"Altogether, a girl messenger service would be very picturesque, but I'd hate to have to run one. I have had some trouble with boys, but I do not think I'd know how to start with girls, for I should feel at the beginning that I was attempting the impossible."

Senators' Vocal Triumph Is Rudely Interrupted

SERGEANT-AT-ARMS RANDELL and his assistants were scurrying about the senate side of the capitol just before the recent adjournment, trying to complete a quorum of the senate, and while the senate bells were clanging their summons of senators to that body, the posse was attracted by loud sounds of sweet melody arising from Senator Bradley's room.

"My Old Kentucky Home," and "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," and other airs of the south rang through the corridors, drowning out the sound of the senate bell. Upon opening the door of Senator Bradley's office the searchers found Senator Bradley, basso profundo; Senator Smith of South Carolina, tenor robusto, and Senator Overman of North Carolina, baritone fortissimo, with their coats off and chairs tipped back against the wall, singing as though their lives depended upon the volume of sound emitted. They were duly summoned to appear in the senate instantly, and did so looking a little sheepish and crestfallen that their vocal triumph had been so unceremoniously interrupted.

Corn 25 Cents the Ear on Bill for U. S. Senators

IN THE ground floor of the senate wing of the capitol is a restaurant, with two special rooms reserved for the solons and a big diningroom open to the public. There are times when charges for some items on the bill of fare rise to the altitude of the high priced restaurants in New York—Delmonico's and Sherry's, for instance.

There were smiles on the faces of "regulars" among visitors when they spied an item on the bill of fare setting forth "sweet corn, 25 cents." It brought to their minds visions of dazzling and steaming cobs reposing on a plate. They ordered corn and beheld with considerable surprise the serving of one lonely cob of very ordinary dimensions for the quarter mentioned in the bill of fare. Next of the tempting novelties introduced on the bill was "new potatoes, 20 cents."

"Well, well," murmured one of the regulars, "a bowlful of new potatoes would certainly be excellent for lunch." So he gave the order and the colored emissary returned in due time and set before him a small bowl containing two potatoes, of what seemed to him rather limited cubical contents.

"Two potatoes at 10 cents apiece," he observed. "At that rate they must be deemed by the management a luxury fit only for the palates of the rich."

The restaurant is owned by the senate and is operated by a manager. It loses money because the bulk of the patronage is limited to a couple of hours at lunch time. The deficit is made good by withdrawals from the senate fund to meet contingent expenses.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. • MINN.

THE RATS SHOULD GO.

A single rat that is "suspicious looking" among many examined for signs of plague is nothing alarming. It appears, however, sufficient reason for taking precautions against imported rats. The bubonic plague has appeared at several points in the tropics and vessels which came here from those points may bring infected rats. Where the disease is known such vessels will be quarantined and presumably the rats will be killed, says the Philadelphia Press. Nevertheless, the danger of plague gaining a foothold will always exist so long as there are cases of plague in countries with which we have commercial relations and rats find tolerance within the city limits. New Orleans has discovered a plague-infected rat and we presume it will take precautions suggested by that fact. It suppressed yellow fever by exterminating the yellow fever mosquito and we have no doubt it will rid itself of rats if convinced that it is the only way to bar the bubonic plague from that very susceptible city. San Francisco warred upon its rats with thoroughness and success and practically suppressed the plague which is always threatening it through its trade with Asia. We do not suppose the plague would appear here in any case in its severe form, but nevertheless we should take no chances. The rats should go.

Every student of economic conditions in the United States knows that more farmers are needed to make agriculture keep pace with other industries. The project to divert to the farms immigrants coming to Chicago, by establishing on the lake front near Twenty-second street an agricultural and industrial exposition building with special features for the instruction of the newcomers in the possibilities of country life, is one that should interest the public greatly. Too many of our immigrants, even those bred in the country and capable of becoming immediately useful on farms, settle in our large cities. The country districts need them, the cities do not, says the Chicago Record-Herald. In the cities there are now few chances for them compared with those that existed a few years ago. The newcomers can better themselves and the nation by becoming producers instead of consumers of farm products. Immigrants who are sound physically, mentally and morally, will be valuable to the United States for a long time to come, if they can be turned to supplying the real needs of the country. The problem of thus placing workers where they are needed is rightly receiving much attention.

A Chicago judge who is entitled to rank with Solomon has decided that the idea about beauty unadorned is out of date, and that a man who marries a beautiful woman is obliged to supply its adornments to the best of his ability. This decision ought to add to the market value of the plain girl as a more economical matrimonial investment.

Again it is announced that the days of the hobble skirt are numbered. The announcement is made so often, and the hobble skirt is so apparently unconcerned, that the public, who hail any hint of the abolition of this abomination, are beginning to feel a trifle uneasy.

Eighty-one women in Seattle want to be policewomen, for that number took the examination which is to add four of the fairer sex to the local force. This number may be explained by the answer of one as to her occupation: "To support myself and my husband."

This is a cynical, mercenary age. The same news item that told us how a young man proposed to his sweetheart in Detroit by telephoning from Chicago added that it cost $4.85, just as if the expenditure might not have been justified.

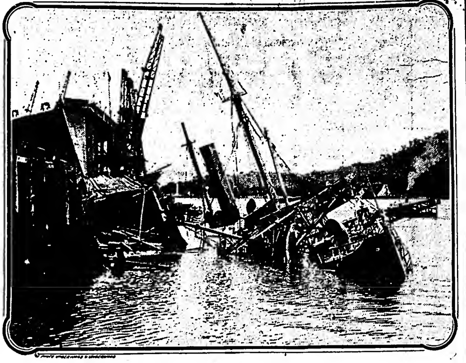
Where the hydro-aeroplane has an advantage over the plain aeroplane is that it may hit the water instead of hard ground when it comes down too soon. On the other hand, it has to carry its name.

"Convention of women in Boston adjourned because 'it was too hot to talk.'" This is the first notification that Boston has broken the world's heat record.

Prof. Smith of the University of Minneapolis says there ought to be a law to prevent feeble-minded women from marrying. Why women? Will the feeble-minded men be retained to pass on the question whether the feminine aspirants are feeble-minded or not?

Pennsylvania man locked up his daughter and prevented her wedding. Love does not always laugh at locksmiths.

STEAMSHIP SUNK BY COLLAPSE OF WHARF



A SECTION of the wharf at Balboa, Panama, about 185 feet in length, collapsed the other day and the steamship Newport of the Pacific Mail line, moored alongside, was sunk. No one was killed or injured. Two electrically operated cranes fell with the wharf, one of them crashing across the vessel forward of the wheelhouse.

AVIATOR IS KILLED

1,000 SEE BRAVE AIRMAN PLUNGE 200 FEET TO HIS DEATH.

FALL IS ON CICERO TRACK

Airship Is Hurled Headlong to the Ground and Holder of U. S. Endurance Record Is Pinned Under Heavy Engine.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—Caught by a sharp gust of wind when about 200 feet from the ground, Aviator Paul Peck and his Columbia biplane were hurled to the ground late Wednesday afternoon at Cicero flying field and the brilliant young birdman was so terribly crushed that he died later at St. Anthony de Padua hospital.

He was descending from his last contemplated flight of the day in the biplane which he personally developed and which was expected to perform wonders in the aviation meet beginning Thursday.

Twice during the afternoon he had made brilliant flights and notwithstanding the sharp northwest wind that was blowing throughout the day he handled his machine with precision and on both occasions volplaned to the ground in masterly fashion.

On his last flight he had ascended to a height of about 900 feet and with the eyes of 1,000 spectators fixed upon him began his descent.

Inclining gracefully to the left, he began to descend in long, sweeping spirals. Aviators and laymen alike were applauding his splendid performance as he planed down as though he were on a circular incline.

Five times he had circled downward through the air and was scarcely 200 feet from the ground when suddenly something went wrong. From the long, birdlike swoop the biplane suddenly swerved, quivered and then tipped sharply downward.

Fully aware of his dangerous predicament, Peck struggled with his controls and for an instant appeared to have regained the mastery of the air, but an instant later and the machine again dipped and as the spectators groaned in horror biplane and aviator dropped like a plummet.

Before he struck the ground Chauncey M. Vaught and Aviator Howard Gill sprang in the former's automobile and were racing toward the spot east of the center of the field where Peck was falling.

Working with desperate energy, they hauled the wreckage aside, lifted Peck into the automobile and took him at racing speed to St. Anthony de Padua hospital.

Peck was unconscious and bleeding from a score of cuts made by the guys and splintered supports of his biplane.

Some one at the Cicero field had telephoned to the hospital, and nurses and surgeons were waiting to aid the injured aviator.

Both legs and arms, several ribs and his shoulderblades are said to be broken, his skull is fractured and he further sustained internal injuries.

Pardon Doctor's Slayer.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 14.—Mississippi's acting governor Thursday pardoned John W. Carter of St. Louis, who killed Dr. Wendel on the unwritten law grounds. Carter's wife was the former wife of Senator Vest's son.

Held on Murder Charge.

Newburgh, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Charged with the murder of John Grace, champion middleweight wrestler of the eastern states, William Grace, a brother of the dead man, was arrested at Walden Thursday.

G. O. P. WINS IN MAINE

HAINES IS SUCCESSFUL IN ELECTION OVER PLAISTED.

Gain of One Congressman Is Made by Republicans—Hinds Makes Gains.

Portland, Me., Sept. 12.—The political overturn in the Maine state election, in which the Republicans won back the governorship and got three of the four congressmen and a sufficient majority on a joint ballot in the legislature to assure the election of a Republican United States senator, became more apparent Tuesday with revised and additional returns.

William T. Haines of Waterville (Rep.) was elected governor by a plurality of 3,557 over Gov. Frederick W. Plaisted, Democratic candidate, of Augusta. The vote, with 28 towns missing, was: Haines (Rep.), 70,072; Plaisted (Dem.), 66,515. Two years ago the vote for governor was: Bert M. Fernald (Rep.), 64,672; F. W. Plaisted (Dem.), 73,425. The missing towns two years ago cast 751 votes for the Republican candidate and 846 for the Democratic leader.

Congressman Asher C. Hinds, First district and Frank S. Guernsey, Fourth district, Republicans, were reelected by increased majorities, and Forrest Goodwin (Rep.) supplanted Congressman Samuel W. Gould (Dem.) in the Third district. The Democratic candidate in the Second district, Congressman D. J. McGillicuddy, was re-elected.

WIFE AIDS GENERAL SICKLES

Although Estranged for 27 Years She Pawns Her Jewels to Help Husband.

New York, Sept. 14.—The threatened loss of his priceless collection of objects of art and rare tomes, which has hung like a pall over the head of Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, diplomat and veteran of several wars, and which, his friends assert, is the real reason the old warrior refused to permit the use of his name as a candidate for the office of commander-in-chief before his comrades now in session at Los Angeles, was averted Thursday afternoon.

For the general's wife, from whom he has been estranged for the past twenty-seven years, took her jewelry from a safe deposit vault and passed it over the counter in a pawnbroker's shop to satisfy the judgment against the old soldier.

CALL CARNEGIE TO TESTIFY

U. S. Inquisitors Plan to Resume Testimony in Pittsburg Early Next Month.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 11.—Investigation by the federal government of the United States Steel corporation, hearings of which have been held in New York and Trenton, N. J., is expected to resume in this city about October 1. It is said there is a probability of Andrew Carnegie testifying here.

The hearing has nothing to do with the Stanley investigation. It is a result of the equity suit entered against the corporation by the government in New Jersey and has for its basis the dissolution of the steel corporation.

Puts Ban on Monoplane.

London, Sept. 14.—Due to recent casualties to aviators of the British army flying corps, four lieutenants having been killed within a week, the war office Thursday suspended the use of monoplanes in the service.

John D., Jr., Fears Whooping Cough.

Yonkers, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Fear of the whooping cough rather than of bandits is keeping John D. Rockefeller Jr. away from his father's home at Pocantico Hills, according to Sheriff Doyle of Westchester county.

MOTORS FIRM FAILS

TWO RECEIVERS ARE NAMED FOR BIG $42,500,000 CORPORATION.

PERKINS AND MORGAN FIGURE

Concern Organized in 1908 to Control Auto and Gas Engine Companies Goes to the Wall With $12,250,000 Liabilities.

New York, Sept. 14.—The United States Motors company, a $42,500,000 holding corporation organized in 1903 to control ten automobile and gas engine manufacturing companies, was placed in receivers' hands Thursday. Its directors number some of the best known capitalists in the country.

The receivers, W. E. Strang and Robert Walker, were appointed by Judge Hough in an insolvency suit brought in the federal court by the Brown & Sharpe company of Providence, R. I., in its own behalf and that of other creditors. In addition to the appointment of the two receivers for the holding company five of its constituent companies were involved, namely: The Alden Sampson Manufacturing company of Detroit; the Brush Runabout company of Detroit; the Columbia Motor company of Hartford, Conn.; the Dayton Motor Car company of Dayton, O., and the Maxwell-Briscoe company of Tarrytown, N. J. The receivers' joint bond was fixed at $100,000.

Bankers identified with the company say that the proceedings are friendly, and brought with the purpose of clearing up the company's affairs, with a view to protecting the creditors.

The petition for a receiver states that the assets of the motors company consist of cash, bills and accounts receivable, shares of stock of the subsidiary and "selling" companies, shares of stock of other corporations controlled by the motors company and the assets of the subsidiary companies. The aggregate liabilities of the defendant companies, the petition states, amount to approximately $12,250,000.

Albert Rathbone, counsel for the reorganization committee, says that the committee, representing all classes of creditors, has reached the conclusion that these companies can be successfully reorganized, and, with proper management and new capital, operated profitably. It was confidently expected, said counsel, that a reorganization would be announced during the coming month.

George W. Perkins was reputed to be one of the inspirers of the amalgamation, while Morgan institutions have figured prominently in its financing.

INDICTED FOR VOTE FRAUD

Twelve Named in True Bills After Probe of the Georgia Primary.

Madison, Ga., Sept. 11.—Indictments charging twelve men with buying and selling votes in the recent Democratic county primary have been returned by the Morgan county grand jury and many additional indictments on the same charges are expected before the jury formally adjourns.

Chicago Post Office Leads.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—With a total of almost two million dollars in receipts for August, Chicago is the leading post office center in the United States. It has surpassed New York, its closest rival, by $29,274.30 for the month.

Mrs. Sage Gives University $50,000.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Chancellor Day announced Thursday that Mrs. Russell Sage had given Syracuse university, through him, $50,000 for its agricultural school, in memory of her father, the late Joseph Slocum.

PURSUE REBEL BANDS

MEXICAN TROOPS PASS THROUGH AMERICAN TERRITORY.

Southern Pacific Railway Appeals to State Department for Protection Against Rebels.

Washington, Sept. 12.—To intercept and dispel the bands of rebels gathering along the northern boundary of Mexico, especially in the state of Sonora, under the leadership of General Salazar, and threatening American property, a detachment of 1,200 Mexican federal troops were rushed across American territory Tuesday.

War department and state department officials are keeping the route of the Mexican federals secret at the request of the Mexican government. Most of the federal troops massed at Juarez, Tex., and shipped by train to some point near Nogales, where they will be within striking distance of the Cananea district.

Reports reached the war department that the rebels were gathering in force in the vicinity of Cananea. They seemed to be preparing for a long march, as horses, supplies, ammunition and dynamite were being concentrated. General Salazar is encamped at Gebelones.

New York, Sept. 13.—The Southern Pacific Railway company appealed Wednesday to the United States government to intervene in Mexico, at least to a sufficient extent to protect the property of the company. Announcement to this effect was made at the office of the chairman of the executive committee of the railroad. The Southern Pacific in Mexico runs from Nogales, Sonora, down the west coast to Tepic City, in the territory of Tepic.

BALDWIN IS RENOMINATED

Democratic Convention of Connecticut Also Selects a Full State Ticket at Hartford.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 14.—The Democratic state convention enthusiastically nominated Simeon E. Baldwin for governor here Thursday and then named the following men on the balance of the ticket:

Lieutenant governor, Lyman T. Tingier of Vernon; secretary of state, Albert W. Phillips of Stamford; treasurer, E. S. Robert of East Canaan; controller, Daniel P. Dunn of Willimantic.

Presidential Electors—Henry McManus, Hartford; Charles T. Coyle, New Haven; M. B. Cary, Ridgefield; William Belcher, New London; Oscar O. Tanner, Windham; W. B. Perry, Jr., Salisbury, and John L. Fisk, Middletown.

NEWS FROM FAR AND NEAR

Dawson, Y. T., Sept. 12.—The international boundary survey party which has been working the line between Alaska and Yukon territory arrived Tuesday, having surveyed the 142d meridian from the Pacific to the Arctic.

Wytheville, Va., Sept. 13.—Floyd and Claude Allen, convicted of murder in the first degree in connection with the shooting up of the Hillsville courthouse, were sentenced Wednesday to be executed on November 22.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 12.—The strike of union web pressmen against the three daily papers here has been settled, the men have returned to work. It is understood a slight increase in wages was granted.

BUCHANAN FACES CHARGES

Drew Says Congressman Was Involved With McNamaras in Dynamite Case.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Representative Frank Buchanan of the Seventh Illinois district will be accused in charges to be filed with the senate subcommittee on judiciary by Walter Drew of the National Erectors' association. Buchanan, a resident of Chicago, is alleged in the Drew papers to have been connected with acts of labor violence in Ohio and Pennsylvania in conjunction with J. J. McNamara, now serving a term in prison for the Los Angeles dynamiting cases. Buchanan once was president of the International Association of Structural Bridge and Iron Workers.

SAN FRANCISCO FEELS QUAKE

Slight Rocking of Earth Does Not Cause Any Damage, However.

San Francisco, Sept. 13.—A slight earthquake shock was felt here. The movement caused no damage or excitement. Slight shocks were reported as far south as San Jose, fifty miles away.

Archbishop of Lyons Dead.

Lyons, France, Sept. 13.—The archbishop of Lyons, Cardinal Peter Hercules Coullie, died Wednesday after a long illness. He was born in Paris in 1829 and was created a cardinal in 1897 by Pope Leo XIII.

Big Steamer Is Wrecked.

Hamburg, Sept. 13.—The Kamerun, a steamer of the Hamburg-American line, was wrecked Wednesday on the west coast of Africa. The crew, all of whom were rescued, has been taken to Monrovia, Liberia.

YOUNG WIFE SAVED FROM HOSPITAL

Tells How Sick She Was And What Saved Her From An Operation.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to housekeeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back ached, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

"If sick and ailing women would only know enough to take your medicine, they would get relief."—Mrs. BENJ. H. STANSBERY, Route 6, Box 18, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

If you have mysterious pains, irregularity, backache, extreme nervousness, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait too long, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound now.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy and should give every one confidence.

Sang for Sultan.

Mulai Hafid, the ex-sultan of Morocco, while staying at Vichy, in France, made an excursion to Les Ardoisieres, says the "Matin," where Napoleon III. used often to go for rest. Three young girls, sisters, timidly approached the sultan and asked him to sign post-cards. Mulai Hafid consented on condition that they would each sing a song to him. Two of the girls at once complied, and the delighted Mulai Hafid wrote on their cards words which, translated, mean: "Like Napoleon III., I have visited Les Ardoisieres, where I have enjoyed, together with the calm and freshness of nature, the grace and charm of the voices of Mlles. Paulette and Clotilde." The third girl did not know how to sing, but one of her sisters having sung for her the sultan added the name of Gabrielle.

Compensation.

A fairly prominent local pugilist was injured several months ago in an automobile accident and had three ribs broken. Fully recovered, he was discussing the incident recently with friends.

"I got $100 out of the auto owner," he said. "Had to give the lawyer half and it cost $56 for doctor's bills, but I made them pay $100 for the thing, anyhow."

American Tools Preferred.

A favorite sport in New Zealand, as also in Australia and Tasmania, is competition in wood chopping and sawing; and in these contests, which attract a great deal of interest, the championships are always won through the use of American tools. In fact, the expert woodsman working for a prize would never think of using any other kind of tools.

The Status.

"I see this prospect of a strapless street car is still hanging on."

"So are the passengers."

Some men work over time to earn a dishonest living.

RIGHT HOME

Doctor Recommends Postum from Personal Test.

No one is better able to realize the injurious action of caffeine—the drug in coffee—on the heart, than the doctor. Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it, too, contains the drug caffeine.

When the doctor himself has been relieved by simply leaving off coffee and using Postum, he can refer with full conviction to his own case.

A Mo. physician prescribes Postum for many of his patients because he was benefited by it. He says:

"I wish to add my testimony in regard to that excellent preparation—Postum. I have had functional or nervous heart trouble for over 15 years, and a part of the time was unable to attend to my business.

"I was a moderate user of coffee and did not think drinking it hurt me. But on stopping it and using Postum instead, my heart has got all right, and I ascribe it to the change from coffee to Postum.

"I am prescribing it now in cases of sickness, especially when coffee does not agree, or affects the heart, nerves or stomach.

"When made right it has a much better flavor than coffee, and is a vital sustainer of the system. I shall continue to recommend it to our people, and I have my own case to refer to."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest. Adv.

SERIAL STORY

EXCUSE ME!

Novelized from the Comedy of the Same Name

By Rupert Hughes

ILLUSTRATED From Photographs of the Play as Produced By Henry W. Savage

Copyright, 1911, by H. K. Fly Co.

SYNOPSIS.

[illegible] Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Ira Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Mallory decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding hazing. Marjorie is disgusted. Ira Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Anne Gattle, a fellow passenger. Mallory vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Mallory reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Mallory finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train. Mallory again makes an unsuccessful hunt for a preacher. Dr. Temple poses as a physician. Mrs. Temple is induced by Mrs. Wellington to smoke a cigar. Sight of preacher on a station platform raises Mallory's hopes, but he takes another train. Missing hand baggage compels the couple to borrow from passengers.

CHAPTER XXI—(Continued).

The first one they labored at, they could not budge after a biceps-breaking tug. The second flew up with such ease that they went over backward. Ashton put his head out and announced that the approaching depot was labelled "Green River." Wellington burbled: "What a beautiful name for a shtation."

Ashton announced that there was something beautifuller still on the platform—"Oh, a peach!—a nectarine! and she's getting on this train."

Even Doctor Temple declared that she was a dear litte thing, wasn't she?

Wellington pushed him aside, saying: "Stand back Doc, and let me see; I have a keen sense of beau'ful."

"Be careful," cried the doctor, "he'll fall out of the window."

"Not out of that window," Ashton sagely observed, seeing the bulk of Wellington. As the train started off again, Little Jimmie distributed alcoholic smiles to the Green Riverers on the platform and called out:

"Good'bye, ever'body. You're all absolootly—ow— ow!" He clapped his hand to his eye and crawled back into the car, groaning with pain.

"What's the matter?" said Wedgewood. "Got something in your eye?"

"No, you blamed fool. I'm trying to look through my thumb."

"Poor fellow!" sympathized Doctor Temple, "it's a cinder!"

"A cinder! It's at leasht a ton of coal."

"I say, old boy, let me have a peek," said Wedgewood, screwing in his monocle and peering into the depths of Wellington's eye. "I can't see a bally thing."

"Of course not, with that blinder in," growled the miserable wretch, weeping in spite of himself and rubbing his smarting orb.

"Don't rub that eye," Ashton counselled, "rub the other eye."

"It's my eye; I'll rub it if I want to. Get me a doctor, somebody. I'm dying."

"Here's Doctor Temple," said Ashton, "right on the job." Wellington turned to the old clergyman with pathetic trust, and the deceiver writhed in his disguise. The best he could think of was: "Will somebody lend me a lead pencil?"

"What for?" said Wellington, uneasily.

"I am going to roll your upper lid up on it," said the Doctor.

"Oh, no, you're not," said the patient. "You can roll your own lids!"

Then the conductor, still another conductor, wandered on the scene and asked as if it were not a world-important matter: "What's the matter—pick up a cinder?"

"Yes. Perhaps you can get it out," the alleged doctor appealed.

The conductor nodded: "The best way is this—take hold of the winkers."

"The what?" mumbled Wellington.

"Grab the winkers of your upper eyelid in your right hand—"

"I've got 'em."

"Now grab the winkers of your lower eyelid in your left hand. Now raise the right hand, push the under lid under the overlid and haul the overlid over the underlid; when you have the overlid well over the under—"

Wellington waved him away: "Say, what do you think I'm trying to do? stuff a mattress? Get out of my way. I want my wife—lead me to my wife."

"An excellent idea," said Dr. Temple, who had been praying for a reconciliation.

He guided Wellington with difficulty to the observation room and, finding Mrs. Wellington at the desk as usual, he began: "Oh, Mrs. Wellington, may I introduce you to your husband"

Mrs. Wellington rose haughtily, caught a sight of her suffering consort and ran to him with a cry of "Jimmie!"

"Lucretia!"

"What's happened—are you killed?"

"I'm far from well. But don't worry. My life insurance is paid up."

"Oh, my poor little darling," Mrs. Jimmie fluttered, "What on earth ails you?" She turned to the doctor. "Is he going to die?"

"I think not," said the doctor. "It's only a bad case of cinder-in-the-eye-tis."

Thus reassured, Mrs. Wellington went into the patient's eye with her handkerchief. "Is that the eye?" she asked.

"No!" he howled, "the other one."

She went into that and came out with the cinder.

"There! It's just a tiny speck."

Wellington regarded the mote with amazement. "Is that all? It felt as if I had Pike's Peak in my eye." Then he waxed tender. "Oh, Lucretia, how can I ever—"

But she drew away with a disdainful: "Give me back my hand, please."

"Now, Lucretia," he protested, "don't you think you're carrying this pretty far?"

"Only as far as Reno," she answered grimly, which stung him to retort: "You'd better take the beam out of your own eye, now that you've taken the cinder out of mine," but she, noting that they were the center of interest, observed: "All the passengers are enjoying this, my dear. You'd better go back to the cafe."

Wellington regarded her with a revulsion to wrath. He thundered at her: "I will go back, but allow me to inform you, my dear madam, that I'll not drink another drop—just to surprise you."

Mrs. Wellington shrugged her shoulders at this ancient threat and Jimmie stumbled back to his lair, whither the men followed him. Feeling sympathy in the atmosphere, Little Jimmie felt impelled to pour out his grief:

"Jellmen, I'm a brok'n-heartless man. Mrs. Well'n'ton is a queen among women, but she has temper of tarant—"

Wedgewood broke in: "I say, old boy, you've carried this ballast for three days now, wherever did you get it?"

Wellington drew himself up proudly for a moment before he slumped back into himself. "Well, you see, when I announced to a few friends that I was about to leave Mrs. Well'n'ton forever and that I was going out to—to—you know.'

"Reno. We know. Well?"

"Well, a crowd of my friends got up a farewell sort of divorce breakfast—and some of 'em felt so very sad about my divorce that they drank a little too much, and the rest of my friends felt so very glad about my divorce, that they drank a little too much. And, of course, I had to join both parties."

"And that breakfast," said Ashton, "lasted till the train started, eh?"

Wellington glowered back triumphantly. "Lasted till the train started? Jellmen, that breakfast is going yet!"

CHAPTER XXII.

In the Smoking Room.

Wellington's divorce breakfast reminded Ashton of a story. Ashton was one of the great That-Reminds-Me family. Perhaps it was to the credit of the Englishman that he missed the point of this story, even though Jimmie Wellington saw it through his fog, and Dr. Temple turned red and buried his eyes in the eminently respectable pages of the Scientific American.

Ashton and Wellington and Fosdick exchanged winks over the Britisher's stare of incomprehension, and Ashton explained it to him again in words of one syllable, with signboards at all the different spots.

Finally a gleam of understanding broke over Wedgewood's face and he tried to justify his delay.

"Oh, yes, of cawse I see it now. Yes, I rather fancy I get you. It's ewfully good, isn't it? I think I should have got it before but I'm not really myself; for two mawnings I haven't had my tub."

Wellington shook with laughter: "If you're like this now, what will you be when you get to Sin san frasco—I mean Frinsansisco—well, you know what I mean."

Ashton reached round for the electric button as if he were conferring a favor: "The drinks are on you, Wedgewood. I'll ring." And he rang.

"Awf'lly kind of you," said Wedgewood, "but how do you make that out?"

"The man that misses the point, pays for the drinks." And he rang again. Wellington protested.

"But I've jolly well paid for all the drinks for two days."

Wellington roared: "That's another point you've missed." And Ashton rang again, but the pale yellow individual who had always answered the bell with alacrity did not appear. "Where's that infernal buffet waiter?" grumbled.

Wedgewood began to titter. "We were out of Scotch, so I sent him for some more."

"When?"

"Two stations back. I fancy we must have left him behind."

"Well, why in thunder didn't you say so?" Ashton roared.

"It quite escaped my mind," Wedgewood grinned. "Rather good joke on you fellows, what?"

"Well, I don't see the point," Ashton growled, but the triumphant Englishman howled: "That's where you pay!"

Wedgewood had his laugh to himself, for the others wanted to murder him. Ashton advised a lynching, but the conductor arrived on the scene in time to prevent violence.

Fosdick informed him of the irretrievable loss of the useful buffet waiter. The conductor promised to get another at Ogden.

Ashton wailed: "Have we got to sit here and die of thirst till then?"

The conductor refused to "back up for a coon," but offered to send in a sleeping-car porter as a temporary substitute.

As he started to go, Fosdick, who had been incessantly consulting his watch, checked him to ask: "Oh, conductor, when do we get to the state-line of dear old Utah?"

"Dear old Utah!" the conductor grinned. "We'd 'a' been there already if we hadn't 'a' fell behind a little."

"Just my luck to be late," Fosdick moaned.

"What you so anxious to be in Utah for, Fosdick?" Ashton asked, suspiciously. "You go on to 'Frisco, don't you?"

Fosdick was evidently confused at the direct question. He tried to dodge it: "Yes, but—funny how things have changed. When we started, nobody was speaking to anybody except his wife, now—"

"Now," said Ashton, drily, "everybody's speaking to everybody except his wife."

"You're wrong there," Little Jimmie interrupted. "I wasn't speaking to my wife in the first place. We got on as strangersh and we're strangersh yet. Mrs. Well'n'ton is a—"

"A queen among women, we know! Dry up," said Ashton, and then they heard the querulous voice of the porter of their sleeping car: "I tell you, I don't know nothin' about the buffet business."

The conductor pushed him in with a gruff command. "Crawl in that cage and get busy."

"Still the porter protested: "Miste Pullman engaged me for a sleepin' car, not a drinkin' car. I'm a berth-maker, not a mixer." He cast a resentful glance through the window that served also as a bar, and his whole tone changed: "Say, is you goin' to allow me loose amongst all them beautiful bottles? Say, man, if you do, I can't guarantee my conduck."

"If you even sniff one of those bottles," the conductor warned him, "I'll crack it over your head."

"That won't worry me none—as long as my mouf's open." He smacked his chops over the prospect of intimacy with that liquid treasury. "Lordy! Well, I'll try to control my emotions—but remember, I don't guarantee nothin'."

The conductor started to go, but paused for final instructions: "And remember—after we get to Utah we can't serve any hard liquor at all."

"What's that? Don't they 'low nothin' in that old Utah but ice-cream soda?"

"That's about all. If you touch a drop, I'll leave you in Utah for life."

"Oh, Lordy, I'll be good!"

The conductor left the excited black and went his way. Ashton was the first to speak: "Say, Porter, can you mix drinks?"

The porter ruminated, then confessed: "Well, not on the outside, no, sir. If you-all is thirsty you better order the simplest things you can think of. If you want to command anything fancy, Lord knows what you'd get. Supposin' you was to say, 'Gimme a Tom Collins.' I'd be just as liable as not to pass you a Jack Johnson."

"Well, can you open beer?"

"Oh, I'm a natural born beer-opener."

"Rush it out then. My throat is as full of alkali dust as these windows."

The porter soon appeared with a tray full of cotton-topped glasses. The day was hot and the alkali dust very oppressive, and the beer was cold. Dr. Temple looked on it when it was amber, and suffered himself to be bullied into taking a glass.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

London as a Frenchman Sees It.

The little French boy has every opportunity of getting an engaging idea of London. In a recent volume of French and general geography, which has run into several editions, the compiler gives an English reading from the works of M. Enault, whoever he may be. And the little French boy is told concerning the London of this century that there are in the best parts of our unhappy city "whole streets formed of dens dug out of the soil, which itself was only a mass of rubbish." And again: "A little further on, hands of half-starved men without fire or shelter take refuge in gypsy vans, which vans are buried up to the axletree in mud." People also sleep in wheelless cabs, for which they pay a rent of 12½ cents a week. We Londoners should not have known anything about this if M. Enault had not told us!—London Chronicle.

Pre-Glacial Man.

The "pre-boulder clay man" found under the sheet of red crag formation of Suffolk, near Ipswich, in England, though tall and well shaped as the modern Englishman, resembles the ape-like Neanderthal men of a later age in the very flat and broad posterior part of the skull. He exhibits one peculiarity not found in any other fossil man of queerly shaped leg bones—the tibia and fibula. The report in the London Times says their significance "is as yet inexplicable; they probably depend on the manner in which the legs were used in walking."

Diplomatic.

"All women are beautiful," declares the leading photographer of England. That's why he's the leading photographer.

BEING NICE TO HER

Vermont Girl Visits Relatives in Georgia.

By LOUISE MERRIFIELD.

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

"What a funny name, anyway." Doris knelt on the nearest chair and leaned over her cousin's shoulder to get a better look at the letter. "Charity Lavinia Warren. I wish we could keep her out of sight until the Courtright dance is over, Eve."

Evelyn did not answer. She was reading the little faintly scented note once more. She had never dreamed that Charity Warren would ever have accepted her half-hearted invitation and come clear from Fairville, Vt., down to Pinehurst, Ga., to spend Thanksgiving.

"It won't be a bit what she expects, either," went on Doris. "No snow, harvest home festivals, barn dances, sleigh rides; nothing but us and the hotel. Whatever will we do with her, Eve?"

"How old do you suppose she is? Sixty?"

"No. She's thirty-two, I think. Ask father."

Major Warren raised his eyebrows when the girls broke the news and shook his head.

"Bless my heart, children, don't ask me. She's the only child of old Jed Warren, I know, my father's cousin. Rather distant, but all in the family. Treat her as nicely as you know, mind. Cousin Jed gave me a royal time years ago up in the old Vermont mountains. Never tasted such maple sirup in my life. Fine horses, too, Jed had. Be nice to his little girl, Doris."

"That's all the comfort he'll give us, Eve." Doris pouted. "Men never understand delicate situations."

Evelyn, twenty-four, and self-possessed, handled the situation as the major himself would have done. The little country cousin would arrive the day before Thanksgiving. The major was busy entertaining young Buell Carteret, the western judge, who had turned old politics upside down like a wornout basket in his state, and shaken out all the rubbish of years.

"We've Always Believed in Buell."

Doris was taken up with preparations for the dance, and Evelyn saw that a suite of pleasant rooms were set aside, for Charity. A group of northern friends had arrived from New York, and she found she could not meet her cousin, but the major readily agreed to "pick her up" in his own trap.

"Yes, but he's picked up Judge Carteret, too," said Doris, catching a flying glimpse of them as she hesitated on the broad veranda. "I hope he doesn't fall in love with Charity."

When the Northern express drew in the sun had just slipped behind the shoulder of Big Tumble mountain. The great pines on its uplifted crest looked gaunt and bare against the vivid sky. Lonely enough it looked to Charity as she stepped down from the sleeper, and the very first face that met her eyes was Buell's. Before the major could introduce himself the judge was before him, hat off, all his heart in his eyes as he seized Charity's little hand.

"Know her?" he exclaimed after the half-laughing explanations. "Why, I learned all I know in old Jed Warren's law office up in Fairville, major. He took me one day when I strolled into town with nothing but a violin and my mother's Bible to carry me through the world, and he put me on my feet. Little Miss Charity, here, was about seven then, I guess. I was a big country gawk of eighteen. Remember me, Miss Charity?"

Charity looked up at him shyly, but with a gleam of fun in her soft gray-blue eyes.

"I remember that you never called me Miss Charity then, Buell."

"But, bless my heart, child, don't you know he's the rising judge of the middle west," exclaimed the major. "We have to treat him with respect, and I'll wager my best fox hound you never were called Buell east of the Cumberland before, judge."

"But I have north of the Berkshires," laughed Carteret.

After the first shock of seeing Charity on friendly terms with the lion of Pinehurst, the girls corralled her in her own sitting room. Even Evelyn's critical eye could find no fault with her, this little distant cousin from the maple sugar state. She was as graceful and well poised as one of her own deer, eyes, gray-blue and heavily fringed, fair hair wound in broad plaits about her head, and little curly wisps escaping here and there. Besides, she had dimples, and a little demure one-sided smile that disarmed criticism.

"But where and how did you ever know Judge Carteret?" asked Doris, in surprise. "Do you know how wonderful he is, and that even father thinks he is the coming man of the country."

"My father thought that years ago," said Charity, happily. "We've always believed in Buell."

"It seems so strange, your coming way down here from the wilds of Vermont—"

"Oh, Fairville's quite a good-sized town," interposed Charity loyally "And we've got a new public library this year."

"Well, you are certainly a darling, and we're mighty proud to have you in the family," cried Evelyn, clasping her arms around the little northerner. "And I guess you'll have to lead the cotillon since you know the judge."

"Oh, but I don't know how to lead anything," laughed Charity. "And I think I'd better walk behind you Cousin Eve."

She did walk behind Evelyn at the dance, but beside her was Judge Carteret, and during most of the evening. Only Evelyn saw them slip into the moonlit gardens toward midnight, and she said nothing. If there was a little pang of heartache for the handsome young westerner, she smothered it loyally. It was a good thing he was even to be in the family, she told herself.

Out on the broad terrace looking seaward the judge asked Charity questions, several of them.

"I was about twenty-four when I went west, wasn't I, and you were thirteen, Charity; just a little girl? Why wouldn't you let me kiss you goodby? I've often wondered."

Charity looked down at the purple and white flowers in her band.

"I was almost grown up."

"But when I came back to visit your father and you were sixteen, Charity, still you wouldn't let me kiss you goodby."

"I never thought you'd notice it," whispered Charity.

"Didn't you want to?"

"I—I don't know."

"Listen, love of mine—"

"I think we'd better go back."

"We're not going back." His hands clasped hers strongly. "I found out long ago that if I wanted anything more than all else in the world, I must fight for it and win it. Don't you know I've always wanted you, Charity? Don't you?"

"Oh, Buell," she lifted her face impulsively, and he could see the tears glisten on her lashes. "Let me go. I'm not the woman for you to marry. You're successful now, and the climbing up and up, they say, and I'm just here where I was when you saw me last."

"Thank God you are," said the judge huskily. "I know the face I love best in the world, and the fairest roses of life, dear, grow in the old-fashioned gardens."

The major coughed violently behind them.

"My dance, I believe, Charity, child," he began. Then one good look at the pair startled him. "Bless my heart, judge, I beg your pardon. Another time, child, another time."

MUST HUSTLE TO FIRST BASE

A Little Figuring Shows Why Batsman and Ball Generally Reach There Close Together.

How many baseball enthusiasts know how fast the average grounder travels during its first hundred feet from the bat? Ask any fan and his answer will be anywhere from 20 to 200 miles an hour.

Split-second watches and careful timing of many grounded balls have established the fact that the average speed of ground balls—that is, those struck by the bat of the batsman from a fair pitched ball, which strike the field before they are in a fielder's hands—is at the rate of almost 60 miles an hour. Sixty miles an hour is 88 feet per second. The bases are 90 feet apart. A man who can run 100 yards in 11 seconds, which is fast running for anyone, particularly so for a man with baseball shoes and uniform on, can run 90 feet in 3.3 seconds. Is it any wonder that a ball which is fielded in its first 100 feet of travel usually reaches first just a fraction of a second before or after the runner sets foot upon it?

Every fan knows that the many close decisions at first base form one of the fascinations of the game. The speed of the batted ball, the speed at which a fielder can travel from his position to a point where he can meet and field the batted ball, pick it up, set himself for the throw, the speed of the ball across the diamond from his throw, and the speed of the traveling runner are so quickly balanced that it is always a question whether or not the runner will get there in time for the crowd to see the umpire's hand go down or whether he will face a thumb over a shoulder.

He Seems Well Named.

Ethel—Mr. Fluster makes me think of a canoe.

Maud—How so?

Ethel—It takes so little to upset him.—Boston Evening Transcript.

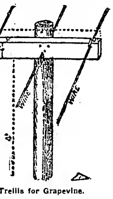
HORTICULTURE

TRELLIS FOR HOME VINEYARD

Contrivance Holds Vine Out of Way of Cultivation and Permits One to Pass Between Rows.

A grapevine trellis described by the Rural New Yorker, from which this cut and description are reproduced, has a middle wire which goes through holes in the posts. The middle slot sets down over the middle wire, while the two outside wires run through slots in the cross arm for two inches from the ends.

The cross arms are 1 by 4 inches for all but end cross arms, which are 2 by 4 inches. The cross arms are nailed to the posts, and should be braced by wire running from the ends of the cross arm, and then down to the post 18 or 20 inches below the arm. The stem of the vine is brought to a height a little above the level of the middle wire and tied to it.



Trellis for Grapevine.

Two canes that develop near this level the present year are left next fall, and next spring are tied to the right and left along this middle wire. Two short spurs are left near this location to furnish bearing wood for the year following, and all else removed. The shoots developing from these grow out and over the outside wires, making a canopy, the fruit hanging in a natural position beneath, and protected from the sun.

This trellis simulates the position of the wild vine more nearly than any other. The growth is out of the way of cultivation, good drainage is insured, and one can pass readily from row to row. This trellis is recommended for the home vineyard. The expense of construction makes it prohibitive commercially except for fancy table varieties.

SELECTION OF ORCHARD SITE

Common Error Is to Choose Soil That Is Too Rich for Apples—Wood Is Not Wanted.

A common mistake in the selection of a site for the apple orchard tract, large or small, is that of choosing a soil that is too rich; that will cause abundant growth of wood, but mighty little fruit. In the valley in which the writer's ranch is located is an orchard of mature apple trees, as pretty a sight from a standpoint of foliage as one could ask to see, which has lately been felled because it did not deliver the goods.

The tract is fat, rich and well watered. Within a gunshot of this tract is a block of winter Nelis pear trees of the same age that for several years past have grossed their owners close to a thousand dollars per acre, says a writer in an exchange. Never was more emphatically demonstrated the fact that soil can be too rich for apples but not for pears. Within a mile of these unproductive apple trees, on thinner and lighter granitic soils, the apple trees bear prolifically to the point of breaking down.

HANDY LITTLE GARDEN TOOL

Implement for Pulverizing Soil Can Be Made of an Old Long-Handled Shovel, as Shown.

A handy garden tool for pulverizing the soil can be made of an old long-handled shovel, as shown, says the Popular Mechanics. Heat the shovel and flatten it out, drill holes about 2½ inches apart and rivet spikes in them. A board with large nails, having a long handle attached will also answer the purpose, but not so well as the shovel.

Earth Pulverizer for Gardeners.

For Tree Wounds.

In California the following mixture was used on trees three years ago and is still in good condition. One part of crude petroleum to three parts of resin; warm in separate dishes, mix and apply warm to cuts made by pruning or by cultivator injury. While this mixture is not better than grafting wax, it is much cheaper and is worthy of trial.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879.

Bedes Budget has drawn and published a paralell of the progressive republican and the socialist platforms which reads so near alike on some of the vital questions that are now before the American peoplo that they might be taken for twin brothers. And we will be durned If both of them were not copied from the people's party platform of 1892. So you see both the socialist party and the progressive republican party are twenty years behind the Great Ignatius Donnelly.

It used to be the practice for a ditching company to put up about $25 boodle and get another years extension on ditches. If they had been smart enough to have completed their ditches at all there would no have been son much complaint made. But they have abused this privelage until the farmers have got onto their racket and there will be something doing along the ditching line from now on. Some of them contractors have been in the habit of sticking their thumb in the arm hole of their vest and saying, "We are responsible." Then contract to dig ditches get the backing of some big bonding company and then sub let the contract to some irresponsible cuss that cannot do the work, at about half the price that they get then sit down and smoke their cigars, and wait for their wealth to roll in.

When the worthless cuss that they have put on the work fails to do it and has "dead beat" the farmers and store keepers out of all the provisions he can he gets out of the country and lets the people who have trusted him mourn their loss. Then Mr. contractor and bonding company start their bellyaching for an extension of time. In the meantime the farmers who have petitioned for the ditch can let their farm and meadow lands lie idle and wait until the contractors and bondmen get some other sub contractors on the job. A test case will be promptly made of this kind of work on ditch 47. So watch the result Of course if the bonding companies carry it up to supreme Court they will of course win, as it is a well known fact that an individual has no show bewing a corporation in this court. If you don't believe this have some attorney look up the case of W.G.Hunt [illegible] The Pitt Agriculture works [illegible] the N. W. law reports of the [illegible]

[illegible] when we get through the farmers will never get justice or the socialist party will get some mighty good literature.

Two good farmers in the town of Highlanding made a mistake in voting for Peterson for representative in congress from this district. To bad. but it can't be helped.

Keeping Out the Wind.

Willie was a smart boy and ambitious. His first job was a post in a local bank.

"Well, Willie," asked his uncle one day, "how are you getting on in business? I suppose you will soon be manager?"

"Yes, uncle," Willie replied. "I'm already a draft clerk."

"A draft clerk! Good boy! And what are your duties?"

"I open and shut the windows according to orders," said Willie, "and close the doors after people that leave 'em open."—London Ideas.

Three Manifestations.

"You may give three important illustrations of the power of the press," says the teacher to the class.

The pupil who had not hitherto particularly distinguished himself was the first to reply:

"Cider, courtship and politics."—Judge's Library.

COMMUNICATED.

The Editor of the Eleven Towns is evidently indisposed whether politically or physically it is hard to say, but by looking through the columns of his paper one would say politically, whether it is becasue the north and south Ry. Assa did not include Erie on their map, or because the Socialist candidate have no announcements in his paper, or whether he is lost. He has stated in his paper hereto for that he was lost couldn't vote for Taft and Roosevelt was out of the question and Woody Wilson was no good and the dear old red flag the emblem of peace and plenty and also the emblem of the socialist party has caused his peaceful slumbers to be disturbed and caused him such horrible dreams was like taking a dose of poison, or it may be he is feeling lost because the socialist who were aroun a couple of weeks ago getting signers on a petition passed him up after due consideration they came to the conclusion that their petition looked better with his name not attached. but the editor is feeling better to-day we notice I in one of his late issues that he is boosting for Martz and Eberhardt, but then you know a five dollar bill looks big under a republican administration especially to a weak mind P.P.P.

At the time of this writing we do not know whether Adolf Eberhart received the republican nomination for governor or not but we serve this notice in advance, If he is the republican nominee, we are publishing a republican paper and will tell some facts before Nov.. that will convince the people that he is not fit for governor of this state. We want it distinctly understood that we are not a socialist so don't blame that party of Progress for what facts we might tell.

What We Never Forget

according to science, are the things associated with our early home life, such as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruptions, cuts, sprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit, unrivaled for piles, corns or cold-sores. Only 25 cents at all druggists.

Notice For Publication.

First Publication in the Sunbeam Sept. 20.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. September 13 1912

Notice is hereby given that Torgel K. Hegtvedt of Germantown Minn. who on November 14, 1910, made Homestead Application No. 795, Serial No 04642, for Lots 6, 7, and E½ S.W. ¼ Section 6 Township 151 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof to establish claim to the land above described before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. on the 31st. day of October 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Leif T. Jordeslangen, Gunder T. Skretvet, Knut [illegible] Christoffer Vad, all of Germantown, Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin.
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Sep 26th. 1912

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 19th. 1912

Notice is hereby given that Kittil Jordeshoften of Germantown Minn. who on Nov. 1. 1911, made Homestead Application No. 797, Serial No. 1614, for N.W. ¼ Section 8 Township 151 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before The Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn., on the 31st. day of October 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Torgel K. Hegtvedt, Gander T. Skretvet, Christoffer Vad, Leif T. Jordeslangen, all of Germantown Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin.
Register.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE,
Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Fate of Elfrida

Elfrida Mooner had been well brought up. Her mother had seen to that with the painstaking care of one who herself has learned through experience.

Elfrida knew at once when confronted by a bouillon spoon that it was not a cream scoop and she had a great scorn for a young man who walked on the wrong side of one upon the street. She always signed her formal letters "Most cordially yours," and spoke of her mother as "m'-mah," and with the accent carefully placed on the last syllable.

So it is easily realized that tremendous self-control was required on Elfrida's part to endure the young man who sat next to her at the dance given by the Royal Order of Brothers of Something-or-Other in Elton Corners, where she was visiting some hitherto unknown cousins.

When the young man at the dance had broken the ice by saying that it was a pretty party Elfrida had recoiled. He had not been introduced. Everybody seemed to know everybody else in this town and she could not get used to such a situation.

There was something familiar about the young man's face as Elfrida stared at him, but when the full sweep of recollection rolled across her and she recalled vividly that she had seen him in Reston's butcher shop Elfrida almost choked. He was a nice looking young man. Dimly she recalled that his father was Reston, who owned the shop. Perhaps this young man cut off steaks and sliced bacon!

"I think not," Elfrida said faintly when young Reston asked if she would dance that waltz.

"All right; the next one, then," he said as a matter of course. Then he went to hunt for another partner

Elfrida's cousins listened wonderingly a moment later to her fire of questions and her tale of woe.

"Why on earth shouldn't Ned Reston ask you to dance?" they inquired, "He goes with every one, and we've grown up with him! He went to the college across the river and is good looking! Why shouldn't he go to the same parties as we?"

Her sense of being wronged was hard to maintain, because young Reston had proved himself a good dancer when he had come back and taken his waltz. Elfrida had touched his arm with the tips of her fingers and had tried not to breathe as she went through the ordeal.

The next night Ned Reston called and her cousins seemed to assume that the call was meant for their guest, for they gradually disappeared and left her the burden of entertaining him. Only a strict sense of duty to a guest under one's roof prevented her from rising and bidding him good night. She resolved in a kind of cold fury to have it out with her cousins after he left, and it was when she was taking out her hairpins later that she realized with a start that she had forgotten to do so. She had been thinking about a western story that Reston had told her. In angry disgust she admitted that he could talk well. Still, the taint of the bucher shop hung over it all.

Elfrida writhed the next day when her cousins frankly joked her about her "catch." She felt disgraced.

When there were picnics and other festivities to which every one went in crowds Ned Reston singled out Elfrida as a matter of course and nobody acted as though it was in the least extraordinary. Nobody tried to help her evade him. It was impossible to make her cousins realize the fine line of distinction which made it right for her to evade him.

Elfrida felt her brain tottering, especially as it grew harder and harder for her to realize in Ned Reston's company that the situation was impossible for a well brought up young girl. Finally the young part vanquished the well brought up section of Elfrida's nature and with a little thrill of exquisite horror she realized that Ned Reston was making love to her and that she liked it.

It was some time after Elfrida's mother was told that her daughter was going to marry Ned, whose father was buying him a half interest in the leading hardware store in Elton Corners, that she discovered the dark fact that this affluant parent owned the village meat market.

"We'll never, never speak of it!" she gasped to Elfrida in anguished dismay. The trousseau was nearly finished and she really couldn't break off the match. "My poor child! How could you, how could you!"

Elfrida regarded her mother in meditative curiosity as though recalling the time when she, too, had felt that way. Then she laughed—not a well brought up laugh, but an amused chuckle.

"My goodness," she said recklessly. "Things like that don't seem to make a bit of difference to me now!"—Chicago Daily News.

Chief End of Travel.

"We must go to Stratford."

"What's the use? We can buy Stratford post cards in London."

"My friend, one travels for something more than post cards. I want to write my name on Shakespeare's tomb."

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

The Men Who Succeed.

as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, to-day, demands health, to fail is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak, run down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas, B Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders. And deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well." Try them. Only 50 cents at All Druggists.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Sep. 20th. 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 9th. 1912

NOTICE is hereby given that Grace M. Pinkerton. of Torgerson Minn., who on May 15th. 1911. made homestead Entry No. 06130 for S. E. ¼ Section 22 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of Intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before N.W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 2nd day of November, 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

A.T. Rhe. of Germantown Minn. John Markuson, E. H. Besancon, of Torgerson Minn. J. H. Hay, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Aug. 8.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Aug. 7th. 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Knult C. Shirtley. of Thief River Falls Minn. who on Oct. 3.1904. made Homestead Entry No. 617. Serial No. 01106 for S.E.¼ Section 6 Township 154 N. Range 41 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of Intention to make final Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 24th. day of September 1912

Claimant names as witnesses:

Carl C. Overum, of Thief River Falls Minn.
Hans Jorstad, of Thief River Falls Minn.
[illegible] Shirley, of Thief River Falls. Minn.
[illegible] Carlson, of Germantown, Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register,

Uncle Ezra Says

"It don't take more'n a gill uv effort to git folks into a peck of trouble" and a little neglect of constipation, biliousness, indigestion or other liver derangement will do the same. If ailing, take Dr. King's New Life Pills for quick results. Easy, safe, sure, and only 25 cents at All Druggists

ENLIVENED THE PLAY.

Juliet Wanted Limelight and Got More Than She Expected.

At a small seaport town in England a lady star actress of the third magnitude appeared as Juliet. "I cannot do justice to myself," she said to the manager, who combined theatrical enterprise with the conduct of a row of bathing machines, "if I do not have a lime (limelight) thrown on me when I appear on the balcony."

"We ain't got no limelight, miss, but I think we could get you a ship's blue light," replied the obliging manager, and to this the lady agreed. The lad who went to the shop to buy the blue light brought back a signal rocket which was given him by mistake. The prompter was her own man, and in his ignorance took the rocket in good faith

He jests at scars who never felt a wound.

(Juliet appears. Prompter lights the match.)

But soft! What light through yonder window breaks?

(This was the match lighting the fuse.)

Arise, fair sun!

The sun, or rather the rocket, did rise with a hiss that sounded far louder in a theater than it does in the open air. Juliet was knocked off the balcony, the fly borders were set on fire and the theater was filled with sulphurous smoke, while the audience which was fortunately a small one, made a stampede to the doors.—Exchange.

Tried and Found Wanting.

"I've had so much bad luck," said the gloomy man, "that I lie awake half the night thinking about my troubles."

"The cure for that," they told him, "is to quit thinking of your own troubles. Think of other people's."

"I'll try it," he said.

Three months later they met him again.

"Well, how did it work?" they asked.

"Didn't do any good," he replied. "I lie awake all night now thinking of other people's troubles."

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for buttor and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail. leaves Sunbeam, at 9.40 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 1.30 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m,

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Aug. 23rd, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. August 20th. 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Paul Henriksen, of Espelee Minn., who on September 29th, 1910, made Homestead Application Serial No. [illegible], for S.½ N.E. ¼, S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼, & [illegible] E. ¼ S.W. ¼ Section 7 Township 155 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn, on the [illegible] day of September 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Fred Solley, John G. Nilson, Carl T. Hanson, Paul [illegible], all of Espelee Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year: four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

An Eye [illegible]

"I want to marry [illegible] the rising young author [illegible]"

"Why?" [illegible]

ess, preparing to [illegible] sioned confession.

"Well," he replied, [illegible] great advertisement for me.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

[illegible] Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

W.G.Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you,

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof.

We have a fine farm for sale in Deer Park township for only $21 per acre.

Mrs. Walter McAndress is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Martin McAndress at Thief River Falls this week.

There was a fairly good turn out to the primary election Tuesday with 74 votes cast and counted.

The weather has been very unfavorable for stacking grain the past week. A heavy rain last night will stop work for the balance of the week, and part of next week.

We understand the Lionitze and King who bought the two John Quirk farms this spring will not make settlement on the land this fall.

We have a fine sample of dent corn raised on the farm of Walter McAndress that would make an old Iowa corn raiser smile.

Michelet received 45 votes to Richardson's 7, in the town of Highlanding, which proves that it pays to advertise the fact that you are in the race for office.

Post for Clerk of Court got one vote in this Township.

We regret that we have not got the election returns for publication this week but will have them complete next week.

The tickets showed that the farmers did not understand the new law, as lots of them were left blank. There was six tickets that there was no mark made on for governor. This is wrong and we hope to see the judges of election attend to this in the future and instruct the farmers more fully how to vote, as there is no use to spend time to go to election and hand one of them tickets in blank.

ROLAND NEWS.

More rain, more rest

Mrs. Con. Short visited with Mr. and Mrs. Whalen and family on Sunday.

Hunters have been quite numerous this season more hunters than game.

There will be services three weeks from last Sunday at the New Synod church at 3 o'clock in the afternoon Rev. Palin pastor.

Miss Annie Iverson returned home on Thursday from Fargo, where she has been attending school.

Aslak Neslund returned home on Thursday.

Miss Singe Brekkie is home again after spending a few months at Fertile.

Quite a number of young folks took in the Young Peoples meeting at Mrs. Iverson on Sunday keep it going

Not So Absurd.

"How absurd!"

"What's absurd?"

"Five years are supposed to have elapsed since the last act, and that man is wearing the same overcoat."

"Nothin' absurd about that. He's takin' the part of a married man, isn't he?"

Foiled.

"A man tried to pick my pockets in the street yesterday, but my wife prevented him."

"Did she grapple with him or just scream?"

"Neither. She wasn't there."

"Then how could she prevent him?"

"She had been through my pockets first."

A Help to Promptness.

Anxious Voice Over the Phone—Doctor, please hurry over to our house. One of the family has suddenly been stricken with a fainting fit. Is there anything you want ready when you get here, so that there will be no time lost? Doctor—Yes—er—you may have my fee ready.—Lippincott's.

Pipes and Hymns.

Rev. Dr. Parr when perpetual curate of Halton, Warwickshire, which living he held from 1783 to 1790, regularly smoked in the vestry while the congregation was singing long hymns, chosen for the purpose, immediately before the sermon. The doctor was wont to exclaim. "My people like long hymns, but I prefer a long pipe."—London Telegraph.

Paid advertising.

Having received the nomination of the Public Ownership Party for candidate for County Commissioner of the 5th commissioner district, I will, if elected, consider myself at the service of the people and use all my efforts in the interests of the tax payers of Pennington County.

I earnestly solicit the support of the voters at the final election November 5th.

Respectfully
George Lemers.

Many Driven From Home.

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles, find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by All Druggists.

LUNG DISEASE
"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using
DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY
W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.
PRICE 50c AND $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

HOUSE KEEPER WANTED.

I desire to employ the services of a house keeper on my farm in the town of Kratka. Good conveniences and steady employment Salary $4.00 a week and board Call on or address,

John Quirk,
Highlanding Minn.

Take One Pain Pill, than—Take it Easy.

To Head-Off a Headache

Nothing is Better than

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

They Give Relief without Bad After-Effects.

"For four years I was subject to almost constant headache. At times so severe I was unfitted for work. Through the advice of a friend I was persuaded to try Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills and the result has been that I have entirely eradicated my system of those continuous headaches that followed a hard and continuous mental strain."—O. L. Russell, Agt. C. & N. W. Ry., Early, Ia.

For Sale by All Druggists.
25 Doses, 25 Cents.
MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Not on the Level.

"How can mountain climbers be believed?"

"Why not?"

"How can such a thing as mountain climbing be on the level?"—Baltimore American.

The man who cannot forgive any mortal thing is a green hand in life.—R. L. Stevenson.

Grocers Who Dressed In Colors.

In the early part of the fifteenth century it is recorded that the "grocers' guild appeared in livery of scarlet and green." A few years later scarlet and black were adopted. Funeral services of deceased members "were attended with much show of pageantry." At the burial of Sir Philip Sidney, who was a member of the grocers' guild, his worship the mayor, aldermen and other civic officials were present "rydinge in purple."—London Telegraph.

Bobby Ellis

By Grace Kerrigan

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Helen trembled when Bobby Ellis detached himself from the wallflowers at the schoolhouse dance and slouched across the floor toward her. He crooked his elbow and jerked his head in a stiff bow. In Salt Petre Creek this pantomime was the customary invitation to dance.

The girl glanced across the room and breathed a sigh of relief when she saw that her father's broad back was turned toward them. Bobby Ellis noted the hesitation and smiled tolerantly. Helen's hand slipped into his arm and in another moment they were waltzing to the strains of violin and cornet. Bobby's arms clasped her closely and she could feel the heavy thumping of his brave heart.

"I expect your pa will be kind of wrathy about this dance, but there was something I had to say to you," said Bobby presently.

"I don't care if he is—just once," said Helen recklessly.

"That's a proper spirit, my girl," approved Bobby. "He still holds you to your promise to marry Rawlins?"

"Yes."

"And you told him you'd be a dutiful daughter and marry the old skinflint, so's they could jine all their land together and make the biggest range in the county?" His voice was caressing in its softness, but Helen trembled at its hidden menace.

"Nothing more—has been said. I suppose father takes it for granted, after your quarrel with him. He knows that I haven't seen you until tonight. I hope he won't make trouble."

"He's harmless for a while," grinned Bobby as he turned her past her parent's broad back.

"Who's that he's talking to?"

"A lady friend of mine."

"A friend of yours!" inquired Helen with a catch in her voice.

"Yes—I just made 'em acquainted. Your pa will enjoy her right well."

"Who is she, Bobby?"

"Mrs. Watkins—Sally Watkins—the Widder Watkins from Chinquapin."

"Oh!" gasped Helen, for she had heard of the gay Widow Watkins who had created havoc with the hearts of the cattlemen and whose name had been coupled with Bobby Ellis lately.

"I Must Go Hunt Your Father Up."

Helen looked hard at the fascinating widow who was talking earnestly to Mr. Main. Mrs. Watkins was evidently vain of the wealth of red hair that was generously streaked with white, for she made no attempt to conceal its piebald effect. She had a round pink and white face, sweet and good-humored, and her smile was good to see.

"She looks sweet," said Helen in spite of the wave of jealousy that rushed over her.

"She is a sweet, good little woman, and she's seen a heap of trouble," said Bobby emphatically. "The best day she ever had was the one on which she planted old Watkins!"

"Was he old?" asked Helen faintly.

"About Rawlins' age," returned Bobby mercilessly. "She married to help her folks along. The fellow she loved was poor then, but he married and is pretty well off now—as rich as your pa—and as sour dispositioned!"

"Perhaps they will marry now—is he a widower?"

"Yes, he's free enough—but whether they marry or not—hm!"

"Is that what you wanted to tell me?" asked Helen coldly.

"Something like that," returned Bobby Ellis in her pink ear. "I'm going to be married tomorrow morning."

The girl in his arms stiffened a little and her hands grew cold. All the pretty color was drained from her cheeks. She moved her lips to make reply, but no sound came.

"I was going to ask your pa to drive you over to the ceremony—the parson at Red Spider will tie the knot."

Helen laughed. "That's funny—I was telling father the other day that I had never been to a wedding in my life. It's good of you to ask us to your wedding."

"I hope you'll come—everything's arranged. I even got the ring—right here!" Mr. Ellis thumped his vest pocket suggestively.

"Is—is Mrs. Watkins—" Helen's voice died away in an agonized whisper.

Bobby Ellis paid no attention to that. "The widder? Bless your heart, yes—couldn't do the stunt without her!" he said cheerfully.

Helen was game. "We will come," she said decisively. "If father won't I will come alone."

"Good for you!"

"What time—is it—to be?"

"Ten o'clock sharp. You know where the parson's house is?"

"Yes."

"The widder wanted me to ask you to wear white—you see she's set on wearing blue and she says if you should wear pink or red or anything like that it would make her dress look like an Indian blanket on a piebald pony. I hope I got those colors correct—her hair's red, you know."

"Red and white," corrected Helen sweetly.

"Thank you," said Bobby solemnly as he led her to a seat. "I reckon this is the last dance you'll ever have with me as a care-free bachelor. Next time I'll be an old married party!"

"I suppose so," said Helen.

"I must go hunt your father up and tear that there little widder away from his fascinating attentions," cried Bobby gayly. "See you at 10 tomorrow?"

"Yes."

"Sure thing?"

"Yes."

"Good," said Bobby, and if Helen could have seen his face she would have noticed that there was a strained look in his eyes.

She saw nothing save the curiously streaked hair of the Widow Watkins and Bobby's tall form bending over her as he calmly carried her away from big Bill Main, Helen's father.

Mr. Main's eagle eyes roamed the room and found his daughter's pale face staring appeal at him. The big cattleman's harsh face seemed curiously softened as he met her appealing glance, and his eyes wore a hurt look as he pushed his fingers through his grizzled hair.

"Well, daughter?" he asked.

"Are you ready to go, dad?"

"Right and ready," he returned promptly.

When he drove up to the door in the buckboard Helen was standing on the steps muffled in wraps. It was cool outside and she shivered. As they were about to drive off the lean form of Jim Rawlins pushed close to the wagon.

"See here, Helen," he whined, "you was engaged to me for the Saratogy Lancers—you know I can't dance any of them round deuces, and I been waiting for you—they're starting up now."

"I'm sorry, Mr. Rawlins," she was beginning, when her father cut in roughly:

"Let her alone, Jim—she's all tired out," and with a vicious cut at his horses dashed away, leaving the angry Rawlins staring after them.

The long drive back to the ranch was a silent one. When they came within sight of the lamp in the window Helen ventured to break the silence.

"Dad, Bobby Ellis and Mrs. Watkins are going to be married at 10 o'clock. I promised I'd go to the wedding. Will you drive me over?"

Bill Main stifled an oath; "Yes—I'll drive you over, Nelly," he said softly. Helen's eyes filled with tears—he had not called her Nelly since she was a little girl.

"I promised Mrs. Watkins I would come," he spoke in a queer voice.

"You knew her before?" asked Helen with sudden intuition of what was to follow.

"Yes—she did what I tried to make you do. Married an old man and I lost her. It's too late now for me to make good to you, daughter, but I'll send Rawlins packing tomorrow. It's retribution on me for standing between you and Bobby."

"You mean—that you care for her now, father?" whispered Helen.

"Yes."

Helen leaned her head against her father's shoulder and presently his arm encircled her.

The next morning Bill Main and his daughter drove to the parsonage in Red Spider. While Mr. Main tied his horses Helen smoothed the white lawn gown that she wore out of courtesy for the Widow Watkins' red hair.

"It's mockery for me to wear white today," she whispered to herself, for her face was whiter than her frock. Impulse would have taken her a thousand miles in the opposite direction from the scene of Bobby Ellis' wedding, but she understood, or thought she did, why he asked her to be there.

It was common gossip in Bndlong county that Bobby had been devoted to Helen, and her presence, as well as her father's, there today would still every voice.

Mr. Ellis and the widow were waiting in the parlor of the parsonage. Bobby was looking white and stern, and the widow was very lovely in palest blue that matched her eyes.

"Before I call in the sky pilot," said Bobby rather nervously, "I want to say that this is a game—I did it to get Helen here and the widow helped." He cleared his throat and stared defiantly at Bill Main, but Bill Main was looking at his daughter.

"I'm going to marry Helen now, and I'd rather do it with your consent than without, sir. What you got to say?"

Before Mr. Main could frame a reply Helen had rushed into Bobby's arms.

"There's the answer, Bobby," said Bill Main seriously, but his face glowed as if a new light had been kindled within his heart.

"If you and Mrs. Watkins will stand up with us—we'll do as much for you some day," suggested the joyous bridegroom boldly.

Bill Main's eyes met the pleading blue ones of the pretty widow whom he once loved and lost only to regain now.

"Might as well take you in now and make a double knot of it," said Mr. Main. "What say, Sally?"

"That is what Bobby and I planned," said the widow demurely.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Gibeau Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abraham Parquine, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. Duffy, Cashier. T. L. Cruzon, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

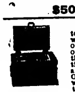
This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Elsewhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.
Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day



Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

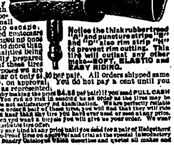
DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.



Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

TAMING the HEAD HUNTERS of LUZON

A YEAR AGO and

NOW

GIRLS' GATHERING EDIBLE PLANTS

HARVESTING RICE

PLOWING A RICE FIELD

PHOTOGRAPHS COPYRIGHT BY UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD, N.Y.

THE head hunters of the Philippines are being taught to go shopping. It is an important means of civilization in the mountain province of Luzon—region of lofty peaks, deep gorges and primeval forests, inhabited by a quarter of a million people who eat their meat raw, drink warm blood, and indulge (or have done so until recently) an appetite for wholesale homicide.

As a means of civilization (under the direction of our war department), trade is being developed among these wild folk. In the past it has been necessary for them to make long journeys to the coast towns, to buy salt, cloth, and other necessaries. But within the last few months government stores, called "exchanges," have been started at various points, and are kept supplied with everything likely to be required by the natives—the prices for goods being those current in Manila, plus 20 per cent. and cost of transportation. The stores not only sell, but also buy. They purchase baskets, wood-carvings, native weapons, and articles of savage dress such as can be sold in Manila as curios, paying liberally for them in cash.

One of the seven sub-provinces composing the Mountain Province is Benguet, the capital of which, Baguio—a mile above sea level, and 175 miles due north of Manila—is the terminus of one of the most wonderful roads in the world, built by the natives with the help of American engineering skill. Extending all the way from Baguio to the sea, it is carved to a large extent out of solid rock, skirting the sides of steep mountains and crossing deep canyons in many places by suspension bridges. For most of its length it is wide enough for narrow-tread carts, and at intervals of eighteen miles comfortable five-room rest houses have been erected for the benefit of travelers. Running at an elevation of 5,000 to 7,000 feet, it passes through tropical scenery of unsurpassed beauty, commands magnificent views, and should in the near future become a route much patronized by tourists.

The last of the Benguet Igorots to come under the jurisdiction and control of the United States government were the people of Atoc, who occupied a remarkable natural stronghold—a bold peak 6,500 feet high, which juts out from the surrounding mountains, its precipitous sides defying attack. In this rocky fortress dwelt the tribe, small in numbers, but warlike, working the rice paddies in the valleys below by day and seeking refuge in their eyrie at night. They preferred independence to submission. Nevertheless, being eventually overcome by force of arms, they are now entirely docile. Generally speaking, the Igorots are peaceably inclined. They are notably contented and cheerful, and the women have a voice in their councils, often exercising a controlling influence.

Strongest in numbers of all the savage peoples and among the most inveterate head hunters were the Ifugaos. There are about 125,000 of them. Bitterly hostile to begin with, they have become warm friends and admirers of the Americans, and their services, voluntarily given, have been utilized on an extensive scale in the building of roads and trails. By their own suggestion, they submit to a labor tax which demands ten days' work per annum from each able-bodied man. Several companies of Ifugao constabulary have been organized, and do admirable service, keeping order among the tribesmen.

Equally fierce and as yet untamed to any great extent are the Kalingas. They were inveterate head hunters until recently, but have almost given up the practice. Some of them are beginning to cut their hair and dress like Christians, and quite a number of the children are learning to read and write. One small group of their settlements adopted an attitude of defiance toward the Americans, and two years ago Walter F. Hale, lieutenant-governor of that province, paid the rebels a visit. When they threw spears at him he picked them up and handed them back with an intimation that such actions were discourteous. He told them that he wanted to be friends with them. But they replied that they did not desire to be friends, and that they intended to take his head at the first convenient opportunity.

Such was the situation of affairs up to a short time ago, when four settlements "broke the peace" and went on the warpath. Lieut.-Gov. Hale, with a strong detachment of Ifugao constabulary and assisted by a force of friendly Kalingas, thereupon organized a punitive expedition, attacked the rebel villages, and wiped them out, burning the houses and killing the pigs.

The situation in Apayao is especially difficult because head-hunting among the tribesmen of that sub-province is intimately connected with their religious faith. Nevertheless, the practice is being gradually stamped out and, with the help of the Igorot and Ifugao constabulary, a number of murderers have been arrested and punished. There is still a considerable area over which government control has not yet been established, and which has not even been opened up by trails to any great extent, owing to the inaccessible character of the region. One should realize, of course, that head-hunting among these people is not regarded as murder in the ordinary sense of the word. It is a field sport and a manly occupation, established by the custom of centuries as befitting of warrior.

Most troublesome and untrustworthy of all the tribes of northern Luzon are the Hongots, of the sub-province of Nueva Viscaya. There are not more than 5,000 or 6,000 of them, but they inhabit a vast region, most of it very mountainous and almost wholly covered by virgin forest. Often their settlements are merely temporary, and they are hard to get at. Enormous distances separate their villages, which in the more remote regions continue to fight among themselves. These were the people who not long ago murdered Dr. William Jones while he was engaged in making ethnological notes among them. Nevertheless, trails are being pushed into the heart of their country; two or three government "exchanges" have been established; industrial schools are being started for their benefit, and efforts are being made to induce them to extend their agricultural operations—partly for the sake of rendering their communities more stationary.

One should realize that the continual warfare that has been going on for centuries among the tribes in the wild man's territory of Northern Luzon has been due mainly to lack of acquaintance among the people. Every stranger being regarded as an enemy, it was a matter of course that each village should be at war with the neighboring villages, and head-hunting was an important part of the regular business of every able-bodied male citizen. The tilling of the rice paddies and sweet potato fields could be carried on with safety only under armed guard—heads of women and children being not less desirable as trophies than those of men. For doing away with this situation of affairs, the most effective means has been the building of roads and trails by which the tribes have been brought into communication with each other, thus having an opportunity to become friends. Ifugaos, Kalingas and Bontoc Igorots now work side by side with pick and shovel, instead of hunting each other with head-axes.

It is, in fact, a veritable social revolution that is being accomplished. All of the Mountain Province is being literally gridironed with trails and roads, the most inaccessible districts being opened up. A through route for horseback travel has been nearly completed all the way from Southern Benguet to the extreme northern end of Luzon. Telegraph and telephone lines are being extended over hundreds of miles of territory, and the watch towers on lofty peaks, hitherto occupied by native sentinels on the alert for raiding bands of head-hunting foes, are deserted.

At Bontoc (capital of the sub-province of the same name), wonderful improvements are being made. Here, where half a dozen years ago no white man could have ventured without an armed escort, the men and boys are being taught brick-making and lime burning. A deposit of magnificent clay for the purpose was found near the river, with unlimited quantities of sharp sand suitable for building near by; also limestone. Today the people of the entire village of Minac, in that neighborhood, are burning lime and furnishing it to the government of Bontoc Province. They are becoming independently rich at the business.

These facilities, with unlimited labor obtainable for nothing under the system of the ten-day tax, make building work exceedingly cheap. A large brick school house and a brick club house, as well as a building for the offices of the provincial government, of stone and brick, have been put up at Bontoc; also a prison for wild folk who misbehave themselves, and a small, but thoroughly up-to-date, hospital. A canal has been constructed incidentally to furnish the town of Bontoc with an abundant supply of pure mountain water.

It is expected that the hospital will be of inestimable usefulness. Most of the wild people seem heartily willing to give up their ancient custom of curing physical ailments by human and animal sacrifices, and come to the doctor showing a touching confidence in the ability of the white man to give them help. Packages of simple remedies, with small pamphlet of directions in English and the more important native dialects, are distributed among the villages; likewise large quantities of quinine and other safe and useful drugs.

A recently discovered drug has been found to be a specific for the very unpleasant tropical disease called "yaws." It happened that a Bontoc Igorot, afflicted with it, was unwilling to go to the hospital, but was compelled to do so, receiving the one injection requisite. Then he began to complain bitterly that no medicine was being put on his sores. But the effect of the drug soon manifested itself, and he went about town excitedly demonstrating his improved condition to all who would look. Some days later he disappeared, and the doctor was much disappointed, because he wanted him for an object lesson to convince others of the efficiency of the treatment. To the great surprise of the hospital staff, he turned up again soon afterward with thirteen other sufferers from "yaws," whom he had brought a distance of fifty miles from his native village, in order that they also might be cured.

In Benguet the wild people are building school houses and sending their children to them. The boys are taught to construct looms, and the girls to use them for making cloth. Each girl, on completing her course of education, takes her loom and returns to her own village, thus extending her newly-acquired knowledge of weaving to her family and friends. At Bua is an Igorot girls' school in which the pupils not only make cloth, but manufacture articles of clothing for sale. Baguio, the capital of Benguet, is growing by rapid strides, and new and substantial buildings are springing up on every side.

Useful plants and particularly vegetables, including the Irish potato, are being placed in the hands of the wild people. Their agricultural methods at present entail great labor with limited results. They patiently clear a forest tract with bolos, turn over the soil with primitive implements, and sow seed. Then, after a short time, the growth of weeds drives them to fresh areas, where the performance has to be repeated. What the Americans propose to do is to provide them with modern tools of husbandry, and with carabaos whenever possible.

A point by no means to be lost sight of is the fact that these wild people of Luzon are not savages of an ordinary type. Not only is their physical development superb, probably surpassing that of any other race of human beings in the world, but they are highly intelligent and even clever. Given the advantage of two or three generations of such educational oportunities as are now being afforded them by the Americans, and they will far exceed in intellectual qualifications the Filipinos of Manila and other coast towns. Indeed, it does not seem at all unlikely that in the future they, rather than the Filipinos, will become the dominant race in Luzon, controlling the affairs of the island and even those of the whole archipelago, in case we should voluntarily surrender sovereignty. In the meantime, while trying to uplift them in the scale of civilization, the government of the United States is making every effort to protect them against civilization's evil influences—especially the drink and diseases which have undermined the moral and physique of so many primitive peoples on coming into contact with the corrupting Caucasian.

Costs Less Bakes Better
CALUMET BAKING POWDER

ECONOMY—that's one thing you are looking for in these days of high living cost—Calumet insures a wonderful saving in your baking. But it does more. It insures wholesome food, tasty food—uniformly raised food.

Calumet is made right—to sell right—to bake right. Ask one of the millions of women who use it—or ask your grocer.

RECEIVED HIGHEST AWARDS
World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, Ill.
Paris Exposition, France, March, 1912.

You don't save money when you buy cheap or big-can baking powder. Don't be mislead. Buy Calumet. It's more economical—more wholesome—gives best results. Calumet is far superior to sour milk and soda.

TEXT TAKEN TOO LITERALLY

Ten-Year-Old Julia Gets into Bad Graces of Mother by Giving Tramp a Half-Dollar.

"Be not forgetful to entertain strangers; for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

The foregoing quotation is from chapter 13, verse 2, Book of Hebrews, and it is introduced solely because it constitutes a vital part of this story. Julia is ten years old and she goes to Sunday school. It appears that on a recent occasion the Sunday school teacher had considerable to say about this matter of "entertaining angels unawares." Anyway, it made a deep impression with Julia.

A few days after the lesson Julia's mother left her in charge of the house for a few hours. When the mother returned she went to a particular cup in the cupboard to extract therefrom one-half dollar. In this cup is kept the family pin money, and Julia's mother knew that she had put fifty cents there before she had gone out. But the half dollar was gone. There was an expression of anxiety on Julia's face and mother scented mischief.

"Did you take that money?" asked the mother, somewhat severely.

Julia broke into tears. "I gave it to a man that came to the back door," sobbed the little girl.

"Gave it to a man!" exclaimed the mother. "What for?"

"I thought he might be God," tearfully replied Julia.—Kansas City Star.

One Universal Symbol.

Scientists at work on a universal language have one symbol to start with that already has the same meaning the world over," a traveler said. "That is the skull and crossbones. Its speech is even more universal than music or money. Musical values differ in different countries, so does money, but from one end of the earth to the other a skull and crossbones means poison."

BURNED AND ITCHED BADLY

539 Lincoln Park Blvd., Chicago, Ill. —"A year ago I received a very severe burn on my left arm. I caught cold in it and it was all sore and ulcerated. The sore was as large as a silver dollar. It was all red and inflamed and had pus running out of it. I suffered terribly from burning pain; could not sleep for two weeks it burned and itched so badly. I applied —— Salve, —— Salve and a salve my druggist recommended as his own, but got no relief. I then commenced using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bathed the burned parts with Cuticura Soap and applied the Cuticura Ointment on a linen bandage. I got relief from the first, and my arm healed nicely. I was soon able to be at work again. Had I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment at first I would have avoided lots of suffering." (Signed) Harry Junke, Mar. 9, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Add. post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

Improved Vacuum Cleaner.

A new vacuum cleaner, designed to be operated by water power in a sink or bathtub, consists of two suction pumps driven by a water wheel, and a chamber in which the dust is collected, to be washed away by the waste water.

Important to Mothers
Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over 30 Years.
Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Up-to-Date Grammar.

"How is the noun 'question' declined?"

"I suppose by a refusal to answer."

CURES BURNS AND CUTS.
Cole's Carbolisalve stops the pain instantly. Cures quick. No scar. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

And many a man does the things privately that he denounces in public.

Babies and grievances grow larger with nursing.

HOW IT SEEMED TO HIM.

City Cousin—The hotel you were stopping at, was it on the American or European plan?

Country Cousin—Waal, I don't jest exactly know, but I think it must bev bin on th' get-rich-quick plan.

Old Roman Wall Unearthed.

A part of the wall which once enclosed old St. Paul's, London, has been discovered in excavations at the corner of Paternoster Row and St. Paul's alley in London. The wall, which is about 60 feet long, is made of chalk and rubble, and was built in the twelfth century. On the same site pieces of a Roman amphora, Roman vases and some Samian ware have also been found. Other "finds" include a camel's skull unearthed in High Holborn and a large quantity of pipes of the eighteenth century. Under some old stables in Bartholomew Close—one of the oldest parts of London—three Norman arches have been found. They are close to one another, and are believed to have formed part of the cloisters of the priory which once stood on this site.

English Honors Cost Money.

The letter patent granted for the dignity of a baron cost £150, and for that of a baronet £100, payable to the board of inland revenue. Other expenses to be incurred by the newly-honored include crests or new coats-of-arms, while some wish to have their "genealogical trees" properly made out. Consequently the Heralds' college is busy after the issue of a list of honors, and the total expenses of a baron are not far short of £400, and those of a baronet exceed £200.

Move for Change in Time.

The French ministry of public works is endeavoring to have the government adopt the system of reckoning time on railways by the use of the hours from 1 to 24, instead of 12 noon to 12 midnight. This system has already been adopted by many continental railways and has been in operation for years on the Canadian Pacific railway.

British Metropolis Leads in Mud.

According to L. Meerson Clancey of St. Louis, who is now in London, there is more mud in the British metropolis than in any other of the big cities he has been in, and his record includes Paris, Berlin, Vienna, New York, Washington, Baltimore, St. Louis and Milwaukee.

Technical.

Autoist—How did you escape a fine?

Motorist—Our attorney proved the constable's watch was fast.—Judge.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle. Adv.

Hard to Manage.

"I never see you eat corn on the cob."

"No, I always avoid laborious food."

OLD SORES CURED
Allen's Ulcerine Salve cures Chronic Ulcers, Bone Ulcers, Scrofulous Ulcers, Varicose Ulcers, Indolent Ulcers, Mercurial Ulcers, White Swelling, Milk Leg, Fever Sores, all old sores. By mail 50c. Booklet free. J. P. ALLEN, Dept. A6, St. Paul, Minn.

Richest in Healing Qualities
FOR BACKACHE, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEYS AND BLADDER
FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

THOMPSON'S EYE WATER Quickly relieves eye irritation caused by dust, sun or wind. Booklet free. JOHN L. THOMPSON SONS & CO., Troy, N. Y.

DUMAS TO PRISON

MUST WORK OUT PENALTY FOR CONVICTION IN PUPOSKY RAID AT STILLWATER.

A JEKYL-HYDE DRAMA.

Bemidji Courtroom Is Final Scene—Former Cass Lake Mayor Protests Innocence to the Last.

Bemidji. — Continually protesting innocence and asserting through his attorney, George Spear of Grand Rapids, that he has been prevented from ever telling his side of the story Dr. D. P. Dumas, until last spring mayor of Cass Lake and one of the most successful physicians in Northern Minnesota, was sentenced in District Court here before Judge W. S. McClenahan to hard labor at Stillwater on the charge of attempted arson in the third degree.

This charge grew out of the Puposky raid of June in 1911, when Mike Davis and Martin Behon were trapped in the Postoffice Building while in the act of attempting to rob and burn the building, according to evidence produced by the State. Testimony also went to show that Dr. Dumas had planned this expedition and that he had been a confederate of some of the country's most daring and desperate criminals.

Dr Dumas left here under the personal guard of Sheriff A. B. Hazen, to enter the prison at Stillwater to begin the daily routine of a convict. The maximum penalty is three and one-half years.

Attends Patients to Last.

Dr. Dumas spent Tuesday forenoon attending to his patients in Cass Lake, prescribing for eight persons. He closed up his office at noon and came to Bemidji. He previously had sent his wife and infant son to relatives.

Assistant Attorney General Alex James, Deputy Fire Marshall Sam Fullerton and Attorneys Thayer C. Bailey and E. E. McDonald, both of this city, who acted as special prosecuting attorneys, were in the court room and only Attorney McDonald spoke for the State, and then only briefly making formal demand that sentence be passed.

"Let the prisoner stand forward," ordered Judge McClenahan, and Dr. Dumas, smooth shaven and well groomed, quickly arose from his seat beside his attorney and faced the court. He told the Judge that he was born April 4, 1879; that he had lived in Minnesota all his life except the time spent in Chicago graduating from the Medical Department of the University of Illinois; that he had lived 26 years in the city of Minneapolis, had practiced medicine there and that for a year was house physician of the Minneapolis City Hospital.

Attorney Speaks for Him.

Dr. Dumas made no other statement and Judge McClenahan inquired if he had anything to say. Instead, Mr. Spear, as his attorney, addressed the Court and reviewed at some length the proceedings which were about to terminate with the imposition of sentence. Mr. Spear said that the expense of the case had proved a severe financial strain not only to Dr. Dumas, whose means were exhausted, but also to his father, a Minneapolis business man who had come to his assistance, and that when it appeared that the motion for a new trial would have to be based upon technical ground and that heavy expenses would accrue in the event of an appeal, Dr. Dumas himself determined that he would not allow the case to proceed further; that the defendant had been unwilling to place additional burden upon his father and had made up his mind that it would be wiser to end the uncertainty and suspense which would attend upon further proceedings.

This explanation, the attorney said, was made to advise the Court of the good faith of the defendant in obtaining a stay in order that the motion for a new trial might be made.

Candidates Are Picked.

St. Paul. — The Minnesota Republican Progressive League will recommend the following candidates to the voters of Minnesota: For United States senator, James A. Peterson, Minneapolis; congressman-at-large, James A. Manahan, Minneapolis; governor, William E. Lee, Long Prairie; lieutenant governor, J. A. A. Burnquist, St. Paul: attorney general, Thomas Fraxer, Rochester; railroad and warehouse commissioner, J. W. Rosenwald, St. Paul.

James J. Hill Acquires a Bank.

St. Paul. — Announcement has just been officially made in St. Paul that James J. Hill had acquired two-thirds of the stock of the Second National bank, and is planning to establish a trust company with a capital of $2,000,000. St. Paul bankers say the trust company will probably be the largest in the Northwest.

Painting Will Be Restored.

St. Paul.—An examination of the tenthousand dollar painting which fell from its place in the Capitol dome at St. Paul revealed only a small ragged tear in one corner and a few cracked places in the paint.

Bemidji Man Is Drowned.

Bemidji. — Vinton L. Ellis, who is a well known young real estate and insurance man of this city and formerly publisher of the Bemidji Daily Pioneer, was drowned in Tuttle Lake, while hunting for ducks.

JUDGE C. W. STANTON.

C. W. Stanton, now Judge of the District Court, Fifteenth Judicial district, Minnesota, has filed as a candidate for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. His home is in Bemidji, Minn.

ONE DEAD; EIGHT ARE INJURED

MORE THAN 100 GUESTS FLEE FROM EXPLOSION.

Conditions At One Hotel to Be Investigated—Total Loss $16,000.

Minneapolis.—One Minneapolis man was suffocated to death by smoke, eight others were overcome and were resuscitated and rescued by the fire department's life saving squad and more than 100 guests, many of them half clad, fled to the street or were assisted out by firemen in a fire which started from a gasoline explosion in a garage, spread to two Washington avenue south hotels and menaced two other near-by hostelries.

Many of those carried out by the firemen were women. A score of guests in the most seriously damaged hotel, the Star, 113, Washington avenue south, lost all their personal belongings. Fire Marshal Arthur C. Price said both of two explanations offered to him regarding the origin of the fire indicated that the fire ordinance had been violated. The blaze started in the garage of the National Express & Messenger company at the rear of 113 Washington avenue south and spread to the Star hotel in the same building and to the Warwick hotel, 115 Washington avenue south. Guests also fled from the American hotel, 111 Washington avenue south, and the Hotel Beaufort, 112 Third street south. The total loss exceeded $16,000.

A man who had registered as Morris Johnson, and who had been assigned room 33 of the Warwick hotel, was the guest who lost his life. The indications were that he had died struggling for breath. Before he lost consciousness he had torn his clothing to ribbons in a vain effort to make a rope by which he might escape from a window. The door of the room had become jammed, the police said, and there were indications that Johnson had tried vainly to open the window also.

DON'T THINK OF BABY.

Release Woman From Barb Fence Then Realize Child is Missing.

Anoka.—Driving in an automobile, a party of five, including a little baby, came upon "death curve," two miles south of Anoka, before the person at the wheel was aware of the treacherous bend in the road. The car was overturned twice, righting itself by its own power.

Mr. and Mrs. Honer Andrews, of Pine River, and Ray Anderson, of Pequot, found themselves lying in a ditch. They had been severely shaken up, but were otherwise uninjured. Mr. Anderson thought of his wife, and turning around found that she was hanging in a barb wire fence. Mr. Anderson, assisted by the Honer family, unfastened the woman, found her unhurt, and the four congratulated themselves on their narrow escape.

"But where's the baby?" cried Mrs. Honer.

"Yes, where is it?" cried her husband.

They looked in the road. No baby. They peered in the automobile. Not a sign of the child.

Then one of them lifted some blankets that lay in the ditch. A wee face and a pair of wondering eyes met his gaze. The baby was hurt and was taken to Anoka where a doctor rubbed soothing oils on several bruises. Its injuries, however, are not severe.

Stillwater Reunion Ends.

Stillwater. — The first home coming ended with fireworks at Lowell park, the principal feature of which was a representation of Niagara Falls.

Train Kills Judge Mott.

Faribault, Minn., Sept. 10. — Judge Rodney A. Mott, 87 years old, one of Rice county's pioneers, was killed at the Second street crossing on the Rock Island tracks by a northbound passenger train as he was coming down town to his office.

Buried Miners Believed Alive.

Biwabik. — The party of rescuers nearly have succeeded in reaching the two imprisoned miners in the Rnddy pit. They are believed to be alive.

MILITIAMEN READY

FOUR COMPANIES ON ARMS AWAITING ORDERS FROM GOV. EBERHART.

SHERIFF TO CONTROL.

City Council Starts Action in Court Against Traction Co.—Mobs Violent Throughout Day.

Duluth, Minn., Sept. 14—With a message from Governor Eberhart's office, calling on Sheriff Meining either to secure control of the strike situation or resign and put the responsibility on the state authorities, rumors that the four companies of the State Guard here were held held under sealed orders ready to etablish military rule gained a firm basis for their circulation.

The four companies were called together and held in their rendezvous, awaiting for direct orders to take control of the situation. Major H. V. Eve, in charge of the companies, is ready to march his men into the downtown district at a moment's notice. The order is expected hourly. When the telegram to Sheriff Meining was received the troops made ready to deploy at the major's orders.

While the troops are waiting, the strike has been thrown into the courts by an order issued by Judge Dibell. The City Council in a special meeting ordered City Attorney Carmichael to apply for a writ of mandamus against the Street Car company. Judge Dibell made the writ returnable Monday. The Street Car Company is ordered by it to show cause why its cars are not being operated regularly. They stopped at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon after having been run in a desultory way most of the day.

Mob violence flung itself up the main street and through the city yesterday, coming from the West End, where for most of the week an ungoverned mass of men has dared the police and wrecked cars.

In the West End the 5,000 men, boys and women stood around, a brick in each hand, a pile of cobblestones at their feet, a sneer on their faces and daring the police to shoot or the company to let out a car. Women vie with men in their abusive language and each woman carried some object to throw. The police apparently stood pat and waited.

Business organizations are appealing by wire and telephone for state troops to quell the trouble. Governor Eberhart is hastening back to St. Paul to look into the Duluth situation. He may order troops here.

Five arrests were made so far as can be ascertained. Six car men were hurt. The police claim they are unable to enter the crowd and pick out the stone throwers. The car company is providing all cars with heavy screen windows. Rumors that dynamite is being secured by the strikers are denied.

Trouble occurred when a strikebreaking motorman bumped off the track an ice wagon which contained a strike sympathizer. Immediately a mob formed, the glass was knocked from the street car and the crew of the car was routed. Another crew boarded the car, turned on all power and dashed through the crowd.

$2,741,936 ADDED.

State Auditor's Advance Report Shows Large Increase.

St. Paul.—An increase of nearly $3,000,000 in the permanent trust funds of the state for the biennial period ending July 31, 1912, is reported by Samuel G. Iverson, state auditor, in the advance statement of his biennial report. This is by far the largest increase in these funds since they were created.

The entire amount derived from the sale of timber, minerals and land sales in the last two years is summerized as follows:

Permanent school funds	$1,611,722.96
Permanent university funds	57,337.15
Internal improvement land funds	12,404.12
Swamp land fund	1,090,471.92
Total	$2,741,936.15

After 20 Years.

Mankato. — After an absence of twenty years, Chris Hansen returned unexpectedly, and had difficulty in identifying himself to the satisfaction of his brother and other relatives. Hanson left the family home at Winona when he was 25 and went west. He served in the army during the Spanish-American war and later roughed it on the plains. He married and now resides at Rock Valley, Wyo. He did not learn of the death last spring of his father until he returned yesterday. A brother and sister have also died.

Crazed Man Runs Amuck.

Mankato. — After being terrorized for nearly three hours by a crazed man who stood over them with a loaded shotgun and repeatedly announced his intention to "wipe them out," the families of August Zinglar and Henry Schultz, Decoria farmers, were nearly prostrated. Financial worry is what led Zingler to threaten to clean out his family and himself, and when Schultz interfered he and his family were also threatened. Zingler has been adjudged insane and committed to the St. Peter Asylum.

LOOK FOR THE CAUSE

Follow the Advice of Other Women Who Have Had Experiences Similar to Yours.

Have you ever stopped to consider what is the meaning of the various symptoms from which you are suffering? Certainly the paleness, pain in the back, headaches, loss of appetite, nervousness, shortness of breath must have some one cause. They are not diseases in themselves but are complaints and warnings from the different organs of the body that these organs are not being supplied with pure blood and cannot do their daily work well.

To be in good health a person must always have good rich blood. Every tissue of the body depends upon it for nourishment and strength. Knowledge of this fact makes possible a direct treatment for the various disorders from which women suffer. They can cure their troubles by making the blood pure with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Mrs. F. N. Kenning, of No. 411 Fifteenth avenue, North Minneapolis, Minn., who was completely cured by this remedy, says:

"For over a year I was in very poor health. I was very weak and thin and had terrible pains through my back. I would be in bed for a week at a time. I was subject to dizzy spells. My limbs would seem to give out and I would have no control of them during these spells. I was reduced in weight to 98 pounds and could not do my work.

"The doctor did not seem to help me and I quit his treatment. It was then a cousin recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People to me and I gave them a trial. I soon felt much better and I now weigh 115 pounds. For years I had terrible headaches but since taking the pills these have disappeared. My health is better than it has been in years and I give the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I would advise all suffering women to take the pills for I know they will relieve them of much misery."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People should be used in anaemia, chlorosis or green sickness, sick headache, and for nervousness and a general run-down condition of the health.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale at all druggists, or will be mailed to any address, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. Our new booklet, "Plain Talks to Women," will be sent free on request. Adv.

WOMAN WORKS OUT PROBLEM

Mrs. Sarah Erickson Declares the Hen Lays an Egg at the Same Hour She Was Born.

What time o' day
Does a hen lay?

That question has puzzled poultry fanciers for unnumbered decades, but now, it seems, it has been satisfactorily solved by a woman. She is Mrs. Sarah Erickson of Falconer, N. Y. Having kept chickens for 37 years, she believes she qualifies as an expert in this line of effort.

"I have worked out the problem," she declares. By using marked legbands, trap nests and alarm clocks attached to the nests I have determined that a hen lays an egg at the same hour, minute and second that she was born, or, rather, hatched. For instance, if the hen happened to be able to peck its way through its shell at 7:43 a. m., she will lay an egg at precisely 7:43 a. m. And she will do this without variation every time she is inclined to lay. I have kept close, systematic watch on my hens for five years, and I have never known the rule to fail."

Crime to Kiss.

In Russia it is a crime for lovers to kiss in public, and not very long ago two young men and two young women were arrested in Odessa for having been guilty of this offense. They had all been dining together in a restaurant, and kissed on parting. They were condemned to short terms of imprisonment, and the sentences were confirmed on appeal. The general fine in Russia for a kiss in the open street is 15 shillings, but in a tramcar it may cost anything up to 25 shillings.

A CURE FOR PILES.
Cole's Carbolisalve stops itching and pain and cures piles. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

Unless you have met the mother just after her first baby has cut its tooth you have no idea of real excitement.

Whenever You Use Your Back

Does a Sharp Pain Hit You?

It's a sign of sick kidneys, especially if the kidney action is disordered, too, passages scanty or too frequent or off-color.

Do not neglect any little kidney ill or the slight troubles run into dropsy, gravel, stone or Bright's disease.

Use Doan's Kidney Pills. This good remedy cures bad kidneys.

A TYPICAL CASE—
L. C. Warner, 1205 N. Garfield Ave., Pocatello, Idaho, says: "Kidney complaint often confined me to bed for weeks. I passed kidney stones and the pain was terrible. Morphine was my only relief until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. After taking this remedy the stones dissolved and passed without pain. I am now free from kidney trouble."

Get Doan's at any Drug Store, 50c. a Box
Doan's Kidney Pills

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

"This is My Choice of Duke's Mixture Presents"

Among the many valuable presents now given away with Liggett & Myers Duke's Mixture there is something to suit every taste—and in this all-pleasing satisfaction the presents are exactly like the tobacco itself. All smokers like the selected Virginia and North Carolina bright leaf that you get in

Liggett & Myers
Duke's Mixture

Now this famous old tobacco will be more popular than ever—for it is now a Liggett & Myers leader, and is equal in quality to any granulated tobacco you can buy.

If you haven't smoked Duke's Mixture with the Liggett & Myers name on the bag—try it now. Tucked into a pipe, or any other way you use it, you will like it; for there is no better value anywhere.

For 5c you get one and a half ounces of choice granulated tobacco, unsurpassed by any in quality.

Now About the Free Presents

The coupons now packed with Liggett & Myers Duke's Mixture are good for all sorts of valuable presents. These presents cost you not one penny. The list includes not only smokers' articles — but many desirable presents for women and children—fine fountain pens, umbrellas, cameras, toilet articles, tennis racquets, catcher's gloves and masks, etc.

As a special offer during September and October only, we will send you our new illustrated catalogue of presents FREE. Just send name and address on a postal.

Coupons from Duke's Mixture may be assorted with tags from HORSE SHOE, J. T., TINSLEY'S NATURAL LEAF, GRANGER TWIST, coupons from FOUR ROSES (10c-tin double coupon), PICK PLUG CUT, PIEDMONT CIGARETTES, CLIX CIGARETTES, and other tags or coupons issued by us.

Address—Premium Dept.
Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.
St. Louis, Mo.

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES
$3.00 $3.50 $4.00 $4.50 AND $5.00
FOR MEN AND WOMEN

Boys wear W. L. Douglas $2.00, $2.50 & $3.00 School Shoes, because one pair will positively outwear two pairs of ordinary shoes, same as the men's shoes.

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more $3.00, $3.50 & $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS.

The workmanship which has made W. L. Douglas shoes famous the world over is maintained in every pair.

Ask your dealer to show you W. L. Douglas latest fashions for fall and winter wear, notice the short vamps which make the foot look smaller, points in a shoe particularly desired by young men. Also the conservative styles which have made W. L. Douglas shoes a household word everywhere.

If you could visit W. L. Douglas large factories at Brockton, Mass., and see for yourself how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they are warranted to fit better, look better, hold their shape and wear longer than any other make for the price. Fast Color Eyelets.

CAUTION.—To protect you against inferior shoes, W. L. Douglas stamps his name on the bottom. Look for the stamp. Beware of substitutes. W. L. Douglas shoes are sold in 78 own stores and shoe dealers everywhere. No matter where you live, they are within your reach. If your dealer cannot supply you, write direct to factory for catalog showing how to order by mail. Shoes sent everywhere, delivery charges prepaid. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

QUITE A DIF

First Comedian—What is the difference between a beautiful girl and a codfish?

Second Comedian—Give it up.

First Comedian—One has a chance to become a fall bride and the other to become a ball fried.

Riga's Trade Distinction.

The growth in lumber shipments from Riga, totaling 97,400,000 cubic feet in 1910, ranks this port among the world's greatest timber exporters. The greater part of this trade was in sawed lumber. Britain took over half of the amount exported.

Disturbing.

"Nora, is my husband home?"

"Yes, mum! he's in the library, workin'."

"Then wake him and tell him I want to see him."

Your Liver Is Clogged Up

That's Why You're Tired—Out of Sorts—Have No Appetite.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will put you right in a few days.

They do their duty.

Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion and Sick Headache

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine is that of Therapion, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c. there is no doubt. In fact it seems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say, miraculous cures, should send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. Le Clerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng. and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 is what they require and have been seeking in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness. Therapion is sold by druggists or mail $1.00. [illegible] Co., 90 Beekman St., New York.

2000 TRADE SECRETS, recipes, remedies, and formulas. Learn these secrets. They are priceless for home, farm, shop, office, laboratory. Over 350 pages. Sent prepaid for $1. Manufacturers' N. W. Agcy, Dept. , Duluth, Minn.

Pettit's Eye Salve FOR EYE DISEASES

DEFIANCE STARCH never sticks to the iron.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 38-1912.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES

Color more goods brighter and faster colors than any other dye. One 10c package colors all fibers. They dye in cold water better than any other dye. You can dye any garment without ripping apart. Write for free booklet—How to Dye, Bleach and Mix Colors. MONROE DRUG COMPANY, Quincy, Ill.

The Corrector of Destinies

Being Tales of Randolph Mason as Related by His Private Secretary, Courtland Parks

The Interrupted Exile

By Melville Davisson Post

Copyright by Edward J. Clode

When the invitations to Emily Cruger's wedding at her father's country place on the Hudson arrived, every one knew what was going to happen—and it did happen: Horses were unharnessed, motor cars were ordered back into their garages, and we went up in the day coaches of a railroad special with a flurry of snow driving against the windows.

We were met at the little station shed by a row of closed carriages, jolted off to a village church and packed into tight little pews. There, if one were really an old and dear friend of the family and had known the bride since she was a tow-headed little girl in fluffy frocks, he berated old General Cruger as though he were a pickpocket, vilified Emily and damned the institution of marriage. Then we were whisked away in the snow-covered carriages to Cliffcourt and luncheon. But, first, we piled our rubbers in an anteroom by the porte-cochere, passed in review before the old general, kissed the tips of Emily's gloved fingers, quoted to the groom the appropriate remark of Solomon, and then girded our loins to fight for a piece by the General's fleshpots.

Fortune sat me down at luncheon opposite a man at whom I was very glad to have a look. Vague whisperings had linked his name with Emily Cruger's for many a long day. He had proceeded with his plans to win her with the deliberation of a Japanese field marshal.

But women are not to be taken with a chain of forts.

The man was carrying on his face a courteous unconcern, but the enamel of it was set over savage lines.

Gossip had it that his plans for the housing of this wife were already carried out; the land for a mile farther up the Hudson had become the splendid, formal gardens of a French estate, the rising walls of the chateau loomed, a line of gray, on the bluff above the river. The great Oriental was making ready while he waited.

I had no opportunity to speak with him. Mrs. Chesley Gaynor, with a niece on the block, had him at her right. The practical old dowager was in every slave-market.

Any mother would have feared so dangerous a man, but not so Mrs. Chesley Gaynor. This freebooter was the richest on the seas, he had sacks of doubloons packed to the gunwale of his brig. What mattered it if the dearest illusion of a maid walked the plank with two gold pieces bound tight over its eyelids, provided one got a country estate, a town house and perhaps a yacht? Mammon was the only god who was never sleeping or on a journey. The man hovered a bit about the debutante, praising her charms, but he did not want her, that was clear. He nursed a hurt with his hand on his cutlass.

I was glad that the old general was independent and the man Emily Cruger had chosen well enough to do. This brown wolf would be a fearful beast, prowling at one's door.

We depleted the larder to its last pate, got into our rubbers and proceeded to embark in our covered carriages. We trod upon one another's toes, jammed our elbows into our neighbors, and apologized sweetly for it; but underneath, I fear, we were ravening wolves. The tragedy of a country wedding in a May blizzard, twenty miles from New York!

The women all had been carted away, and I was entering a carriage after the last man when a servant ran out and said the general greatly wished me to remain.

The servant took me to a guest chamber where I found a glass of whisky, a hot bath and a dinner jacket. Meanwhile night descended and I joined the old general below stairs. We dined in rather desolate splendor under the lamps; after that we smoked by a little smoldering twig fire in the library overlooking the river. Then it was that I discovered why he wished me to remain.

"Courtlandt," he began, "you sat opposite a curious person today at luncheon. What do you think of him?"

"Well," I said, "if one were lacking names, I think he might be safely called a wolf."

He took my answer with a slow nodding of the head; then he walked over to the window and stood looking out at the snow driving up the dim river.

"Emily loves this place," he said; "I am glad I saved it to her; but it was like the story in the Russian fairy book, I tossed the wolf everything else for it."

Then he came back to the fire and sat down in his leather chair with his feet stretched out to the fender.

"I will keep your name 'wolf,' Courtlandt," he said; "I like it better than the one his father gave him. I am glad Emily is well out of his way, God bless her. I used to shudder when I saw the beast at her heels. It does not matter so much when a man is devoured, he takes that chance in the forest; but the nursery tale of little Red Riding Hood is full of heartaches. I used to see in fancy this wolf in my smoking jacket by the fire in this chair here. I have barred him out from my little Red Riding Hood; but I await the destiny of the helpless old grandmother."

He reached out his arm, moved some papers on the library table, uncovering a legal document in its blue, stiff wrapper.

"I have got to sign this for him," he went on, "and then blow on my fingers to warm them I suppose. The place here is deeded to Emily, and this property is all I have left."

He took up the paper and handed it over to me. I read it carefully through. It was a first mortgage on certain coal lands and mines of the Pittsburg vein in what is known as the Fairmont region, securing a two-hundred-thousand-dollar issue of bonds. It was made by the Cruger Coal company to the Exington Trust company as trustee.

"You see, Courtlandt," the old gentleman went on by way of explanation, "I am the Cruger Coal company—president and all, with a few friendly dummies to make the corporation valid. I owe this wolf two hundred thousand dollars. He agrees to take the bond issue for the debt. He might as well take a deed for the property. It is worth perhaps forty thousand dollars more than that; but he will get it in the end for the debt. A deed direct to him would be a little bold just now, a bit like exacting smart money, punitive damages for the loss of Emily."

He leaned over, got a little flaming twig from the fire, and relighted his burned-out cigar with it. Then he went on.

"There is a fragment of unbelievable history about that debt, Courtlandt, manufactured with the greatest care by this wolf. Three years ago, when I knew only the exterior of the man, he came to me and said that the Midland and Tidewater railroad wished to borrow about half a million dollars, and that he was exceedingly anxious to assist it to obtain the money; that the banks in New York were short because of the recent January payment of dividends, but he was advised that the Granite Mountain Insurance Company at Montpelier had a lot of idle money. He was not acquainted with the officers of this company, but some one had told him that I was born in Montpelier and that my cousin, Senator Lapman, was president of the company. Perhaps I would give him a letter of introduction. I gave him a letter, saying that he was known to me and that he was a man of large financial relations, in fact, a rather friendly letter.

"Business in New England is on a rather higher plane than one finds it here. One's word goes further. When one's father and grandfather are known, the value of what one says is also known. Well, this wolf took his railroad man up there, presented his letter and got the loan for him, pledging his word for the soundness of the securities and, by strong inference, pledging my word too. The insurance company paid out four hundred thousand dollars, and took the bonds of the railroad for one half-million of dollars.

"Three months later the railroad went into the hands of a receiver, was sold, brought merely the value of the receiver's certificates, which the court had issued to cover its operating expenses, and the bonds were, of course, worthless.

"Senator Lapman came to me, and I went at once to the wolf. I told him that the Granite mountain officials had relied on his word and mine, that he had guaranteed the security in person before the board, and it must now be made good. He replied that I was quite right, he would make it wholly good, but that he would have to borrow the money, as he had not so much to his credit. He asked me to wait while he went across the street to his bank. In a few moments he returned, said the bank would loan him the money on his personal note, but that, to keep within its rules, the note would require two names on it. He could put his office boy on, he said, but if I would indorse it, the transaction would appear rather better.

"I knew that he was perfectly good for that sum, as good as the sub-treasury, and I at once said that I would comply with his request.

"We went together to the bank, an officer made out a note, he signed it and passed it to me. I noticed that it was in the form of a joint note; but I remembered that banks often preferred obligations in that form and I did not hesitate to sign it. Then, at his request, the bank delivered the money to me and I went at once to Montpelier and adjusted the matter with the insurance company. I forgot the incident then, but remembered how honorable the wolf was."

The old general's jaw tightened on the bitter word. He broke the cigar in his fingers and threw the pieces into the fire.

"One morning, after Emily's cards were out, I got a letter from the bank, calling my attention to this note and saying it must be paid. I was dumbfounded. I had supposed that the wolf had paid it long before. I went instantly to his office in New York. He met me with a face as cold as a stone, said that he had paid individually the interest on our note for several years, that he had used his good offices with the bank to get all the time for me that he could, that the bank refused to carry the paper any longer and we must arrange to pay it. In the greatest surprise I recalled the occurrence to his memory in minute detail. He replied composedly that I was quite mistaken, he was no more responsible to the insurance company than I; neither of us had been legally bound, but both had felt morally obliged to make good the loss, and so a joint note had been executed and the money paid to me. I surely remembered that.

"I turned around without another word and went to my solicitor. He examined the note at the bank, questioned the cashier, and advised me that the bank would certainly sue on the note and that I should have to pay my half of it. I was horribly disturbed. I did not know where to get two hundred thousand dollars. Everything I possessed would hardly bring that sum under the hammer, besides I wanted to give this place to Emily. In this dilemma the bank again notified me that the note would be reduced to judgment if not paid within thirty days, but added that if I would execute a mortgage on my coal property, of which it seems to have had an exact statement, it could place the bonds for my share of the note, and, as the wolf stood ready to pay his share in cash, the matter could be settled. I agreed to this plan because it left me free to convey this place to Emily for her marriage portion. I have since learned that this wolf, Myron Gates, takes these bonds."

The old man paused a moment, removed his eyeglasses and laid them on the table, then he went on, "I have also learned that the whole thing, from its inception, was a plan of Gates to get me into his power. He, in fact, owned the worthless securities which were transferred to the Granite Mountain Insurance company. He it was who got the four hundred thousand dollars; he it was who directed the bank to make out a joint note while I waited for him in his office; the delivery of the cash to me was a part of the scheme, that the officers of the bank could testify that the loan was for me. He got the two hundred thousand dollars which I must pay back to the bank."

He arose and began to walk up and down the library. "There was a time," he continued, "when one could call out such a creature and make him stand up before a pistol for an act like this. The custom had its value, which we forget now. When bloodletting was the penalty, sneaking cads kept their tongues tucked back of their teeth and their fingers out of other men's pockets. The law has disarmed the gentlemen, but left the viper his fangs. You are wondering now, Courtlandt, why this man was here at the wedding luncheon; but Emily knows nothing of all this."

"Now, my dear wedding guest," he said, smiling over the whisky, "I am up to the point where 'the ship went down like lead,' and am come to the explanation of your marooning. I have no source of income now but an inadequate little pension. I cannot live on it anywhere in America without my poverty being patent to Emily and her friends. I must get out of the country. I have thought about some little village in Southern France where one could have, at slight cost, the necessities of life, a servant and sunshine. I remembered that you had been over there for some time with Randolph Mason, and would know about it."

"General Cruger," I said, "before we discuss exile, let us see if Myron Gates cannot be got at in some way. The wolf might be forced to disgorge this money; perhaps we could find a way to scorch him somewhere with a firebrand. It seems to me a duty of a rather superior sort to pour a pot of pitch on the head of such a devil's imp."

He shook his head somewhat hopelessly at that. "Do not get a wrong impression of me, Courtlandt," he said, "I should like to pack coals under the beast if I could, I do not fear him. I have no refinements of false conscience against meeting his treachery with steel traps set in the leaves of his den, but even the discussion of such a thing is idle. I have gone over it more than once with the best attorneys in the city, and they saw no hope in a suit. It would be my word against his; but to support his word would be my letter of introduction, the joint note, the evidence of the bank officers that the money was paid to me personally—these things would convince a jury of candlestick-makers and the like. One firm of lawyers on upper Nassau thought I was lying even to them about it."

"But, General," I said, "Randolph Mason is not the usual practitioner of New York. Permit me to talk the matter over with him. Something may come of it."

His manner did not conceal how lacking he thought the result would be, but he was courteously obliged. "Certainly, Courtlandt," he replied. "I shall be greatly in your debt for thinking of the matter, but I fear we shall come back in the end to a counting of centimes, and the problem of a cheap little inn, with a roast fowl now and then and wine of the country."

I had no opportunity to consult with Randolph Mason until the evening of the following day.

I went into the room and sitting down in the chair before the table, made my excuses for interrupting his coffee and told General Cruger's story.

"Mr. Mason," I said, "this is a great injury to a very helpless man. How is this mortgage to be avoided?"

He answered me with a listless unconcern, still looking after the departing Pietro, "It is not to be avoided," he said. "Let the man sign it and pay his debt to the bank."

I caught helplessly at the last straw floating out from my disastrous shipwreck; "What then?" I said.

"What then?" he repeated, with the same indolent indifference. "Why, then, there will be another day tomorrow."

And he went out of the room and up to his bedchamber, where the silent Pietro made ready for his eccentric master.

I had a long talk that night with Pietro. He had a cousin in Pollanno, a village about a league from Genoa, where the Mediterranean makes a little sunny pocket. The place, he thought, ran with General Cruger's dream of the Riviera, the bay was paved with topaz, the far-off back of the sea wine-red, as in the days of Homer, the air soft as down—only the natives were not to be desired. They were picturesque enough for a theatric eye, but they were very dirty, very stout liars, and all one of the forty thieves. His cousin, Guido, was no better than the worst of them, but he kept a very comfortable inn, if the fleas in it were only dead. His wife, Gabriella, had once been in the service of the old Marquis Ferretti at Genoa and knew how to serve a gentleman.

Pietro would write to this cousin and drive a bargain for every detail of General Cruger's needs.

There was no comfort to be had from waiting, so I picked up a map, a Baedecker, some current fiction on Italy, and, taking the evil-fated mortgage in my pocket, went to Cliffcourt the next evening.

I almost cried when I saw General Cruger, his face was so greatly troubled. He looked white and feeble, an old man in two days.

He tried to make a little genial talk at dinner, and get back into his old cheery self. But it was no effort he gave up presently with a rather bitter smile.

"Mr. Parks," he said, when we were again in the library, "Victor Hugo once said that bad fortune always grew worse, and pretended it a quotation from the Sybilline books. He believed that Destiny, when it seized a man, always hurried him from one disaster to another until it flung him, finally, into the grave. The first blow was not always the one to be wept over. It was the second, the third, that he feared. Well, here is the second."

He took up a letter from the mantel and drew out the sheets as though he would read it to me; then he sat down in his chair still holding the sheets in his fingers.

"I got this letter yesterday from Emily. It was written from the St. Louis as she went out to sea, and brought in by the pilot."

He stopped a moment and sat staring into the fire, as if caught by some vagrant memory. Then he read the letter.

It was a happy letter, charmingly put, full of tenderness for the old father in his lonely house, carrying little directions to him, little messages which he should deliver, little duties he must perform.

He folded the letter and laid it on the table. Then he spoke with the distinctness of one going firmly to his ruin. Italy was now out of the question; he must remain and get employment somewhere. But, first, this business with the bank must be concluded. He would go up to the city with me in the morning, execute the mortgage and take up the note. He did not ask me about my conference with Randolph Mason, and so I was spared the recital of that failure. When the candles burned down, I slept again in the guest-chamber above the library, but no aid came through the gate of dreams. Hope had abandoned this derelict to the seas.

We went into the wolf's bank at ten o'clock the next morning. General Cruger executed the mortgage, and a notary of the bank filled in the prepared acknowledgment below his signature. The bonds were delivered to the secretary of Myron Gates, the money paid by him to General Cruger, who delivered the cash to the bank and got the note stamped "Paid." Then, when the transaction was concluded, we had luncheon at a club and I returned to lower Broadway after having promised General Cruger to meet him for dinner at the Holland.

When I entered the house, Randolph Mason was coming down the stairway. He inquired what business had taken up the morning; and I told him, as bitterly as I could, the sequel to my other story. General Cruger was now penniless, Myron Gates had hoarded his galleon and sailed away with its cargo without a shot at his black flag or the back of a cutlass on his gunwales. He was over the horizon with his loot, the thing was ended.

"Nothing is ended," said Mason, "until it arrives at its adjustment."

"Then," I said, "this is a case for the Court of Final Equity, if it ever sits."

"It is a case for me," he said.

I looked at him in wonder.

"A case for you?" I echoed. "You said 'Execute the mortgage and let the man pay the bank.'"

"I did," he replied. "You have followed that direction, I believe."

I did not understand.

"We followed the inevitable," I answered him. "It was the only thing to do. You recognized that yourself."

"It was the right thing to do," he said; "but not the only thing."

"Why, Mr. Mason," I said, "I asked you 'What then?' and you said there would be another day tomorrow."

"It is here," he answered. "Each day to its own events. The fool confuses his assistant with a multitude of directions. This is to be done now: You will at once hold a meeting of the Cruger Coal company under a call signed by all the members of the company, and as provided by law. Prepare the record of the company in proper form, authorize a mortgage on all the property of the company to the London Trust company of this city as trustee to secure a loan of two hundred and twenty thousand dollars. These mines, I discover, are easily worth that sum, including the earnings for one year. Some foreign clients of the banking house of Hurst & Solmeyer will pay in cash two hundred thousand dollars for these bonds upon the execution of the mortgage. Let General Cruger take that sum and hide it somewhere in Europe under his daughter's apron. Bring me the mortgage when it is ready to be signed."

In the face of all my experience of Randolph Mason, I hazarded an objection.

"But," I said, "the first mortgage is executed. Do you mean that this property is worth enough to secure another mortgage?"

"No," he answered, "I have just said that these mines are worth two hundred and twenty thousand dollars."

"Then," I said, "you mean the loss to fall on Hurst & Solmeyer?"

"No," he said, "Hurst & Solmeyer will make twenty thousand dollars."

"Surely," I said, "you do not mean to date this mortgage before the other one, do you? No notary could be got to certify an incorrect date."

He looked at me a moment.

"Parks," he said, "I fear that you are beginning to be a fool." Then he came down the steps and went into his private office.

This light breaking suddenly on a supposedly hopeless darkness, confused me, or else I had not put useless questions to Randolph Mason. I should have known better. Mason's words were never idle, nor were his plans visionary and barren, whether he bid one do a little or a great thing. The story of Naaman and the Prophet was convincing precedent. I did not understand these new instructions and could not point out their intent to General Cruger, but I knew that a pit was being digged for Myron Gates, and that was light enough.

I explained all this frankly to the old man that evening after dinner at the Holland. I urged him with the logic of the Syrian's servants. If Randolph Mason had bid us build a great, looming trap for the wolf, we should have done it. How much rather then this easy thing which he suggested! I did not comprehend, any more than he, how it could result as Mason said it would. It would take, in my opinion, words and passes, charmed amulets and the laying on of hands to induce any bankers to advance money on a second mortgage when the property involved was worth scarcely the value of the first. Still, Randolph Mason said the bankers would pay over the money, and he knew. I would pledge my life on that. I was aware, too, that Solmeyer believed in Mason as the Maid of Israel did in Elisha, and that the firm had made a fortune of six figures through that faith.

I had my way about it in the end. The meeting of the Cruger Coal company was held, the record correctly made, the bonds authorized, and the mortgage prepared in every detail as the law required it. I took it to Randolph Mason when the scrivener had finished. He examined it carefully, called in a notary, dictated the certificate, had the signatures properly affixed, and sent me with it to the bankers. They took it with the bonds and handed General Cruger a draft on the Rothschilds in Paris for two hundred thousand dollars. I walked uptown with the bewildered old man to his club. He was silent for a block of the way, dazed by this incredible fortune. Finally, he put his hand on my arm.

"My dear friend," he said, "I seem to be quite awake, and yet this event is after the manner of dreams or the illusion of some Oriental drug."

He went on slowly a little farther up Broadway. Then he stopped as though taken with a sudden resolution.

"Mr. Parks," he said, "Randolph Mason directed me to go to Europe and hide this money in my daughter's apron. I will go tomorrow on the Baltic. Come down to the ship at eleven and explain this miracle to me. I will run up home now for the luggage."

Then he took a car to his train and I returned to the banking house of Hurst & Solmeyer. I, also, wished an explanation. I walked straight through the building to the private office of the elder banker, and sat down before him at his table.

"Solmeyer," I said, "were you sure that the brick which you have just bought is gold?"

The old man smiled and stroked his long, patriarchal beard.

"Yes, Mr. Parks," he said, "this one is gold, Gates got a brass one."

"Impossible," I replied. "Myron Gates got a mortgage prepared by his own scrivener for the full value of this property. His security is prior to yours. How could his brick be brass?"

The old man's black eyes twinkled in their deep sockets.

"Mr. Parks," he said, "you do not know the Prophets. Is it not written 'Whoso causeth the righteous to go astray in an evil way shall fall himself into his own pit?'"

"The quotation is hopeful," I said, "but into what pit did Myron Gates fall?"

The old banker looked me searchingly in the face.

"Randolph Mason said that we were not to tell this thing to any one," (to avoid a charge of notice under the case cited,) "but you are his secretary, and I take it that he has sent you to see if we, ourselves, understand it."

Then he pulled out the drawer of the table and laid before me the mortgage, a copy of the one executed for Myron Gates, a report of the Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia, and a copy of the Acts of its Legislature. Each volume was marked with a slip of paper. The banker opened first the volume of Acts.

"You will observe," he said, "that the old form of acknowledgment for corporations was changed by this act, and a new form given, in which the president of the corporation must certify under oath that he is such officer, and authorized to execute such a paper. Now, the scrivener who drew the Gates mortgage used the old form of acknowledgment as he found it in the form books, while our mortgage, you will notice, is executed under the new form of acknowledgment."

"Well," I said, "what important effect can that have? The Gates mortgage is in proper form, there is only a mistake in the certificate of acknowledgment. That does not invalidate the mortgage, nor affect the validity of the bonds."

For answer the banker opened the volume of reports, and passed it across the table to me, his finger marking the page.

It was a decision of the Court of Last Resort in the state where the mortgaged property was situated, holding that such a mortgage, certified under the old form of acknowledgment, could not be admitted to record so as to create a lien on the property, that such an acknowledgment was void, and that spreading such a mortgage, so acknowledged, on the county records did not make it a recorded lien.

The matter was now clear. The Gates mortgage was not a lien. Gates was only a general creditor. The first and only lien on these coal properties was this last mortgage, which was properly acknowledged, and could be admitted to record. The estate pledged was worth merely the amount of the last mortgage. When it was foreclosed, as it doubtless would be, Hurst & Solmeyer's clients, the innocent foreign holders of the really secured bonds, would be paid in full. Myron Gates would come in after them as a general creditor, but there would be no assets with which to pay his debt. His bonds were, therefore, worthless, his debt worthless. The bank had been paid in cash, the note liquidated; thus the bank was not affected. Hurst & Solmeyer would make twenty thousand dollars. Myron Gates was the only one upon whom the loss would fall. He would be out two hundred thousand dollars.

I understood now why Randolph Mason had merely said, "Let the man execute this mortgage and pay the bank." When he had looked at the legal paper he had instantly seen the old form of acknowledgment and knew that it was void. Myron Gate's draftsman had worked his undoing. It was necessary only to get the money from Gates and pay the note at the bank, so that this valid debt would be liquidated with cash and the bank eliminated from the problem, then create a proper lien to a second creditor and leave Gates to whistle for his money. The case was simple, eminently practicable, impossible of failure. Myron Gates had set his own trap, digged his own pit. His trap had crushed him, his pit received him, the score was settled with him to the last cent.

I saw, also, why Randolph Mason wished to keep the explanation confined to the fewest possible persons. He did not wish Gates to discover the defect in his mortgage until he attempted to foreclose it, after the first default in the payment of the interest on his bonds, one year after the execution of the mortgage. It would then be too late for any proceedings in insolvency to affect the second mortgage. So he had left the solution a mystery, even to me, and enjoined Hurst & Solmeyer to secrecy. Myron Gates would rest easy until he began to foreclose, some months, perhaps, after the end of the year. Then he would awake to find his mortgage smoke under him, his bonds rags, his debt vanished.

I found General Cruger waiting for me on the deck of the Baltic when I arrived. Good fortune had restored his middle age, his step was springy, the muscles of his face firm again, the old light rekindled in his eyes. He put his arm around my shoulder, and we walked to the bow of the steamer. The old man was thrilling like a boy over his anticipated plan. He would join Emily in Paris, they would spin through the great Alps to the Italian lakes and return along the Riviera to Marseilles; but they should live a week, not a day less than a whole week, with Guido at Pollanno in the teeth of the fleas, and he would make no bargain with Guido, the Italian should rob him like a brigand of the first order. In three years they would return.

I made one of the cheering crowd on the pier as the ship went out to sea with the tugs barking at her heels.

For the legal principle involved in this story, see Sec. 3 syllabus, Abney et al. v. Ohio Lumber and Mining Company, 45 W. Va., 446. "A certificate of acknowledgment of a deed conveying real estate by a corporation, which fails to show that the officer or agent executing it was sworn and deposed to the facts contained in the certificate, as required by section 5, chapter 73, Code, is fatally defective, and does not entitle such deed to be recorded."

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1912. NO. 27.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

International Apollo Who Is Strong on the Job

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—The champion "best man" in all Los Angeles was discovered the other night. He is G. G. Harootunian, who lives at No. 1147 Dewey avenue.

To his credit he has eleven marriages. All these he personally arranged as matchmaker, and at all of them he acted as best man. What is more, all the marriages have resulted happily, and an even dozen healthy and hearty youngsters have been added to the population of Los Angeles as a result.

The latest consummation of the matchmaking proclivities of Harootunian occurred when Miss Bessie King, a charming English girl, and M. G. Roohian, a thrifty young Armenian, were married by Rev. P. J. McDonald, pastor of the Reformed Church. Of course, Harootunian was best man.

The activity of Harootunian as an ally of Cupid had its origin in a desire of the thrifty young Armenians of Los Angeles to take unto themselves English girls or girls of other Saxon nations as wives.

It began when Harootunian, himself, fell a victim to the bright eyes of an English lass. That was about five years ago. The marriage of the Harootunians was so blissful and resulted in so much happiness that he decided that the marriage of the 200 young Armenians of good standing and sufficient worldly goods in this city would solve the problem of taking care of these fiery young bloods.

"There are 520 Armenians in Los Angeles," said Harootunian, "and all of them are thrifty. Of this number perhaps 200 are young men of marriageable age. There are but two Armenian girls in Los Angeles."

"Odiva, the Diver's" Bathing Suits Are Burned

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Six charred garments, once the dainty bathing suits of Miss Alma Beaumont, who is known to fame as "Odiva, the diver," were offered as evidence against Mrs. Emma Adams, wife of Charles F. Adams, Odiva's manager, who was charged with malicious mischief before Magistrate McGuire the other day.

Mrs. Adams, who sat erectly in court and manifested supreme disdain.

The first witness against Mrs. Adams was her husband, the impresario of the swimming tank. Mr. Adams told a sorrowful story. He had brought Odiva in from a tour, during which she had delighted thousands with her amphibious performances. Eight bathing suits, that cost in the aggregate $170, needed laundering. Would Mrs. Adams please launder them? Not on your life, she would not!

"Well," quoth Mr. Adams, "then I myself will launder them."

And he did, hanging them out to dry on a clothes line in the back yard of the Adams' home, at Bergen Beach. After he had finished the washing and hung the wash out, Mr. Adams came into the city and did not return until the next day, which was Aug. 14. Desolation awaited him. The bathing suits lay in a charred mass before the portico of his home.

"What is this?" he demanded.

"Tut, tut!" replied Mrs. Adams. "They are burned. Can't you see?"

Mr. Adams reported the catastrophe to Odiva, who procured a warrant against Mrs. Adams.

Magistrate McGuire released Mrs. Adams on the ground that there was no evidence to show she had started the fire.

Brand New Baby Is Hunted Down as a Burglar

HE DOESN'T LOOK LIKE A BURGLAR

CHICAGO.—The stork made so much noise breaking into the rear door of Lawrence McCarthy's house, at 1759 West Twenty-third street, early the other morning, that neighbors thought that it couldn't be anything less than a burglar—perhaps a dozen of them.

A frightened woman who saw lights suddenly turned up in the house and saw several persons moving about within telephoned to the police and asked that policemen be hurried to the place to capture the supposed burglar.

Policeman Joseph Hoffman hurried to the house, drew his trusty revolver and tapped lightly on the front door. McCarthy answered the knock.

"Is he there?" whispered the policeman to the happy father.

"Sure, and a big fellow, too," was the whispered reply.

"Where is he?"

"He's in the back bedroom. Want to go back?" asked McCarthy.

"Certainly, I'll go back. Just let me get one look at him."

"The nurse is in there, too," said the father, eyeing the policeman.

"What! Why, she may be killed by this time!"

"No, he isn't so savage as that, although he is a strapping big fellow."

The door was pushed gently open and the policeman, still clutching his revolver, leaped in. He looked at the baby, soundly sleeping in the arms of a smiling nurse, and then turned to the father.

"I thought all the time it was a burglar. Isn't it?"

"Of course not. He's going to be a policeman, not a burglar," said McCarthy.

Then Hoffman returned to the police station and announced that it was too early to arrest the person who had broken into the McCarthy home.

"Merry Widows" Were Barred in This Ball Game

DETROIT, MICH.—Untutored women who have not learned that one of the rules of baseball excludes outsiders from the diamond during a game, are learning better these days when they undertake to take the short cut across the city hall lawn.

Exciting contests are staged every afternoon on the broad walk which runs from Fort to Griswold streets past the city hall steps. The teams are made up of "newsies," who while away the time when waiting for editions. The space is somewhat limited for a life-size game, and ground rules require a "dead" ball, improvised from a tobacco pouch stuffed with paper.

Bare palms serve for bats, and the hits are usually such as the pitcher can field. To tag a base-runner all he has to do is to throw the "pill" and hit any part of the runner's person.

All would be well if outsiders did not trespass on the diamond. One day last week the game was nearly disrupted by a woman with a hat that survived the "Merry Widow" epoch. She came up behind the pitcher unseen by him. He sent one singing over the middle of the plate and it was met on the nose of the bat—or fist—and came back spinning directly on the middle of the big head-piece, where it lodged.

Ground rules failed to provide any base limit where the ball fell on a "Merry Widow" hat.

With one hand on the woman's shoulder, he made a jump for the new millinery ornament. The woman did not understand, and turned to protest and as she did so the ball fell into the pitcher's hand, just in time to "paste" the base runner between third and home plate.

In the PUBLIC EYE

NOMINATED FOR GOVERNOR OF NEW YORK

Oscar Solomon Straus, who has been nominated for governor of New York by the Progressives of that state, has the distinction of being the first Jew who ever became a member of the United States cabinet. In 1906 he was appointed secretary of commerce and labor by President Theodore Roosevelt.

Mr. Straus was born on December 23, 1850, and spent most of his boyhood in Georgia. At the age of ten he was placed under the care of a private tutor, and later was sent to Collingsworth institute. In 1865 Lazarus Straus, the father, suffered business reverses and was compelled to move to New York, taking the son with him.

Soon after the family had moved to New York Oscar Straus entered Columbia grammar school, where he remained for two years, going from there to Columbia college, from which institution he was graduated in 1871. Two years later he graduated from Columbia Law school. In 1887 President Cleveland appointed Mr. Straus minister to Turkey. After a remarkably successful mission he was reappointed to the office of President McKinley in 1897.

NEW COMMANDER OF SALVATION ARMY

Gen. Bramwell Booth, new commander of the Salvation Army, was deluged with expressions of good will at his elevation to the post left vacant by the death of his father.

The general acknowledged a few of them personally, but the vast majority will have to be answered by a circular letter as their number is so great that individual responses are impossible. Several of his advisers are urging upon the new commander to make a tour of inspection of the more important army posts, as one of the first necesities of his administration.

The new commander of the Salvation Army, Gen. Bramwell Booth, is a big man—physically and mentally. He stands over six feet high and is of military carriage. A British cabinet minister once said of him that he would be worth $50,000 a year to any of the great English administrative departments, and that he could have made millions in the business world.

FAMOUS MAN WHOSE PUBLIC CAREER ENDS

The closing of the Sixty-second congress was also the closing, for the present, at least, of the political careers of many notable men—men who have contributed much to the pages of history of the nation and who have achieved fame by the conspicuous parts they have played in the enactment of legislation, and their contributions to political oratory.

Probably the most notable, without disparagement to the fame of others, is Joseph W. Bailey of Texas. Senator Bailey has been in congress for over twenty years, being first elected to the Fifty-second congress and at the age of twenty-six. He immediately attracted attention; first by the eloquence of his speeches and second by his tenacity of purpose and his keen insight to affairs of public interest and his ability to take care of himself in the fierce debates that characterized the house of representatives twenty years ago.

In what was probably his first speech in the house Senator Bailey proceeded to make an attack upon the rules of that body. He succeeded in drawing attention to himself, and while not so designated, he was as a matter of fact the first insurgent.

MRS. POTTER PALMER STUDIES ART

Mrs. Potter Palmer has returned from Paris to Berlin, where she took a thorough course of study in the picture galleries and museums. This she did by way of preparation for society functions next winter, when she will visit Chicago.

Mrs. Palmer believes that more artistic appreciation should be developed in the social life of Chicago, and with this object in view she put herself under direction of the learned Dr. Bode of Berlin. Dr. Bode, who is director of the Royal museums, is recognized as the best living authority on the old masters. His books and catalogues are of the highest value in the art world, and he is frequently consulted by such collectors as J. Pierpont Morgan, but this is the first time Dr. Bode has had a society leader for a pupil. He is loud in his praises of the artistic aptness and intelligence shown by his Chicago disciple.

Dr. Bode followed the peripatetic system—that is, he took his pupil around to the galleries and museums and in them gave object lessons on the theory of art which he is expounding. The course required several weeks.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Scientists Believe There Is a Reason for Bugs

HOW DO—
BED BUG
IF THAT LOW-DOWN BEDBUG COMES HERE I MOVE THAT'S ALL

WASHINGTON.—Secretary Wilson is looking for bedbugs in his official and not his private capacity. Mr. Wilson wants all the bedbugs he can get, and furthermore he is willing to pay a fair price for them.

On the old Lewis farm, near Vienna, a few miles from Washington, the department of agriculture maintains an experimental farm. Every class of bugs that have any part whatsoever in farm life are being studied by the department's scientists.

In the railroad station at Vienna this sign was posted:

"WANTED—Bedbugs. Five cents will be paid for each bedbug delivered at the office of the experimental farm of the department of agriculture."

Some of Uncle Sam's scientists believe there is a reason for bedbugs and if they manage to substantiate this theory they intend to put them to work at a more gratuitous task than that upon which they are generally engaged.

There is a theory that most self-respecting species of bugs will have no dealings with bedbugs—in fact, they will not live in the same neighborhood.

This theory is based upon two assumptions. The first is that bedbugs are scrappers and beat up and kill anything else that happens to cross their way in bugdom.

Now the department of agriculture's scientists have about decided which bugs do the most damage to fruit trees. These experiments have been carried on at the Lewis farms for many months. The most deadly bugs, as far as fruit is concerned, have been segregated in boxes and bottles.

The bedbugs are to be introduced to these select fruit killers and then the scientists are going to see what happens.

If the bedbugs carry off the honors Uncle Sam may try to induce them to leave their present abodes for fruit orchards.

Ah, It Was a Sad Day for "Count" Perreard

MON DIEU— I HAVE NO— WHAT YOU CALL— GAIETE' DE CŒUR

JEAN PERREARD, true son of Paris, he of the Cafe de Perreard, was disconsolate the other day.

It was the Sabbath and also the anniversary of the fall of the Bastile. And for the first time in years the "count," as he is familiarly known, failed to observe the day. The count's celebrations have been notable events in Washington for years, but the count let the day pass quietly because it fell on a Sunday.

Everything about the Chateau de Perreard was normal, except that from a window breezed the tricolor of La Belle France.

Stilled were the clinking glasses, because it was the Sabbath day. The hearty chanting of "The Marseilles," as only the count could chant it, was not wafted out into Thirteenth street from the chateau windows as in the past.

In fanciful retrospection the count recalled the celebrations of yesteryear and his friends missed them. The bon vivants of the town, who call Perreard the count, recalled the trips down the river as his guests and how he used to chant the cabaret songs of dear old Paris. And all remembered how the count used to say, when asked how he would celebrate the independence day of France:

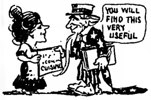
"Oh, eet will be ze grande time."

The continental Sunday has about as much chance in Washington as the count would have had in the Marathon.

The count could not have a public party, and so he had none. It was a bad day for France.

And the count was very, very sad.

Agricultural Department an Aid to Housewives



YOU WILL FIND THIS VERY USEFUL
CUISINE

NO branch of the United States government comes so near to the life of the people as the department of agriculture, which deals with the cotton and other fibers of which our clothes are made, the flocks and herds we raise, the crops we produce, the food we eat and the timber of which our houses are built.

The closeness of the relation between the department and the people is in great measure due to the fact that the use which is made of agricultural products receives as much attention as their production, and the great bulk of these products is used in the home.

Commenting on this phase of the department's work Secretary Wilson said:

"Commercial industries were long ago studied by scientific methods, since it was found that gaining knowledge by experience was much more costly than gaining it by systematic study. It is only lately that we have come to realize that it is equally profitable to study the housekeepers' problems.

"Fifty years ago few such questions had been taken to the laboratory and few schools gave instruction in such subjects. Today very many men and women of scientific training have taken the home problem to the laboratory and are finding ways of helping the housekeeper to solve her problems satisfactorily.

"The department of agriculture has studied many questions which relate to the use of agricultural products on the farm and in the home, but perhaps none of them has a closer relation to the household than the nutrition investigations of the office of experiment stations, which have to do with the use of agricultural products.

Turkey Trot New? Danced 500 Years in Borneo

IT WILL be news to many doubtless that the much-criticised "turkey trot" has been danced to the rain god of a savage tribe in the north of Borneo for more than five hundred years. Several young women of one of Washington's exclusive circles were astounded when Prof. Edward Davidson, a Washington dancing master, made this statement to them during a lecture on the history of dancing.

Professor Davidson said that the "trot" is one of the holy of holies in the religion of the savage Muruts. When there comes a prolonged dry spell these head-hunting natives perform the trot day in and day out until the great rain god has heard their prayers. The professor visited the north of the island several years ago.

"During the latter part of the eighteenth century the turkey trot was introduced into the dancing schools of Italy and Portugal,' and soon everybody was doing it. ' In the first part of the nineteenth century it gradually died out.

"The clergy of Italy, Spain and Portugal made a loud outcry against the 'heathen dance,' but the physical culturists and dancing masters favored it on the ground that it was good exercise. In the fashionable dancing schools of Rome it was all the rage for a short time. Traces of the turkey trot can be seen in the folk dances of Switzerland, Portugal, Spain, Italy and France.

"In 1888 an Italian named Giovanni Casini introduced the dance to San Francisco. For a time it was not appreciated much outside of Barbary Coast circles. Then it came to New York and certain prominent dancing masters introduced it into the Four Hundred."

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN

PASSING OF STEAM ENGINES.

The practical success which has followed the use of the internal combustion engine in large ships seems to spell the beginning of the end of steam vessels. Recently the head of a company owning and operating more than 70 steam vessels announced that his company would never again build a ship with steam as the motive power. The advantages of the internal combustion engine are many. They utilize a great per cent. of the energy of the fuel. They are economical in operation. As one man expressed it, all you have to do is to start the thing and then read a newspaper. The fuel can be conveniently carried, no stokers are required, and instead of the engines becoming overheated in tropical climates, trial seems to show that they work better the hotter the temperature. The present difficulty seems to be to get oil at a reasonable cost. Gasoline has been rising steadily in price for some time. The supply of crude oil is not limitless by any means. There remains, of course, denatured alcohol, which can be made from vegetable matter, and it may in time become the great fuel of the world. However that may be, it is reasonably certain that ship owners during the next decade will turn to the internal combustion engine to solve many of their difficulties.

A great many people, fearful of the ultimate swamping of this country by an influx of foreigners, look only at the statistics showing arrivals of immigrants, and forget that there is o refluent tide. During the fiscal year which ended with the month of June more than a million individuals from foreign ports landed in ports of the United States. Of these, however, 178,953 were classified as non-immigrants, which fact reveals the number of immigrants as 838,172, says the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin. But against this there was an offset. The alien departures from American ports in the fiscal year numbered 615,292, of whom 282,030 were non-immigrants. To find the extent of the immigrant addition to the population in the year 1911-12 it is necessary to subtract the 222,262 representing immigrants who departed from the 838,172 representing immigrants who arrived. The result shows the gain in population by immigration during the year to have been 401,863, which is not alarming.

The verbomaniac is one whose principal effort is not to make speeches but to refrain from making them. He feels the obsession upon him, and often fights it, but in vain, says the New York Post. Sooner or later the floods of talk will burst forth in spite of him. A leading French deputy once explained the impulse to our author is a "physical necessity." He had no desire to speak, no real reason for speaking; but the words rose to his lips and he could not keep them back.

Women are not breaking into farming in a way to cause a boom in the price of abandoned farm lands, but they are, according to scattered reports, taking a try at farming, and, according to the same report, they are generally making a success of it. Generally the woman who takes to farming goes in for something faddy—and makes it pay.

One of the inspiring things in life is the popularity of youth. Or perhaps it may better be called the aim of everybody to keep young. Old age has lost out to the modern idea, says Judge. Who nowadays sees old men or old women? Men who half a century ago would have been characterized as "stricken with years" are gay old boys today, and women have so mastered the art of perpetual youth that it takes a wise one to pick out the grandmothers.

A man in Minneapolis complained to the police that his eight-room house had been stolen, leaving no trace of its whereabouts. The next thing burglars will be running off in the silence of the night with skyscrapers.

Now horses are to have individual drinking cups. If the standard of drinking is to be raised among working animals, an effort might be made to do the same with the intelligence and humanity of drivers.

Far away in Milan, Italy, they are in doubt whether poker is a gambling game. Let those doubters play with almost any good American, and they will soon decide the matter, especially if they run up against a straight flush with a measly four aces.

A Denver preacher insists that it is a sin to kill a fly or break an egg. Still, we don't believe killing flies or breaking eggs [illegible] as bad as swearing [illegible] Sunday.

THEY WILL CAMPAIGN TOGETHER

THIS photograph of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar S. Straus was taken at their beautiful country residence at Tarrytown-on-the-Hudson, after the nomination of the millionaire philanthropist and diplomat by the Progressives for governor of New York. Mrs. Straus will accompany her husband on his campaigning trips.

PLAN DEEP PROBE

HOUSE COMMITTEE WILL INVESTIGATE THE ALLEGED MONEY TRUST.

MORSE TO TELL HIS STORY

Government Has Engaged Prominent Counsel to Carry Through the Work, and Proceedings Are Likely to Be Thorough.

New York, Sept. 20.—Among the first witnesses to be called in the money trust investigation, to be resumed by the house committee on banking and currency in this city about the middle of November, will be J. Pierpont Morgan and Charles W. Morse. This was learned from officials of the committee. Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms White of the house of representatives is supposed to have served these two and several other financiers with subpoenas.

It is known, however, that he has subpoenas for Messrs. Morgan and Morse, and also for William Rockefeller, James Stillman, Thomas F. Ryan, George F. Baker, president of the First National bank; Otto T. Bannard, president of the New York Trust company; William Nash and Walter E. Frew, respectively chairman of the board and president of the Corn Exchange bank. The two latter are made subject to the jurisdiction of the committee by reason of their service on the clearing house committee. Mr. Nash was a member of that all-powerful organization in 1907, when the committee took charge of the financial situation during the panic, and has been charged by witnesses heretofore examined in the money trust investigation with participating in conferences that preceded the closing of the old Oriental National bank, which so quickly was followed by the collapse of what were known as the Morse banks—the National of North America, the New Amsterdam and the Mechanics and Traders. Mr. Frew is now a member of the clearing house committee.

Maj. E. H. Farrar, leader of the New Orleans bar and recently president of the American Bar association, is associated with Mr. Untermyer as counsel. Major Farrar has been in New York for the last two weeks collaborating with Mr. Untermyer in the work of preparation for the resumption of the investigation after the election in November.

Aero Ferry to Be Established.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Sept. 20.—To demonstrate the possibilities of water flying, an aero ferry is to be established between Glen Head, L. I., and this city, under the auspices of the Glenwood Country club.

Nogi and Wife Buried.

Tokyo, Japan, Sept. 20.—The funeral of Gen. Count Maresuke Nogi, military councilor of Japan, and his wife, who committed suicide, was held on Wednesday with impressive ceremonies at the Aoyama cemetery.

GET BOOKS OF TRUST

SECRET SCHEMES OF HARVESTER COMBINE LAID BARE.

Records Show That Perkins Was Moving Spirit in Purchase of Competitors.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Minutes of directors' and stockholders' meetings were submitted to the government by the International Harvester company in response to subpoenae issued in the suit looking to the dissolution of the agricultural implement combine.

The inside history of the corporation, which the government is attacking as a trust, was laid bare in four big volumes of typewritten records. Edwin P. Grosvenor, assistant to the attorney general, spent much time looking through the minutes for evidence that the company had sought to suppress competition and obtain a virtual monopoly of the production and sale of harvester machinery.

George W. Perkins was figuring prominently in the documentary evidence submitted.

Not only was he shown to have been the leading spirit in bringing the leading manufacturers into the combine in 1902, but documents introduced by Attorney Grosvenor showed that he had been the active agent in buying up additional plants after the trust was formed. One of these acquired companies, D. M. Osborne & Co., continued for two years after its acquisition to advertise itself as "the largest independent company in the country" and as "independent of any trust."

The contract for the purchase of the Osborne company was signed by Mr. Perkins as chairman of the finance committee of the International Harvester company. The evidence so far has not disclosed the names of officials of the company who were responsible for this method of advertising.

861 DIE IN BIG BATTLE

Bloodiest Fight of Tripoli Campaign Fought Near Town on the Coast.

Rome, Italy, Sept. 20.—The most sanguinary engagement of the war in Tripoli was fought near Derne on Wednesday, a town on the Mediterranean coast, 110 miles northeast of Bengazi. The Italians lost 61 men and 113 were wounded. The Turks and Arabs left more than 800 dead on the field.

Standard Oil Retains Grip.

New York, Sept. 19.—Officers and employes of the Standard Oil company are still in command of the Buckeye Pipe Line company, a former subsidiary, according to D. S. Bushnell.

Elect Socialist as Mayor.

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 19.—J. F. Johnston, a Socialist, was elected mayor of the single tax colony of Fair Hope, Ala., on the eastern slope of Mobile bay, over N. S. Green, the present mayor.

BACKED MEXICO WAR

AMERICAN FINANCIERS SAID TO HAVE FURNISHED $5,000,000 TO OVERTHROW DIAZ.

REBEL AGENT MAKES CHARGE

Charles P. Taft and H. Clay Pierce Named as Members of Syndicate That Financed Madero Revolution —Orozco Aids Are to Be Tried.

New Orleans, Sept. 21.—Charles P. Taft, Henry Clay Pierce, president of the Waters-Pierce Oil company, and representatives of the Harriman interests are charged by Juan P. Didapp, diplomatic adviser of the Mexican revolution, with having furnished the money needed to finance the revolution against Diaz to President Madero. Didapp made this allegation on Thursday before leaving for Mexico.

He said that $5,000,000 had been advanced and that the loan had been repaid with a $20,000,000 premium. Mr. Didapp added that a new junta would be formed to replace the one which has been broken up by the arrests of its members by United States officers.

Marfe, Tex., Sept. 21.—Col. Pascual Orozco, Sr., and four other staff officers of Pascual Orozco, Jr., rebel commander of the north, arrived here last night from Presidio, Tex., where they fled after the rebel defeat at Ojinaga, Mex. They were in custody of United States Marshal Mothews and a squad of United States cavalry.

The Mexican consul here has filed a complaint against all the prisoners charging violation of the United States neutrality laws. The trial will be held before United States Commissioner Griffin. Several attorneys are here to represent the defendants.

Washington, Sept. 21.—Telegrams received by the state department Thursday contain information that two Americans have been murdered in northern Mexico, supposed by rebels. Jacob Meyer, a miner, was found in the rear of his cabin near San Pedro Maren decapitated. George Reiterman, a blacksmith, formerly of Wichita, Kan., was murdered at Cusibuiriachic the night of September 15.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 21.—Word through official sources on Thursday had it that Yaqui Indians captured the town of Altar, Sonora, and not the rebels under Emilio Campa. A hundred Yaquis who took the warpath about ten days ago captured it after a desperate battle. The Indians laid waste the town, killing defenseless residents and attacking women and girls. No definite information was received concerning Americans.

U. S. MARINES ARE FIRED AT

Nicaraguan Rebels Attack American Forces Who Are on Way to Rescue Girls.

Washington, Sept. 21.—Three companies of marines with three machine guns left Managua on Thursday for Granada near where it is reported a detachment of United States sailors and marines has been fired on by General Mena's rebels and where a large number of college girls are still at the mercy of the bandit soldiery of the revolution.

The navy department has only a brief dispatch from General Pendleton, in charge of the marine forces at Managua, reciting that it was necessary to hurry the three companies and machine guns to Managua. It is reported that the first detachment sent to the rescue of Granada by Pendleton was fired on at Maseya, a point on the railroad between Managua and Granada. It is therefore assumed that the first detachment, which was commanded by Major Butler, has not reached Granada and has sent a hurry call for reinforcements.

ARMIES TIED UP BY FLYERS

Work of British Air Scouts Strengthens Theory That Aviation Will Revolutionize Warfare.

Cambridge, England, Sept. 21.—The science of aviation apparently is to revolutionize warfare. An official announcement was issued on Thursday that the army maneuvers had been abandoned, and that a military conference would be held here at once to adjudge the results and explain the cessation of operations.

This surprising situation arose from the fact that the rival armies, numbering about fifty thousand men, had reached a sort of stalemate, owing to effective air scouting which entailed a constant change of tactics and made impossible any broad plan of action.

Firebugs Burn Mine Tipple.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 21.—Word reached here that the big tipple of the Carbon Coal company in Kanawha county had been fired by incendiaries and was rapidly being destroyed. The tipple is in the martial law section.

Threaten Anti-Vice Leader.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—Detectives and postal authorities joined in a search for the writer of anonymous letters that threatened death by dynamite to Miss Virginia Brooks, leader of West Hammond anti-vice crusade.

Bare Hawaiian Fruit.

Washington, Sept. 21.—Acting Secretary of Agriculture Hayes signed an order placing a quarantine upon nearly all tropical fruits grown in Hawaii. This is done to prevent the importation of the Mediterranean fruit fly.

RIOTERS WRECK CARS

SUPERIOR, WIS., POLICE IN BATTLE WITH MOB.

Thousands of Dollars' Worth of Property Is Ruined as Sequel of Strike.

Superior, Wis., Sept. 20.—A mob of 5,000 strike sympathizers last night destroyed thousands of dollars of street railway property and seriously injured many nonunion street car employes.

The first attack on street cars resulted in the burning of six cars and a battle with the police, in which more than thirty persons were injured, none, it is thought, fatally.

Following this battle the mob stormed the company's barn on Fourth street and Ogden avenue.

The police were powerless. Sheriff Edward McKinnon was ordered to swear in deputies to preserve order and save human life.

Previous to this time every policeman on the force, specials and regulars, was enlisted on night service, but thousands of men and boys paraded the streets in wildest disorder.

The fire department was ordered ready to disperse the mob with hose.

The rioting started when a parade of striking car men and hundreds of sympathizers ended at Belknap and Tower streets. Just as the band stopped playing a car came into view from the east end and stopped at Ogden and Belknap. The sound of shattered glass was the signal for the mob to storm the car.

Stones, bricks and clubs were thrown at the conductor, motorman and policemen in the car.

At the first volley every pane of glass in the car was shattered to bits and the police in the car attempted to draw the blinds. The conductor and motorman stood their ground for a time, but the steady stream of missiles forced them to crawl under the seats, cut and bleeding.

Finally the big police touring car charged the crowd. Captain Olson and Officers Hunter, Miller and Hawkens boarded the car and "kidnaped" the crew. They were placed in the machine, which was driven hurriedly through the mob.

Then the mob turned its attention to attacking the car barns and serious fighting resulted.

PROGRESSIVES ARE DROPPED

Republican Committee Declares Seats of Four Vacant and Allows Three to Resign.

New York, Sept. 19.—By unprecedented but unanimous action, the Republican national committee, sitting as a trial court in the Hotel Manhattan, ousted seven of its members for heresy and disloyalty to President Taft.

Of the 48 members of the committee 41 were present or were represented by proxies. All voted to expel the accused members.

Those ousted are:

Borden D. Whiting of New Jersey, William J. Edwards of West Virginia, Richmond Pearson of North Carolina and Russ Avery of California.

Those who resigned are:

Walter F. Brown, the Ohioan, whose place is to go to Sherman Granger; C. C. Priestly of Oklahoma, and J. A. Caswell of Minnesota.

IMPORTANT NEWS ITEMS

Vienna, Sept. 20.—Konstantin Theodor Dumba, at present minister to Sweden, was nominated to succeed Boron Hengelmuller von Hengervar as ambassador of Austria-Hungary at Washington.

New York, Sept. 20.—It will cost $38,300,000 to run the New York schools next year, according to the budget prepared by the board of education. This is an increase of $4,500,000 over 1912.

Duluth, Minn., Sept. 19.—The street car strike took a new turn when the city council's resolution instructing the city legal department to begin an action to take over the Duluth street railway as city property, took effect.

EX-SENATOR MONEY IS DEAD

Served Two Terms in the U. S. Senate—Uraemic Poisoning Caused His Death.

Biloxi, Miss., Sept. 20.—Former United States Senator Hernando de Soto Money of Mississippi, one of the most prominent politicians of this state, died on Wednesday at his home near here, following an illness of uraemic poisoning. He was seventy-four years old.

Senator Money served two terms in the senate, refusing to be a candidate for a third term because he had become blind, and upon his retirement moved down on the gulf coast to live.

Warship Captures Pirates.

Hongkong, Sept. 21.—Pirates who had planned to seize the steamer Kwaiping while it was bound for Heungshan, on the mouth of the West river, were thwarted by the arrival of a warship.

Fight Spread of Smallpox.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 21.—More than 2,000 persons have been vaccinated at the public safety building within the last twenty-four hours. The majority were children brought in by their parents.

A HIDDEN DANGER

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

It is a duty of the kidneys to rid the blood of uric acid, an irritating poison that is constantly forming inside.

When the kidneys fail, uric acid causes rheumatic attacks, headache, dizziness, gravel, urinary troubles, weak eyes, dropsy or heart disease.

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys fight off uric acid—bringing new strength to weak kidneys and relief from backache and urinary ills.

A Utah Case

Mrs. James Crooks, First St., N. W., American Fork, Utah, says: "For over ten years I was afflicted with kidney complaint. Often the pain in my back was so severe that I almost fell to the floor. The kidney secretions were unnatural. There was lameness across my loins. Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention and they cured me."

Get Doan's at Any Drug Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., Buffalo, New York

A Good School

LARGE ATTENDANCE, LOWEST RATES

Thorough Work. Practical Courses. Accredited. Courses: Preparatory, Commercial, Shorthand, Stenotypy, Teachers, High School, Scientific, Music, Penmanship, Agriculture, Steam and Gas Engineering. Regular tuition, $1.00 per week; board, $1.[illegible] Free Tuition to one student from each postoffice. Write for catalog. Address

SOUTHERN MINNESOTA NORMAL COLLEGE, BOX 830, AUSTIN, MINNESOTA

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Prevents hair falling. 50c, and $1.00 at Druggists.

"A SILK DRESS FREE"

15 Beautiful SILK patterns, enough to make Standard sized Pillows, Cushions, Quilt Blocks. Latest designs. No two alike. A $2 value for only 25 cents. Cut this out now—mail us 25 cents. If you do not appreciate value of these 25 selected SILK patterns, return them—WE REFUND YOUR MONEY. Let us tell you how to secure a SILK shirtwaist or dress pattern ABSOLUTELY FREE. Address DEPT. K—J. C. LUKE & SON, PEORIA, ILL.

KODAKS AND FINISHING

Any size 6 exp. film developed 10 cents. 10 or 12 exp. or film pack 20 cents. KREOEL PHOTO PARLORS, 620 Hennepin Ave., Minn., 40 E. 7th St., St. Paul

The Pick of Florida Farm Lands in Escambia Co., 6 to 12 miles from Pensacola, at $25.00 per acre. Easy terms. Agents wanted. FISHER-[illegible] CO., PENSACOLA, FLORIDA

NO TROUBLE IN COLLECTING

Lawyer Probably Was Willing to Pay More Than $10 Under the Circumstances.

A noted lawyer of Tennessee, who labored under the defects of having a high temper and of being deaf, walked into a court room presided over by a younger man, of whom the older practitioner had a small opinion.

Presently, in the hearing of a motion, there was a clash between the lawyer and the judge. The judge ordered the lawyer to sit down, and as the lawyer, being deaf, didn't hear him and went on talking, the judge fined him $10 for contempt.

The lawyer leaned toward the clerk and cupped his hand behind his ear.

"What did he say?" he inquired.

"He fined you $10," explained the clerk.

"For what?"

"For contempt of this court," said the clerk.

The lawyer shot a poisonous look toward the bench and reached a hand into his pocket.

"I'll pay it," he said. "It's a just debt."—Saturday Evening Post.

As One Sees It.

"Jones grumbles that his wife can't take a joke."

"That's funny, seems to me."

"How so?"

"She took Jones."—Judge.

Heredity never fails to work out in the matter of red hair, but it frequently fails down when it comes to brain.

A banana peel on the sidewalk is a standing invitation to sit down.

CAREFUL DOCTOR

Prescribed Change of Food Instead of Drugs.

It takes considerable courage for a doctor to deliberately prescribe only food for a despairing patient, instead of resorting to the usual list of medicines.

There are some truly scientific physicians among the present generation who recognize and treat conditions as they are and should be treated, regardless of the value to their pockets. Here's an instance:

"Four years ago I was taken with severe gastritis and nothing would stay on my stomach, so that I was on the verge of starvation.

"I heard of a doctor who had a summer cottage near me—a specialist from N. Y.—and as a last hope, sent for him.

"After he examined me carefully he advised me to try a small quantity of Grape-Nuts at first, then as my stomach became stronger to eat more.

"I kept at it and gradually got so I could eat and digest three teaspoonfuls. Then I began to have color in my face, memory became clear, where before everything seemed a blank. My limbs got stronger and I could walk. So I steadily recovered.

"Now after a year on Grape-Nuts I weigh 153 lbs. My people were surprised at the way I grew fleshy and strong on this food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

"There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest. Adv.

IT'S RINGDAHL AND EBERHART

GOVERNOR'S RENOMINATION BY HANDSOME MAJORITY IS GENERALLY CONCEDED.

NELSON BY OVER 7,000.

Present Railroad Commissioners Win—Other Incumbents Probably Renamed, According to Returns.

Minneapolis. — Governor Adolph Eberhart climbed steadily in the returns received and the finish is expected to give him a plurality of at least 15,000. This may be added to before the close of the week.

On the Democratic side of the house, P. M. Ringdal of Crookston has prevailed by a vote of nearly three to one. His opponent, Prof. Charles M. Andrist of Minneapolis, did not prevail in a single county in the state on the returns so far received.

As noted in previous reviews of the returns received Secretary of State Schmahl continued to lead in the vote cast, with J. A. Burnquist, the candidate for lieutenant governor, a close second. On the Democratic ticket, Harvey Grimmer of Sauk Center, candidate for secretary of state, leads. Mr. Grimmer was executive clerk under the late Governor Johnson and is well known. He is now a traveling salesman for a St. Cloud printing concern.

Both Judge Mills and Mr. Elmquist showed their anxiety over the returns from the country. Rosenwald made a showing that was surprising and it may yet require the official canvass to determine who will represent the commission on the election ballot. Elmquist is in the greatest danger. Judge Mills has a lead in the country of 627 and Elmquist 609.

Secretary of State Julius Schmahl leads the Republican ticket, with J. A. A. Burnquist a close second. Attorney General Smith is third in the count.

Schmahl Always Safe.

Burnquist, according to the returns, simply ran away from his rival, D. M. Neill of Red Wing. He surged ahead from the start and has been keeping up the lead ever since. There never was any question regarding the nomination of Secretary of State Schmahl. Attorney General Smith will win out by a handsome majority.

Insurance Commissioner J. A. Preus, early in the game predicted that Governor Eberhart would prevail in 70 counties and his claim may be realized. His excellency had a substantial majority over all and the figure is growing. W. E. Lee and E. T. Young pressed him hard in country districts during the day, but the distance between Governor Eberhart and the two has also been considerably widened.

Lee won out in his own county, Todd, and has prevailed in Sherburne county. Here the vote was Lee, 405; Eberhart, 356. Young ran third in Sherburne county. Picked to give Governor Eberhart the run of his life, the vote given S. Y. Gordon takes on the pathetic. The slump was predicted days before the primary and it has been realized to its fullest extent. It is likely that Mr. Gordon will only carry his own county, Traverse. So far only eight precincts in Traverse county have been heard from and they give Gordon 323, Eberhart 120, Lee 59 and Young 19.

The iron range country was supposed to be Mr. Gordon's stamping ground. Here it was said that he would carry every county. St. Louis county, his chief hope, went against him heavily. The best he could do in the iron county was to play third.

Returns on first choice only from St. Louis county give Eberhart 2,726, Lee 1,212, Gordon, 1,043, Spooner 900, and Young 606. Gordon fell short of the claims of his managers in every section of the state.

Mr. Gordon's friends, among them Representative Knapp of Chisholm and James Arneson, announced that the Browns Valley man would be for the winner. They are unalterably opposed to a third ticket. If the vote cast Tuesday is any indication of the trend of sentiment, Chief Justice Start will have hard sliding. J. Alexander has pressed him hard in many precincts, though Judge Start has a decided lead in the returns so far received. It is Judge Stanton of Bemidji, however, who gives him the most trouble.

Stanton has made a showing that is remarkable. Stanton carried his own county overwhelmingly, though exact figures are not obtainable.

Showing the closeness of the vote between the two the following is given: Big Stone, Start 102, Stanton 229; Crow Wing, Start 174, Stanton 1,064; Goodhue, Start 1,268, Stanton 972; Murray, Start 329, Stanton 287; Roseau, Start 101, Stanton 335; Stevens, Start 265, Stanton 253.

Stewart has the best of it on partial returns from Murray county and Wright county. In Goodhue county, he received 934 votes. In Roseau county he distanced the chief justice.

Associate Justices.

In the case of the associate justices, Hallam of St. Paul is ahead of Judge Bunn of the same city. Both will go on the regular ballot, however, as will Judge Holt of Minneapolis. The latter, while without opposition, is in an embarrassing position according to the wise ones, because of the fight between Judges Bunn and Hallam. St. Paul, it is expected, will divide its vote between its home jurists and Judge Holt will naturally suffer as a result.

Dodge county complete gave Eddy 312 and Manahan 211. Murray, also complete, gave Eddy 216 and Manahan 211. Washington county, complete, however, reduced this lead somewhat. Here Eddy received 452 and Manahan 654. Manahan leads in Meeker county where he received 657 votes to 341 for Eddy. Stevens county gave Eddy 249 and Manahan 115. In Faribault county the vote was Eddy 320 and Manahan 380.

Thorpe and Eustis are divided as to third place in the race for congressmen-at-large. Only a fraction of the voters availed themselves of the second choice provision in the case of governor and as a result it will have little effect into the finals on congressman-at-large, but the lead now held by Governor Eberhart will be in no way affected.

Thomas Fraser, candidate for attorney general against Lyndon A. Smith, lost out in practically every county of the state. In the country districts his biggest vote was in Goodhue. Here he received 1,463 votes to 1,676 for Smith. In Dodge county he ran Mr. Smith close, receiving 615 votes to 617 for Smith. Complete returns have not been received from the home county, Olmstead.

The State Ticket.

The ticket follows, the Republican being found first:

United States Senator—Knute Nelson, Alexandria—D. W. Lawler, St. Paul.

Representative-at-large — James Manahan, St. Paul—Carl J. Buell, St. Paul.

Governor—A. O. Eberhart, Mankato—Peter M. Ringdal, Crookston.

Lieutenant Governor—J. A. A. Burnquist, St. Paul—Winn Powers, St. Paul.

Secretary of State — Julius A. Schmahl, Redwood Falls—Harvey Grimmer, Sauk Center.

Treasurer—Walter J. Smith, Eveleth—Henry P. Wessel, St. Paul.

Attorney General—Lyndon A. Smith Montevideo — William A. Donohue, Melrose.

Railroad Commissioner (four years) Ira B. Mills, Moorhead—Andrew French, Plainview.

Railroad Commissioner (six years). Charles E. Elmquist, Rush City—J. N. Gaynor, Litchfield.

The non-partisan ticket is:

Chief Justice—Charles M. Stanton, Bemidji.

Chief Justice—Charles M. Start, Rochester.

Associate Justice—Oscar Hallam, St. Paul; George L. Bunn, St. Paul; Andrew Holt, Minneapolis.

Congressional Ticket.

First District—Republican, Sydney Anderson, Lanesboro, renominated; democratic, James Keating, Wabasha.

Second District—Republican, F. F. Ellsworth, Mankato; democratic, W. S. Hammond, St. James, renominated.

Third District—Republican, Charles R. Davis, St. Peter, renominated; democratic, Frank L. Glotzbach, Faribault.

Fourth District — Republican, Fred C. Stevens, St. Paul, renominated; democratic, J. J. Regan, St. Paul.

Fifth District — Republican, George R. Smith, Minneapolis; democratic, Einar Hoidale, Minneapolis.

Sixth District — Republican, C. A. Lindberg, Little Falls, renominated; democratic, A. J. Gilkinson, Osakis.

Seventh District—Republican, A. J. Volstead, Granite Falls, renominated.

Eighth District — Republican, Clarence B. Miller, Duluth, renominated; democratic, John Jenswold, Jr., Duluth.

Ninth District—Republican, Halvor Steenerson, Crookston; public ownership, M. A. Brattland, Ada.

Kenyon Is Well Received.

Northwood, Iowa. — Senator Kenyon is very popular in the northern part of the state. Thursday he spoke at the Worth county fair and although the rain fell during his entire speech, sixteen hundred people heard him clear through his argument. A canvas was thrown above the junior senator and he was protected from the rain while he spoke. He states that the situation, so far as he was concerned, was all that he could expect. The divided party cannot hope to present the front it could were they united.

Father of Orozco Captured.

Washington, D. C. — The United States will hold Colonel Pascual Orozco, Sr., father of the Rebel general, with any other captured Mexican rebels probably for deportation to Mexico. No charges of violations of the neutrality laws are pending against either, and their position is the same as that of any of their men.

General Orozco, however, if captured, would be held for the Mexican government, which is prepared to ask for his extradition to face charges of embezzlement.

Forty Indictments in a Day.

Detroit, Michigan. — Forty indictments against 32 persons were returned by a jury in federal court here. Twenty people are charged with white slavery. Prominent among the other cases is an indictment charging William Ferguson, a cripple, with murder on the high seas. Ferguson must stand trial for the shooting of Canadian Immigration Inspector Herbert, which occurred several weeks ago on a ferry between Detroit and Windsor. The punishment under the United States law is death.

COLLINS IS NAMED

MINNEAPOLIS MAN CHOSEN AS THE PROGRESSIVE CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

PLANNED ON JACOBSON.

Plan to Make J. F. Jacobson Gubernatorial Nominee Goes Wrong.—Opposition to Move to Enter State Ticket Fails.

St. Paul, Minn.—Hon. P. V. Collins, of Minneapolis has been nominated as the Roosevelt candidate for governor of Minnesota by the committee of 50 which met in St. Paul. The nomination came after a parliamentary tangle in which the interpretation of the Ellsworth resolution, authorizing the committee, was the issue.

Hugh T. Halbert secured the adoption of his interpretation of the resolution, that it was mandatory for the committee to nominate unless two-thirds voted against it.

This was adopted by a two-thirds vote of those present and the compromise carried with it to the effect that a majority of votes should determine the action of the committee.

It had been planned to make J. F. Jacobson the nominee of the convention, but what appeared to be a harmless suggestion by Ora J. Parker of Le Sueur turned things topsy-turvy.

Nominates Mr. Halbert.

Mr. Parker is an extremely solemn individual. He was expected to place the name of Mr. Jacobson in nomination. Instead of that, speaking with an air of funereal solemnity, and after describing all of the exquisite qualities that Mr. Jacobson is supposed to possess, he nominated Hugh T. Halbert.

There was a general smile on the face of everyone with the exception of Mr. Halbert, who protested that this was no time for joking, inasmuch as he had planned to draft Mr. Jacobson his own withdrawal made it impossible to put the plan in operation. Mr. Halbert said he was fighting for principle and wanted to be elected to congress.

He insisted his nomination would provoke the suspicion that it had been engineered. Mr. Parker explained that his nomination of Mr. Halbert had been serious and had not been made in a spirit of levity.

J. Q. McIntosh of Washington county then placed the name of P. V. Collins in nomination. Mr. Collins did not object.

P. G. Jacobson, a brother-in-law of J. F. Jacobson, announced definitely that Mr. Jacobson would not accept the nomination. This settled the matter and Mr. Halbert, accepting the overturning of his well-laid plans moved to make the nomination unanimous.

The decision to nominate a third party ticket came after a vigorous debate in which Colonel Rich announced that if such a course were taken he would resign from the committee. He called attention to his now famous conversation with "the other colonel" at Oyster Bay last February. He said he was for Roosevelt then and was for Roosevelt now, but was unalterably opposed to a third-party ticket.

THIRD PARTY.

Governor—P. V. Collins, Minneapolis.

Lieutenant Governor—J. A. A. Burnquist, St. Paul.

State Treasurer—Walter J. Smith, Eveleth.

Attorney General—Lyndon A. Smith Montevideo.

Congressman-at-large — James A. Manahan, Minneapolis.

Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners (four-year term)—T. J. Sharkey, Staples; (six-year term)—Geo. F. Loftus, Minneapolis.

MAY ABANDON TOWN.

Site of Ironton Likely to Be Developed as a Mining Proposition.

Brainerd.—John H. Hill, one of the proprietors of Ironton, a promising town on the Cuyuna range, upon which thousands of dollars have been expended in grading streets and in making other improvements says the townsite company is not offering any lots for sale and probably will not in future, at least until the townsite has been fully explored.

"We were fortunate enough," said Mr. Hill, "to own the mineral rights of the townsite and to own an ore body under a portion of the town, which experts assert in all probability will extend under or across the other portion of the townsite. Explorations will enable us to determine within two or three years whether it will be more desirable to own a townsite we have but partially sold or to own two iron mines. Whether it is one or the other, the location of the town means good fortune for us, although I would much prefer for the sake of those who have invested in lots that no further ore be found."

Accident Ends Motor Race.

Montevideo.—The second day of the Chippewa county fair was marred by an accident. Eddie Torgerson, one of the four men entered in the motorcycle race, on the second time around the track, went into the fence and was badly injured. The other contestants did not finish the race. Mike Flynn, a harvest hand from Chicago, probably was fatally injured by falling through the railroad bridge to the rocks below. His head was badly cut and it is thought he is injured internally.

JAMES J. HILL

HILL IS HONORED.

Twelve Hundred Act as Hosts to Empire Builder.

St. Paul.—All St. Paul, a representative part of the big Northwest and distinguished men from all parts of the United States Monday night honored James J. Hill, the Northwest's big man, who could foresee and who built as he foresaw. It was Mr. Hill's seventy-fourth birthday.

Such a birthday party had never been seen hereabout. It seldom has been equaled in its magnitude, spontaneous enthusiasm and obvious sincerity. The auditorium was gorgeously decorated. A band played. The 1,200 hosts to Mr. Hill sang and cheered ecstatically. Some speakers poured forth flattering laudation of the honor guest; some gave sober, business-like, impressive analyses of his commercial genius and personal popularity and philanthropies.

Through it all Mr. Hill sat smiling happily, now leading an unfollowed cheer for a friend or associate whose name crept into the talk of empire building in the Northwest, now deprecating with violent gesture of negation some bit of superlative praise. At times when he smiled it was through swimming eyes.

Mr. Hill himself celebrated his birthday by doing rather more work than usual. Nominally, he has retired from the Great Northern railway system, successively as president of the road and chairman of the board, giving place to his son and confidant, Louis W. Hill, whom the Northwest knows as "Jim Hill's son who has made Jim Hill's dreams come true." But only nominally has the elder Hill retired. Those who know him best say he never will retire any other way.

The climax to the dinner came with the presentation by William B. Dean, vice-president of the Second National bank, of a loving cup to Mr. Hill as a remembrance of the occasion. Mr. Dean and Mr. Hill, friends for fifty-six years, upon facing each other for this ceremony, brought down upon the 1,200 men seated in the Auditorium a silence almost profound. Mr. Dean, in an uncertain voice, told Mr. Hill that the cup represented the love of the people of St. Paul for him.

DULUTH SERVICE GOOD.

Company Claims That the Strikers Are Returning.

Duluth. — The street carmen's strike situation is quiet and even the customary shouts of derision at the strike breakers on the cars are not forthcoming.

The service is better than Sunday night. As far as can be learned, fares turned in to the company are very meager and the strike breakers are waxing rich, it is alleged. According to the "student" employes they cannot be held for larceny when they do not ring up the fares.

General Manager Warren said that the city is getting as good service as could be expected under the conditions and that cars would be run until midnight if no demonstration of violence were in evidence.

He declared that more of the men had asked to be taken back and that those who had not been active to the detriment of the company would be reinstated shortly.

Secretary Mackin, of the carmen's union declares that the strike is far from being settled. He said there are 160 conductors and motormen and 60 car repairers still out. Fourteen men have returned to work on cars according to the union; 40 men returned according to General Manager Warren.

North Dakota Postmaster Arrested.

St. Paul. — Frank Foster, postmaster at Bessin, North Dakota, was arrested by officers connected with the secret service department in St. Paul. Foster is charged with a shortage of $330 in the money order funds of the office.

Socialist Vote Light.

Grand Rapids.—Itasca county gave Eberhart an overwhelming majority. It is conceded T. T. Riley won the nomination for sheriff by a majority of about 300. Dr. John Dickie, his opponent, carried the Grand Rapids precincts and Cohasset by a small majority, the heavy vote for Riley won coming from range towns. There were no contests on the county Democratic ticket. The vote in Cohasset stood, Democratic 97, Republican 26, Socialist 2, Prohibition 1. The Socialists polled a light vote.

WILSON VISITS TWIN CITIES

ADDRESSES BUSINESS MEN, CHILDREN, COLLEGE STUDENTS.

Outlines His Policies to 2,500 in Parade Speech.—Speaks Frankly of Business Evils.

Minneapolis. — The hidden sun came out from behind a dark cloud and struck Woodrow Wilson, candidate for president, who campaigned in Minneapolis, square in the face as he emerged from the university armory, where he spoke to 4,000 people, and it then went back again. He was immensely pleased and said it was a good omen. The democratic candidate came into town on a gloomy morning, his entire schedule disarranged by a late train.

"I like this sunlight," he said, as he climbed into an automobile for a run to the parade grounds to make another speech. He had spoken three times already, once to 200 men at the Commercial club breakfast, again to 500 children of the Garfield school, and again to the assemblage in the university armory, and had before him his parade ground talk and his big speech tonight in St. Paul. He had cut out an hour of rest that had been provided in his schedule and was rushing through his program on the jump from one place to another.

"The western democracy is up and stirring," he said. "It has been a very gratifying trip. I have been in Minneapolis before and am pleased at my reception."

"Do I think I will be elected? Well," he smiled broadly, "I am out for that purpose. Certainly I could not ask for greater encouragement or enthusiasm than has attended my tour and this Minneapolis reception is splendid."

OFFICERS ELECTED.

Mrs. Ferguson Is Chosen the New Vice President.

Dodge Center.—Mrs. C. M. Ferguson, of Minneapolis, was elected vice president at large at the meeting of the Minnesota State Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. P. L. De Vost, of Duluth, who was second, and Mrs. O. J. Evans, of Minneapolis, who was third, withdrew in her favor.

Mrs. P. J. Schwurg of Dodge Center, the recording secretary, was re-elected. Mrs. F. L. Barrows, of Duluth, was re-elected treasurer, and Mrs. E. J. Lewis, custodian. Mrs. H. A. Tomlinson, of St. Peter, whose term as vice president general expired, was elected auditor by a vote of 75.

The nominations of the district presidents, Mrs. Martin Molter, of St. Cloud, Sixth district; Mrs. S. M. Mathews, of Marshall, Seventh; Mrs. C. C. McCarthy, of Grand Rapids, Eighth, and Mrs. C. S. Chesterman, Ninth, were confirmed by the convention.

Mrs. P. L. De Vost, of Duluth, asked the women to demand representation on the board of regents at the university, and Miss Josephine Schain pressed a motion that women be appointed on county and state boards.

PLAN SCHOOL FAIR.

Industrial Contest Among the Young Gains.

Rochester.—The Olmsted county school fair is being held at Rochester, September 24 to 27. The boys and girls' industrial contest work, the fame of which has spread over the state, was originated in this county by County Superintendent George F. Howard in 1904.

Three years ago the industrial contest was enlarged to a county school fair. Last year there were 2,623 exhibits and $1,600 was paid in premiums. This year $3,600 is offered in premiums. Free attractions have been provided, including an aeroplane, and there are also horse and automobile races. New grounds and buildings have been provided, including floral hall, 60x110 feet, and a record-breaking attendance is expected.

"STOP PRAYER" ORDER.

Demented Man Throws a Stone at the Kneeling Pastor.

Redwood Falls.—A whizzing rock proved a startling interruption to a prayer being offered by Rev. Mr. Lengholz, of the Lutheran church, at Morgan on Sunday.

The minister instantly rose to his feet and asked, "Who threw that stone?"

Gustav Kopischke replied: "I did, and if you don't stop that praying, I will throw another."

Friends of the man realized that he was ill, and escorted him from the church before another demonstration was made. As he failed to recover, he was brought to this city and examined as to his sanity. The court found him temporarily demented and ordered him conveyed to the detention hospital at St. Peter.

Joint Funeral at Hutchinson.

Hutchinson.—The double funeral of Guy P. Sivright and Myron B. Lyon, whose tragic deaths Sunday in Lake Marion has shrouded this city in sorrow, was the most impressive ever held here. A vast throng assembled, scores coming from neighboring towns where both young men were well known. Later developments furnish a probable explanation of the mystery of the drowning. Young Lyon was known to have had a serious affection of the heart. It was found that his lungs contained no water.

A CHECK TO RHEUMATISM

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Build Up the Blood and Overcome the Rheumatic Poisons.

Rheumatism defies any treatment that does not build up and purify the blood. The poisons of rheumatism are in the blood and it is only through the blood that the disease can be fought successfully.

Unless the blood is weak and impure, rheumatism cannot get a foothold. When it does the thin and impure blood is not strong enough to overcome the poisons alone. It must be strengthened and purified. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the best blood-building medicine you can take. They make new blood with every dose and promptly check further progress of the disease. They make the blood so pure and strong that not the least trace of rheumatism remains.

Mr. A. Hamann, a farmer on R. F. D. No. 2, Eldridge, Iowa, says:

"I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People for indigestion and rheumatism from which I suffered for over six years. As these attacks came on every spring, I think they were caused by impure blood. The rheumatism was always more severe in my ankles and knees and especially in my arms, when I had been husking corn or working hard. The pains were so severe that I could hardly sleep at night. I used liniments of many kinds, but they didn't do more than drive the pain to some other part of the body and I did not get any relief from the doctor's medicine.

"When I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in our weekly paper I made up my mind to try a medicine that had actually cured some one else. A few boxes cured me and I think so much of the pills that I keep them in the house to use as a tonic. My wife finds them strengthening and we think the pills are the best medicine for the blood."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the blood's greatest aid in overcoming rheumatism, headaches, anæmia, chlorosis, and after-effects of the grip and fevers.

A valuable booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," will be sent upon request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes, $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Adv

Trial Marriages Favored.

Mrs. Hoyle—What is your husband's platform?

Mrs. Doyle—I think he favors the recall of marriage certificates.

CURES ITCHING SKIN DISEASES.

Cate's Carbolisalve stops itching and make the skin smooth. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv

The noblest service comes from nameless hands, and the best servan does his work unseen.—O. W. Holmes

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Fourteen Years. Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elgin, Ill.—"After fourteen years of suffering everything from female complaints, I am at last restored to health. "I employed the best doctors and even went to the hospital for treatment and was told there was no help for me. But while taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use until I was made well."—Mrs. HENRY LEISEBERG, 743 Adams St.

Kearneysville, W. Va.—"I feel it my duty to write and say what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female weakness and at times felt so miserable I could hardly endure being on my feet.

"After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and following your special directions, my trouble is gone. Words fail to express my thankfulness. I recommend your medicine to all my friends."—Mrs. G. B. WHITTINGTON.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The Wretchedness of Constipation

Can quickly be overcome by CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Purely vegetable—act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

FOR ALL EYE PAINS Pettit's Eye Salve

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam, Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Notwithstanding the opposition to Knut Nelson in the cities, the farmers remembered the fight he made for them on reciprocity and handed him an X September 17.

Rindahl is nominated on the democratic ticket and Eberhart on the republican, and from what we know, we would be ashamed to face a respectable hog, if we had been guilty of voting for either of them.

When you see the next church, County option orator around the country shooting off his mouth, just ask him this question: "Did not you good church people support Eberhart for governor. A man who has the solid backing of the Brewers and whisky trusts of his state? He can not deny it for they did.

There is no use for the "stand pats" to try to scare the progressive republicans into line for Eberhart by telling them that if they don't support Eberhart the democrats may win. Well let them or the Socialist win; any old thing is preferable to a representative of the lumber corporations in that chair.

The overwhelming majority of congressman Steenerson over all of his opponents was not the work of politicans but was a reward for his faithful and able work in congress for the district which he represents. He has followed the will and wishes of the people so well that his opponents could not give one reason, either in the English or Scandinavian language why he should not be reelected.

Down in Minneapolis a number of years ago, there used to be published an old corrupt "ward healer" newspaper that used to switch on politics just before election. We thought the old rotten sheet had been resurrected and moved up to Erie the last week before election when we see the Eleven Towns come out for Eberhart. "Gee whizz". Hold your breath and look out for the next rotten whiff from the northeast.

The progressive republicans of this state will put up a candidate for governor that will be a running mate for "Teddy". As the party can not afford to go into a state campaign with that old rotten supporter of Taft as their nominee for governor, and when progressives go into the November campaign they will go inunited on one man, and if old Taft and Eberhart holds their ear close to the ground they will hear something drop in Minnesota.

It looks like a difficult matter to us to draw the line on that corrupt practice act. If the law is to be strictly inforced all patent medicine adds marked "paid advertising" as it is now there is no way to distinguish patent medicine adds from a news item. The same can be said regarding an editorial in a newspaper. If the strict letter of law was to be followed, a newspaper publisher should not express his opinion of any candidate for office through the columns of his paper, but we can't see why a newspaperman has not got just as good a right to his opinion of a candidate for office as a blacksmith has, the only difference being that the blacksmith expresses his opinion by word of mouth in his blacksmith shop and the newspaperman prints his in his newspaper.

It will be remembered that we predicted the sure nomination of Eberhart, when we see the line-up against him. He of coorse won, as against the field, but the next round he will have the field against him. Watch the difference.

"Who are those fellows over in the corner?"

"They are Socialists."

"They seemed to be engaged in very esrnet discussion."

"Yes, I suppose they are trying to invent new theories of government."

"I thought they had plenty of new theories."

"They did have, but the rest of the people have caught up with them, so they've got to invent more in order to keep ahead."—Ex.

What We Never Forget

according to science, are the things associated with our early home life, such as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruptions, cuts, sprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit, unrivaled for piles, corns or cold-sores. Only 25 cents at all druggists.

FARMERS PICNIC.

Sunday Sept. 29th there will be a picnic at the farm of George Leimers in Town of Deer Park. Several candidates and competent orators of the Public Ownership Party will be present and deliver speeches of great importance to the farmers. Ladies and gentlemen you are cordially invited to attend and get acquainted with the issue of the Public Ownership Party.

Later: Picnic postponed.

George Leimers.

The contract has been let for grading of a new road 20 miles east of Thief River Falls, under the Elwell law. The contract is to be completed by January 1st 1914. If the job is not let to some fellows like the ditchers we may have a good road to Thief River Falls next year, but if they get some of these ditch fellows on the job it is not likely to be completed in this generation.

COURTEOUS OFFICIALS.

The election returns from the farmers of this county shows that it pays for a county official, who wants to hold his job, to be a little courteous to the farmers when they go to the court house to do business, not only just before election but the year around. Take the cases of clerk of court Ives and treasurer Trovaton for example. When some of the farmers asked for instructions how to vote the first name they inquired for as soon as they got into the booth was Trovaton. Why? Because they wanted to be sure to vote for him. The reason was that he had been kind to them and helped them to straighten up some business at the court house and they wanted him to stay there. The same could be said of Ives. When he came out in his announcement and said; he would give his personal attention to the office, if he was reelected, the farmers said: "We guess we had better keep that fellow for he comes in handy to help us when we have business at the court house." He not only has done that but has never refused to help a farmer to straighten out a land deal, whether it was in line with his duties as clerk of court or not. In fact since "Harry" has been in that office he has been "sawing wood", and he had the satisfaction of seeing the saw dust fly on Sept. 17.

The same can be said of county Auditor Fasel, who had no opposition for the nomination, which was a credit to the good judgement of the fellow who might have liked to have the job, that he had brains enough to not try to get it, and saved his money. A better man for the position [illegible] in the [illegible] hunt up his name in November.

Change of View

"It's time to begin considering my vacation," said the little stenographer, dubiously, as she examined the contents of her pocket book. "Honestly, sometimes I wonder which is preferable—to stay at home and be content with spending money you earn each week as it comes along without thought or worry—or to begin hoarding early in May and go without your lunch and give up matinees and regard even nickel shows as expensive treats, and fast from all candy and soda—in fact, save every cent you can, and then borrow some, so you can go away for two weeks and spend it!"

"Been saving since early in May, have you?" remarked the bookkeeper, solicitously. "I thought you were looking thin and worn. I had supposed it was just the need of a vacation and I didn't want to mention it, as I might frighten you. Why don't you stay at home and fatten up? You could get a big steak every day in the week at the sum for what you'd pay for it once on a vacation."

The little stenographer eyed him suspiciously, but there wasn't a hint of a smile in his eyes.

"Well, I am considering it," she admitted. "When I think of all the money I've wasted on vacations it makes me positively ill! Actually I could run an automobile on it!

"Besides, what do vacations amount to?" went on the little stenographer. "I can go in bathing here at home just as well—the water's just as refreshing. I can sit on the sand here just as well, and it will be just as sticky and grimy. I can walk around under a stylish sunshade and sit on the porch and talk, in my best clothes, exactly as well and as satisfactorily as I can 'way off somewhere at large expense.

"Then when it's all over I can look in my purse, count a roll of bills that haven't been spent and get seats for all the shows I want to see during the year!

"It would mean a chance to get acquainted with one's friends, too. Honestly, I've got dozens of married friends, who I know would be glad to have me go out and see them, but I never have the chance. Think what I could accomplish in the way of renewing old friendships in the course of two or three weeks!"

The bookkeeper nodded his commendation. "Then you'll have a chance to take in a bunch of summer parks, won't you?" he said. "And you can see the sights that you've never had time to look at, and you can hear the good music, take long rides, get out into the woods, pick flowers, have picnics—oh, there's so much one can do!

"That's what they all say," added the bookkeeper. "But why can't you be honest? Why don't you say right out that there's no use in your going up to the lake if Jimmy isn't going to be there, that if he's to be in town you'd just as soon stay, too? Why don't you tell me truthfully that you expect to sleep as late as you can just getting up in time to press your best dress before Jimmy arrives to take you out? Why don't you admit that you'd like to spend your money on personal attractions, as long as Jimmy's around—and keep him right at hand?"

The little stenographer opened her mouth several times to remonstrate—but no words came. "Why—why—" she finally gasped. "I never—"

Just then the telephone rang.

"Well, what do you think?" She issued from the telephone booth all excitement. "I've got to get all ready to go away in two weeks! I never dreamed of going before August, but I've got to go on the 20th of this month, and I haven't got any clothes ready. I haven't even got a suit!

"Oh, I wonder if the firm'll let me go at that time. I'll have to sound Mr. Brown this afternoon. Isn't it great? Up on the lake—you know, the same old place we always go! Oh, I can hardly wait! Don't you envy me? Think of the swimming and the canoeing and the woods and the all day hammocks—doesn't it make you homesick?"

"How about those financial straits?" the bookkeeper inquired.

"Oh, mother'll advance all I want," replied she, as she looked absently into space. Then she smiled rapturously.

"Jimmy call you up?" hazarded the bookkeeper.

"They're going to give him a vacation after all. Things have changed. He didn't dream he'd—"

She stopped suddenly and glared, with fire in her eyes, at the bookkeeper, because he was smiling.—Chicago Daily News.

Simple Home Remedies.

Stranger in Town—Say, what's good to take for a cold?

Native—Oh, quinine and whisky, or quinine and brandy, or quinine and rum, or quinine and gin—and say—you want to be darned careful about the quinine—it's powerful stuff.—Puck.

Investigation.

"What kind of an investigation do you want?" asked the legislator.

"One of those that get the public so tired of the whole matter that they are willing to quit talking about it."

Officers Nominated.

At the primary election, September 17th, the following county officers were nominated on the Republican ticket:

Auditor, A. H. Fasel.
Treasurer, Andrew Trovaton.
Register of Deeds, N. J. Anderson.
Sheriff, W. J. LaBree.
County Attorney, J. M. Bishop.
Clerk of Court, H. E. Ives.
Co. Surveyor, C. H. Martz.
County Commissioner 2nd, Dist Paul J. Shaw.
5th, District, A. B. Mandt.

On the non-partisan ballot F. A. Mostue was nominated for Superintendent of schools and Wm. Michelet for judge of probate were nominated by a large majority. Bishop will be opposed for election by E. M. Stanton on the Democratic ticket and Andrew Trovaton will also be opposed by an old fellow in Thief River Falls on the democratic ticket, (we have forgotten his name but he used to be Socialist, but this year filed on the democratic ticket), just to catch a few patriotic democratic votes, but he will hear some sad news in November.

The Men Who Succeed.

as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, to day, demands health, to ail is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak, run down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas. B Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders. And deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well." Try them. Only 50 cents at All Druggists.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Sep. 20th, 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 9th, 1912

NOTICE is hereby given that Grace M. Pinkerton, of Torgerson Minn., who on May 15th, 1911, made homestead Entry No. 06180 for S. E. ¼ Section 22 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 2nd day of November, 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses

A. T. Rice, of Germantown Minn. John Markuson, E. H. Besancon, of Torgerson Minn. J. H. Bay, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the sunbeam Sept. 20th, 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 18th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Kittil Jordshaugen, of Germantown Minn., who on Nov. 1, 1904, made Homestead Application No 797, Serial No. 04644, for N. W. ¼ Section 8 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before The Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn., on the 31st, day of October 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Torgel K. Hegtvedt, Gonder T. Skretvet, Christoffer Vad, Leif T. Jordeshaugen, all of Germentown Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin.
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Publication in the Sunbeam Sept. 20,

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. September 13. 1912

Notice is hereby given that Torgel K. Hegtvedt, of Germantown Minn., who on November 1st, 1904, made Homestead Application No. 795. Serial No. 04642, for Lots 6, 7, and E. ½ S. W. ¼ Section 6 Towship 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. on the 31st, day of October 1912

Claimant names as witnesses:

Leif T. Jordeshaugen, Gonder T. Skretvet Kitill T. Jordshaugen, Christoffer Vad, all of Germentown, Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Uncle Ezra Says

"It don't take more'n a gill uv effort to git folks into a peck of trouble" and a little neglect of constipation, billiousness, indigestion or other liver derangement will do the same. If ailing, take Dr. King's New Life Pills for quick [illegible] 25 cents at All Druggists

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9,40 a. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahon Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

Popular Jokes.

The most popular joke which has been published in any language in the history of the world is stated to be that which appeared in an obscure corner of the Punch almanac for 1845. It read, "Advice to persons about to marry—Don't!" It would be interesting to know who was its author. Another, founded on a similar subject, was the "Advice to persons who have fallen in love—Fall out!" One of the most brilliant things that ever appeared in our contemporary was the brief dialogue between an inquiring child and his impatient parent: "What is mind?" "No matter." "What is matter?" "Never mind."—Westminster Gazette.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE

236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

The weather seems to have cleared up for good to day.

Owing to bad weather the attendance has been very light at school the past week.

Some of the farmers have been saying that we had no use for the Big ditches, but can see their mistake now.

Some of the old settlers begin to think of the good old wet times of three and four years ago this week.

Every cloud has its silver lining The snow storm of this week had ought to have disposed of the flies and mosquitoes for this season.

Remember that the farmers picnic advertised in another column has been postponed until better weather and roads prevail.

When you read of the dreadful storms that have visited other localities you must conclude that northern Minnesota is not the worst place after all.

County Surveyor Martz and Dan Linihan was up Monday to look at the line of ditch 47, and got storm bound for two days at Walter McAndress.

It is about an impossibility for our merchants to get any goods out from town, owing to bad roads, so do not kick when you ask for something that they have not got.

The road south from Highlanding is now in an impassable condition but the ditch that should have been dug last season to drain this road is now being dug with a good prospect that it will be completed this fall.

Did you ever see a field of green corn growing in a field covered by four inches of snow? If you did not you could have seen it by looking at the corn field of Walter McAndress yesterday morning.

Miss Martha Hyland, of Deer Park is at the Crookston Hospital, where she has had an operation for appendicitis. Which was successful and she is on the way to recovery.

School commenced in this district last Wednesday, with Miss Mable Nelson of Cloquet as teacher. Miss Nelson is a graduate of the Duluth Normal School and comes to us highly recommended as a teacher.

The old time Historian liar is again abroad in the land and would try to make people believe that this week's snow storm was something that was not unusual, but we tell you as a fact that we never see a snow storm like this one in September during 2 years residence in Minnesota.

One of the worst storms that we have ever seen in a residence of 29 years in Northern Minnesota passed over this locality Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, on Tuesday morning it started to snow and to the surprise of the oldest inhabitants it continued to snow until there was about six inches of the beautiful on the ground by Wednesday morning. This large amount of water added to the already wet ground will make the roads about impassible and hang up threshing and the flax harvest for about a week.

The heavy rains of too past week will be the cause of the loss of thousands of dollars worth of flax that has been sown on the low lands along ditch 47 as the last three dry seasons have decoyed the farmers onto these low lands, with the hope that that ditch would be dug but there is no prospect that it will be done this fall. More time is what they want and the people who have been the heavy losers for the past two years by their failure to dig this ditch are in about the right frame of mind to consent to let them tinker along a few years more. Their time is out next Monday night at 12 o'clock, sharp, after which time the petitioners will be heard from.

The Socialist party cast 21 votes in this Highlanding township at the primary election which is undoubtly the largest number cast at any country Township in the County, and there was one notable feature about it, which was that these votes was voted, not by the riffraff of society, but by some of the best posted men in the Township, in whom anyone who knows them would not be afraid to trust to manage the affairs of this government.

COLLINS FOR GOVERNOR.

P. V. Collins Editor of the Northwestern Agriculturist, was nominated by the progressive Republicans as their candidate for governor last week. Mr. Collins was the man who headed the farmers fight against Reciprocity in this state and sent a barrel of petitions against its passage to our representatives in Congress. He is the most widely known man among the farmers in this state and they will rally to his support, as they have been pleading with him to become their candidate for governor.

He is a man that we would like to see in that chair, and he can rely on the rays of THE SUNBEAM shining on his candidacy.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE,
Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Paid advertising.

Having received the nomination of the Public Ownership Party for candidate for County Commissioner of the 5th commissioner district, I will, if elected, consider myself in the service of the people and exert my efforts in the interests of the tax payers of Pennington County.

I earnestly solicit the support of the voters at the final election November 5th.

Respectfully
George Lemders

Many Driven From Home.

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung disease. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery and cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by All Druggists.

[illegible] DISEASE
[illegible] family had died [illegible] was taken with [illegible] lung trouble, [illegible] and I gained [illegible] using
DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY
[illegible] Patterson, Wellington, Tex.
[illegible] 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

HOUSE KEEPER WANTED

I desire to employ the service of a house keeper on my farm in the Town of Kratka. Good conveniences and steady employment. Salary $4.00 a week and board. Call on or address,

John Goirk,
Highlanding Minn

Subscribe for The Sunbeam
Pay up your back Subscription.

This column will be for the use of any of the candidates for office, who desire to make a statement to the voters over their own signature. It pays us to have you use it, but if you don't think it pays you don't use it.

Paid Advertisement

I wish to thank my supporters for the republican nomination for County Treasurer, and also my opponent and his supporters for the clean, gentlemanly manner in which they conducted their campaign.

On account of my official duties I shall not be able to make much of a personal campaign for the November Election, but will do all I can for all the Republican nominees by the Primary last Tuesday, because they are all good men as far as I know, and were fairly nominated by our party.

I believe it would be bad for the country should our party be defeated, especially so far as Congress and Legislature are concerned.

Very Sincerely,
Andrew Trovaton.

Editor of The Sunbeam:

Allow me through the columns of your paper to extend to my neighbors and friends in the Eleven towns my sincere thanks for their kindly support at the primary election, as it is a source of great satisfaction to me that I had nearly the unanimous support of my neighbors. Again thanking you, I am Yours Truly,

E. A. Mostue.

Price of a Dinner

By G. A. Dennen

Once upon a time there was a girl. She was a very pretty girl. Some people might think that had nothing to do with the case, but I assure you it has a great deal to do with this case—and most cases.

This particular pretty girl was on her way home for a vacation from the college where she spent papa's money and learned a good many things more or less good for her.

It was vacation time and the pretty girl was in a vacation humor. So, being a daughter of Eve, she betook herself gaily to the stores where the pretty things are and began to purchase largely.

But first, because she was a wise young woman and knew some things she hadn't learned at college, she purchased her railroad ticket and her Pullman section for her homeward trip.

Lost in the mazes of a great department store, she enjoyed an hour or two of entirely feminine ecstasy.

First there was a hat. Anybody, even a novice, could see how much prettier that very pretty girl looked in that hat. So it was bought and placed on her head.

Then there was a long coat. The hat and the artistic outlines seemed to require that coat. Besides, it was a "real bargain." So the coat was bought and put on with the hat.

Then there were some lovely long gloves, they were very delicate in color and they matched the coat. So the gloves were bought and put on.

Then, indeed, the very pretty girl was quite irresistible. She pinned a large bunch of violets on the new coat, smiled at her reflection in the long mirror, and called for the sum total.

The sum total was presented, and the very pretty girl's smile faded and grew rather sickly. Her mouth pursed itself in a round O—but she paid it without a murmur and stood thoughtfully regarding her remaining quarter.

Then it so happened that a second look in the mirror restored her serenity. She recalled the law of compensation learned in Philosophy A. Cheerfully she gathered up her suit case and went out to hail a passing street car.

Became Aware of a Very Sad Fact Indeed.

All the time the very pretty girl had been satisfying her feminine longings, she had been dimly conscious of another longing, still unsatisfied. It so happened that when she alighted at the railroad station this other longing began to clamor with a voice that would not be stilled. She was hungry.

Now, though her pocketbook was of silver links and large and exceedingly fine to look at, it contained only two little dimes, that jingled with a forlorn and lonely sound. The very pretty girl in her new hat and coat took the solitary dimes from the fine silver purse and looked at them wistfully. Distractingly good odors were wafted to her nostrils from the diner at the rear end of the long train. She sighed, and returned the dimes to the purse. Then a sudden thought struck her. She ran quickly across the platform to a near fruit stand and in a moment more one of the lonely dimes was changed for a bag of bananas.

Now it happened that when the very pretty girl was safely seated in her section and the train had begun to move three lusty young men entered the car. They were also on their way home from a neighboring college. They also were in a holiday mood. They meant to spend a joyous vacation as a relief to the deadly grind of football and fraternities.

As these three lusty ones made their way down the car aisle their glances fell upon the very pretty girl in her distracting new hat and the coat that went with it. With one accord they all stopped and greeted her.

For they all knew her. One knew her with the knowledge of dancing parties and college football games. The second knew her with the intimacy of a childhood friendship.

And the third—he didn't know her at all, because he loved her, and love is blind.

"Have you been to dinner?" asked the first young man.

A gleam of hope lit up the very pretty girl's eyes and made them starry; they were in color like the violets on her coat.

"No," she said joyfully.

"Then dine with me."

"No," with me," interposed the second quickly.

The third said nothing, but in his eyes was a steady purpose, and she looked up and saw it there.

"Shall I dine with you all?" But her look sought his again with a hint of challenge.

There was a moment of hesitation which the girl did not understand at all, but the three men understood only too well. And the first man looked at the second, and they both looked at the third, for it was vacation and the big game was just over and their finances were sadly low.

"That would not do at all," said the third man decidedly. "We must have a council of war. We will report progress in a few moments."

So it happened that they withdrew hurriedly to the smoking car, and there they put their heads and their pocketbooks together, and became aware of a very sad fact indeed. For their united finances, turn and twist them how they would, were only enough for one of them to dine as a gentleman should in the company of a very pretty girl. The others must go dinnerless to bed.

Which should be the lucky man?

"We must decide by lot," said the third man again, and because the suggestion was his he claimed the right to oversee the drawing.

He tore three strips of paper of different lengths and placed them in his hat, holding it out to them.

"The short one wins," he announced.

The first man drew carelessly, and looked at the long slip in his hand with a smile and a shrug of the shoulders.

The second man drew carefully, and the sight of another long slip called from him an exclamation of regret.

But the third man looked at his short strip reverently. He folded it up and put it into his pocket.

"Lucky dog!" said the first man gaily.

"I envy you," murmured the second.

The third man's face was full of light.

"I can't lose," he said.

Then it followed that the third man collected all the dimes and quarters of the other two, and made his way back to the car, where the very pretty girl sat waiting.

"So you are the one," she said, but she did not look disappointed.

"Yes," he answered, "I am the one—"

He guided her down the aisle of that car and across to the diner. And the unlucky two followed at a distance, for they were very, very hungry.

And behold the two had quite forgotten their hungry brethren, neither did they take much interest in the bountiful dinner placed before them, so that those watching burned with a desire to take from them the steak and salad they so little appreciated. For the man sat looking into the violet eyes of the girl, and the girl toyed with her fork and listened to the words he was saying, while her color came and went.

So when the watchers could in no way gain their notice, they crept sadly away and were fain to return to the smoker. And behold, as they passed the seat of the very pretty girl, their gaze fell on a partly opened bag, and from the bag protruded the end of a plump yellow banana.

It was long before the very pretty girl came back to her seat, and when she did, her cheeks were glowing with a lovely color. It was longer still before she missed the bananas. Even then her suspicious glance fell upon and wrongly accused two innocent urchins across the aisle.

As for the two real culprits, she had forgotten their existence. She had forgotten the dinner their money had purchased—she had forgotten everything but the look in the eyes of the man who didn't know her—because he loved her.

NEW BANK.

FIRST
STATE BANK,
OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Giteau Vic, Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abraham Parquine, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. Duffy. Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You
Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Eleswhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.
Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's
$50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-out money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES
NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

BATTLE OF THE FUTURE TO BE IN THE DARK

THAT the next conflict between nations will be a war in the air, which will probably be fought largely in the dark, is the belief of certain military strategists. If they are right, then according to present indications the United States would suffer defeat, should it be one of the combatants.

"This government is far behind every nation in military aviation, as we have at present but ten aeroplanes and ten thoroughly trained men ready for service," said no less an authority than Brig. Gen. James Allen, chief of the signal corps. "We have gone slow, very slow, in the preparation of our military sky army for various reasons, because there has been no seeming pressing need of extensive defense of this kind. Realizing, however, what other nations have done toward preparing themselves for aerial conflict, our government is now taking steps toward making additions to our military flying fleet and ten more aeroplanes have been ordered.

"I hope eventually to see the provisions of the bill for aerial equipment for the army carried out in full. This calls for 120 aeroplanes, in charge of 285 aviators and 720 enlisted men. These will be divided into sections, platoons, companies and squadrons. Two sections will compose a platoon, two platoons a company, two companies a squadron. Or, in other words, a squadron will consist of eight aeroplanes in charge of sixteen aviators, all of whom will be captains or lieutenants of the regular army.

"Each squadron will be in command of a major, who will have two commissioned officers on his staff in addition to the aviators assigned to the machines. He will also have under him a force of 48 aeroplane mechanicians, all enlisted men, giving five to each machine, and an extra one for each company.

"To one field army of regular troops there will be three aviation squadrons, one asigned to each of the two divisions and one to the headquarters of the field commander. The squadron assigned to headquarters will be equipped with aeroplanes of extra motor power for long distance reconnaissance. The field artillery will have special machines and in addition there will be 64 machines and 152 aviators distributed among 14 of our coast defense stations.

"Then the Philippines should have two squadrons, or sixteen machines, and Panama and Hawaii should each have one squadron. This sky army will be headed by two colonels under the command of the chief of the signal corps, two lieutenant-colonels and eleven majors.

"The aviation equipment should not stop with the regular army, but the militia must also be provided with machines distributed among its mobile troops at the rate of one squadron for each division of men. The militia birdmen must receive their diplomas from the regular army aviation schools, to be established throughout the country.

"Five of these schools, called aviation centers, for our four coasts and the center of the continent—the Atlantic, the Pacific, the Gulf, the Lakes and one central inland point. Each state will undoubtedly have a school of instruction. All of these schools will be somewhat similar to the one at College Park, Md.

"Germany, at the moment," continued General Allen, "has a fleet of about 300 aeroplanes, and still more under construction. She has a chain of twenty stations, which are so placed as to guard her entire frontier and also the area which flanks the sea.

"She has twenty-five first-class sheds with the most modern equipment dotting the landscape at various strategic points. To man her huge Zeppelins, Parsevals and Grosses she has a special battalion of over a thousand officers and men trained in all of the exigencies of aerial navigation and ready to take to flight upon instant orders.

"France claims, I believe, that she has 600 military air machines of all kinds, while Russia is next. Great Britain falls in line with a present force of seventy-one machines and plans and provisions for a military aviation equipment to the extent of 181 high-class aeroplanes.

"Italy has a good fleet of seventeen to which she is making constant additions and is the first nation to make use of aerial bombs and a flying artilleryman. Lieutenant Gotti established his right to a niche in the hall of fame by his daring flight over the enemy at Tripoli when he dropped four of these aerial grenades among the enemy at various points with deadly results.

"Turkey, beholding the devastation Italy has wrought from the clouds, has made rapid strides in the purchase of an aerial fleet of her own and is likely to retaliate in like manner.

"Austria is also waking up to the advantages of these adjuncts to military tactics, and has entered the field of aeronautics."

When General Allen was asked what would be the work of the flying machines in the event of war he said:

"By skillful maneuvers properly equipped and skillfully handled military aeroplanes may wipe out or put in retreat a whole army before sunrise, report to their base of supplies and disorganize a hostile fleet before breakfast.

"Generally speaking, they would perhaps be most effective as scouts, working from different points upon the Atlantic coast, the Gulf coast and the Pacific as coast patrols for observation and supplying information regarding the approach of ships. Acting aggressively they could by assembling in small groups do an immense amount of damage.

"In the event of the existence of war and the approach of hostile ships or transports with troops these scout aeroplanes could prevent the landing of any troops. If each station in the coast patrol had, we will say, five ships, each of which can carry 400 pounds in addition to the weight of the aviator and his supply of fuel, a ton of explosives could be distributed by these patrols while they were going forty miles an hour, and they could return and prepare for another trip if necessary.

"This amount of explosive could be dropped in weights of from 20 to 200 pounds without injury or disturbance to the aeroplane and from safe heights of from 2,000 to 3,000 feet. It should not require many such hints to convince the commander of any fleet or invading army, no matter how determined he might be, that the locality was rather unhealthy.

"The best time for such work as this to be done would be in the semi-darkness of the early morning or late evening, just at dusk or dawn, when it is next to impossible to see an aeroplane, particularly if it stays up a couple of thousand feet. To the aviator and his companion who would attend to the distribution of missiles the outlines of the boats, the camps and even individuals stand out with a clearness that is not appreciated by anyone who has not flown in a balloon. With the ability of the aeroplane to pursue an erratic course by constantly changing its position, the high speed the small ones can maintain and the heights to which they ascend give them a tremendous advantage.

"The army aeroplane which the United States expects to depend upon in case of hostile demonstrations will carry 2,500 rounds of ammunition, which it may discharge at the rate of 500 a minute. It can travel 104 miles an hour, carry enough fuel to go 460 miles, stay up 11¼ hours and climb to an altitude of 12,828 feet. That is what has been done, and what aeroplanes have done they can do again.

"Then the army, like the navy, expects to make good use of the hydro-aeroplane, which may alight upon, skim through and fly from the water as readily as it does from land, and from plowed land as well as from level ground. Its use would be mostly for observation of the enemy at long distances.

"What models are we now using?"

"Well, we have only Wright, Curtiss and Burgess Wright machines at present, but when the money is forthcoming it is likely that we will purchase some of the best of the foreign machines. Should the necessity arise the United States would certainly acquire the best products of modern invention to the complement of her own supply.

"Our present trouble is we already have more machines than we have officers competent to handle them. We must have more men who are qualified to fill the requirements exacted for this work.

"Successful aviation is a scientific problem which, like every other wonderful achievement, is only a success after each detail is perfectly worked out. The first great essential in the practical use of aviation in military tactics lies in the necessity for safety in flying.

"What would be the use of the government spending money to train officers and soldiers to the fine point necesary for successful airmen only to have them meet mishap and death, to say nothing of the losses through the destruction of valuable machines representing the outlay of thousands of dollars. Flying may be, will be, as safe as any other mode of travel.

"This is one of the problems which our government experts are working upon now. They have already settled upon automatic arrangements which should materially lessen the number of mishaps and fatalities. It is the unexpected which happens, taking a man off his guard for an instant, which experience and study will avert."

General Allen believes that the requirements for an army aviator include physical perfection. Only commissioned officers of the army and militia need apply and before they can be admitted to any of the aviation schools they must pass a rigorous physical examination.

To forecast what the war of the future may mean it is only necessary to look over the field of modern invention in the production of death-dealing weapons.

Battles will be fought in the clouds with machine rifles which throw out streams of bullets, aerial torpedoes which may be released by levers strapped to the feet of the aviator, bombs of powerful explosive which can tear men and horses to bits and the German aero guns which send down brittle bombs containing 150 pounds of chemicals that upon exploding fill the atmosphere with poisonous gases calculated to kill every living thing within 500 yards.

To overcome the disadvantages of the darkness there is an electrically controlled search light which may be suspended hundreds of feet below the airship and thus illuminate for a brief time the area of attack. Thus the flying artilleryman may see just where he wants his fire to strike, while he remains safe in his iron or steel sheathed ship high above the danger of being seen or hit. Then there is a bomb which leaves a trail of smoke by day and a line of fire at night to mark its course.

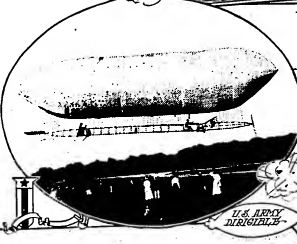
For disabling aeros from the ground there is the American automobile gun, said to be able to discharge 2,000,000 bullets an hour, requiring but two men to handle it and performing the work of thirty regiments, besides many others for vertical firing. The Japanese have a poisonous gas filled bomb which will explode and fill the air with fumes guaranteed to overcome any airmen within 100 yards of its explosion.

According to some strategists the next war will be thrashed out largely by airships and most probably in semi-darkness. In the late twilight of evenings and in the gray dawn the airships will come forth from their sheds and hangars to pursue their stealthy flights of observation and destruction.

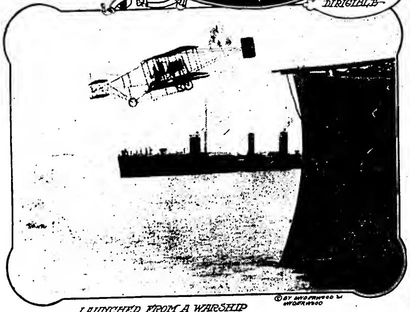
With the twinkling lights of the campfires of the enemy, the solitary signals of approaching ships or the vague black shapes of the scattered houses in some sleeping village all open to their observation they can swiftly and silently steal along overhead and fire their missiles of destruction upon the unsuspecting enemy and soar away out of reach before there is any possibility of their being seen or damaged.

With the accuracy which constant target practice gives even a small fleet of these instruments of war can accomplish great destruction with their dropping shells and bombs. When these winged foes meet in contest it will be to the fleet that is the swiftest and more daring that the victory will belong.

AEROPLANE SCOUTING



U.S. ARMY DIRIGIBLE



©BY UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

LAUNCHED FROM A WARSHIP

LITTLE RED ROOSTER

Brought Delos Brown and Martha Gilmore Together.

By GEORGIA SELTER.

Never having had any love affairs of her own to occupy her time, Miss Martha Brown very naturally turned to those of others. And so it came about that scarcely a visit of Cupid had occurred in Plainville for years, that she did not bring about, assist in, or at the very least, predict!

"Luella," she called one morning to the niece whom she had befriended in her orphaned youth, "come and see who this is moving into the old Fleming cottage."

Luella obligingly left her dishwashing and came to peer over her aunt's shoulder.

"Why, that," she said, "must be Martha Gilmore. I heard yesterday she had bought the place of Delos Brown. I forgot to tell you, Aunt Marlette," apologetically.

"Quite a come-down, seems to me, for old Artemus Gilmore's daughter," observed Miss Marlette crisply. "I can remember when he mother didn't care to associate with Plainville folks."

"Oh, but Martha isn't that way a bit, aunt," said Luella loyally. "I feel real sorry to think she has had to give up her old home. And she has her old Aunt Martha to care for, too."

"Well, I can't imagine what Delos Brown is thinking of to sell that cottage—his mother's old home! I supposed he had more feeling for her memory. I shouldn't think he would want to see anyone else living there." Miss Marlette folded her hands as was her custom when sitting in judgment.

"Why should he care?" objected Luella. "He never saw his mother living at the cottage. It has stood empty for years. I suppose it will seem pleasant to have neighbors."

"And to such a brazen thing as Martha Gilmore," pursued Miss Brown, not to be interrupted.

Luella returned to her dishes without a word.

"When Aunt Marlette has been crossed nothing seems to please her," she thought. "Everybody knows Martha is as nice a girl as ever lived."

"They needn't tell me," said Miss Marlette, left alone in the sitting room, "that she hasn't set her cap for Delos Brown!"

This bachelor nephew, good looking, of excellent habits and possessing a comfortable fortune, seemed to his aunt a desirable husband for her niece, Luella Lewis.

An hour later, therefore, as the young man was busily training his grape vines over a new trellis, he beheld his caustic aunt hobbling up his garden path.

"So you've sold the cottage?" she began without preamble.

"Yes. Thought I might as well get it off my hands when I had a good chance. It was no use to me except what garden I worked."

"Well," said Aunt Marlette shortly, "if you had taken the trouble to ask my opinion before doing it, you would have saved a good many remarks!"

Delos Brown started uncomfortably. His sensitive nature dreaded the sharpness of village gossip. Perhaps that fact accounted for his remaining single despite his many virtues.

"Of course you must expect folks to talk when a girl takes pains, to settle under the very eaves of a desirable bachelor's house. She is a brazen thing, but I wouldn't expect a man to see it!"

The old lady glanced sharply at the little gate standing open in the line fence, and sniffed disapprovingly as she betook herself homeward.

Martha Gilmore, standing amid the clutter of packing boxes in the forlorn parlor, was trying desperately to keep her tears back. With a quick tap, Miss Brown entered.

"So, you've moved down town," she observed. "No, I can't sit down," she observed. "No, I can't sit down, thank you. I just came in to see how you like it here. I must say it is sort of a difficult place for a lone young woman." Her eyes rested reflectively upon her unconscious nephew where he worked in his garden.

Martha's cheeks flamed suddenly. "My aunt is always with me, Miss Brown," she said, coldly.

"If there is anything I can do for you I hope you will feel at liberty to ask," said Miss Marlette. "Everybody has to have one such neighbor!"

Miss Marlette's eyes soon told her that her scheme had worked admirably. The little gate in the line fence was wired shut, and Martha never sat on the pleasant little south porch which faced Delos Brown's.

Martha Gilmore, with her broad hat tied low over her face, worked every day in the garden.

"I've got to raise something for winter, or we will have to have help from the town," she whispered over and over, when her back ached and her head felt dizzy from her unaccustomed labor.

And her garden did grow surprisingly. Early one morning Martha went out to look at the plants which meant so much to her.

Heading his industrious flock among her newly hoed rows was the strutting red rooster she had watched her neighbor place in his chicken yard a few days before. All about lay her tender young plants, torn and uprooted."

"Oh, go away," cried Martha, helplessly, waving her apron.

"Why, Miss Gilmore!" Delos Brown stood aghast at the havoc he had unwittingly wrought. "I supposed I had that park chicken-proof."

After much excitement they coaxed and drove the flock back into their own territory.

"And now you must let me help you repair the damages," he declared, forgetting in her apparent distress his fear of prying eyes and busy tongues.

To his astonishment, Delos found the girl very quiet and attractive. She knew a lot about gardening, too, and seemed eager to learn more.

"I declare," he murmured on his lonely porch of an evening, "I declare I can't see why she is a brazen thing, as Aunt Marlette seems to think. I guess that garden means a great deal to her—more than it ought to if things were comfortable over there."

He began thinking anxiously about the long winter. "The cottage needs repairing to make it livable. I could do it as well as not without much expense. And I always have more wood from the farm than I can use. I hope she hasn't heard any of Aunt Marlette's foolish talk," he thought.

Through the dim twilight he could see Martha moving about the little lawn.

"Guess I'll go over, anyway," he said aloud, since Aunt Martha's sharp eyes could not penetrate the darkness.

"I—I came to inquire about the garden," he said, ill at ease in her presence. There was something fine in Martha's manner, even in that humble kitchen garden.

"Oh, it is better than it ever was before, thanks to you, Mr. Brown. It is really fortunate for me that my neighbor's chickens got into it!"

"But I can never quite replace it, Miss Gilmore, and that is why I want to do something else for you to even things up a little. The cottage needs repairing before cold weather. I can do it as well as not—in fact, I ought to have done it before I let you have it at all."

"Oh no!" cried Martha. "What would Miss Brown say?"

"So she has been talking to you?" groaned Delos. "I might have known it. Oh, you poor little girl!"

Martha clasped her hands in the darkness at the tenderness in his voice.

"I—did not mind," she whispered with a sob.

"Not mind?" He took her trembling hands in his own. To his joy she did not attempt to draw them away.

"Do you know, Martha," he said very softly, "how a man feels about the girl he loves? He wants to protect her from everything that is unpleasant or difficult. That is why I cannot endure your living in this poor little house and working yourself to death in this garden. I am glad the red rooster destroyed it, since he opened the gate in the line fence. Let us be married to-morrow, Martha. It is going to cause a sensation, and we may as well have it all over with at once. And I want you so much, dear."

"It is pity," she protested, hesitating.

"It is not pity," he denied, taking her in his arms. "It is love, Martha."

The sewing circle met in Miss Brown's parlors next afternoon.

"Delos Brown and Martha Gilmore are married," cried Luella, rushing in excitedly.

"Well," said Aunt Marlette, composedly, after one mental gasp, "I've said from the day she moved into the Fleming cottage that this is what would come of it!"

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

"So You've Sold the Cottage?"

Culture.

It has been said that the attainment of culture tends to allay the inflammation caused by daily routine. But true culture, that which is the result of the act of cultivation, does more. It so relates a man to his daily affairs that no inflammation arises and he observes with no less amazement than joy that he gains as much culture from the lowliest task as from the most exalted of which he is capable. When he realizes that mind and spirit are necessary each to the other, he no longer regards his work as a laborer regards his toil. He becomes a creator; the world about him is the potter's clay, while the world within is the fair model which inspires the hand as it lovingly guides the wheel. Every object that comes into being from him is a new and fairer whole and with its creation he gains a new and fairer power.—Thomas Tapper.

SERIAL STORY

EXCUSE ME!

Novelized from the Comedy of the Same Name

By Rupert Hughes

ILLUSTRATED From Photographs of the Play as Produced By Henry W. Savage

Copyright, 1911, by H. K. Fly Co.

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Ira Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Mallory decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding hazing. Marjorie is distracted. Ira Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Anne Gattle, a fellow passenger. Mallory vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Mallory reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Mallory finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train. Mallory again makes an unsuccessful hunt for a preacher. Dr. Temple poses as a physician. Mrs. Temple is induced by Mrs. Wellington to smoke a cigar. Sight of preacher on a station platform raises Mallory's hopes, but he takes another train. Missing hand baggage compels the couple to borrow from passengers. Jimmie gets a cinder in his eye and Mrs. Jimmie gives first-aid. Coolness is then resumed. Still no clergyman. More borrowing.

CHAPTER XXII—(Continued).

He felt that he was the greatest sinner on earth, but worst of all was the fact that when he had fallen, the forbidden brew was not sweet. He was inexperienced enough to sip it and it was like foaming quinine on his palate. But he kept at it from sheer shame, and his luxurious transgression was its own punishment.

The doleful Mallory was on his way to join the "club." Crossing the vestibule he had met the conductor, and had ventured to quiz him along the old lines:

"Excuse me, haven't you taken any clergymen on board this train yet?"

"Devil a one."

"Don't you ever carry any preachers on this road?"

"Usually we get one or two. Last trip we carried a whole Methodist convention."

"A whole convention last trip! Just my luck!"

The unenlightened conductor turned to call back: "Say, up in the forward car we got a couple of undertakers. They be of any use to you?"

"Not yet."

Then Mallory dawdled on into the smoking room, where he found his own porter, who explained that he had been "promoted to the bottlery."

"Do we come to a station stop soon?" Mallory asked.

"Well, not for a considerable interval. Do you want to get out and walk up and down?"

"I don't," said Mallory, taking from under his coat Snoozleums, whom he had smuggled past the new conductor. "Meanwhile, Porter, could you give him something to eat to distract him?"

The porter grinned, and picking up a bill of fare held it out. "I got a meenual. It ain't writtan in dog, but you can explain it to him. What would yo' canine desiah, sah?"

Snoozleums put out a paw and Mallory read what it indicated: "He says he'd like a filet Chateaubriand, but if you have any old bones, he'll take those." The porter gathered Snoozleums in and disappeared with him into the buffet, Mallory calling after him: "Don't let the conductor see him."

Dr. Temple advanced on the disconsolate youth with an effort at cheer: "How is our bridegroom this beautiful afternoon?"

Mallory glanced at his costume: "I feel like a rainbow gone wrong. Just my luck to have to borrow from everybody. Look at me! This collar of Mr. Wellington's makes me feel like a peanut in a rubber tire." He turned to Fosdick.

"I say, Mr. Fosdick, what size collar do you wear?"

"Fourteen and a half," said Fosdick.

"Fourteen and a half!—why don't you get a neck? You haven't got a plain white shirt, have you? Our English friend lent me this, but it's purple, and Mr. Ashton's socks are maroon, and this peacock blue tie is very unhappy."

"I think I can fit you out," said Fosdick.

"And if you had an extra pair of socks," Mallory pleaded—"just one pair of unemotional socks."

"I'll show you my repertoire."

"All right, I'll see you later." Then he went up to Wellington, with much hesitance of manner. "By the way, Mr. Wellington, do you suppose Mrs. Wellington could lend Miss—Mrs.—could lend Marjorie some—some—"

Wellington waved him aside with magnificent scorn: "I am no longer in Mrs. Wellington's confidence."

"Oh, excuse me," said Mallory. He had noted that the Wellingtons occupied separate compartments, but for all he knew their reason was as romantic as his own.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Through a Tunnel.

Mrs. Jimmie Wellington, who had traveled much abroad and learned in England the habit of smoking in the corridors of expensive hotels, had acquired also the habit, as travelers do, of calling England freer than America. She determined to do her share toward the education of her native country, and chose, for her topic, tobacco as a feminine accomplishment.

She had grown indifferent to stares and audible comment and she could light a protesting head waiter to a standstill. If monuments and tablets are ever erected to the first woman who smoked publicly in this place or that, Mrs. Jimmie Wellington will be variously remembered and occupy a large place in historical record.

The narrow confines of the women's room on the sleeping car soon palled on her, and she objected to smoking there except when she felt the added luxury of keeping some other woman outside—fuming, but not smoking. And now Mrs. Jimmie had staked out a claim on the observation platform. She sat there, puffing like a major-general, and in one portion of Nebraska two farmers fell off their agricultural vehicles at the sight of her cigar-smoke trailing after the train. In Wyoming three cowboys followed her for a mile, yipping and howling their compliments.

Feeling the smoke mood coming on, Mrs. Wellington invited Mrs. Temple to smoke with her, but Mrs. Temple felt a reminiscent qualm at the very thought, so Mrs. Jimmie sauntered out alone, to the great surprise of Ira Lathrop, whose motto was, "Two heads are better than one," and who was apparently willing to wait till Anne Gattle's head grew on his shoulder.

"I trust I don't intrude," Mrs. Wellington said.

"Oh, no. Oh, yes." Anne gasped in fiery confusion as she fled into the car, followed by the purple-faced Ira, who slammed the door with a growl: "That Wellington woman would break up anything."

The prim little missionary toppled into the nearest chair: "Oh, Ira, what will she think?"

"She can't think!" Ira grumbled. "In a little while she'll know."

"Don't you think we'd better tell everybody before they begin to talk?"

Ira glowed with pride at the thought and murmured with all the ardor of a senile Romeo: "I suppose so, ducky darling. I'll break it—I mean I'll tell it to the men, and you tell the women."

"All right, dear, I'll obey you," she answered, meekly.

"Obey me!" Ira laughed with boyish swagger. "And you a missionary!"

"Well, I've converted one heathen, anyway," said Anne as she darted down the corridor, followed by Ira, who announced his intention to "go to the baggage car and dig up his old Prince Albert."

In their flight forward they passed the mysterious woman in the stateroom. They were too full of their own mystery to give thought to hers. Mrs. Fosdick went timidly prowling toward the observation car, suspecting everybody to be a spy, as Mallory suspected everybody to be a clergyman in disguise.

As she stole along the corridor past the men's clubroom she saw her husband—her here-and-there husband—wearily counting the telegraph posts and summing them up into miles. She tapped on the glass and signalled to him, then passed on.

He answered with a look, then pretended not to have noticed, and waited a few moments before he rose with an elaborate air of carelessness. He beckoned the porter and said:

"Let me know the moment we enter Utah, will you?"

"Yassah. We'll be comin' along right soon now. We got to pass through the big Aspen tunnel, after that, befo' long, we splounce into old Utah."

"Don't forget," said Fosdick, as he sauntered out. Ashton perked up his ears at the promise of a tunnel and kept his eye on his watch.

Fosdick entered the observation room with a hungry look in his luscious eyes. His now-and-then wife put up a warning finger to indicate Mrs. Whitcomb's presence at the writing desk.

Fosdick's smile froze into a smirk of formality and he tried to chill his tone as if he were speaking to a total stranger.

"Good afternoon."

Mrs. Fosdick answered with equal ice: "Good afternoon. Won't you sit down?"

"Thanks. Very picturesque scenery, isn't it?"

"Isn't it?" Fosdick seated himself, looked about cautiously, noted that Mrs. Whitcomb was apparently absorbed in her letter, then lowered his voice confidentially. His face kept up a strained pretense of indifference, but his whisper was passionate with longing:

"Has my poor little wifey missed her poor old hubby?"

"Oh, so much!" she whispered. "Has poor little hubby missed his poor old wife?"

"Horribly. Was she lonesome in that dismal stateroom all by herself?"

"Oh, so miserable! I can't stand it much longer."

Fosdick's face blazed with good news: "In just a little while we come to the Utah line—then we're safe."

"God bless Utah!"

The rapture died from her face as she caught sight of Dr. Temple, who happened to stroll in and go to the bookshelves, and taking out a book happened to glance near-sightedly her way.

"Be careful of that man, dearie," Mrs. Fosdick hissed out of one side of her mouth. "He's a very strange character."

Her husband was infected with her own terror. He asked, huskily: "What do you think he is?"

"A detective! I'm sure he's watching us. He followed you right in here."

"We'll be very cautious—till we get to Utah."

The old clergyman, a little fuzzy in brain from his debut in beer, continued innocently to confirm the appearance of a detective by drifting aimlessly about. He was looking for his wife, but he kept glancing at the uneasy Fosdicks. He went to the door, opened it, saw Mrs. Wellington finishing a cigar, and retreated precipitately. Seeing Mrs. Temple wandering in the corridor, he motioned her to a chair near the Fosdicks and she sat by his side, wondering at his filmy eyes.

The Fosdicks, glancing uncomfortably at Dr. Temple, rose and selected other chairs further away. Then Roger Ashton sauntered in, his eyes searching for a proper companion through the tunnel.

He saw Mrs. Wellington returning from the platform, just tossing away her cigar and blowing out the last of its grateful vapor.

With an effort at sarcasm, he went to her and offered her one of his own cigars, smiling: "Have another."

She took it, looked it over, and parried his irony with a formula she had heard men use when they hate to refuse a gift-cigar: "Thanks. I'll smoke it after dinner, if you don't mind."

"Oh, I don't mind," he laughed, then bending closer he murmured: "They tell me we are coming to a tunnel, a nice, long, dark, dismal tunnel."

Mrs. Wellington would not take a dare. She felt herself already emancipated from Jimmie. So she answered Ashton's hint with a laughing challenge:

"How nice of the conductor to arrange it."

Ashton smacked his lips over the prospect.

And now the porter, having noted Ashton's impatience to reach the tunnel, thought to curry favor and a quarter by announcing its approach. He hustled in and made straight for Ashton just as the tunnel announced itself with a sudden swoop of gloom, a great increase of the train-noises and a far-off clang of the locomotive bell.

Out of the Egyptian darkness came the unmistakable sounds of osculation in various parts of the room. Doubtless, it was repeated in other parts of the train. There were numerous cooing sounds, too, but nobody spoke except Mrs. Temple, who was heard to murmur:

"Oh, Walter, dear, what makes your breath so funny!"

Next came a little yowl of pain in Mrs. Fosdick's voice, and then daylight flooded the car with a rush, as if time had made an instant leap from midnight to noon. There were interesting disclosures.

Mrs. Temple was caught with her arms round the doctor's neck, and she blushed like a spoony girl. Mrs. Fosdick was trying to disengage her hair from Mr. Fosdick's scarf-pin. Mrs. Whitcomb alone was deserted. Mr. Ashton was gazing devotion at Mrs. Wellington and trying to tell her with his eyes how velvet he had found her cheek.

But she was looking reproachfully at him from a chair, and saying, not without regret:

"I heard everybody kissing everybody, but I was cruelly neglected."

Ashton's eyes widened with unbelief, he heard a snicker at his elbow, and whirled to find the porter rubbing his black velvet cheek and writhing with pent-up laughter.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

No Occasion for Surprise.

This story is told of Forrest, the great tragedian:

Forrest was playing in "Richard III.," and the part of Catesby had to be taken by a low comedian, who sauntered on the stage at the wrong moment and uttered the famous words, "My lord, the duke of Buckingham is taken," in the wrong place.

Forrest clenched his fists in rage, but otherwise took no notice of the remark.

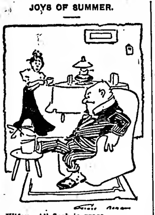
Later on the comedian repeated the words in the right place, and when the king expressed surprise at the news Catesby folded his arms, walked boldly down the stage, and remarked to the great actor in loud tones:

"I told you so before, Mr. Forrest, but you wouldn't believe me."

Unexpected Testimonial.

Little Bilderson prided himself upon his good appetite and his capacity for amusing. He was dining with a friend a few nights ago, and did his best to keep his host and hostess with their six-year-old daughter amused, and at the same time managed to do ample justice to the good things provided. "Oh, dear, Mr. Bilderson," remarked the little one, after the guest's wittiest sally, "I wish you'd come here to dinner every day." Bilderson positively beamed satisfaction. "Do you, dear?" he smiled. "Why?" "'Cause," came the reply, as the observant maiden glanced round the table, "'cause there wouldn't be anything cold to eat the next day."

JOYS OF SUMMER.



Wifey—All flesh is grass.

Hubby—I suppose that's what the lawn mower thought when it cut my foot.

HOW TO TREAT PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

The Case.

"How did it happen that Jopps did not keep the good position he had?"

"On one important occasion he lost his head."

"How did that happen?"

"It was cut off."

Cheerfulness is also an excellent wearing quality. It has been called the fair weather of the heart.—Smiles.

How It Happened.

The confusion of tongues had just fallen on Babel.

"We are describing a ball game," they explained.

YOU CAN CURE CATARRH

By using Cole's Carbolisalve. It is a most effective remedy. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

By the time a man gets old he ought to have sense enough not to let it worry him.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle. Adv.

Sufficient unto the day is the night that cometh after.

TAKE FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

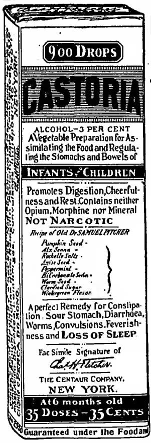
For Backache Rheumatism Kidneys and Bladder

Drs. Beaudoux and Wheeler

SPECIALISTS

Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Diseases

Offices: 833 Lowry Building, St. Paul, Minn.



900 Drops
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS & CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 Doses—35 Cents
Guaranteed under the Food and

Exact Copy of Wrapper

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

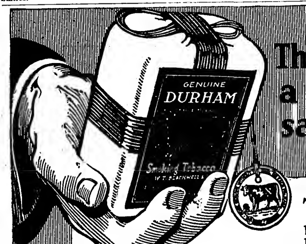
The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.



The story of a muslin sack

THE real wonder-story of the tobacco that is smoked by more millions of men than all other high-grade tobaccos combined—

GENUINE

"BULL" DURHAM

SMOKING TOBACCO

Forty "rollings" in each 5c muslin sack

In quaint old Durham, North Carolina—that's where the story starts.

That's where those golden leaves first grew in the sunny fields of Greene's farm. That's where they first filled those simple muslin sacks with good, sweet, native tobacco—fifty-two years ago.

No thought then of fancy packages—nor of "processes" for improving on Nature.

Just surprisingly good tobacco! That was what they had discovered—that was what interested those critical Southern smokers who gave a rousing welcome to "Bull" Durham as the greatest tobacco they had ever tasted.

And then the soldiers came. They came—and smoked—and were captured!

Scattering to their homes all over the nation they carried the fame of this wonderful smoke.

Wasn't that Durham postmaster busy with letters from up and down the land asking how to get more of that "Bull" Durham!

And—for over half a century, just because it's so downright good—it's been earning and winning and holding new friends, both among pipe and cigarette smokers, faster than any other tobacco ever grown.

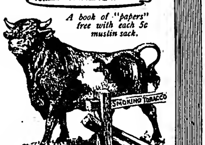
Faster! Twenty-two million pounds—352,000,000 packages—were sold and smoked last year! Yet this was merely the normal growth over the year before.

That sack might have been displaced by a fancy box. But the increasing millions of smokers who have an affection for this plain, convenient, muslin cover have shown that they want the value where it belongs—in the tobacco. You can't smoke the cover, and you can't get better quality for pipe or cigarette in the fanciest of packages.

"Bull" Durham has stood the long test. Its purity, its natural, undoctored goodness as a smoke, have hold and splendidly multiplied its friends—have won for it the leadership over all the tobaccos of the world.

Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co.

A book of "papers" free with each 5c muslin sack.



The Corrector of Destinies

Being Tales of Randolph Mason as Related by His Private Secretary, Courtland Parks

THE LAST CHECK

By Melville Davisson Post

Copyright by Edward J. Clode

I believe it was a theory of Robert Louis Stevenson that one could have no sense of completer physical comfort in this life than to escape from the "Bastille of Civilization" and dine on tinned bologna and a cake of chocolate under the pines of Gevaudan, "Where God keeps an open house." The average dweller in New York, who could hardly locate Gevaudan with an atlas, will I think, be found skeptically dissenting. He will cite, rather, the comfortable state of one who takes his steaming dinner at a good hostelry. Let the table be set snugly by a window, let the night be dark and rainy, let one warm and hungry look out at the splashing street, the bedrabbled passers, the huddled cabmen turning their glistening backs to the wind. It is like sitting comfortably in Abraham's bosom with a good view of Dives!

On such a night of April, I had the corner table at a window in the Dresden looking out in the dripping avenue, a good dinner set over a white cloth, a bottle cooling in a tub of ice, a cigar awaiting me on the servant's tray, a hunger like a wood-chopper's and a certainty of exemption from the rigor of the elements.

I had arrived happily at my coffee with its thimble of brandy, when a servant came to say that a carriage was waiting for me at the door. I replied that I had ordered no carriage, and began to cut the end of my cigar. The man went away, but almost instantly returned, saying that some one in a carriage wished to see me at once. I went to the door and the porter took me under his umbrella to the carriage. I had no idea who demanded thus peremptorily to see me, and my surprise was not greatly lessened when Randolph Mason's voice spoke to me out of the darkness of the carriage, bidding me accompany him.

I returned to the hotel, got my coat and hat and sat down in the carriage beside him, wondering what could be his mission on this uncomfortable night. It must be an unusual, highly important matter to take him uptown in this chilling rain, for it was rare that Randolph Mason would leave his house to see any man, no matter of what importance. His view of men was that attributed academically to the law—an equality ideally exact: if one's affairs presented a suitable problem, the individual in it was a factor to be estimated and dealt with, but otherwise not to be considered. This voyaging in the night then meant first that the person involved could not go to Mason. It might be some man behind a lock, some innocent person involved in another's wrong-doing who had been suddenly seized and must be helped back to his freedom, or else it was a woman.

In the meantime the carriage continued uptown. Randolph Mason was silently smoking a cigar, lying back in his corner of the seat, and I followed his example. It thus happened I took no notice of our route. However, after perhaps an hour, the carriage stopped and I observed that we were under the porte-cochere of one of the new palaces on Riverside Drive.

The door was thrown open and we stepped down into the presence of a liveried footman, who led us into the house and removed our coats, and then took us up a flight of great stairs. On the first landing we passed two nurses in their white caps and aprons. A moment later we were ushered into a sitting-room off a bedchamber. Beside a table a man sat propped up in an invalid chair. He was a huge bulk of a man, rather over six feet, I should think, with a tremendous, muscular chest, thin gray hair and a heavy, puffy face. Nature had built him for gigantic labors. Energy, strength, decisive action sat in his big muscles; but they were dying now, like the man. A mere loose, devitalized, pudgy bulk remained of what was once a splendid animal. The eye alone seemed living. A brilliant, determined brown eye, burning steady and clear like a ship's light. The last, unfailing servant of an indomitable spirit making ready to abandon its worthless house.

The man nodded to Randolph Mason. For a moment he regarded me with a curious glance, then he nodded likewise to me. The servant closed the door, leaving the three of us alone, and we sat down opposite the table beside the sick man. With the light of the lamp full in his face, I knew him now, from his lithograph on various bond issues. He was Richard R. Curtis, president of the Life Assurance Company of North America. His ghastly physical condition oppressed me, he was so evidently intended for all the vitalities of life and he was so evidently dying. I looked at Randolph Mason. He sat scrutinising the invalid's face with the sharp, steady glance of one taking stock of what qualities yet remained vital. The helpless man awoke no sentiment in the bosom of Randolph Mason; he regarded him as an engineer examines his machine, tapping on its wheels; as the elephant of a circus does a bridge, feeling it with his foot. The strength remaining to the sick man was important, not as a measure of life but as a means to the solution of a difficulty.

The invalid put out a trembling hand to a glass of some colored liquid on the table, drank it, and finally addressed Randolph Mason, speaking in a thick, scarcely intelligible voice.

"You see," he said, "how fatally truthful my statement was. I could not come to your office. I shall take but one more journey."

Randolph Mason nodded his head slightly, as though in assent of some trivial statement and in invitation to proceed to other matters more important.

The invalid continued:

"Within the last day or two, I have been going carefully over my affairs under a sense of impending death. In one matter I conceived myself to have made a mistake, and I wish to correct it, if possible. You are aware of the recent vicious public assault on the insurance companies, a wave of hostile, rabid, universal sentiment. There seems to be no particular reason for it. The movement is a phenomenon recurring constantly in the history of our civilization. I believe these periodic storms of public opinion to be organic and inevitable. All established institutions, no matter how excellent, are subject to such assaults. I pointed this out ten years ago to the bank officials of New York when a wave of sentiment threatened the established monetary standard."

He pulled his baggy form together in his chair. As he spoke, his voice became somewhat clearer.

"Now, in all this investigation what wrongs have been exposed? Indeed none, outside of a few companies, except that those in control of these insurance companies had the use of large sums of money and, not being infallible, made sometimes questionable investments; and the further fact that considerable sums were used in politics. Why, gentlemen, everybody knows that the average Assembly of the State is composed largely of men who scheme to extort money from commercial industries by threatening them with destructive legislation. The commerce of today is no better off than the commerce of the middle ages. It must still purchase immunity from the banditti. Sometimes these highwaymen can be fought, but usually most industries have found it less expensive to pay the toll. Consequently, no higher injustice can be imagined than to hold officials of an insurance company responsible for such expenditures. It is like shooting a captain for handing over his ship's money to pirates in order to save his cargo. Why, there is not an insurance company in America that could hold itself together for a year as a money-making concern if it neglected to keep a representative at Albany."

"Sir," said Randolph Mason, "this statement is neither entertaining nor instructive. Please come to the point."

"I beg your pardon," replied the invalid; "I am coming to the point. Five years ago I foresaw the arrival of this outbreak, there were certain signs which I shall not stop here to discuss; and I began to prepare my company for this era of exposure. The result of that labor is today evident. My company stands almost alone with a clean bill of health. But the cost to me as an individual would stagger America if it knew. I have done the labor of fifty years in five, and I have expended every dollar that I or my family possessed to accomplish this result.

"You are not to imagine that during this time the political banditti were any the less threatening or avid. I fed them as usual, but, unlike the other companies, I paid this tribute with my individual fortune. Now, then, gentlemen, I have come to the matter in hand. One year ago a politician of national reputation determined to force my insurance company to bear the expense of his candidacy for a high office. He controlled certain avenues of legislation, and threatened us with a statute which would have sequestered the assets of our company in a dozen different states, recalled its investments, and left it no way profitably to place its surplus funds. It would have been, in fact, ruin under the guise of law. In plain terms, his price was three hundred thousand dollars. I got him down to two. I had no longer any money of my own, and I would not use that of the company, even to save it from destruction. My wife owned this house, built with money inherited from her father in England—we were both born in Sussex. I executed a mortgage on it directly to this politician for two hundred thousand dollars. I took this chance with my family and myself. I felt sure that this present wave of insane outcry against insurance companies would finally pass, and that when business quiet was again established I could rebuild a fortune."

The man stopped, his tongue was beginning to get thick. He drank a little more of the colored liquid from the glass.

"I made the same mistake," he continued, "that the fool did in the parable. This tremendous high-pressure has worn out the machinery. I awoke a month ago to the fact that I was scrap iron. I am barely fifty and yet every organ is dying of old age—exhausted. I cannot live a week."

The invalid must have seen an expression of impatience or protest in Randolph Mason's face, because he put up his hand and hurried on.

"I have been thinking over these matters, with Death sitting here at my elbow, and I have come to the conclusion that I have done a wrong to those dependent on me. The Christian religion puts the infidel first in the catalogue of the condemned, and yet he that provideth not for his own household is declared worse. Every sentiment of practical humanity stands for the priority of that obligation. I am about to die, and I have in fact not two dollars to click together, except my salary, which will cease at my death. More than that, I have taken my wife's estate—her very bread and clothing—and used it for the benefit of others. When the breath leaves me, my wife and children go—where? You and I know the sort of aid one's business associates extend to a dead man's family. Resolutions of courteous sympathy, suave promises, and finally the closed door."

"Ah!" cried the man, beating his puffy fist feebly on the table, "If I had another year! Yes, in the name of God, if I had even another thirty days, I could set it right! But I have not three days! Death cannot be postponed. I could not get another day of life, even another hour of it, for the salvation of the world. I must go when the finger touches me, instantly on the tick of the clock. Is there any way to correct this injustice? Can anything be done?"

"Nothing could be more simple," replied Randolph Mason. "You are president of this insurance company; are you not?"

"Why, yes, I am still its president," replied Curtis.

"And you doubtless have funds of the company subject to your check," continued Mason.

"I am trustee," answered the invalid, "for the entire surplus fund of the company deposited in the Regent National Bank of America."

"Then," said Mason, "there is the remedy in your very hands."

An expression of despair returned to the man's face, so briefly lighted with hope.

"I have thought carefully of that," he said, "and there is no remedy in that direction. If I gave my wife a check for any portion of this trust fund, she would doubtless be criminally involved after my death for receiving embezzled moneys. If I lifted this mortgage from her property with the money, the directors of the insurance company would, when such facts were discovered after my death, instantly seize the property and sell it to make good the funds so used. Do not misunderstand me. I would no longer hesitate on any moral grounds. I believe that my services to the company are worth a living to my family. At any rate, now, in the face of death, I would so use the money and take my chance on the right of it before the judge over the frontier. I would not, to save my own life, take these trust moneys of the company; but to save my family from poverty I would take them if there were any way to do it."

"There is a way to do it," said Randolph Mason. "How much money will it take to satisfy this mortgage?"

The invalid opened a tin dispatch box on the table before him, took out some papers and looked over them a moment.

"Two hundred and four thousand and seventy-five dollars," he replied, "including interest until tomorrow."

"Very well," said Mason, "write out a check to the holder of this mortgage for that sum."

The sick man spread out a check-book before him on the table, carefully and laboriously made out a check and handed it to Randolph Mason, who looked at it sharply for a moment, then laid it down on the other papers.

"That will do," he said. "Take up your note tomorrow with this check, have the mortgage cancelled and released, direct your wife to sell this house instantly for what she can get on the market in cash, take the money so received and go immediately to her relatives in England, and there conceal the money under their names beyond a court's writ."

He paused a moment; then he looked thoughtfully at the invalid.

"A suitable reason for this immediate exodus will be the taking of your body for burial among your ancestors in Sussex."

"All shall be done exactly as you direct," replied Curtis, leaning heavily on the arm of his chair. "And, now, if only I could return the money to the insurance company; if only I could even matters with that cold, cruel, cunning political intriguer, I should die happy."

"Then," said Mason, "you will die like the saints. The Assurance Company of North America will not lose a dollar, and matters will be squared once for all with this politician."

The invalid pulled his baggy frame together.

"Human pity," he said, "has always promised the impossible to the dying, but it is no kindness."

"Sir," said Mason, "I promise nothing; I merely point out the inevitable."

"The inevitable," echoed the man. "Why, only the hand of God could perform the thing you speak of."

"Pardon me," said Mason, "your own hand has already done it."

The invalid looked down at his hand, swollen tight in the skin, trembling, purple.

"I am too tired," he said, "to guess what pleasantry you mean. I am like Nicodemus, accustomed to look upon things as they occur in nature. I wish to lift a mortgage from this property; in order to do that I pay the holder of the mortgage a certain sum. That sum is taken from the moneys of another. How can it be that the mortgage is thus lifted, the holder of it paid, and yet the funds of that other not taken, and the holder of the mortgage not paid? Such things may be possible in a land of fairies, but not here, not in New York. Good cash paid over a bank counter does not turn into chips under the pillow of the wicked, neither does an account in bank renew itself like the widow's curse. I beg you to tell me what you mean."

"If you will give me a sheet of paper," replied Mason, "I will show you."

The sick man pointed to a writing pad on the table with a pen and inkstand beside it. Randolph Mason rose, went to the table and wrote rapidly for a moment. Then he laid the written page before Mr. Curtis.

"Copy that," he said, "in your own hand. Seal it and give it to my secretary, Mr. Parks, to lay before your directors when you are dead."

The sick man turned painfully in his chair, put his elbows on the table, propped up his heavy, putty-colored face in his swollen hands and read the paper. Again and again he read it. When he looked up finally his face glowed.

"I see it," he said, as though speaking to himself, "I see it."

Then he sat for a considerable time, holding the paper in his fingers, his mind intent on this new aspect of the case. At length he turned back to the table, laboriously copied the paper, enclosed it in an envelope, addressed it and handed it to me. Then he spoke to Mason.

"I consider this thing," he said, "to be a providence of God."

"On the contrary," replied Mason; "it is a mere principle of law."

Then we went out of the room and down through the silent house to our carriage, waiting in the rain.

I followed the sequence of events with the keenest scrutiny. The newspapers contained no notice of the sale of the house on Riverside Drive by Richard R. Curtis; but I found a deed of sale on record showing a cash consideration of two hundred and twenty thousand dollars. Five days later Mr. Curtis died of Bright's disease. His life and business career were elaborately reviewed in the public prints. I observed the significant item as to his birth in Sussex, and that his body would be taken there for burial. Evidently the directions of Randolph Mason were being followed with scrupulous exactness. All this whetted still keener my curiosity as to the sealed letter in my possession.

Finally, on the first Wednesday of the succeeding month the Board of Directors of the Life Assurance Company of North America met at the company's building on Broadway. I appeared before it and presented the letter. In attendance upon the meeting were some of the great financiers of New York and, among them, the company attorney, Mr. Eustace Ruling, whose reputation as a counselor is established beyond any man's comment. The chairman of the board took the letter, ripped off the envelope and read it. Immediately he ordered a clerk to lay before him the last checks of President Curtis. Then laboring under apparent surprise, he addressed the other members.

"Gentlemen," he said, "here is a most astonishing discovery. I find that our late president has used $204,075 of the company's money with which to pay a private debt of his own. Here is the check and some sort of explanatory note."

Instantly there was a hubbub. In the midst of it Mr. Ruling came forward and took up the letter and the check. He read them carefully, then he laughed.

"Well," he said, "Mr. Curtis seems to have landed on our old friend, the State Boss, with a nice upper cut, from his coffin."

"He seems, on the contrary," replied one of the directors, "to have landed on us. His last official act was to hand over the company's money to this politician."

"Yes," said the lawyer, "but this payment has a quite sufficient string to it. It is explained fully in his letter. Mr. Curtis advises us that, in order to wipe out a personal debt, a debt legally but not morally just, he has given the man a check on the funds of the company. He begs us to observe that this check directs payment to be made by the bank out of the funds of the Life Assurance Company of North America, and that it is signed by him as the trustee of such funds. He begs us further to observe that this payment is, consequently, plainly on the face of this check a payment with trust funds. Therefore, this politician takes no title to the money which he will receive by it, and must pay it back to the company."

"I do not quite understand," said one of the directors.

"It is all entirely clear," replied the lawyer. "This check is made payable on a trust fund. It shows on its face that it is drawn on moneys belonging to the Assurance Company and not individually to Richard R. Curtis. This notice is set out fully in the body of the check. The signature with the word, trustee, attached, confirms the trust nature of the fund upon which it is drawn. Now, these political leeches have grown so accustomed to being fed on insurance money that they have come wholly to overlook the law. No doctrine of the law is better settled than that a trust has no power to pay out trust funds in settlement of his private debts, and one who takes trust funds, with notice of that fact, acquires no title to them and can be made to restore them. The peculiar wording of this check gave full notice that it was drawn on trust funds. The person who cashed it was thereby fully aware of that fact and, consequently, he must restore this money."

"But," said the chairman, "is this politician good for that amount?"

"What!" replied the lawyer, "our friend, the State Boss, good for it? Why, the thief has a million dollars in one building on Twenty-third street!"

In their consuming interest in the matter my presence was apparently overlooked, and I stepped softly through the door. These men did not realize its full significance; to them it was merely vengeance visited by a dead man on his enemy, a payment to a rogue in his own pocket-pieces; but to one who knew all the facts, Randolph Mason's plan had worked a larger justice. Mason had seen instantly that, if this mortgage could be lifted, Mrs. Curtis could sell the house, the purchaser's title would be clear, and she could take the money out of the country and conceal it. The only problem was to get the cancellation of the mortgage on the records. This check on the trust funds did that and yet left the taker of it liable to the assurance company, which owned the funds. Suppose it were technically a crime in Richard R. Curtis thus temporarily to appropriate the moneys held in trust. He was dead and no injury would come to any one innocent of wrong. A dependent woman had her property returned to her; a skulking rogue had his own knife in his ribs, and the Assurance Company of North America would receive its money with usury. I saw now why the dying man looked upon Randolph Mason as a providence of God.

For the legal principle involved in this story see Brown v. Ford, L. R. A. New Series 97. In New York see Cohnfeld v. Tannenbaum, 176 N. Y., 126, 98 Am. St. Rep. 653, 68 N. E. 141.

"There is a way to do it," said Randolph Mason.

Memory in the Fish.

Continuing his experiments as to whether fish possess memory of association of ideas, M. Oxner obtains some further results. He already found that by placing a red cylinder containing food and also an empty green cylinder in the aquarium with a single fish, the latter soon learned to enter the red cylinder each time it was immersed and avoided the other one. In his later researches, says the Scientific American, he finds that the fish goes into the red vessel and waits until some crumbs are dropped into it, which he then eats. A more striking point is that at other times the fish enters the baited red vessel, even though he does not appear to desire food, seeing that he does not eat at such times. The factor of hunger was, therefore, eliminated here, and we have to do with a habit or a reflex action.

Easy Deduction.

"Hah!" exclaimed Sherlock Holmes Jr., as he bent over the unconscious man.

"You have discovered his identity?" asked Dr. Watson.

"Not yet," replied the great amateur detective. "But it is evident that he is not a man who is in the habit of going on fishing trips."

"Marvelous! How do you deduce that fact?"

"Here is his pocket knife. It has, as you see, a strong corkscrew in it."

"Yes, I should think that would indicate that he was in the habit of going on fishing trips."

"Your supposition is childish, my dear doctor. Can't you see that the corkscrew is rusty and has evidently never been used?"

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1912. NO. 28.

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

New York City Crowd Pursues One Little Bird

NEW YORK.—"The best way to catch an Irish linnet is to do a cabaret dance and make a noise like a worm," was the philosophical decision of one of a score of men who spent the entire afternoon recently trying to capture a bird in the clearing back of the Hotel Astor, where the New theater is to be erected. An interested crowd of several hundred persons watched the chase and several hundred suggestions were made.

All the commotion was started when Miss Martha Marr of Stamping Ground, Ky., reported to a clerk in the Hotel Astor that her Irish linnet, which she had smuggled into her room on the eighth floor back, had flown her coop, or, to be exact, her gilded cage. Great was the grief she displayed. But nothing happened until she displayed a yellowback with $20 marked all over it.

"Try an ad in the paper," suggested a bellboy, "and you will get back a dozen birds in the morning."

"But I must get my Colleen (Christian name of the bird) at once. She is right out there in the back yard, the poor dear, just flying around in a hysterical manner."

Baskets, buckets and other articles, arranged with a bait underneath and propped upon sticks to which were attached long strings, were the more popular methods used.

"Put salt on its tail!"

"Get an aeroplane!"

"Make a noise like a worm!"

"Get a letter of introduction!"

These were a few of the suggestions made to the crowd that labored for more than three hours trying to catch the feathered prize. Colleen was still fancy free and having the time of her young life when darkness came and Miss Marr refused to be consoled.

"Hoodoo" Didn't Work and Sallie Got "Wusser"

LORDY MAN, NO SAH; HIT MADE HER WUSSER

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—A white woman named Mrs. Titmore was arraigned before Judge Beaners of the court of common pleas the other day on a charge of the larceny of a cow belonging to an aged negro woman named Adelaide Williams. The evidence was not sufficient to sustain the charge, but it revealed a state of facts that showed the credulence of the negro race in the efficiency of the "hoodoo."

The negro woman stated that she was the proud mother of a yellow girl of about seventeen years old that instead of staying at home the said offspring, as the old woman expressed it, went "er gallivantin' wid de boys." This behavior on the part of her daughter Sallie caused the old woman some "oneasiness" and she called on the white woman for assistance. The said assistance was immediately promised and a bargain was made that in the event the white woman succeeded in casting a spell on the wayward Sallie she was to receive the cow in payment.

According to the testimony of Adelaide the white woman fixed a powder and a bottle of liquid, which she gave to the girl with the injunction to place them in her trunk and the desire to roam would immediately vanish. The directions were carried out and the white woman took possession of the cow.

"Did the charm have the desired effect?" asked the prosecuting attorney.

"What you' mean?"

"Did the hoodoo keep Sallie from running around at night?"

"Keep dat chile from runnin' 'round at night? Lordy mae, no, sah; hit made her wusser."

Sallie was put on the stand to testify as to the effects of the charm and also stated very emphatically that it made her "wusser" and that since that medicine was in her trunk she had almost left home.

Boys' Tricks Force Action by Chicago Council

GUESS I'D BETTER BEAT IT

CHICAGO.—Mischievous small boys, through a recently acquired habit, are going to force the city council to amend the automobile ordinances to prevent the boys from adding to the city's automobile accidents.

Alderman James A. Kearns discovered the other day that the combination of an automobile, equipped with a self-starting engine, and a small boy was one which may cause trouble.

Instead of being content to walk up to a machine standing at a curb and "toot" the horn, boys have demonstrated the merits of self-starting devices for automobile engines by pushing a foot lever and letting the engine "run wild."

"There is no danger in this," said Alderman Kearns, "if some one is left to guard the car, or if the brakes are set. But just think what would happen if a small boy was to press the engine-starting device of a machine where the brakes are not set.

"Why, the machine is likely to start running in a crowded street and injure, or perhaps kill, several persons before it could be stopped. I am going to ask the city council to pass an amendment to the automobile ordinances requiring that all automobiles, whether or not they are equipped with self-starting devices, be made 'small boy proof.'"

The police department has the power to arrest any person other than the owner for tampering with an automobile. Alderman Kearns said, however, that it would take a small army of policemen to keep track of the mischievous acts of Chicago's thousands of small boys.

Jail's Trick Rat Returns After a Long Vacation

WE SURE DID MISS YOU JOSH-

CLEVELAND, O.—Joshua, the pale trained rat of the county jail, is back again. Joshua has not been seen since eighteen months ago, when he disappeared with a wooden-legged man, until the other morning. The return of the prodigal rat affected Jailer Bill Stoller deeply.

Stoller was sitting by the window in the jail office, watching the automobiles pass in the public square, when he felt a slight tug at his rear pocket, where he ordinarily keeps the fine cut.

Joshua immediately jumped to the desk, where he went through the intricate evolutions that have made him the marvel of the sheriff and his deputies.

The leave-taking of Joshua from the county jail was comparable only to the escape of a thief in the night. The rat, whose already pale complexion, due, doubtless, to long imprisonment, had become even paler, had been lingering around a wooden-legged man, awaiting grand jury action on a charge of robbing a cheese factory, for several days. The grand jury met and acquitted the man, in spite of the circumstantial evidence that the atmosphere in his presence gave.

Joshua doubtless figuring that where there was cheese in the air there might be food for him, slipped into the right-hand coat pocket of the man with the wooden leg. He then was seen no more at the jail until his mysterious return the other day.

"Josh, as we call Joshua for short, will come to the desk at 11 o'clock every morning, for his chew," said Stoller.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

NEW SCHEME FOR CO-OPERATIVE COLONIES

After seventy years of more or less profound slumber the co-operative colony idea has reawakened in this country. Groups of men and women, believers in the mission of co-operation to help solve the economic and social problems of our time, have been established in the suburbs of New York, Boston, Reading, Penn., and Los Angeles, and other groups are being established elsewhere. One of the colonies, at Westwood, Mass., is six years old and thriving mightily. The others have been in existence for two years or less, and might be considered still in the experimental stage. The New York enterprise was launched quite recently, and is obtaining a site in New Jersey within commuting distance of the metropolis. All these groups are organized on the same general principles and by a band of enthusiasts who call themselves the Fellowship Farms Founders' Association. The president of the association is George Elmer Littlefield, a small, ruddy faced, snowy haired man, with a poetic temperament, much energy and a talking style that is extremely magnetic. He is the founder of the Westwood colony, is a Harvard graduate, a practical printer and farmer, and was a minister of the gospel for fourteen years.

SENATOR GEORGE C. PERKINS TO RETIRE

The announcement a few days ago by Senator George C. Perkins that he will retire from public life brings to its close a remarkable career. Born on a little farm near Kennebunkport, Me., Mr. Perkins ran away from home when he was about 13 years old. He took to the sea, as a Maine boy naturally would, shipping as cabin boy on a ship at New Orleans and sailed the seas. In 1855 he shipped before the mast on the good ship Galatea, and sailing round the Horn, eventually landed in San Francisco. Here the gold fever seized him and he abandoned the sea for the mining camps. Fortune frowned for many a year, and he was glad to find work of any kind to earn his bread. He was a teamster, a miner, a storekeeper in rough mining camps, anything indeed that came to hand. At last he accumulated enough money to own his own team and he became a boss freighter.

Then fortune, tired of frowning, smiled and soon Mr. Perkins became a rich man, even as rich men were rated in California.

ITALIAN DIPLOMAT LAUDS OWN COUNTRY

Signor Gaston Del Frate, diplomat and noted member of the Italian bar, who recently spent a few days in America, being on a visit to his wife's relatives at Madison, Wis., told of the progress of the Italian war, of American influence in his country, and spoke of Italian art and literature and music. Old Italy has beaten the Turk, he said, and soon will come the settlement. Italian influence will increase. Italy and the United States will grow closer together. The art of Italy and increasing American appreciation of art will bring it about.

Signor Del Frate is legal adviser to the United States embassy in Rome. He has been legal adviser to the French and Russian legations. When J. Pierpont Morgan bought the site in Rome on which the American academy is now erecting a beautiful home and presented it to that organization, Signor Del Frate had charge of the matter.

The Italian-Turkish war, which has been so well censored as to battle reports, will not last much longer. Signor Del Frate believes, but its end will come, he said, not until questions that involve not only Italy, but also Montenegro, Bulgaria, Albania and other Balkan states have been considered. "We have financed the Italian war without levying special taxes or increasing existing taxes, which, for a Latin people who are naturally philosophers and artists, but not fundamentally financiers, is doing well," he said. "We sold some bonds, but they went at 4 per cent."

AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN AMBASSADOR RETIRES

Baron Hengelmuller von Hengervar, the Austrian ambassador to the United States, formally announced the other day that he has been granted leave to return to Austria. It is his intention not to return, but settle permanently in his own country, after being in the diplomatic service 44 years, 20 of which have been spent in the United States. He has made no plans further than to occupy his seat in the House of Lords.

Baron Hengelmuller said he had informed his own government and the American state department of his intention, adding that both he and his family are leaving the United States with feelings of the deepest regret.

Baron Hengelmuller has been the dean of the diplomatic corps at Washington. He was born in Pressburg, Hungary, about 55 years ago, and was educated in Vienna especially for the diplomatic service. A man of strong personality, the Baron has, during his long residence in Washington, gained recognition among all American officials with whom he has come in contact as a conscientious, painstaking diplomatist.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Feet Must Be Studied by Officers in the Army

WASHINGTON.—Army officers must become foot doctors and understand all the little twists and turns in chiropody if they obey an order just issued by the war department.

Soon the fastidious young West Pointer will be seen on his knees before the raw recruit explaining how best to harvest the corn or bunion with a razor. He will inspect the recruit's socks and have him wash his feet and put on clean ones.

All of which would make it appear that the next course in study to be listed at the national academy may be chiropody. In addition to the titles, like "U. S. A.," which the graduate places after his name, there will then be one "F. E." (foot expert), or "Ch. D." (doctor of chiropody).

For many years the army has employed expert blacksmiths to care for the horses' hoofs. Now the hoofs of the infantry will receive like attention.

"Company commanders will personally inspect the bare feet of their men before a march is undertaken," reads the order. "While on the march they will personally see each day that their men wash their feet as soon as possible after reaching camp, prick and evacuate blisters, dust the feet with foot powder supplied by the medical department, and put on clean socks."

By way of emphasizing the necessity for obeying this order, another clause says: "Hereafter an undue amount of foot injury and disability from shoes will be regarded as evidence of inefficiency on the part of the officers concerned as cause for investigation."

Rat Psychologists Trying to "Kid" Uncle Sam

THAT SMELLS GOOD BUT I HAVE MY SUSPICIONS CHEESE

ASSISTANT Surgeon General William Colby Rucker of the public health service announced Aug. 21 that he was searching for a new kind of rat trap, to be adopted as the official trap of the service in its war against the bubonic plague. He has now in his office 75 models for rat traps of many designs, together with about fifty drawings.

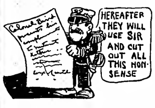
"Rat psychology has evidently been the subject of deep study on the part of inventors and would-be inventors who are trying to market their ideas in my office," said Dr. Rucker, "and the interesting thing is the wide divergence of the conclusions that have been reached. An Iowa student sent me the following suggestion:

"'Take an iron pot and place a rock in the middle. Fill the pot with water even with the top of the rock, so as to make the rock look like an island. Float a piece of cheese on the water. The rat will jump for the cheese and after falling in the water will climb on the island and scream for help. The entire rat family will rush to his aid, dive overboard to his rescue and then kill each other fighting for a foothold on the rock.'

"Many suggestions for electrocution outfits have been sent in, but all of these are of such complicated design and would cost so much to manufacture that they have no value for our purpose.

"The 'sneeze' trap is simplest in construction and least expensive of all the models which have been submitted. It consists of a pasteboard tube two inches in diameter, lined with cotton batting. A powder of cayenne pepper and snuff is sprinkled on the cotton and the tube placed over a rat hole. The inventor said the rat would sneeze himself to death when he poked his head out of his hole."

All Complimentary Verbiage Is Ordered Cut Out



HEREAFTER THEY WILL USE SIR AND CUT OUT ALL THIS NONSENSE
Colonel Bird presents his compliments

REFORM in the army correspondence is the latest development in Major General Leonard Wood's plan for increasing the efficiency of the fighting force. Under orders from "the top" the complimentary verbiage under which all communications between officers of the army and between those officers and the war department have been carried on have been ordered cut out.

Such army forms as "Colonel Smith presents his compliments to Lieutenant Jones," as the precursor of a simple request; the subscription, "I have the honor to be, yours with great respect;" repetitions of titles at the beginning and end of communications of a most trivial nature, will hereafter be eliminated.

The army correspondence forms date back to the days of the Colonial forces of King George III. Letters between army men, when official in their nature, use line after line of complimentary phraseology to put forward a ten-word request. General Wood started the pruning movement and when he got through with it nothing was left but the superscription "Sir" and the signature of the writer outside the message to be conveyed.

Along with the excess verbiage the army has also discarded the elaborate system of recording the business of the various branches of the service by means of lengthy letters detailing what might pass in the ordinary course of the day's work as business conversations.

"One does not have to be any more respectful to the chief of staff than he does to his 'striker' now," said a second lieutenant, fresh from Philippine duty, who recently was pitchforked into the department by reason of the newly applied operation of the detached army rule.

Car Fare Was Wanted by a Georgia Moonshiner

Y'WUZ?
I I WUZ RUNNIN' WAY FROM TH' REVNOO OFF'CERS

ARNOLD A. BLAYLOCK, twenty-eight years old, said to be the finest specimen of a genuine mountain moonshiner ever captured in the national capital, who was arrested the other night after he had surrendered himself at police headquarters and announced he was a fugitive from the "revnoo off'cers," was released when the police learned he is not a fugitive.

Blaylock's little scheme to trick the police into paying his railroad fare back to his farm in the mountains of White county, about 20 miles from Gainesville, Ga., was turned inside out by the police when they received word from Gainesville that Blaylock is not wanted there.

The moonshiner was arrested a few weeks ago for alleged illicit distilling, but he furnished $200 bond and is free to go and come until his case is called for trial in October. It remained for Blaylock to explain why he suddenly left his home.

Two years ago Blaylock sold 500 acres of land to Henry Gerrard, a British Columbian. Some weeks ago Blaylock's cows destroyed Gerrard's corn. Gerrard thought the destruction was "done apurpose." Then the "revenoo off'cers" came and "cut down Blaylock's still." The next day Gerrard's still was "cut down."

The following day, at a camp meeting, gossip said Blaylock had "reported Gerrard to the 'revnoo off'cers,'" and Blaylock says he traced the gossip to Henry Gerrard. "I went home and fetched mah gun, and I went over to see Gerrard. He said he didn't kyar to tarry and talk with me, and I'd just up with mah gun and allowed he bettah tarry a bit.

"Wal, some other bodies stepped in and I took 'er train up this away."

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - MINN.

SUBSTITUTES FOR BREAD.

In various parts of the world, the poorer classes consume little or no bread. Baked loaves of bread are practically unknown in portions of southern Austria and Italy, and throughout the agricultural districts of Roumania, says the London Standard. Austrians aver that in the village of Obersteirmark, not very far from Vienna, bread is never seen. The staple food is sterz, a kind of porridge made from ground beech nuts, taken at breakfast with fresh or curdled milk, at dinner with broth of fried lard, and at supper with milk. The dish is also called helden, and is substituted for bread, not only in the Austrian district mentioned, but in Carinthia and other parts of the Tyrol. Northern Italy offers a substitute for bread in the form of Polenta, which is a kind of porridge made of boiled grain. Polenta is not, however, allowed to granulate like Scotch porridge or the Austrian sterz. It is instead boiled into a solid pudding, which is cut up and portioned out with a string. It is eaten cold as often as it is hot, and is in every sense an Italian's daily bread. There is a variation of polenta called mamaliga, the favorite food of the poorest classes in Roumania. Mamaliga resembles polenta inasmuch as it is made of boiled grain, but it is unlike the former in one respect—the grains are not permitted to settle into a solid mass, but are kept distinct after the fashion of oatmeal porridge.

Some people do not like cats. That is up to them—probably they have a reason. Other people don't like dogs, and such also may be looked upon with charity. The other day, we are told, a dog with a broken chain came back to its Pittsburg home carrying in his mouth the trousers and cap of his 12-year-old master. The dumb brute thus attempted to notify the parents that the boy had been drowned. So the father of the family followed the dog back to the Allegheny river, where he found the rest of his son's clothing—and the rest of that dog's broken chain! The dog had not freed himself from that chain in time to rescue the boy, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. But the strong link, snapped in twain, showed that the brute had tried, superhumanly, to do so. That dog had not been in time to drag his little master out of the water—but the half of that little master's clothing in the dog's teeth showed how fiercers the struggle had been. Some people do not like cats. Others do not like dogs. But there are animals—for instance, dogs—that are likeable. They may not succeed in being human—but they try!

An old man arrested in Cincinnati on the charge of vagrancy told the judge when his case came to trial that he had a business which enabled him to make a living. "What is it?" asked the judge, and the old fellow answered, "Bleaching sparrows." Then he explained. He said he was in the habit of catching sparrows and painting them with peroxide of hydrogen, which changed the color of their feathers, so that he was able to sell them for canary birds. Perhaps he is not the only man in the world who is capable of this villainy. It may be wise for everyone purchasing canaries to adopt the precaution of hearing them sing before paying for them.

Kidney beans we have all heard of; "kidney feet" seem to be peculiar to Pittsburg, says the New York Sun. A physician there says Pittsburg is more blessed, or cursed, with them than any other town. Pittsburg men are flat-footed. We suppose the inhabitants of that city find it hard to stagger along under the weight of all the things that are said of poor Pittsburg, and the burden breaks down the arches of their insteps.

The "pushmobile," which has taken possession of Chicago all at once, is an ingenious device whereby a boy with an old pair of roller skates can make them cover 50 times as much space as heretofore on the cement sidewalks.

In the news columns of the papers appears a story about a Massachusetts girl who carried a live lizard in her stomach for a long time, and reading the dispatch reminds us that this is the first time that story has been printed this season.

A Chicago minister says there are not enough husbands to go around, and that old maids are heroines. But the name of this champion of abused spinsterhood will be lost when the name of its traducer is still alive enough to be anathema, for such is the way of the world.

The half-sister of an English duke is to appear as a dancer in New York. The peerage has certainly fallen on hard times.

POLICE ARE ON ROBBERS' TRAIL

ACCOUNT BOOK, BELONGING TO MEN WHO LOOTED CANADIAN BANK, IS FOUND.

SPENT $2,000 PER DAY.

Officials Seeking Members of Gang in Minneapolis, Omaha and South Dakota Cities.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—An account book with records of routes, expenditures and many names and addresses which the police are keeping secret, has been found by detectives here and is believed to contain clues to the robbers who looted the Bank of Montreal in New Westminster, B. C., of $272,000 and spent several weeks in Chicago negotiating under the noses of the police for disposal of the Canadian bills.

The book was found in the home of one of the witnesses to the assault on Police Lieutenant Burns when two of the robbers overpowered him and escaped. Some of the totals in the book for fares, meals and sundries footed up to more than $2,000 per day. Among the items were interspersed scraps of verse, toasts and epigrams.

Men Sought Everywhere.

Operatives of private detective agencies and police are now seeking members of the gang in Minneapolis, Omaha, Watertown and Aberdeen, S. D. and Kansas City.

James W. Stacey, alias Frank West, alias "Doc" Danzell, arrested on identification by his wife, is not a member of the gang that robbed the bank, but an agent for them, according to James Sidlas, the Greek saloonkeeper in whose place Lieutenant Burns was beaten.

Sidlas told of his attempts to dispose of $140,000 of the stolen bills. Sidlas said that he personally turned over the $10,000 given him to Chief of Police McWeeney on Sept. 18. The man who gave Sidlas the $10,000 still is at large, according to Sidlas, as is another who was with him when Sidlas was shown $140,000 in Canadian money.

A man known to the saloon keeper as "Big Charlie" conducted the negotiations for the exchange of the stolen money. Sidlas says he was offered a 10 per cent commission for exchanging the bills.

St. Louis Official Knows.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 30.—Other men implicated in the robbery of the New Westminster Bank of Canada, were in St. Louis when James W. Stacey, alias Frank West, was arrested here last week. Asher Rosseter, superintendent of a private detective agency, said:

The men fled southward, Rosseter says and he has their descriptions.

Lulu Wilson, the girl through whom Stacey was arrested, is in hiding in St. Louis, although her whereabouts is known to the local police.

In telling to the police her story of the attempt by Police Lieutenant Burns of Chicago, to arrest the two men in a cafe when she was holding them in conversation she says that, after Lieutenant Burns had been beaten into insensibility, Stacey's last words to her were:

"I'll get you yet, Lu."

Superintendent Rosseter says the robbers have $170,000 of the stolen money hidden in Chicago or vicinity. Stacey's lawyer says he will fight extradition.

ARMY MEN KILLED.

Officers Fall 35 Feet to Death at College Park Field, Maryland.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Two more lives were sacrificed to aviation at the United States army aviation field at College Park, Maryland, near here, when an army aeroplane suddenly fell 35 feet to the ground, instantly killing Corporal Frank S. Scott and so seriously injuring Second Lieutenant Lewis C. Rockwell that he died a few hours later.

Hundreds of people, including fellow army officers attached to the aviation school, breathlessly witnessed the tragic accident. When they reached the scene, Corporal Scott, was found dead several feet from the wrecked machine, while Lieutenant Rockwell was nearby, fatally injured. The lieutenant was picked up and rushed to the Walter Reid army hospital here, where he died.

OPPOSED TO INTERVENTION.

$60,000 Fire Near Beaudette, Minn.

Beaudette, Minn., Sept. 30.—The A. E. Engler Lumber Sawmill Co., located one mile north of Beaudette, was destroyed by fire. The loss is about $60,000, covered by insurance.

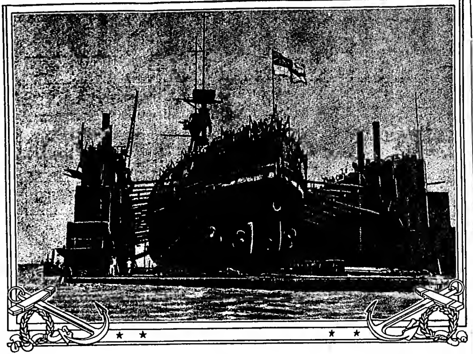
15,000 Cigar Makers Strike.

Manila, Sept. 30.—The cigar industry in Manila practically is suspended. Fifteen thousand men are out on a strike and less than 1,000 are at work. The cigar makers object to the scheme of governmental registration.

Fire Damages Summer Resort.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 30.—Fire at Hyland Park, a summer resort on the Red River, ten miles north of this city, did damage to the extent of $125,000.

ENGLAND'S GREAT FLOATING DOCK



THE British admiralty's enormous new floating dock, which is stationed at Sheerness, was put to the test the other day, when it had to lift the Dreadnought St. Vincent from the water, that the vessel's underwater fittings might be examined and her hull painted with anti-fouling composition. The raising of the battleship and placing her in position took only seven hours. The St. Vincent has a normal displacement of 19,250 tons, a length over all of 536 feet, and a beam of 84 feet. She represents rather over half the lifting power of the dock, whose total capacity is 32,000 tons.

ASKS EUROPE'S AID

AUSTRIA URGES POWERS TO INTERVENE TO PREVENT WAR IN BALKANS.

SCARE IS MENACE TO EUROPE

French Army Is Sent to Samos as Turkish Ship Fires on Greek Boat—Germany Fears Alliance Against the Porte.

Vienna, Sept. 27.—The Balkan situation has aroused the deepest anxiety in Austria. Emperor Francis Joseph has suggested an exchange of views between the powers on the important questions now at issue with respect to Bulgaria and Turkey, and Count Leopold von Berchthold, the Austrian foreign minister, in a statement to the foreign affairs committee of the Hungarian delegation on Wednesday made reference to the proposals he had submitted to the powers for an exchange of views. He said that the result was the unanimous co-operation of the powers and a pledge for the prevention of a violent solution of the Balkan crisis.

Athens, Sept. 27.—The Greek steamer Roumeli reports being fired on by the turks at Vathy on Wednesday. The Greek consul at Samos visited the Roumeli and the Turks riddled with bullets the boat in which he was returning ashore.

Perpignan, France, Sept. 27.—The French minister of war, M. Millerand, has ordered the Twenty-fourth regiment of Colonial infantry to be got in readiness to proceed to Crete and Samos.

ARBUCKLE HAD HUGE WEALTH

Trust Fee Had Made $30,000,000—Is Divided by Two Sisters.

New York, Sept. 28.—John Arbuckle, who died last March, left an estate of $29,613,344.66, according to the report made public on Thursday by Transfer Tax Appraiser Monahan of Kings county. The highest estimate that had been put upon the old-fashioned merchant's estate was $20,000,000. He had never organized the great concern of Arbuckle Bros. into a corporation. It was merely a copartnership. As his share represented only one-third of the firm's assets it is shown that the company today holds nearly $100,000,000 of property.

His two sisters, Christina Arbuckle of Brooklyn and Mrs. Catherine A. Jamison of Pittsburg, are his only surviving heirs. Each will inherit $14,806,672.33, which, added to their private fortunes, puts them in the class of America's wealthiest women.

The Arbuckle estate is the largest ever administered without a will in Kings county. The inheritance tax, which will go into the state treasury, is $1,158,433.78. The cost of appraisal approximates $150,000.

Wood on Inspection Tour.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of the United States army, came to Chicago to inspect Fort Sheridan and the army headquarters here, this being the first important stop in a country-wide inspection trip.

Zionists on Tour of West.

Waukegan, Ill., Sept. 28.—Wilbur Glenn Voliva, overseer of Zion City, and 18 of his chosen people started from the White Dove City on Friday for a tour of the western states.

Verdict in Ring Case.

Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 28.—John Parmentier's death was not caused from engaging in a boxing contest with "Kid" Lomax on December 26, 1910, according to a verdict of the jury.

115 DROWN IN CRASH

STEAMER SUNK IN COLLISION IN DWINA RIVER IN RUSSIA.

Vessels Collide in Fog—Of the 150 Passengers on the Ill-Fated Vessel Only 25 Are Saved.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 25.—One hundred and fifty persons were drowned in the Dwina river, following a collision between the steamer Obnoska and an unknown ship during a fog on Monday, according to dispatches received here.

There were 150 passengers on the Obnoska at the time of the disaster.

The dispatch says the vessels met in a fog and so quickly did the Obnoska settle that only thirty-five passengers and members of the crew were rescued.

The Dwina river is wide and swift where the collision occurred.

As the boats struck, passengers on the Obnoska rushed up on the decks. Many of the passengers were ignorant peasants and they struggled frantically with officers and sailors, who tried to marshal them in line for deberkation in the few life boats which were carried. Part of these boats had been wrecked in the collision and were useless.

As the first boat was loosened from its davits the big steamer listed and plunged to its grave.

Only a few passengers and sailors had opportunity to jump into the water and save their lives.

Boats from the steamer which hit the Obnoska picked up the few survivors.

MORGAN IS CALLED TO QUIZ

Senators Investigating Oil Gifts Summon Financier to Tell of Contributions.

New York, Sept. 28.—Telegrams were received on Thursday by J. P. Morgan, Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., Ormsby McHarg and W. W. Tegethoff from Chairman Clapp of the senate committee that is investigating campaign contributions, notifying them that the committee would expect them to be present when it resumes its hearings in Washington next Monday.

Subpoenas were served on the four named and several other prominent financiers and politicians in New York.

Mr. Morgan said last night that he was perfectly willing to testify, but that he could not go to Washington on Monday because of previous engagements.

THREE DIE AS WALLS FALL

Hotel Being Constructed in Kansas City, Mo., Collapses and Carries Workmen With It.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 27.—Three workmen were buried in the collapse of Walter Davis' new hotel under construction on Tenth street and The Paseo on Wednesday.

The contractor in charge of the work on the building was George Seldhoff. C. B. Sloan is the architect. The new hotel was to cost $200,000. It was to be five stories high.

The collapse is said to have been due to the overloading of the floors.

Slayer Shot to Death.

Salt Lake City, Sept. 28.—Harry Thorne was shot to death by executioners for the murder of George Fassell in a hold-up two years ago. The condemned man had been given the choice of shooting or hanging.

Democrats Need $750,000.

New York, Sept. 28.—The Democratic national committee needs $750,000 to defray expenses during the campaign. Henry Morgenthau, chairman of the finance committee, so declared in a statement.

TYPHOON KILLS 300

TERRIFIC STORM HOLDS SOUTHERN JAPAN IN ITS GRASP FOUR DAYS.

DAMAGE WILL BE ENORMOUS

Warships Are Tossed on the Rocks and Hundreds of Coasting and Fishing Boats Are Sunk—Thousands of Buildings Are Blown Down.

Tokyo, Sept. 28.—The southern coast of Japan was swept by a terrific typhoon on Monday. Three hundred persons have perished. This city has been cut off from the world for four days.

Wire communication with points east of Tokyo has just been restored, and it is believed that when the full extent of the disaster is known the death list will reach 500.

The torpedo boat destroyers Fubuki and Tachibena were driven on the rocks on the northern coast of Yokaichi and two other naval vessels were blown ashore. The entire crew of one of the destroyers was lost. Hundreds of naval coasting boats, fishing smacks and other small craft that ply between the numerous islands on the south coast and the mainland were sunk.

Practically all the telegraph wires leading in and out of the city were blown down and the disturbance off the coast was so great as to interrupt cable service.

Thousands of buildings were blown down or washed away by streams which were swollen out of their banks by the cloud-burst which accompanied the typhoon.

At Nagaya, capital of the prefecture of Aichi part of the city was destroyed and 20 persons were killed. Thousands there are homeless.

The island of Shikou was swept by the storm and tremendous damage done there. A score of fishing villages were devastated.

The prefecture of Osako also got the full force of the storm. Crops were totally destroyed throughout the agricultural district. It is estimated that the damage will aggregate $5,000,000. The government is taking relief measures and is sending supplies to the storm sufferers.

The steamer Kicko Maru has foundered at sea with all her passengers and crew in the typhoon. Government advices stated that at least 100,000 are homeless as a result of the great storm.

TELEGRAPHIC NOTES

Washington, Sept. 25.—The long wait of Porter Charlton for the final word as to whether he must return to Italy for the murder of his wife is drawing to an end. The Supreme court will take up Charlton's case October 14.

Janesville, Wis., Sept. 28.—E. L. Dwyer, who has made and lost several fortunes as a stock speculator, was found dead in the railroad yards here. It is believed he was murdered, as a bullet hole was discovered in his head.

Pair Kill Selves in Pact.

Richmond, Ind., Sept. 28.—William S. Johnson and Mrs. Roy C. Wyman committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid in the presence of Mrs. Johnson and Wyman. The two families had been friends for years.

Oil Counsel Is Ousted.

New York, Sept. 28.—Resenting the "objectionable conduct" of Robert W. Stewart, counsel for the Standard Oil interests in the Waters-Pierce-Standard Oil litigation, Commissioner A. L. Jacobs ordered his withdrawal.

EXILE FOR REBEL CHIEF

GEN. MENA OF NICARAGUA GIVES UP TO AMERICAN ADMIRAL.

Surrender of Leader Is Believed to Mean End of Revolution—City Faces a Famine.

Washington, Sept. 27.—General Mena, leader of the Nicaraguan revolutionists, is to be sent to Panama under guard of American sailors and marines. American Minister Weitzel reported to the state department that Rear Admiral Southerland had accepted the surrender of Mena and 700 followers at midnight September 24. His capture is taken to indicate the collapse of the revolution and his removal to Panama probably means exile.

Officials here believe General Mena requested that he be permitted to surrender to Admiral Southerland because of fear of summary action at the hands of the Nicaragua federals and the admiral doubtless thought it advisable to get the rebel leader out of the country as soon as possible.

Granada is completely under control of United States forces.

Bluefields, Nicaragua, Sept. 27.—Official confirmation was received here of the surrender of General Mena. This news is generally accepted as meaning the termination of the revolution.

MADERO IN PEACE MOVE

President of Mexico to Offer Amnesty to Rebels Who Lay Down Their Arms.

Mexico City, Sept. 27.—A new movement to obtain peace in northern Mexico was made on Wednesday when President Madero and his cabinet instructed the minister of war to offer amnesty to the followers of Pascual Orozco, the rebel leader.

Stringent measures, such as the government's recent suspension of constitutional guarantees and the execution of numerous rebels, failed to have the deterrent effect expected by the government.

President Madero has sent to congress a message requesting an appropriation of 20,000,000 pesos, or the authorization of a loan for that amount, to be used in conducting the campaign against the rebels. It is believed congress will either make the appropriation or authorize the loan.

WILSON WINS IN NEW JERSEY

Governor's Candidate for Senator Beats Former Incumbent of Office.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 27.—That Governor Wilson won a sweeping victory in the New Jersey primaries on Tuesday was evident on the returns which sifted into Democratic headquarters.

In his fight to prevent the nomination for United States senator of former Senator James Smith, Jr., Governor Wilson carried the state by a plurality of nearly, if not quite, 20,000, winning in every county except one—that one being Essex, the stronghold of the Smith forces. The total vote of the Democrats was about 70,000.

Returns from 511 of the 1,799 districts in the state gave Representative William Hughes, the Wilson candidate, 17,030 votes to 11,751 for Smith.

SCHOOL HEAD IS INDICTED

N. C. Dougherty of Peoria, Ill., Named in True Bills—Woman Sees Errors in Dream.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 25.—A young women's dream led to an investigation, the sum total of which is that Newton C. Dougherty, former head of the city schools here, may be brought to stand trial on indictments against him which were voted by the grand jury on Monday.

Fifteen indictments against Dougherty were returned by the grand jury, which has been in session three weeks. The true bill charges forgery. The embezzlement charge, which it was said the evidence found warranted, having become outlawed.

SENATORS TO QUIZ HILLES

Senate Committee Will Examine G. O. P. Chairman as to Campaign Moneys.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Senator Clapp received a letter from George W. Perkins on Tuesday asking that Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican national committee, be called before the senate committee investigating campaign expenditures to "testify fully as to his charge" that Colonel Roosevelt had "spent millions of dollars of Harvester trust money."

Senator Clapp stated that Mr. Hilles undoubtedly would be called before the committee, but would be examined not alone upon that reported statement, but upon the general subject of campaign contributions.

First Game in Gotham.

New York, Sept. 27.—The opening game of the world's baseball series will be held in this city on Tuesday, October 8. The games will alternate between here and Boston, one game in each city, until concluded.

Deny Rebellion Rumors.

New York, Sept. 27.—Rumors which have been current here of plans for a series of new revolutionary movements under the guidance of Castro in Venezuela, Zelaya in Nicaragua and Diaz in Mexico are denied.

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

OLD SORES CURED

Allen's Ulcerine Salve cures Chronic Ulcers, Bone Ulcers, Scrofulous Ulcers, Varicose Ulcers, Indolent Ulcers, Mercurial Ulcers, White Swelling, Milk Leg, Fever Sores, all old sores. By mail 50c. Booklet free. J. P. ALLEN, Dept. A6, St. Paul, Minn.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

One advertiser offers to send a dollar package free. It is the concentrated wisdom of the ages that no package worth a dollar is free.

A CURE FOR PILES.

Cole's Carbolisalve stops itching and pain—and cures piles. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

Raw Chickens.

Rose Pastor Phelps Stokes, in an address on behalf of a New York country week charity, told a quaint story.

"A little slum girl," she said, "stood for the first time in her life in a barnyard—a genuine, old-fashioned barnyard with its ricks, its lazy cows, its plows and harrows, and what-not.

"The slum child drank it all in delightedly, then gasped half to herself:

"'An' jest look at the chickens—all runnin' around raw!"—Washington Star.

Wanted a Bite.

Oh, yes; it was raining—had been all day. But they didn't mind that so much; you see, they were fishermen. All the same, they were trudging home, with weary steps and very weary-looking faces.

Their baskets were empty, and to be candid, they were in a very bad temper.

As they entered the little village a large dog ran at one of the party. The dog had a ferocious look, and was barking furiously. But the fisherman did not take much alarm at the animal. He just kicked it away carelessly.

"Aren't you afraid he'll go for you?" inquired another of the party, somewhat anxiously.

The one who had kicked at the dog looked at his companion in a sorrowful manner.

"I only wish he would!" he replied. "I'd chance almost anything to be able to go home and say I'd had a bite!"

HARD TO SEE.

Even When the Facts About Coffee are Plain.

It is curious how people will refuse to believe what one can clearly see.

Tell the average man or woman that the slow but cumulative poisonous effect of caffeine—the alkaloid in tea and coffee—tends to weaken the heart, upset the nervous system and cause indigestion, and they may laugh at you if they don't know the facts.

Prove it by science or by practical demonstration in the recovery of coffee drinkers from the above conditions, and a large per cent of the human family will shrug their shoulders, take some drugs and—keep on drinking coffee or tea.

"Coffee never agreed with me nor with several members of our household," writes a lady. "It enervates, depresses and creates a feeling of languor and heaviness. It was only by leaving off coffee and using Postum that we discovered the cause and way out of these ills.

"The only reason, I am sure, why Postum is not used altogether to the exclusion of ordinary coffee is, many persons do not know and do not seem willing to learn the facts and how to prepare this nutritious beverage. There's only one way—according to directions—boil it fully 15 minutes. Then it is delicious." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest. Adv.

SERIAL STORY

EXCUSE ME!

By Rupert Hughes

Novelized from the Comedy of the Same Name

ILLUSTRATED From Photographs of the Play as Produced By Henry W. Savage

Copyright, 1911, by H. K. Fly Co.

14

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Ira Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Mallory decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding hazing. Marjorie is distracted. Ira Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Anne Gattle, a fellow passenger. Mallory vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Mallory reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Mallory finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train. Mallory again makes an unsuccessful hunt for a preacher. Dr. Temple poses as a physician. Mrs. Temple is induced by Mrs. Wellington to smoke a cigar. Sight of preacher on a station platform raises Mallory's hopes, but he takes another train. Missing hand baggage compels the couple to borrow from passengers. Jimmie gets a cinder in his eye and Mrs. Jimmie gives first-aid. Coolness is then resumed. Still no clergyman. More borrowing. Dr. Temple puzzled by behavior of different couples.

CHAPTER XXIII—(Continued).

Mrs. Wellington glanced the same way, and a shriek of understanding burst from her. It sent the porter into a spasm of yah-yahs till he caught Ashton's eyes and saw murder in them. The porter fled to the platform and held the door fast, expecting to be lynched.

But Ashton dashed away in search of concealment and soap.

The porter remained on the platform for some time, planning to leap overboard and take his chances rather than fall into Ashton's hands, but at length, finding himself unpursued, he peered into the car and, seeing that Ashton had gone, he returned to his duties. He kept a close watch on Ashton, but on soberer thoughts Ashton had decided that the incident would best be consigned to silence and oblivion. But for all the rest of that day he kept rubbing his lips with his handkerchief.

The porter, noting that the train had swept into a granite gorge like an enormously magnified aisle in a made-up sleeping car, recognized the presence of Echo Canyon, and with it the entrance into Utah. He hastened to impart the tidings to Mr. Fosdick and held out his hand as he extended the information.

Fosdick could hardly believe that his twelve-hundred-mile exile was over.

"We're in Utah?" he exclaimed.

"Yassah," and the porter shoved his palm into view. Fosdick filled it with all his loose change, then whirled to his wife and cried:

"Edith! We are in Utah now! Embrace me!"

She flung herself into his arms with a gurgle of bliss. The other passengers gasped with amazement. This sort of thing was permissible enough in a tunnel, but in the full light of day—!

Fosdick, noting the sensation he had created, waved his hand reassuringly and called across his wife's shoulder:

"Don't be alarmed, ladies and gentlemen. She's my wife!" He added in a whisper meant for her ear alone: "At least till we get to Nevada!"

Then she whispered something in his ear and they hurried from the car. They left behind them a bewilderment that eclipsed the wonder of the Mallories. That couple spoke to each other at least during the day time. Here was a married pair that did not speak at all for two days and two nights and then made a sudden and public rush to each other's arms!

Dr. Temple summed up the general feeling when he said:

"I don't believe in witches, but if I did, I'd believe that this train is bewitched."

Later he decided that Fosdick was a Mormon elder and that Mrs. Fosdick was probably a twelfth or thirteenth spouse he was smuggling in from the east. The theory was not entirely false, for Fosdick was one of the many victims of the crazy-quilt of American divorce codes, though he was the most unwilling of polygamists. And Dr. Temple gave up his theory in despair the next morning when he found the Fosdicks still on the train, and once more keeping aloof from each other.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Train Butcher.

Mallory was dragging out a miserable existence with a companion who was neither maid, wife, nor widow and to whom he was neither bachelor, husband, nor relict.

They were suffering brain-fag from their one topic of conversation, and heart-fag from rapture deferred. Marjorie had pretended to take a nap and Mallory had pretended that he would leave her for her own sake. Their contradictory chains were beginning to gall.

Mallory sat in the smoking room, and threw aside a half-finished cigar. Life was indeed nauseous when tobacco turned rank on his lips. He watched without interest the stupendous scenery whirling past the train; granite ravines, infernal grotesques of architecture and diablerie, the Giant's Teapot, the Devil's Slide, the Pulpit Rock, the Hanging Rock, splashes of mineral color, as if titanic paint pots had been spilled or flung against the cliffs, sudden hushes of green pine-worlds, dreary graveyards of sand and sagebrush, mountain streams in frothing panics.

His jaded soul could not respond to any of these thrillers, the dime-novels and melodramatic third-acts of nature. But with the arrival of a train-boy, who had got on at Evanston with a batch of Salt Lake City newspapers, he woke a little.

The other men came trooping round, like sheep at a herd-boy's whistle or chickens when a pan of grain is brought into the yard. The train "butcher" had a nasal sing-song, but his strain might have been the Pied Piper's tune emptying Hamelin of its grown-ups. The charms of flirtation, matrimonial bliss and feminine beauty were forgotten, and the males flocked to the delights of stock-market reports, political or racing or dramatic or sporting or criminal news. Even Ashton braved the eyes of his fellow men for the luxury of burying his nose in a fresh paper.

"Papers, gents? Yes? No?" the train butcher chanted. "Salt Lake papers, Ogden papers, all the latest papers, comic papers, magazines, periodicals."

"Here, boy," said Ashton, snapping his fingers, "what's the latest New York paper?"

"Last Sat'day's."

"Six days old? I read that before I left New York. Well, give me that Salt Lake paper. It has yesterday's stock market, I suppose."

"Yes, sir." He passed over the sheet and made change, without abating his melody: "Papers, gents. Yes? No? Salt Lake pa—"

"Whash latesh from Chicago?" said Wellington.

"Monday's."

"I read that before—that breakfast league," laughed Little Jimmie. "Well, give me Salt Lake Bazoo. It has baseball news, I s'pose."

"Yes, sir," the butcher answered, and his tone grew reverent as he said: "The Giants won. Mr. Mattyson was pitching. Papers, gents, all the latest papers, magazines, periodicals."

Wedgewood extended a languid hand: "What's the latest issue of the London Times?"

"Never heard of it."

Wedgewood almost fainted, and returned to his Baedeker of the United States.

Dr. Temple summoned the lad: "I don't suppose you have the Ypsilanti Eagle?"

The butcher regarded him with pity, and sniffed: "I carry newspapers, not poultry."

"Well, give me the—" he saw a pink weekly of rather picturesque appearance, and the adventure attracted him. "I'll take this—also the Outlook." He folded the pink within the green, and entered into a new and startling world—a sort of journalistic slumming tour.

"Give me any old thing," said Mallory, and flung open an Ogden journal till he found the sporting page, where his eyes brightened. "By Jove, a ten-inning game! Matthewson in the box!"

"Mattie is most intelleckshal pitcher in the world," said Little Jimmie, and then everybody disappeared behind paper ramparts, while the butcher lingered to explain to the porter the details of the great event.

About this time, Marjorie, tired of her pretence at slumber, strolled into the observation car, glancing into the men's room, where she saw nothing but newspapers. Then Mrs. Wellington saw her, and smiled: "Come in and make yourself at home."

"Thanks," said Marjorie, bashfully, "I was looking for my—my—"

"Husband?"

"My dog."

"How is he this morning?"

"My dog?"

"Your husband."

"Oh, he's as well as could be expected."

"Where did you get that love of a waist?" Mrs. Wellington laughed.

"Mrs. Temple lent it to me. Isn't it sweet?"

"Exquisite! The latest Ypsilanti mode."

Marjorie, suffering almost more acutely from being badly frocked than from being duped in her matrimonial hopes, threw herself on Mrs. Wellington's mercy.

"I'm so unhappy in this. Couldn't you lend me or sell me something a little smarter?"

"I'd love to, my dear," said Mrs. Wellington, "but I left home on short notice myself. I shall need all my divorce trousseau in Reno. Otherwise—I—but here's your husband. You two ought to have some place to spoon. I'll leave you this whole room."

And she swept out, nodding to Mallory, who had divined Marjorie's presence, and felt the need of being near her, though he also felt the need of finishing the story of the great ball game. Husbandlike, he felt that he was conferring sufficient courtesy in throwing a casual smile across the top of the paper.

Marjorie studied his motley garb, and her own, and groaned:

"We're a sweet looking pair, aren't we?"

"Mr. and Miss Fit," said Mallory, from behind the paper.

"Oh, Harry, has your love grown cold?" she pleaded.

"Marjorie, how can you think such a thing?" still from behind the paper.

"Well, Mrs. Wellington said we ought to have some place to spoon, and she went away and left us, and—there you stand—and—"

This pierced even the baseball news, and he threw his arms around her with glow of devotion.

She snuggled closer, and cooed: "Aren't we having a nice long engagement? We've traveled a million miles, and the preacher isn't in sight yet. What have you been reading—wedding announcements?"

"No—I was reading about the most wonderful exhibition. Mattie was in the box—and in perfect form."

"Mattie?" Marjorie gasped uneasily.

"Mattie!" he raved, "and in perfect form."

And now the hidden serpent of jealousy, which promised to enliven their future, lifted its head for the first time, and Mallory caught his first glimpse of an unsuspected member of their household. Marjorie demanded with an ominous chill:

"And who's Mattie? Some former sweetheart of yours?"

"My dear," laughed Mallory.

But Marjorie was up and away, with apt temper: "So Mattie was in the box, was she? What is it to you, where she sits? You dare to read about her and rave over her perfect form, while you neglect your wife—or your—oh, what am I, anyway?"

Mallory stared at her in amazement. He was beginning to learn what ignorant heathen women are concerning so many of the gods and demi-gods of mankind. Then, with a tenderness he might not always show, he threw the paper down and took her in his arms: "You poor child. Mattie is a man—a pitcher—and you're the only woman I ever loved—and you are liable to be my wife any minute."

The explanation was sufficient, and she crawled into the shelter of his arm with little noises that served for apology, forgiveness and reconciliation. Then he made the mistake of mentioning the sickening topic of deferred hope:

"A minister's sure to get on at the next stop—or the next."

Marjorie's nerves were frayed by too much enduring, and it took only a word to set them jangling: "If you say minister to me again, I'll scream." Then she tried to control herself with a polite: "Where is the next stop?"

"Ogden."

"Where's that? On the map?"

"Well, it's in Utah."

"Utah!" she groaned. "They marry by wholesale there, and we can't even get a sample."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

SET THE PACE IN RECEPTIONS

Splendid Affair Given by United States Ambassador Guild Dazzled St. Petersburg Society.

The German and Russian newspapers bristle with reports concerning an official reception by the American ambassador at St. Petersburg, Curtis Guild, in the splendid palace he occupies, which was formerly the residence of Count Orloff Denison. Not even Ambassador Leishman, glittering at the kaiser's court, could have been more imposing. The ambassador had at his side a functionary from the imperial court, who presented the guests. The ambassador's wife was beautifully gowned.

The guests were announced by a servant from the imperial ministry, who wore a black suit of eighteenth century style, with a lace jabot.

Mrs. Guild was greatly fatigued, for she had to stand three hours with outstretched hand in order that it might be kissed by all the men, according to the Russian fashion.

In the great dining hall on the floor above, hung with pictures of the Orloffs of the last three centuries, was a surprise for the guests. Instead of the usual tables with servants serving champagne, there were models in ice of a Russian farm house and an American cottage, lit with incandescent lights, from which flowed fountains of champagne. The American cottage fountain bubbled with dry wine, while the Russian emitted a fruity variety.

Drew the Crowd.

It was the ambition of the proprietor of the moving picture show to get a record house that week. The first two nights he failed to get it. On the third night his unparalleled attractions were advertised thus through a megaphone at the hall door:

"Ladies and gentlemen: Every picture I shall show you tonight has cost the life of a film actor. In the bridge wrecking scene two men were drowned, in the railroad collision one man was crushed to death, and the jungle scene three men were fearfully mangled by wild beasts.

"Reprehensible tactics to mention those harrowing details," said the proprietors of other shows; nevertheless they achieved the manager's purpose, for the next day the house was packed at every performance.

Diver's Good Fortune.

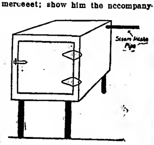
A native diver of Australia, while professionally engaged in exploring the submarine depths of the Torres Straits, not long ago, secured a magnificent pear shaped pearl, which was sold for $1,500.

KEEP DAIRY UTENSILS CLEAN

Home-Made Sterilizer May Be Put Together at Cost of Few Dollars—Directions Given.

If the dairyman is to keep his dairy utensils absolutely clean he must sterilize them daily. This is just as necessary in the small dairy as in the large one, writes F. L. Austin in the Country Gentleman. The dairymen who milks only a few cows cannot afford an expensive equipment in his dairy room. Many who do a profitable but modest business believe that a sterilizer is an expensive luxury. Such is not the case.

A home-made sterilizer may be made at a cost of not more than $7 or $8. Go to your local tinner or hardware merchant; show him the accompanying cut and tell him to make you a box three and a half feet square of galvanized iron, 28 gauge—a little heavier if he hasn't this. All joints should be riveted and soldered closely.



Home-Made Sterilizer.

This will make a steam-tight box, with the exception of the cracks about the door, and will hold enough steam pressure for all practical purposes in sterilizing.

The door should be not quite three feet square and should be cut to lap about an inch over all four sides of the opening. Ordinary heavy, double-strap hinges may be used, fastened with either bolts or rivets. A bolt and staple fastener holds the door shut. The steam may be piped into the top and one side as shown in the illustration. A few holes punched in the bottom will drain off the condensed steam. It should be turned on slowly at first, and then gradually be worked up to full force with 30 or 40 pounds of steam in the boiler. A thorough sterilization will be accomplished in from ten to fifteen minutes. The writer has used a sterilizer similar to this, which cost $7.50, and found it to be thoroughly efficient.

HANDY BARN DOOR FASTENER

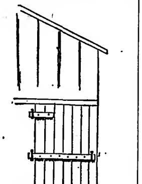
Contrivance Not Only Makes Door More Firm and Secure, but Makes It Safe Throughout.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

One of my neighbors has his stable door fastened with a very good hinge, one which many farmers would do well to copy. The door is fastened with a flat iron bar extending across the middle of the door and used for a third strap hinge. The iron bar is about three inches wide by three-eighths of an inch thick. It is bolted solidly to the door in several places, and is hung at one end as a hinge.

This not only makes the door more secure and firm on its hinges, but it makes it strong and safe throughout. A groove in the other end of the bar slips over a heavy iron staple when the door is shut, and is held in place with a half-inch iron pin or bolt.

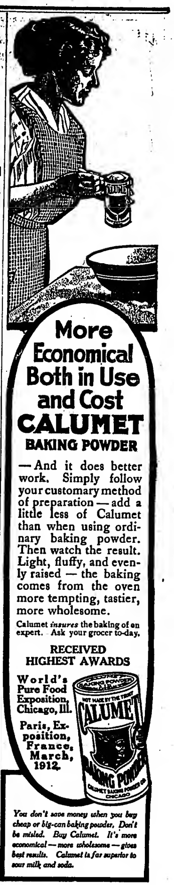
The broad iron strap, as a heavy reinforcement for the door, together with the heavy iron fastenings, make the door absolutely safe for the keeping of strong animals.



Hinged Iron Strap for Stable Door Safety.

Such a door is the kind to use for a jack, stallion, bull or any large animal that must be absolutely safely stabled at all times.

The hinged iron strap for a safe stable door is simple and easy in construction. An old tire from a wide-tired wagon would answer the purpose adequately, and any blacksmith could easily make it at a cost of perhaps not more than 25 or 30 cents.



More Economical Both in Use and Cost

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

—And it does better work. Simply follow your customary method of preparation—add a little less of Calumet than when using ordinary baking powder. Then watch the result. Light, fluffy, and evenly raised—the baking comes from the oven more tempting, tastier, more wholesome.

Calumet insures the baking of an expert. Ask your grocer to-day.

RECEIVED HIGHEST AWARDS

World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, Ill.

Paris, Exposition, France, March, 1912.

You don't save money when you buy cheap or big-can baking powder. Don't be misled. Buy Calumet. It's more economical—more wholesome—gives best results. Calumet is far superior to sour milk and soda.

Appointed Day of Judgment.

A horse dealer in an English town had lent a horse to a solicitor, who killed the animal through bad usage. The dealer insisted on payment, and the lawyer, refusing cash, said he would give a bill for the amount, but it must be at a long date. The lawyer drew a promissory note, making it payable on the day of judgment. An action was raised, and the lawyer asked the sheriff to look at the bill. Having done so, the sheriff replied: "This is the day of judgment. I decree you to pay tomorrow."

BABY IN MISERY WITH RASH

Monroe, Wis.—"When my baby was six weeks old there came a rash on his face which finally spread until it got nearly all over his body. It formed a crust on his head, hair fell out and the itch was terrible. When he would scratch the crust, the water would ooze out in big drops. On face and body it was in a dry form and would scale off. He was in great misery and at nights I would lie awake holding his hands so that he could not scratch and disfigure himself. I tried simple remedies at first, then got medicine, but it did no good.

"Finally a friend suggested Cuticura Remedies, so I sent for a sample to see what they would do, when to my surprise after a few applications I could see an improvement, and he would rest better. I bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap and before I had them half used my baby was cured. His head is now covered with a luxuriant growth of hair and his complexion is admired by everybody and has no disfigurements." (Signed) Mrs. Annie Saunders, Sept. 29, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

Many a fellow fails to hit the bull's eye in the big shoot because he has wasted all his ammunition in practice.

25 CTS. PISO'S REMEDY 25 CTS.

Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by Druggists.

FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879.

AS TO P.M. Rindahl.

The last issue of the Thief River Falls News Press, says that we do not know whereof we speak when we accuse P. M. Ringdal, the Democratic nominee for governor of being an atheist, and that our statement is "unqualifiedly untrue", Well now it might be alright to spring such a statement on a new comer from the old country, or a distant state but it don't go to call the Sunbeam Editor a liar when he knows he is telling the truth. We have been acquainted with P. M. Ringdal for twenty one years, and as a member of the Farmers Alliance and the People's Party from 1890 to 95 we associated with him considerably in a political way.

At the congressional convention at Crookston in 1892, P. M. Ringdal and the editor of this paper were on the committee of resolution and platform. On that committee of five there were two other athiests besides himself, and they forced a plank into that platform denying the right of anyone to esteem one day above the other and declaring that the world's f air at Chicago should be opened every day in the week. There was a young man from Crookston on that committee with us and we drew a minority report and submitted it to the convention, which was adapted and the offensive athiest plank stricken out. In 1894 P. M. Ringdal was elected to the state senate from Polk county and when the legislature convened, and they had the matter under consideration of appointing a chaplain, Mr, Ringdal moved the chairman "that the appointment of a chaplain be indefinitely postponed,"

But all of this was a number of years ago, and Mr. Ringdal may have changed his views.

Now in order to end this controversy at once and on short notice we make this proposition:

If P. M. Ringdal will sign the statement made by The Press "That he is a believer in an over ruling power and a Supreme Being". We will gladly publish it but until he does that the facts will stand before the readers of this paper as they have been published, that he is a disciple of Robert Engersoll, commonly called an athiest.

Wisconsin seems to be in advance of Minnesota for a political mix up this year,

McGoveran the Republican has indorsed Roosevelt. LaFollette has indorsed McGoveran for governor and is fighting Roosevelt, which makes a queer political mix up. LaFollette's power as a political leader will be at an end after the November elections, as Roosevelt will carry Wisconsin with a big majority.

P. V. Collins the nominee of the progressive republicans is at least entitled to the vote of every farmer who was opposed to Canadian Reciprocity, as he did more work fighting the passage of this law than any other man in the state. And he has kept up the fight against it, and is now circulating petitions to get signatures of the farmers to congress for it's repeal, before Canada takes a notion to accept Taft's generous offer, to allow their farm products free entrance into this country.

The article of P. P. P. published in another column hits the Eleven Towns Editor, where he lives regarding his support of Eberhart. Latimore knows as well as we do that Governor Eberhart is the man that is responsible for the loss of all the fish in Red Lake River last winter by being smothered by logs holding back the water. He knows also that the governor of this state had the power, through the game and fish commision to compel the lumber companies to open this river for the passage of fish. The Eleven Towns condemned the crooked actions of our officials last winter the same as we did, and the last issue of his paper before the primary election came out to retain men of this stamp io office. Is it any wonder that P. P. P. or any other man would condemn the honesty of any Editor that would do that? However the Brewing companies and lumber companies have lots of money, but gentleman they have not got enough to get the editor of this paper to support a dishonest man for governor of this state.

Fortunes in Faces.

There's often much truth in the saying "her face is her fortune." but its never said where pimples, skin eruptions blotches, or other blemishes disfigure it. Impure blood is back of them all, and shows the need of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They promote health and beauty. Try them. 25 cents at All Druggists.

Paid Advertising:

Allow me through the columns of your esteemed paper to extend to my neighbors and friends throughout the County my sincere thanks for their support and for the nomination tendered me at the Primary Election.

Knowing our teachers, the conditions in our schools and being in the work, it will be a source of pleasure to me serve the people, and to do my best for the upholding of our rural schools should I be favored with the election on Nov. 6th.

Fraternally,
E. A. Mostue.

Saved Leg Of Boy.

"It seemed that my 14-year old boy would have to lose his leg, on account of an ugly ulcer, caused by a bad bruise." wrote D.F. Howard, Aquone, N. C. "All remedies and doctors treatment failed till we tried Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and cured him with one box." Cures burns, boils, skin eruptions, piles. 25c at All Druggists.

Wilhlem Michelet

JUDGE OF PROBATE.

Non-Partisan Candidate for Re-election.

I Respectfully Solicit Your Vote and Support,

WILHELM MICHELET,
Thief River Falls, Minn.

Bungled It.

Old Maid—You eat very little, Mr. Smith. Smith (flattered and wishing to be complimentary)—Ah, to sit next you is to lose one's appetite.—London Watch Dog.

To be seventy years young is sometimes far more cheerful and hopeful than to be forty years old.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

His Protest.

Mrs. Benham—Before you married me you said that I was a [illegible]. Benham—Well, I no longer believe in a monarchical form of government.—Chicago News.

Cynic and Siren

The Cynic, who had been speaking earnestly for some moments, finally came to a stop and looked at the Siren expectantly.

"After all," she murmured dreamily, "what is love?"

"Love?" repeated the Cynic vaguely. "Oh, love—love is a concrete name given to many abstract emotions. Sometimes it's the frame, and sometimes it's the picture; and sometimes it's just—just a spasm round the heart."

"I'm afraid you really are a Cynic," said the Siren regretfully.

"A Cynic," said he gloomily, "is a man who knows everything, and understands nothing. Thank you."

The Siren looked dubious, but natural kindliness of disposition kept her silent. "How," she demanded presently, "can one be sure that one is in love?"

"That," sighed the Cynic, "is the eternal tragedy of life."

"That one can't be sure?"

"No, that one always is sure."

"I don't see that that's tragic," she protested.

"Ah, but it is. Though ignorance may be bliss, when it becomes knowledge it's tragedy."

"But knowledge," argued the Siren, "is happiness."

"A phrase," he sneered, "taught to cheerful fools by gloomy philosophers. The only wisdom is cheerfulness. A thing is what we think it."

"You're frightfully—what's the word?—enigmatical," said the Siren pathetically. "I wish you wouldn't be. You're so deep, it's like talking to a coal mine."

There was silence for a few moments.

"You haven't given me my answer yet," urged the man.

"I'm trying to think of it," answered the woman.

"If one only knew what love was!" said the Siren plaintively. "Does it lead to a union of hearts or a dissolution of marriage?"

"Neither," replied the Cynic. "Love is a footpath leading to everywhere; or, if you prefer it, it's a doorway leading to a house that's just as big as you think it is."

"For a beginner," said the Siren distrustfully, "you talk with a good deal of authority."

"Love," he explained, "differs in that respect from other sciences. We begin as experts and wind up as novices."

"You mean, then," said the Siren, to whom love was an art and not a science, "that you don't really know anything about love."

"On the contrary," said the Cynic patiently, "I have just been to some trouble to explain to you that I know everything."

"Hm," said the Siren doubtfully. "Well, let's take marriage."

"Had we got as far as marriage?" she broke off to inquire. "Well, anyhow, marriage is akin to love, and we'd got to that."

"Some people say marriage means taking from both and giving to neither; halving one's joys and doubling one's sorrows. Of course, that's the selfish point of view," she admitted.

"From any point of view," said the Cynic, "marriage is selfish. Both parties receive so much and give so little."

"They say," resumed the Siren reflectively, "that marriages are made in heaven; I'm afraid they're mostly made for export, though."

"On the contrary," objected the Cynic, "all true marriages are lived in heaven."

"But marriage is so—so definite," she said nervously; "one word, and snap—it's just a trap."

"Quite as often it's the bait."

"Do you think so? Why is it people do marry?"

"The modern girl," said the Cynic living up to his reputation, "appears to marry because she wants to learn how to cook; the young man because he's afraid of his landlady."

"No, but seriously."

"Seriously, the woman marries because she wants to be taken care of, and the man that he may have somebody to respect him. They are both doomed to disappointment; in a few months it's the man who gets taken care of, and the woman who gets the respect."

"Do you mean," demanded the Siren, "that a woman never respects her husband?"

"Not if she loves him."

"Not?" Her voice became almost shrill. "Not, did you say?"

"Yes. A woman may sometimes love, or sometimes respect her husband, but she can't do both. It is weakness we love, strength we only respect. It is one of the compensations of nature that the weakling should love everything in the scheme of life—except the one thing worth winning. The strong man may found a nation, but not a family; may decide a million hearts, but never one of his own. To one, the sweetness of defeat; to the other, the bitterness of victory."

There was silence for a moment.

"What is your answer?" said the man. "Will you marry me?"

"No—but I respect you," she faltered, her eyes dewy with regret.

"A woman should always [illegible] or love; it is her husband [illegible] love."

"Then—it's yes."

Saved By His Wife.

She's a wise woman who knows just what to do when her husband's life is in danger, but Mrs. R. J. Flint, Braintree, Vt., is of that kind. "She insisted on my using Dr. King's New Discovery," writes Mr. F. "for a dreadful cough, when I was so weak my friends all thought I had only a short time to live, and it completely cured me." A quick cure for coughs and colds, it's the most safe and reliable medicine for many throat and lung troubles—grip, bronchitis, croup, quinsy, tonsilitis, hemorrhages. A trial will convince you. 50cts.and $1.00. Guaranteed by All Druggists.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Sep. 20th. 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn: Sept. 9th, 1912

NOTICE is hereby given that Grace M. Pinkerton, of Torgerson Minn., who on May 15th, 1911, made homestead Entry. No. 06180 for S. E. ¼ Section 22, Township 154 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant. Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 2nd day of November, 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

A. T. Rice. of Germantown Minn. John Markuson, E. H. Besancon, of Torgerson Minn. F. H. Hay, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Sept. 20th. 1912

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 18th., 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Kittil Jordahaugen, of Germatown Minn., who on Nov. 1.1904. made Homestead Application No 797, Serial No. 04644, for N. W. ¼ Section 8 Towship 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian. has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before The Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn., on the 31st, day of October 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Torgel K. Hegtvedt, Gunder T. Skrotvat, Christoffer Vad, Leif T. Jordahaugen, all of Germantown Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin.
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Publication in the Sunbeam Sept. 20.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. September 18. 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Torgel K. Hegtvedt, of Germantown Minn., who on November 1st, 1904, made Homestead Application No. 795. Serial No. 04643, for Lots 6, 7, and E. ½ S. W. ¼ Section 6 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. on the 31st, day of October 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Leif T. Jordahaugen, Gunder T. Skratvat, Kittil T. Jordahaugen, Christoffer Vad, all, of Germantown. Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Oct. 4, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Sept. 30th. 1912.

Notice is hereby given, that Nels Thoreson. of Germantown Minn., who on May 15th. 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 06[illegible] for Lots 1. 2 & 3. ½ N. E. ¼ Section 1 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described before Wilhelm Michelet. U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 18th. day of November 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses

Martin Olson, Rubert Rambeck, John Graff, Carl Edseth, all of Germantown Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

A Log On The Track

of the fast express means serious trouble ahead if not removed, so does loss of appetite. It means lack of vitality, loss of strength and nerve weakness. If appetite fails, take Electric Bitters quickly to overcome the cause by toning up the stomach and curing the indigestion. Michael Hessheimer of Lincoln, Neb., had been sick over three years, but six bottles of Electric Bitters put him right on his feet again. They have helped thousands. They give pure blood, strong nerves, good digestion, Only 50 cts at All Druggists.

Reduced.

"I hear the Pudgerleighs are in greatly reduced circumstances."

"Are they? How did they lose their money?"

"Oh, they haven't lost their money. Mr. Pudgerleigh has had typhoid fever and is a mere walking skeleton and his wife has been trying a new anti-fat remedy which has brought her weight down nearly forty pounds."—Judge's Library.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH
HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show
GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROOERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER, Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9,40 a. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays. Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

Popular Jokes.

The most popular joke which has been published in any language in the history of the world is stated to be that which appeared in an early number of the Punch almanac for 1845. It reads: "Advice to persons about to marry—Don't!" It would be interesting to know who was its author. Another founded on a similar subject was the "Advice to persons about to marry—[illegible]" [illegible] that things that ever appeared in contemporary [illegible] between an [illegible] patient and [illegible]: "What is matter?" "Never mind." "What is mind?" "No matter."—Westminster Gazette.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGlun Block,
Thief River Falls.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns
For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one-hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

[illegible]

W.G.Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

We have a fine farm for sale in Deer Park township for only $21 per acre.

[illegible] and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof

[illegible] Clark reports that ditching and grading has been a "soft snap" this week.

The roads are reported to be very bad, and as usual when you get down near Thief River Falls, they get worse.

There are some of the farmers that are trying the Armstrong patent, cutting flax with a scythe.

Wm. Vaughn drove down to Thief River Falls last Sunday after a load of goods for their Highlanding store. The roads are so bad that the regular toasters have abandoned hauling and the only way to get anything out from town is to go after it.

The boys that are working on ditch 47 were out looking for ditching stakes last Sunday, but they will have to refer back to ancient history and the field notes to find any record of them, as this survey was made so many years ago that the stakes are about all rotted out.

The school attendance has been better this week and it will be much better this year than it was last.

The bad snow storm of last week done large amount of damages to the corn fodder, as it could not be cut before it was severely frozen.

Gunder Dalle started up his threshing machine yesterday on the farm of Clifford Shuetou, of Highlanding.

If the present fine weather continues, flax harvest and threshing will be in full blast next week.

The water is at a [illegible] stage along the line of Ditch 47 and there is now very little prospect that the ditch will be completed this fall.

Our county Attorney does not seem to want to have anything to do with the farmers side of these ditch contractors, but perhaps he is of the opinion that about all a farmer is good for is to pay taxes and vote.

Read the announcement of Wm Michelet, and the card of E. A. Mostue published in another column.

G. Svendson, of Hilda was transacting business here Monday.

We understand that the contractors are talking about putting an extra crew on the old setting dredge on ditch 47 so as to run nights. The more they root around with that old dredge the farther they get from completing the ditch according to contract.

Mail carrier Sigurdson feels justly proud over the fact that he has not missed a trip, owing to bad roads. Mr. Sigurdson and Ola Hemly, who has the contract to carry mail from Plummer to Lillo, have put in a good many years service as government mail carriers and have made a record of, "getting there" with that mail, which has placed them in the front [illegible] trusty mail carriers [illegible] Uncle Sam. When [illegible] let the contracts [illegible] usualy [illegible] time to an [illegible] a man that [illegible] a bid, [illegible] has a record of failures to [illegible] trips, but Sigurdson and [illegible] always [illegible] prompt reply, with a contract for four years more of that kind of service.

We extend our sympathy to the Eleven Towns Publishers for the failure of their [illegible] to arrive last week, [illegible] any complaints [illegible] their subscribers [illegible] from one who [illegible] four years [illegible]

[illegible]

P.P.P. ANSWERS.

The editor of the Eleven Towns is undoubtly a very good hand to misconstrue the meaning of different articles written by others. He states in his last issue, that he cannot believe that the Socialist will try to supplant the stars and stripes with the red flag. No they wont! He is absolutely correct on that point, and we don't believe he ever heard any "rock ribbed" Socialist make sport of the Demo or G.O.P party because the donk and Elephant were their emblems. He also says, "if a party having a just cause can not get justice under the flag of his country he should not have any." This would lead us to believe that the editor does not read many of the leading Periodicals, or does not understand the leading issues of the old parties.

If the people are getting justice under the flag of their country, why are the papers full of strikes and riot news, and why have the Socialist and progressive Republican parties demanding the recall of judges in their platforms?

The editor says: "The article written by P.P.P. does not change his opinion in the least." There is the point exactly! For we can't see why he would change his opinion so suddenly, and we don't like to see a good man like the editor throw his principals to the wind for so small a compensation, for we know if the editor will look up the files of the Eleven Towns and read the remarks he has made in opposition to the men he is now supporting. He would turn the mirror to the wall to obliterate his countenance in the future, for any man that tries to repeat the acrobatic stunts that the old parties and politicians are now doing he will have a hard time to keep his joints together as well as his principals.

In conclusion we wish to thank the editor for giving us credit for being the first person to say that the red flag stands for peace and plenty, and to prove my statement I wish to say, that the red flag stands for "United Brotherhood", and if we have brotherhood we will have peace and if we have peace we should have plenty.

P.P.P.

The lumber companies, backed up by that engineers outfit at St. Paul are holding possession of the Red Lake River for about fifteen miles out from Thief River Falls. Well let them hold it, as that will be a good argument to present to congress this winter to get the river declared unnavigable. No boat has been seen on this river this summer as the lumber companies convert it to their use, and want it to remain that way so they can control it, but what the people want is to have it declared unnavigable so they can get bridges across it and a north and south line of railroad can get a bridge across it.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE,
Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Pieces of Eight and Doubloons.

The pieces of eight and the doubloon are indissolubly united with the traditions of the Spanish main and the old buccaneers. Pieces of eight were more properly called piasters—from the Greek and Latin, [illegible], "a plaster;" in the Romance languages, "anything spread out as flat as a plate, a coin." The piece was silver and worth about $1. Being divided into eight silver reals, it was termed a piece of eight.

Doubloons were gold pieces, originally double the value of a pistole and formerly coined in Spain and Spanish America. The name is derived from the Spanish doblon, "double." Prior to 1848 the doubloon was worth $15.60 [illegible] that year [illegible] equivalent only to $5.00.

This column will be for the use of any of the candidates for office, who desire to make a statement to the voters over their own signature. It pays us to have you use it, but if you don't think it pays you don't use it.

Paid advertising.

Having received the nomination of the Public Ownership Party for candidate for County Commissioner of the 5th commissioner district, I will, if elected, consider myself at the service of the people and use all my efforts in the interests of the tax payers of Pennington County.

I earnestly solicit the support of the voters at the final election November 5th.

Respectfully
George Lamers.

Paid Advertisement.

I wish to thank my supporters for the republican nomination for County Treasurer, and also my opponent and his supporters for the clean, gentlemanly manner in which they conducted their campaign.

On account of my official duties I shall not be able to make much of a personal campaign for the November Election, but will do all I can for all the Republican nominees by the Primary last Tuesday, because they are all good men as far as I know, and were fairly nominated by our party.

I believe it would be bad for the country should our party be defeated, especially so far as Congress and Legislature are concerned.

Very Sincerely.
Andrew Trovaten.

LUNG DISEASE

"After four in our family had died of consumption I was taken with a frightful cough and lung trouble, but my life was saved and I gained 87 pounds through using

DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY

W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex.

PRICE 50c and $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

HOUSE KEEPER WANTED.

I desire to employ the services of a house keeper on my farm in the town of Kratka. Good conveniences and steady employment. Salary $4.00 a week and board. Call on or address,

John Quirk,
Highlanding Minn

Subscribe for The Sunbeam.

Pay up your back Subscription.

NATURAL FOR THEM TO SING

American Negroes Have the Instinct of Harmony Almost as the Birds Have It.

The American negroes are natural singers. Nature has "placed" their voices and given them a genius for improvising the alto, tenor and bass parts of their songs with emotional richness and perfect harmony. The American negroes, writes a contributor to the Craftsman, have what has been called the "harmonic ear." At Hampton institute, the industrial school for negroes and Indians in Virginia, a chorus of 800 negro students sings without accompaniment and in faultless pitch throughout an evening, chanting in the untaught harmonies peculiar to the negro the old plantation songs of the last generation.

Once, when I visited Hampton, a musician from Europe was present. He asked me who trained the chorus.

"Nobody trains the negroes," I said. "Their singing is natural."

"I don't mean who trains their voices or teaches them tone-production," he said. "I mean who teaches them their parts and trains them to sing together."

"Nobody, [illegible]"

"That is not possible," he said. "I have never heard finer choral singing."

"If you do not believe me," I replied, "ask Major Moton, the negro leader who starts the chorus in each song."

Major Moton answered as I did. The musician was amazed.

"How do you do it?" he asked.

"I don't know how we do it," the negro answered. "We just sing, that's all."—Youth's Companion.

An Accident.

"What did you cut off your dachshund's tail for?"

"It was an accident. The elevator started up before I had got quite all of him inside the door."—Chicago Tribune.

A Good Listener.

"Do you and your wife ever have words?" "She has. I never do."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Deduction.

Busby—Who was the lady who sat beside you at the theater the other evening? Smith—Why, that was my wife. Busby—Oh, I don't mean the one who sat on your right. I mean the one you talked with.

That Silk Gown

He was a son of the house. But he found her most alluring enough in her silk gowns of cotton, the badge of servitude pinned neatly in her hair.

Home for a long vacation, it pleased him to have some one close at hand fair enough to make pleasant love to. Stray half hours passed quickly so. The girls he met in his mother's drawing-room seemed to him strangely dull and colorless after cheeks as round and red as hers.

Now and again the folly of such a flirtation passed before his mind like a cloud before the sun. He had no intention of ever letting it become more than a flirtation. Sometimes he took himself to task for breaking a simple girl's heart. He was quite certain within himself that sooner or later he would break her heart. He would have been surprised had he known how little did she think of him.

True, the thoughts in her head buzzed busily as the bees among the wall flowers, but they had no connection with the holiday making son of the house.

Pretty red brown girls in subordinate positions are so used to being kissed that they may be forgiven for growing cold and indifferent to the givers of the kisses.

When, on her afternoons out, she met him walking with a girl whom it was common gossip he rather wanted to marry, it was shyness that made her dart suddenly behind the kindly protection of a hedge—not, as he thought, jealousy.

What she did think was that perhaps she might yet attain the long-deferred wish of her heart through him.

The next time he found her dusting an already dustless room, and flung a careless arm about her, she made bold to ask him.

He stared at her in astonishment.

"You want a silk gown?" he repeated after her. "Whatever for?"

She raised her eyes to his. So blue were they that he thought of warm June skies. "For Sundays," she faltered, "when Jim takes me out."

"And who may Jim be?" inquired the son of the house, frostily.

It was her turn to be astonished. Jim was her young man, of course, and she wanted to look nice when she went out with him. Jim thought a lot about clothes. And there wasn't a girl in the village who owned a silk dress.

He listened frowningly to her quick words. The pretty red-brown girl, it seemed, had no intention of breaking her heart over him. More, she was engaged to somebody else. A sense of annoyance rose suddenly in his breast—more, for the first time a sense of desire at the thought of losing her. He bent forward suddenly and touched her wrist.

"I'll give you all the silk gowns you want child," he said, "and anything else besides, if"—he looked into her eyes—"you'll give up Jim."

The hot color rose to her cheeks. She looked at him, then away. "Oh! but I couldn't, I couldn't," she protested.

He laughed annoyedly. "Be a sensible girl," he told her, "Better take the silk gowns, my dear; they will serve you better than a country clodhopper."

"I love Jim," she said, stolidly.

His will fought to crush hers. In earnest now, he told her what he would do for her, how he would take her to town, of the gay times they would have, of theaters, all the lures of the city.

She looked at him steadily, seeing, perhaps, in imagination all the splendid things a man like him could give. She was only a housemaid with a love for pretty clothes. For a moment she saw herself gorgeously, as a fashion plate in her favorite pattern book. For a moment she hesitated. Perhaps she saw instead a cottage and a child and love. Be that as it may, suddenly she turned away.

"I love Jim," she said again.

The son of the house was a sportsman. He knew when he was beaten. He sauntered carelessly to the door. When he reached it he paused and looked around.

"You shall have your silk gown, my dear," he called to her.

She wore it at her wedding three months afterwards.

Population of the Ocean.

A striking proof of the vastness and variety of the population of the sea is furnished by the results of explorations made by a committee of the zoological department of the British Association in that part of the Irish sea surrounding the Isle of Man.

Out of one thousand species of marine animals collected 224 never before had been found in that region, 33 were previously unknown as inhabitants of British waters and 17 were entirely new to science; indeed, they were animals whose existence had never been suspected.

Counsel Fees.

Georgia Lawyer (to colored prisoner)—Well, Ras, so you want me to defend you. Have you any money?

Rastus—No; but I've got a mule and a few chickens and a hog or two.

Lawyer—Those will do very nicely. Now, let's see; what do they accuse you of stealing?

Rastus—Oh, a mule and a few chickens and a hog or two.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.

NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Gibeau Vic. Pres.
Larry O'Niel, Abraham Parquine, T. L. Cruzon.
D. A. Duffy, Cashier. T. L. Cruzon, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Elsewhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 18 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. [illegible]

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

[illegible] All orders shipped same day [illegible] You do not pay a cent until you [illegible]

[illegible]

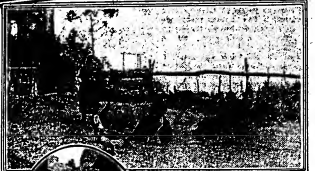
J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

JAPANESE HOME LIFE

"TOKAIDO" ROAD

CLEANING the ROOM



FEEDING CHICKENS

WASHING

THE duties and functions of the many departments of life in Japan are clearly defined and the general acquiescence in such definitions in a mark of orderly instinct rather than servility that it is ever ready to recognize its own inferiority. That the duties of women have been clearly indicated, that they show no disposition to overstep the boundaries assigned to them, is simply a manifestation of the spirit that pervades all classes. It is hardly a question of higher or lower, superior or inferior; it is a matter of duty— of "bushido."

Certainly the Japanese woman is not regarded as a handmaid. She has never been without her honorable position in the body politic, nor has the value of her peculiar duties ever been slighted. The duties of bushido are considered to be binding upon the woman as upon the man, and inasmuch as bushido means loyalty, so the woman must be loyal to her husband, as the man must be to the emperor and to the country. It is only those who are led by a false independence to revolt against all ideas of service who will criticise a ready acceptance by the women of Japan of a domestic sphere which is as important in its way as the larger service to the empire.

But the Samurai woman was not confined wholly to the household. She was even taught the use of arms, that she might help her father or her husband if the need should arise, and also that she might defend her own honor. Japanese history has many examples of women who became governors, who led military expeditions and who were famous in literature, art, education and religion. Indeed, the path to public honor has always been open to the Japanese woman, but it could be attained only by public service. There was only one standard of human value, and that was adhesion to the national interest. The woman who performed her whole duty to the home was as worthy of veneration as the man who performed his whole duty to the army and to the country.

There have been distinct feminine periods in the history of Japan. Such a period followed closely upon the introduction of Buddhism, which, with its incitements to charity, did much to stimulate what may be called a feminist movement. Such literary stars as Murasaki Shikilau and Sei Shonagan not only were the most famous authors of their time, but their works are still classics. The education of women was zealously fostered, and we hear of meetings at which women competed with one another in poetry, music and art. Works of charity became honorable duties, and we heart much of the Empress Komei, who distinguished herself by personal service to lepers.

But the feminist movement in Japan has attained its main successes since the restoration and the fall of the Shogunate. Many Japanese women have visited foreign countries, received a foreign education and returned to their own country to play the part of propagandists. The popular education of girls has made great strides, and even the extension of political suffrage to woman finds its advocates not only among women themselves, but among politicians and leaders of thought. But progress in this direction is likely to be slow. A society that has lately emerged from feudalism and that is accustomed to assign fixed duties to its various grades is not usually tolerant of innovations or efforts to enlarge the boundaries of particular classes. Buddism, moreover, is likely to play some part in retarding the political advance of women, and in confining her activities to the household, to practical charities and to religion.

Among the public institutions now managed by women may be mentioned the Nurse association, the Red Cross society, the Patriotic association, Fukuden—Kwai and Jkei—a hospital. Women are also interested in many productive industries and in art activities. There are also now women doctors, and the department of communications employs women officials. Physical culture for women is also being adopted with energy and this is a fitting sequel to the Samurai injunction that required women to regulate their emotions and suppress all those weaknesses that their western sisters usually attribute to nerves.

The Woman's university of Japan may be taken as an expression of Japanese ideas upon the question of education for women. It was founded by Mr. Marusa, who began his work thirty-six years ago, and who has been unresting in its advancement. The object of the university is to educate women to fulfill their duties toward the state and society and to become an influence in the life of the nation. The university contains 52 buildings, including a library of 11,500 volumes, a chemical laboratory and a lecture hall.

The curriculum begins with a kindergarten and there are departments for household science, literature, English and education, the first of these including mathematics, physics, chemistry and physiology. The university has 865 regular members, 141 associate members, 37 advisory members, 151 junior members and 11 honorary members. The following exhortation given to the students by Mr. Maruse leaves nothing to be desired for its amplitude and intent: "The students are enjoined to learn, ineffaceably impressed upon their minds, that they are to make it their chief aim and duty to cultivate and develop to the fullest extent all their faculties as well as their womanly virtues, and to remain faithful to the university, never forgetting to be and do good, study and to learn."

Much, of course, remains to be done for the advancement of women of Japan, but much has already been done. Japan has at least broken away from the ancient traditions of the east and has set her foot on the path that leads to the entire emancipation of women.

In 1878 Japan had a debt of $33,336,931. Thirty years later the debt had risen to $1,120,000,000. This immense increase was due mainly to the Chinese and Russian war, and a continuing expenditure on a large scale is necessitated by the national defense. In the year 1908 the army and navy cost $144,189,183. Between April 1, 1895, and March 1, 1909, the army cost $376,085,088 and the navy $313,443,440. The national defense has cost a total of $689,423,523 within fourteen years and this without counting the cost of the Russian war. Corea, Formosa and Manchuria have demanded heavy expenditures. A merchant marine has been established, many extensive public works undertaken, including railways, telegraphs and telephones, and all these things have been done by a country that contains only 26,000 square miles of arable soil.

Under such conditions it is easy to believe that taxation is the question of the day in Japan and has been so for many years. Since the outbreak of the Russian war the land tax has ranged from 3 per cent. to 17.5 per cent. The tax on liquors ranges from $5 per 40 gallons up to 17.40½ per 40 gallons, according to the percentage of alcohol.

Then comes the income tax, which is arranged upon a sort of graduated scale. Before the war the tax paid by "juridical" persons was 2½ per cent., but after the war an additional tax was levied equal to 80 per cent. up to 400 per cent. of the ordinary rate. An income tax of 2 per cent. was also levied on public loan funds and company debentures. All other persons not already assessed as above pay a rate in proportion to their income. Before the war those with an income of 300 yen ($150) per annum paid 1 per cent., and this increased according to the income up to 5½ per cent. Now the lowest income pays 10 per cent. and the highest 20.35 per cent. There are various exceptions, such as army and navy officers while engaged in war, widows, orphans, pensioners, etc. There is also a tax on textiles, an excise duty on sugar, and a substantial revenue from the post office. The customs tariff also is responsible for a substantial income amounting to about $22,000,000 a year. Mention should also be made of the state monopolies of tobacco, salt and camphor, worth about $25,000,000 a year.

Adachi Kinnosuki describes the willingness of the Japanese people to be taxed and their uncomplaining response to demands that are necessitated by the good of the country. His statement is so remarkable that it is worthy of quotation. He says:

"In 1895 we went to war with China. Our government wanted money, and wanted it badly. It let our people know about its needs in terms of war loans. To the first call the people answered by putting up $25,000,000. The government wanted more, and on the second call it succeeded in getting from the people $15,000,000—in all $40,000,000. The people gave this amount very willingly. That fact was very plain on the very face of it. It was widely advertised also. The thing that was not so well known, especially outside of the country, however, was that this was all that the people could do at the time—and a little more. Nine years later came the Russian war. Once more the government talked to the people in the unpleasant language of government loans. The people of Japan, however, apparently enjoyed this bitter talk. Indeed they became enthusiastic about it. Five times the government talked to the people and five times the people replied by giving up altogether $300,000,000. In addition to this amount we raised about $500,000,000 from foreign loans. As in the time of the Chinese war, the willingness of the people, their enthusiasm, their appreciation of the honor of emptying their pocketbooks for the state was the same. Ours is the Spartan ideal—no consideration for the individual, everything for the state. What was not exactly the same was that our people had a very much harder time in putting up the $40,000,000 at the time of the Chinese war than in surrendering $300,000,000 at the time of the Russian war."

The Japanese government is now carrying out a scheme for paying off the principal of the national debt. Prime Minister Katoura decided that the country must raise at least $25,- if this can be maintained Japan will have paid her war debts in less than thirty years.

But she will not find the task an easy one. She will have to call again upon a patriotism that has never failed her, but that cannot perform the impossible. It may be doubted if the taxes can be pushed any higher than they are now and even the most willing taxpayers cannot pay when they do not possess. The annual taxation now amounts to almost 16 yen ($8) and this is a very large sum indeed when we remember that the average earnings are very small. In 1904 an estimate was made of the monthly expenses of the average Japanese family of four, and it is probably fairly correct at the present time. It is as follows:

	Yen
House rent	0.75
Rice	3.25
Fuel and light	0.41
Vegetables	0.60
Fish	0.60
Soy and miso	0.23
Tobacco	0.25
Bath	0.26
Pin money	0.60
Hair cutting, etc	0.18
Sundries	2.37

The monthly income of this same family was estimated at 8.22 yen, leaving a deficit of 1.16 yen. Wages may have increased somewhat since the war, but there can be no doubt that the cost of living also has increased. An official report since the war gives the following as the mean wages of workmen in Japan:

Yen per day (1 Yen equal to 50 cents gold)

	Yen
Bricklayers	0.60
Printers	0.53
Silversmiths	0.45
Masons	0.50
Carpenters	0.70
Shoemakers	0.55
Blacksmiths	0.45
Weavers	0.38

Monthly wages in Tokyo are approximately as follows:

	Yen
Sake distillers	7.00
Men servants	3.32
Maid servants	3.92
Silkworm breeders	9.00
Raw silk weavers	6.55
Farm laborers	3.38

Millard says in his "Far Eastern Question" that several persons whom he has questioned estimate the average earnings of the average Japanese family of four in the lower classes at 150 yen ($80) annually, assuming that the children are old enough to work. None placed the figure higher than 200 yen annual income. Out of this amount the average Japanese pays 40 per cent. in taxes. That is a very high proportion, but the fiscal authorities seem to have no doubt that it can be maintained, and probably even raised.

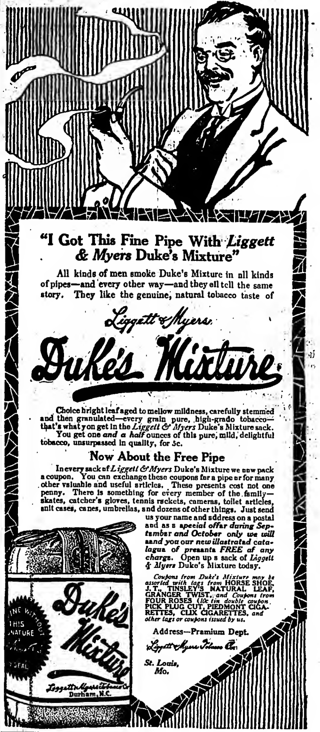
It seems impossible to economize except by a reduction of the expenditure for armaments, and there seems to be little chance for that. Armaments on their present scale are considered to be absolutely necessary to the preservation of the national life, and as a Japanese writer recently remarked: "Of what use is it to economize the nation's finances at the cost of national destruction?"

In 1907 there were 2,236 banks in Japan, with a total capitalization of 579,628,220 yen and which showed a balance in deposits of 1,830,593,270 yen. Their earnings in 1906 were 208,445,599 yen and they paid dividends at the rate of 9.6 per cent.

Superfluous Question.

"Is your wife superstitious?"

"My dear sir, my wife is a woman."



"I Got This Fine Pipe With Liggett & Myers Duke's Mixture"

All kinds of men smoke Duke's Mixture in all kinds of pipes—and every other way—and they all tell the same story. They like the genuine, natural tobacco taste of

Liggett & Myers Duke's Mixture

Choice bright leaf aged to mellow mildness, carefully stemmed and then granulated—every grain pure, high-grade tobacco—that's what you get in the Liggett & Myers Duke's Mixture sack. You get one and a half ounces of this pure, mild, delightful tobacco, unsurpassed in quality, for 5c.

Now About the Free Pipe

In every sack of Liggett & Myers Duke's Mixture we now pack a coupon. You can exchange these coupons for a pipe or for many other valuable and useful articles. These presents cost not one penny. There is something for every member of the family—skates, catcher's gloves, tennis rackets, cameras, toilet articles, suit cases, canes, umbrellas, and dozens of other things. Just send us your name and address on a postal and as a special offer during September and October only we will send you our new illustrated catalogue of presents FREE of any charge. Open up a sack of Liggett & Myers Duke's Mixture today.

Coupons from Duke's Mixture may be assorted with tags from HORSE SHOE, J. T., TINSLEY'S NATURAL LEAF, GRANGER TWIST, and Coupons from FOUR ROSES (10c tin double coupon), PICK PLUG CUT, PIEDMONT CIGARETTES, CLIX CIGARETTES, and other tags or coupons issued by us.

Address—Premium Dept.
Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.
St. Louis,
Mo.

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

$3.00 $3.50 $4.00 $4.50 AND $5.00

FOR MEN AND WOMEN

Boys wear W. L. Douglas $2.00, $2.50 & $3.00 School Shoes, because one pair will positively outwear two pairs of ordinary shoes, same as the men's shoes.

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more $3.00, $3.50 & $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS.

The workmanship which has made W. L. Douglas shoes famous the world over is maintained in every pair.

Ask your dealer to show you W. L. Douglas latest fashions for fall and winter wear, notice the short vamps which make the foot look smaller, points in a shoe particularly desired by young men. Also the conservative styles which have made W. L. Douglas shoes a household word everywhere.

If you could visit W. L. Douglas large factories at Brockton, Mass., and see for yourself how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they are warranted to fit better, look better, hold their shape and wear longer than any other make for the price. Fast Color Eyelets.

CAUTION.—To protect you against inferior shoes, W. L. Douglas stamps his name on the bottom. Look for the stamp. Beware of substitutes. W. L. Douglas shoes are sold in 76 own stores and shoe dealers everywhere. No matter where you live, they are within your reach. If your dealer cannot supply you, write direct to factory for catalog showing how to order by mail. Shoes sent everywhere, delivery charges prepaid. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

Point for Sherlock Holmes.

Somebody wondered how long a certain woman who had just left the room had been married.

"About 15 years," said the jeweler.

"How do you know?" asked the jeweler's wife. "You never saw her until tonight."

"I can tell by the size of her wedding ring," he replied. "The width of wedding rings changes about every five years. The kind she wears was in style 15 years ago."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

The Language.

"I'm going to whip that child."

"No, you're not! It's my child. Now, beat it!"

CURES BURNS AND CUTS.

Cole's Carbolisalve stops the pain instantly. Cures quick. No scar. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

One occasionally meets a man who gives a direct answer in reply to a simple question. But most of them want to make a speech.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle. Adv.

Many a woman would be willing to trade a million-dollar husband for a ten-thousand-a-year alimony.

WISE BOY.

Farmer—See here, boy, what yer doin' up that tree?

Boy—One of your years fell off the tree an' I'm tryin' to put it back.

Why He Sorrowed.

"And then Nero had Rome set afire in every quarter."

"Alas, how terrible!" murmured little Moritz, with an expression of such deep anguish that his teacher asked why it effected him so much.

"Why," said Moritz, "just think of the poor insurance companies!"—Fliegende Blaetter.

When a man does get even with another he is never satisfied until he gets a little more so.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

For Headache Nervousness and Backache due to disorders of Kidneys and Bladder

PROMINENT G. A. R. MAN DIES.

JUDGE LOREN W. COLLINS

JUDGE COLLINS PASSES AWAY

WAS ON THE MINNESOTA SUPREME BENCH FOR SEVENTEEN YEARS.

PROMINENT IN WAR TIME

Man of National Note in G. A. R. Circles—Stricken Returning From Meet at Los Angeles.

Minneapolis.—Judge Loren W. Collins, who had resigned as a justice of the Minnesota state supreme court in 1904 after seventeen years' service and who was one of the best-known members of the Minnesota bar and a man of national note in G. A. R. matters, is dead at his home here, following an attack of heart trouble with which he was seized at San Francisco, Sept. 18, while returning home from the national encampment of the G. A. R. at Los Angeles.

Judge Collins was 74 years of age and had been a leading figure in Minnesota public life for many years. He was a candidate for the republican nomination for governor in 1904. He declined an appointment to the United States senate to succeed the late C. K. Davis. Before his appointment to the supreme bench he served as district judge in the seventh district. He was mayor of St. Cloud, Minn., for four years and was a member of the legislature thirty years ago. He had a notable record in the civil war. He enlisted as a private in the Seventh Minnesota volunteers and came out of the army a brevet captain at the close of the war. He served as military chief-of-police of St. Louis during the troublous times when the Missouri metropolis was under military rule.

G. A. R. Leader Many Years.

Judge Collins had been for many years active in the affairs of the Loyal Legion and G. A. R. From June, 1908, to June, 1909, he was commander of the state G. A. R. and at the time of his death he was a member of the national executive committee of the G. A. R., a body of seven men that guides the commander-in-chief in his duties, and had served on the committee under six commanders-in-chief.

In this capacity he took an important part in the work of the recent national encampment at Los Angeles. He left Minneapolis for the coast city Sept. 2 with former Commander-in-chief Eli Torrance and other leading Grand Army men of Minnesota. On his way home he visited San Francisco, and it was there that he was stricken on Sept. 18 with the heart attack which ultimately proved fatal.

Judge Collins had a similar attack of illness in January, 1911. At that time his life was despaired of, but a rugged constitution, iron will and good care enabled him to resume his business in apparently good health.

Judge Collins married Ella M. Stewert at Berlin, Wis., Sept. 4, 1878. His wife died in 1894.

Was 74 Years Old.

Judge Collins was born Aug. 7, 1838, at Lowell, Mass., and was able to trace his ancestry back to the beginnings of New England. In 1854 his father moved with his family to Eden Prairie, Minn. The young man for a time was a school teacher. He began to study law in 1859, and in 1861 enlisted in Company F, Seventh Minnesota volunteers. Until the fall of 1863 the regiment took part in the Minnesota Indian campaigns and then was ordered south, where Judge Collins saw service in the battles of Nashville, Spanish Fort, Tupelo and others.

FORCED TO LISTEN.

Erhard Couple Have Strange Experience.

Fergus Falls.—To lie for nearly two hours listening to burglars at work in the room below them, and to await the explosion of a charge of dynamite that might have wrecked the building, was the experience of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Grellong, who reside in Erhard, a small village just north of this city. Grellong is the Erhard buttermaker and he and his wife have rooms over Solum's store.

Shortly after midnight, Mrs. Grellong was awakened by someone breaking a window in their rear rooms. A few minutes later she heard men prying open the front door of the store below. She awakened her husband, and they concluded that the burglars had stationed someone there to see that they did not give the alarm, and had then begun work downstairs. As Mr. Grellong was without weapons, they thought it best to lie still.

Grellong has a private telephone to Solum's residence, and he called him up and told him what had happened. While Solum was answering the phone one of the members of his family called down to him, from upstairs, and he rejoined "keep still up there." Grellong thought a burglar was answering the telephone and telling him to keep still, and he dropped the phone and remained quietly in his rooms until morning. Mr. Solum thought someone had called him up for a joke, and did not investigate. There is no clue to the burglars.

SEEKS RECONCILIATION.

Hagen Would Return to Wife and Children.

St. Louis, Sept. 27.—Ole Hagen, a lumber clerk who disappeared from Wells, Minn., 11 years ago, after insuring his life for $11,000, has retained J. E. Styles, postmaster at Wells, in the capacity of matchmaker.

Hagen wants to go back to Wells and rejoin his wife and three children, the youngest of whom was born after his disappearance. Hagen and Postmaster Styles had a talk Tuesday in Louisiana, Mo., where the Minnesota postmaster positively identified him as the missing lumber clerk.

Postmaster Styles and Hagen are old friends, having been fellow members of the Odd Fellows lodge at Wells. Styles wanted Hagen to return. He told Hagen that Mrs. Hagen could be induced in time to consent to a reconciliation.

Hagen announced his hope that the postmaster was right. He has left the West, presumably for Kansas City, where he will await letters from the postmaster.

SCHOOLS ARE CROWDED.

Proposition to Build $125,000 Building to Be Voted Upon.

Faribault.—A mass meeting of citizens was held and the board of education instructed to proceed to submit to a vote the question of issuing bonds to the amount of $125,000 for the erection of a new school building. The high school has become so crowded that three pupils are compelled to sit in a seat intended for two. A private residence has been rented for school purposes.

Water Carnival at Fair.

Willmar.—The first fair under the auspices of the Kandiyohi County association was held in this city last week. The fair was a success in every way, good crowds attending each afternoon and evening, although bad weather on Saturday kept down the attendance. Most of the exhibits were placed in the auditorium, and were the best that have ever been shown in the county. One of the features was the booth which represented Kandiyohi county at the state fair. There were free attractions.

OPPOSE SOCIALISM.

Christian Social Reform Is Urged by Societies at Mankato.

Mankato.—The sixteenth annual meeting of the German Catholic societies of Minnesota closed and the thirty-fourth annual gathering of the delegates of the insurance societies of the church in Minnesota and the Dakotas opened following.

The Staatsverbandes elected officers as follows: Paul Ahles, St. Cloud, president; W. Eibner, New Ulm, financial secretary; Frank Junghnuet, St. Paul, recording secretary; Martin Weiser, Mankato, treasurer; M. Weisskopf, St. Paul, marshal; George Stelzle, Minneapolis; Frank Strup, St. Paul; Rev. P. Weisner, St. Paul; George Gerlach, St. Paul, and Max Wurst, Wabasha, executive committee.

Delegates to the next national convention: George Stelzle, Minneapolis; Rev. Alf Meyer, St. Cloud; John Juenemann, St. Paul; Rev. H. Smeline, Faribault; J. Wolkersdorfer, St. Paul; Rev. Mr. Hertmeee, Mankato; William Eibner, New Ulm; Max Wurst, Wabasha; Jos. Melt, St. Paul; George N. Gerlich, St. Paul.

Resolutions were adopted declaring for the independence of the pope; for the Christian family as opposed to modern ideas of matrimony, and against the divorce evil; favoring Christian education in parochial schools and admonishing parents to give their boys a chance to acquire a higher education where possible, and proposing scholarships for talented poor boys; favoring the use of the German language as much as possible, especially in the family; deploring the tendency to sensationalism and atheism and the indifference of the daily press, and recommending the support of a clean press and pure reading matter in the homes, and expressing a hope that a day may come when a Catholic daily paper in the English language will be published in America; opposing every secret society that has a ritual chaplain and is under oath not to divulge proceedings; recommending lecture courses in parishes, especially with a stereopticon, as a means of combatting immoral shows; favoring Sunday rest for employees in stores and advising the members to do their shopping Saturdays and especially admonishing them to do their Christmas shopping early, so that stores may be closed Christmas eve; opposing socialism, but favoring Christian social reform.

The matter of President Taft's order concerning the wearing of religious garb in government Indian schools was referred to the executive committee. Retiring President Kemp was chosen honorary president.

AGED WOMAN IN COURT.

Mrs. C. Weldman of Wisconsin Accused of Killing Husband.

Winona.—A special jury has just been selected to hear the case of Mrs. Charles Weldman, the aged widow, charged with the murder of her 70-year-old husband in the cellar at their home at Independence, Wis., last April. The trial is being held before Judge Higbee of La Crosse in the circuit court at Whitehall, county seat of Trempealeau county.

Attorney O. P. Gilman, representing the state, outlined the case for the prosecution. He said the state would show that Weldman was decoyed into the cellar by the widow, there beaten to death and dragged to the bottom of the stairway. After the execution of the deed, he said the state would show that the woman had hid her bloody garments in the stove, changed her clothes and spread the alarm. The motive, he said, was to secure the $2,000 life insurance carried by the aged man.

STRIKERS UPHELD.

Judge Refuses to Grant Writ Restraining Picketing.

Duluth, Minn. — By refusing to grant a writ restraining the striking street railway men from picketing the barns of the street car company, Judge Homer B. Dibell upheld the right of the strikers to use all peaceable means to dissuade others from working.

The grievances set forth by the company were that the defendants had trespassed on the company's property, had interferred with the operation of the cars, threatened the employes and crippled the service by cutting wires and placing obstructions upon the tracks.

Judge Dibell in his findings said:

"The evidence shows that there was much disorder, but that the defendants were not the cause thereof."

The strike situation throughout Duluth and Superior is quiet.

Drifts Three Feet Deep.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Sept. 27.—The snow here was accompanied by a high northwest wind, and a conductor on the local branch of the Northern Pacific road said that he saw drifts three feet deep on the prairies to the westward.

New Pipe Organ Dedicated.

St. Peter.—Parishioners of St. Peter's Catholic church dedicated their new pipe organ with a sacred concert. Within the year they have completed the erection of a church costing $45,000, and the women of the parish furnished it with a pipe organ costing $2,500. The principal contributor to the organ fund was Andrew Carnegie, the New York philanthropist, who gave $1,250. Among the vocal soloists at the sacred concert were Mrs. Tenie Murphy Sheehan of St. Paul and Miss Laura Luisdorff of Mankato.

A BLESSING IN DISGUISE

Nervous Breakdown Is a Warning That You Must Heed to Avoid Something Worse.

Nervous exhaustion, or breakdown of the nerves, is more often a blessing than anything else. The nerves have rebelled and you should be thankful it is no worse than it is. Let it serve as a sharp warning to relieve the strain and to take a treatment that will build up your nerves.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are a real nerve tonic. They supply plenty of nourishing red blood to the exhausted nerves and do not excite and urge them on to do work which they have already shown they cannot do. Medicines which whip on the tired nerves do more harm than no medicine at all. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People not only start in immediately to give relief but continue to strengthen the nerves until they are able to do their work once more.

Mrs. J. E. Udelle, whose address is Box 130, R. F. D. No. 1, Osseo, Minn., says: "I was so completely worn out from overwork and nervousness that I was unable to continue at my work as dressmaker. I was very weak and my back ached continually. My stomach was so weak that I could eat nothing but light food and even then I would have pains like cramps. Gas formed on my stomach. I was short of breath and had palpitation of the heart. I was in bed for three months. At Davenport, Iowa, I was under doctors' care but received only temporary relief so gave it up. I then used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. When I began using the pills I had no strength at all and had lost a great deal in weight. I did not have to take the pills long before I felt better. I gave the pills a fair trial and was entirely cured."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are guaranteed to be free from any harmful or habit-forming drugs. They have given the most gratifying results in nervous headaches, neuralgia, nervous dyspepsia, St. Vitus' dance, and even in partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia. Write for the free booklet, "Diseases of the Nervous System."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Adv.

Rudely Interrupted.

"This is the parting of the ways—"

"Who left the switch open?"

EVIDENTLY OUT OF PLACE

Indignant Frenchman Had Some Fault to Find With Postmaster and Said So.

A Frenchman with a name spelled a la Paris and pronounced something a la Paris and pronounced something like Ca-choo had never learned to read or write, but he managed to disguise the fact pretty well until he moved to a new community where the name was not common. Going to the postoffice one morning he inquired:

"Got any mail for Joe Ca-choo?"

"What's the name?" inquired the clerk.

"Ca-choo, Joe Ca-choo."

"How do you spell it?"

"Can't you spell Joe Ca-choo?"

"No," said the clerk, "I never heard it before."

Then the disgust of the Frenchman, which had been constantly rising, boiled over and he snorted:

"Well, if you can't spell, why don't you sell your old postoffice to someone that can?"

MIGHT.

Mr. Collier Down—This chicken is tough.

Mrs. Collier Down—But the dealer assured me that it was tender. He wouldn't tell a lie for a mere chicken.

Mr. Collier Down—But he might for an old hen.

Not Successful.

Mrs. Knicker—Why don't you go to the market yourself?

Mrs. Bocker—No, indeed; that's just the way Jack told me he lost his money.

BACKACHE A SIGNAL OF DISTRESS

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

Pain in the back is the kidney's signal of distress. If this timely warning is ignored, there is grave danger of dropsy, gravel, uric poisoning, or Bright's disease.

When you have reason to suspect your kidneys, use a special kidney medicine.

Doan's Kidney Pills relieve weak, congested kidneys—cure backache—regulate the urine. Good proof in the following statement.

CONVINCING TESTIMONY

George L. Cotter, Elm St., Damariscotta, Me., says: "Two years ago I suffered from kidney trouble. My back was often so lame that I could hardly get home from business. Nothing helped me until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. They entirely removed the pains and I have never had any further trouble."

Get Doan's at Any Drug Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., Buffalo, New York

The Army of Constipation

Is Growing Smaller Every Day.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are responsible — they not only give relief — they permanently cure Constipation. Millions use them for Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Sallow Skin.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

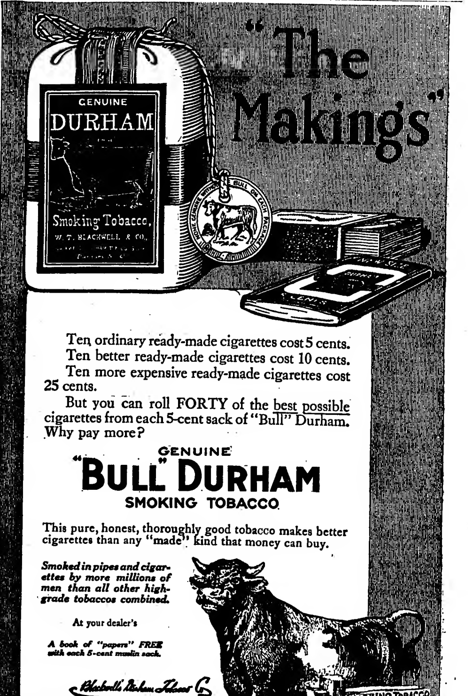
Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

FREE TO ALL SUFFERERS

If you feel "out of sorts"—"run down" or "got the blues," suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., write for my FREE book. It is the most instructive medical book ever written. It tells all about these diseases and the remarkable cures effected by the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2, No. 3 and you can decide for yourself if it is the remedy for your ailment. Don't send a cent. It's absolutely FREE. No "follow-up" circulars. Dr. LeClerc Med. Co., Haverstock Rd., Hampstead, London, Eng.

Pettit's Eye Salve FOR ALL SORE EYES



Ten ordinary ready-made cigarettes cost 5 cents.

Ten better ready-made cigarettes cost 10 cents.

Ten more expensive ready-made cigarettes cost 25 cents.

But you can roll FORTY of the best possible cigarettes from each 5-cent sack of "Bull" Durham. Why pay more?

GENUINE "BULL" DURHAM SMOKING TOBACCO

This pure, honest, thoroughly good tobacco makes better cigarettes than any "made" kind that money can buy.

Smoked in pipes and cigarettes by more millions of men than all other high-grade tobaccos combined.

At your dealer's

A book of "papers" FREE with each 5-cent muslin sack.

Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES

Color more goods brighter and faster colors than any other dye. One 10c package colors all fibers. They dye in cold water better than any other dye. You can dye any garment without ripping apart. Write for free booklet—How to Dye, Bleach and Mix Colors. MONROE DRUG COMPANY, Quincy, Ill.

The Corrector of Destinies

Being Tales of Randolph Mason as Related by His Private Secretary, Courtland Parks

The LIFE TENANT

By Melville Davisson Post

Copyright by Edward J. Clode

I had remained the night at Randolph Mason's house. It was very warm, and at daybreak Pietro opened all the doors and windows to invite in what little breeze there was. I was disturbed by this, and presently arose and took a cold shower bath, after which Pietro brought me a Continental breakfast served on a tray.

It was early then, doubtless not later than six o'clock, when I left my bedchamber. As I turned the landing of the stair, I noticed a man standing in the street door. He was a tall, slender young man, rather well dressed; the lower part of his face was hidden by a handkerchief, which he held pressed against his mouth; there were blood spots, widening on the handkerchief, and an unmistakable expression of fear was in the eyes. It was evident that he had met with some injury.

I led him at once into the office and rang for Pietro. In a moment the latter was at the door, and I directed him to bring a bowl of water as quickly as possible. So far, the injured man had not spoken. I doubted if he could speak, the wound being evidently in the mouth or throat. The moment he got into the room he lay down at full length on the floor, perfectly motionless, his head back, his eyes closed, still pressing the bloody handkerchief to his lips. When Pietro set the bowl of water on the floor beside him, he dipped the handkerchief into it, squeezed out the blood and returned the damp cloth to his mouth. I saw the blood coming slowly from between his lips; it was very bright—arterial blood, a little frothy.

I turned to Pietro and directed him to call a surgeon. At the word the bleeding man shook his head and opened his eyes with an expression of protest. This refusal of medical attendance in one so desperately hurt was to me highly significant; it subjected him instantly to suspicion. I determined to see if he could speak.

"Do you want a physician?" I asked.

He shook his head.

"Are you badly hurt?"

Again he replied with the same negative sign.

"What is the matter with you then?" I purposely phrased the question so that a nodding would not answer it.

"A ruby," he said thickly behind the handkerchief. The reply was unintelligible to me. It was doubtless some term current among criminals. I was now convinced that the man belonged to the criminal classes. He was certainly injured and he refused a surgeon—yet I could not leave him to die on the floor. In this quandary, I turned to find Randolph Mason standing behind me.

"Pietro," he said, "this man is having a hemorrhage. Leave him alone."

Then he went back into the next room.

Instantly the mystery cleared. The poor fellow was merely a consumptive, doing the only thing possible for a slight bleeding—to lie stretched out motionless. The hemorrhage had doubtless come on him in the street, and he had noticed our open door and come in. The flow of blood had now about ceased, and I went to my table to examine the morning's mail.

Presently the man got up and sat down in a chair by my table.

"Was that Randolph Mason?" he said.

"Yes," I replied.

"I thought so," said the man. "I came to New York to see two great specialists, Dr. Ashby Clark and Randolph Mason."

He tapped his breast with his finger.

"Clark says no good. I wonder what Mason will say."

"You were looking for his house, then?"

"Yes; I was coming up the steps to it when I got the 'ruby'." This he explained: "That's what we call the hemorrhage, the blood is so bright, you know—a technical term of the 'lunger'."

"I thought you were a wounded burglar," I said. "If you wish to talk with Mr. Mason, you would better go in now while there is an opportunity."

The man arose and went into the private office. I heard Mason direct him to be seated and order Pietro to give him a glass of whisky.

"I came over to see you and Dr. Clark," began the visitor; "Clark, because I have consumption; you, because no man ever has simple consumption. He always has another trouble with it—a bad heart that won't stand high altitudes, a wife who won't leave the home folks, or no funds. My fix is the latter. Clark says I will last six months in an American climate; but if I will go at once to the Marquesas Islands, my lung will probably heal and I will hang on until some native pinks me with a fish spear.

"I guess the place isn't so bad; it's under the French and quite a garden of Eden, Clark says. But it is away off in the South Seas. It would take a thousand dollars to get there and a check arriving regularly every pay day to keep me going. I have read about the beach-combers on these Pacific islands—there's no hobo worse off. And no way to make a cent there. Copra is the only trade stuff, and the natives have that. Everything fit for a white man to eat is tinned. You've got to buy it when the ship lands. You've got to be a government Johnny, a missionary or a native, otherwise you live on money from home or the French deport you for a convict. That's Clark's garden of Eden. I got the facts at a tourist's joint uptown. So, there I am! I can't live if I don't go; I can't go; I can't live if I could go! Nice, comfortable bunch of alternatives that! I had a little money, but a court down in West Virginia skinned me out of it. Now I haven't enough to pay a doctor. That's why I shook my head on the floor a while ago."

"You mean," said Randolph Mason, "a legal decision rendered against you in a suit at law?"

"Not a bit of it," replied the man; "I mean what I say—skinned out of it. I had no lawsuit. I was standing in a crowd of rubes before a court house when the blindfold lady stepped out with a little shell game and lifted my wad."

"This," said Mason, "is the jargon of a cab driver. What do you mean?"

"I'll cut it out," replied the man, "I will begin over. When my father died he left me ten thousand dollars in bank stocks. It paid a dividend of about four per cent, and no taxes. Being naturally smarter than my father, I at once determined to take that money and get rich. I sold the stock, pocketed a check book and got busy. One bright morning, in a little town on the Monongahela river, a commissioner was selling a tract of land before the court house. In my hunt for good things I happened by accident to know about that land. It is a rough mountain tract, not worth ten dollars an acre; but it is underlaid with the Pittsburgh vein of coal, standing up eight feet thick, clean and solid like a ledge of sandstone. A corner of the land comes down to the railroad and there is a little mine, opened and operated by the old farmer who lived on the place. He had a pole-tipple, wheeled the coal out by hand, and got off about a car a day. The tract contains some two hundred acres.

"I stepped up to the commissioner and inquired about the sale. He told me that the owner was broke and the court was selling the land. I inquired if the coal was included and he said, 'Yes; from the sky to the center of the earth.' Then I asked the bid. When he answered fifteen dollars, I nearly threw a fit! Fifteen dollars! The coal was worth two hundred an acre. Now, I had been knocking about the coal country for a good bit and I was no greenhorn. I knew that this was the Pittsburgh vein and I knew what it was worth. The court was selling the land, so there could be no doubt about the title. I would not have trusted any dealer about a land title if it had been a private sale; but here was the court—the old blind lady herself—selling the land, so the game was bound to be straight. I bid twenty. The commissioner called it a moment, and a big man, out a little way in the crowd, with a nose like your elbow, bid twenty-five. I let the thing hang to see if there was another bidder; then, just before the 'going,' I bid thirty. Nosy looked me over, snorted and finally bid thirty-five, and 'five more,' I said. He stamped around for a while and finally lifted it to forty-five.

"'All right, Nosy,' I said to myself, 'I'll just throw a good, stiff bluff into you and end it.' 'An' five', I said, 'an' five more every time you raise it.' He looked at me for a good minute.

"'You're a damned fool!' he said, and then he walked out of the crowd. Nosy was right about that; but I didn't know it just then. The land was knocked down to me at fifty dollars an acre. I paid cash and got my deed, all signed, sealed and delivered.

"When I got home and opened my package, I had as nice a box of sawdust as you ever saw. The old girl in the blinkers had double-crossed me like an expert. No street fakir could have cleaned a smoother job. My title to this land proved to be only a life estate. I hunted up a lawyer. He said that a court did not guarantee a title when it sold land. I remember his language—it cost me money and I shall always remember it. He said 'The doctrine of caveat emptor obtained at judicial sales; the purchaser bought at his peril.' That is, 'Your eyes are your market.' The court sells land through its officer to the public, sells the title for a good one, takes your money; and, if the title is defective, you are stuck, you can't get your money back. The old lady comes out to her door and sells you a pig in a poke. If there's no pig in it, the joke's on you. If it's somebody else's pig, the joke's still on you. I've been up against the shell and the little pea, the five-dollar bill and the soap box, the glad gent who knew my Uncle Ephraim in Potunk, and all kinds of crooked faro, but for the real thing, give me the old blind girl in the court house."

I leaned my elbow on the table and looked through the open door at the narrator of this tale, indifferently sipping his glass of whisky and flippantly spinning out his story like a tipsy sailor. This sanguine temperament goes surely with this disease; no other dying men whistle thus cheerily in the face of death.

"So there I was," the man continued, "no money, no land. I had bought only the right to use this ground as long as the old farmer lived. A goat with creepers on his feet would have starved on the top of it. I tried to sell out to Nosy. I discovered then that he was a capper for the Union Fuel company, a little branch of one of the two soft coal combines of America.

"'Nothin' doing', he said. 'Our company put up that little job to catch just such suckers as you are. We bought the fee simple title to that land; then we picked up the debts of the old farmer, who was supposed to own it but had only a life estate, as we knew. We got the debts for ten cents on the dollar, when we showed the creditors that the rube had no title. Then we brought a creditor's suit to sell the land. I expected to buy it in for the face amount of our debts, but when you butted in and bid it over our debts, I side-stepped. We made about nine thousand dollars on your cut-in. No, we will not pay out any good money for your old life estate. Not us; our heading won't get up to this land for the next ten years. I guess we'll just set back on our hunkers and wait till the old man dies. So long! I may not see you again. You're a lunger; ain't you?'

"That was two years ago. The bugs haven't knocked off any time, Clark says, and, unless I can get to the South Seas, I'm all in."

"I believe this conference is ended."

Randolph Mason leaned over and made a little calculation with his pencil on the corner of the writing-pad.

"In your condition of health," he said, "ten thousand dollars should easily buy a six per cent annuity. Could you live in the Marquesas on six hundred a year?"

The sick man's eyes snapped.

"With all the comforts of home, and money to invest in the funds, as the French say. Outside the grub, you only need a sleeping mat and a pair of pajamas. Fifty plunks a month? I should say yes."

"Very well," said Mason, "you shall have twelve hundred dollars down for expenses, and six hundred payable semi-annually as long as you live."

The facetious youth made a wide, indicrous gesture with both arms as though gathering up a great heap of bundles.

"An' a motor, an' a private car, an' an insurance directorship, an' the young princess, my daughter, for a wife, an' twelve she asses laden with gold—where from?"

Randolph Mason looked down at him as one does at a pert, gibing bootblack.

"From the Union Fuel Company," he answered.

The cheerful consumptive snapped his fingers.

"Stuff's off," he said. "You might get it from the Fresh Air Fund or Uncle Abdul of Turkey, but not the coal trust."

"We shall get it from the Union Fuel company," said Mason. "Mr. Parks, have Pietro call a carriage, and come with us."

The young man arose, waved his right arm in a great gesture of assent.

"All right, Governor," he said; "have it your own way; but when you wake up don't take it out on me."

Then he cocked his hat on one side of his head and followed out to the carriage behind Randolph Mason.

The offices of the Union Fuel Company are at the foot of Broadway, an entire floor, reached by a great semicircle of elevators, banging, rattling, clicking, in their amphitheater of cages. The business carried on here is of necessity stupendous. It has to do with modifying the temperature of the whole country. The forces, too, that labor everywhere under a man's fingers, are sold here, stored in a block of carbon. The companies housed under this roof, and the rival ones occupying as great a building across Broadway, practically own the available coal beds of America, the virgin sources of all the energy used commonly by man, from the fire cooking his egg to the fire driving his steamship. That there should be two well-defined groups of such companies thus in rivalry, standing like duelists with the street between them, arises from the fact that there are two great railroad systems, as yet uncombined, leading into the storehouses of America's coal, each railroad greater in its authority than an empire, having its retinue of operating companies attached like feudal dependencies, bound to the overlord under penalty of ruin, and coming and going at its beck like the servants of the centurion. The two buildings are thus packed with the chief offices of coal companies having mines on the thoroughfare of these roads. Any one of these companies would find an alert rival across the street.

It was quite an hour before we got into the office of Andrew Flint, the president of the Union Fuel Company, although it was one of the smallest companies in the combine. He was a man magnetized by the rubbing of gold coins; he seemed to point constantly to the financial North; no matter how the needle were flung, it swung finally back there. The very physical type of the man was metallic. He was thin and sharp, with iron hair, eyes blue like the points of a drill, and a manner as of a constant clicking. He had abridged the courtesies of life to a formula of brief conventions; but in the discussion of dollars he was almost voluble, his voice raced. He waited, seemingly hung on a string like a suspended pendulum, while Randolph Mason in a dozen sentences stated the gist of the unfortunate's story.

Mr. Flint spoke a monosyllable to a clerk, who brought a case of papers and laid it open on a table before him. For a moment he ran his eyes through the file.

"Correct," he said; "your Mr. Hopkins owns a life estate in these lands. We own the remainder. What do you want?"

"I want you to buy the life estate."

Mr. Flint looked again at his papers.

"The advice here is against it," he answered. "This tract is a patch attaching to the eastern corner of our field. Our main openings are four miles west; the coal won't be available to us for ten years. This life estate may be terminated then. Why should we buy it now?"

"For the very reason that it may be terminated then," answered Randolph Mason.

A smile flitted across the face of Mr. Andrew Flint like the sun over gun metal.

"You have come to the wrong place," he said. "This is not a charity bureau."

"Pardon me, sir," replied Randolph Mason; "we have come to the right place. By the use of the machinery of the law, you have taken this man's money. You must now purchase his title to the land, pay him in cash the two years' interest already due on his purchase money, that is, twelve hundred dollars, and the interest semiannually hereafter, that is, six hundred dollars per year until his death. This is not an unreasonable proposition, because, in the present condition of Mr. Hopkins's health, it is not likely that he will live for a longer period than the farmer at whose death the estate terminates."

The president of the Union Fuel Company laughed, his voice cackling like a spinning cog-wheel.

"Really," he said, "you amuse me."

An ugly sneer gathered in the corners of Mason's mouth.

"You do not amuse me," he said; "you annoy me."

Mr. Andrew Flint flushed and turned sharply in his chair.

"I believe this conference is ended," he said.

"Not quite ended," replied Randolph Mason. "Listen a moment, if you please. It is the law of the State of West Virginia that a life tenant—that is, one owning a life estate in lands—cannot open mines and remove coal or minerals from such lands during his life, but must get his living from the surface and pass over all the wealth beneath his feet to his successor. He may be sick, weighted with debt, starving, the wealth of the Indies may lie beneath the sod of his lands like a buried treasure, yet it is held in certain decisions that he cannot touch it. Does such a rule of law seem to you to be justice?"

It was now Andrew Flint's turn to sneer.

"I am not interested," he replied, "in the justice of it."

"Perhaps," continued Mason, "you may be interested in a further provision of that doctrine, quite as curious. It is also the law of the State of West Virginia that, if at the time the life tenant comes into his estate there is a mine opened on the land and in operation, then this person with the life estate can not only continue the operation of the mine, but he can also work it to exhaustion. He can gut the land of every ounce of value. If a way be but cut to the door of the storehouse, he can rifle it to the last penny. He can disembowel the land and leave his successor only a worthless shell. Does this seem to you to be any sounder justice?"

The president of the Union Fuel Company fell back into his attitude of business interest, as by the snapping of a lever.

"What! what!" he said. "Let me understand you."

"You shall understand me exactly," replied Mason. "There is a little mine in operation on this land. If you do not choose to make this contract with Mr. Hopkins, I shall take him to the coal company across the street, which also operates in this region. I shall lease the land to it for any royalty it suggests, even a cent a ton. This Pittsburgh vein is eight feet thick. It will yield ten thousand tons to the acre. At one cent a ton that would net Mr. Hopkins a royalty of one hundred dollars per acre. Ordinarily any company would take out ten acres every year. Under the existing conditions, this company will take out twenty. This will yield Mr. Hopkins some twenty thousand dollars in the end, and the company a profit of a hundred thousand; and you at the farmer's death will have a shell of broken rocks to inherit as your estate. Does my proposition seem now a matter of so much amusement?"

Mr. Flint saw that the matter had reached that practical status which he called business, and, after his custom, he prepared instantly to meet it.

"Just a moment, please," he said.

He turned to his telephone on the table and called up one of the great law firms of the city. He stated in a few rapid words the legal question involved. We could not, of course, hear the answer, but the jerky expletives of Mr. Flint were eloquent.

Presently he placed the receiver on its horn.

"We will take Mr. Hopkins's title at your figure," he said.

But just then the sick man emphatically thrust into the conference.

"No, you don't!" he cried, bouncing out of his chair. "I've got the harpoon in you, an' I'm goin' to jump on it. You pay me a thousand dollars a year, and every minute I raise it five hundred!"

Randolph Mason reached over his hand, caught the excited Mr. Hopkins by the arm, and replaced him in his chair.

"Your silence," he said, "will oblige me. You shall receive exactly the sum I have named, neither a dollar more nor less. I do not intend that either you or this company shall take an advantage."

I do not know which regarded Mason with a greater wonder, the humbled fellow or Mr. Andrew Flint. The one, no less than the other, expected an advantage to be pressed home; it was the first law of commerce, as they know it; all else was a theory of churches.

I think the sick man would have broken into protest, but the manner of Randolph Mason was not to be misread, and, too, in the former's eye he was something of the magician in the fairy book, and not to be set in anger lest the gold in sight vanish.

A deed was swiftly written, executed and a check for twelve hundred dollars passed over to Mr. Hopkins.

I shall always remember the comment of that erratic but cheerful person as we left the building. He walked along through the corridor beside me, his eye traveling in sort of childish wonder over Randolph Mason, who strode before him, doubtless like a Providence. Finally, as we were coming to the door, he plucked my sleeve and spoke his comment, which, phrased differently, was, indeed, the comment of us all.

"The old boy's a terror! ain't he?"

For the legal principle involved in this story see The Law of Mines and Mining in the United States (Barringer & Adams, page 15), also the following cases: Koen v. Bartlett, 41 W. Va., 559; especially 567; Williamson v. Jones, 39 W. Va., 231; Wilson v. Yost, 43 W. Va., 834.

"The rule is well settled that a tenant for life, when not precluded by restraining words, may not only work open mines, but may work them to exhaustion," p. 567, Koen v. Bartlett, supra. Opinion.

COMBINE BEAUTY AND UTILITY

Practical Nature of the Swiss Shown in Their Gardens—Cow Houses Built Over Springs.

The Swiss gardens are a quaint combination of the artistic and practical, writes F. Harris Deans in the Wide World. A row of geraniums will be followed by a line of red cabbages; lettuce and lilies grow in perfect harmony side by side; archways are covered with scarlet runners. The effect, however, is quite pleasing.

In many cases, too, the farmers take advantage of the numerous springs on the mountainside and build their cow houses over them, thus ensuring a constant supply of water running through the cow house. I observed this for the first time one day immediately after having quenched my thirst at a sparkling spring. I felt a horrible doubt that all was not clear that sparkled. It was a hot day, but I felt quite cool as I retraced my steps and tracked that spring to its source. I was relieved to find that the farmer who owned that particular spring didn't keep cows; I should have become a vegetarian if he had. After that I found lukewarm water from a Gasthaus more refreshing. What the eye doesn't see the stomach doesn't grieve about.

Suggestion for New Holiday.

Texas has an "onion day." Commenting on its observation, a New Yorker said to a Galveston merchant: "The Lone Star state has the better of the Empire state, for we have no vegetable or flower to which we do tearful homage as you do to the fragrant onion. The fact is, we are open to suggestions as to a new holiday. The latest proposition in that line was a 'moving day.' Now, don't misunderstand the term. Those who move will not celebrate; they will just move and experience all the joys pertaining to that heart and furniture-breaking function. Those who will celebrate will be the people who can look on."—New York Tribune.

THE SUNBEAM.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1912. NO. 29.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Reckless Waste May Cause Extinction of Whale.

WASHINGTON.—Danger of the total extinction of the whale through "overfishing" is dealt with in the thirteenth annual report on fisheries, issued by the board of agriculture and fisheries.

It is unquestionable, says the report, that in the case of a slow-growing and slow-reproducing animal like the whale, although, owing to its wide range, it will probably never be absolutely exterminated, excessive hunting speedily results in a very marked depletion of the stock.

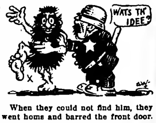
The practical extinction of the Basque and Greenland whale fisheries has abundantly proved this. It must be remembered, too, that this result was brought about by means of the open and hand harpoon—methods which are now obsolete.

With the introduction, however, of the harpoon with explosive shell, discharged from a cannon mounted in the bows of a steamer, the conditions were entirely changed, and the species formerly immune from attack could now be hunted with impunity.

It is estimated that in 1911 between 19,000 and 20,000 whales were captured in the southern hemisphere alone (South Georgia, South Shetland, South America and Africa), to which has to be added the catch in North America, Japan, Faroe, Iceland, Spitsbergen and Greenland, and these figures will probably be greatly exceeded in 1912, as numerous new companies have been formed to exploit Alaskan, Australasian and Sandwich island waters.

This wholesale destruction must inevitably tell its tale within a few years

Wild Man Flees to the Capital; Cop Nabs Him



WATS TH' IDEE?

"IT," alias "Gingerbread," the wild man from Borneo, escaped from his dugout at the Rockville fair the other day, and, coming to Washington, was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The wild man, who lives on raw meat and "eats 'em alive," was approached the following night by Policeman Andes of the Fifth precinct while doing a war dance in Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast.

"Who do you think you are, anyway?" inquired Andes.

"G-rrr! Woof!" responded the wild man.

Whereupon Policeman Andes called the wagon, and the wild man was taken to the station, put in a cell, and told to "sleep it off."

It is supposed that the wild man got tired of staying in a cage and eating raw meat and sleeping in hay. So he pushed the door of his dugout open, and walked 16 miles to Washington to get something that would take the taste of the meat out of his mouth.

When the news spread through Rockville that it probably had a wild man on its hands, a posse of vigilantes armed themselves with shotguns and pitchforks and raw meat, with which to appease his mean disposition.

When they could not find him, they went home and barred the front door.

The wild man is no beauty. He is a hairy individual, six feet tall, with a sinister cast of countenance. He has bulging eyes and an ecliptical-shaped head, with an indentation on the top, covered by a patch of hair. When seen at the fair grounds, mothers would draw their children to them when the wild man grinned, and strong men would shudder.

After spending a night at the Fifth Precinct station, the wild man was taken to Washington Asylum hospital for observation.

Never having had a wild man from Borneo on their hands, the hospital officials were puzzled.

And, on the blotter of the Fifth Precinct station is inscribed:

"'It,'" and opposite that, "crazy."

Sparrows Annihilate Worm Army on Navy Green.

PERSONS passing the State, War and Navy building, on Pennsylvania avenue, the other day saw a "battle royal" between a corps of army worms and a battalion of sparrows. The unusual sight attracted a large crowd, and much expert opinion was passed on the outcome of the battle, the problem facing the battalion of sparrows being the annihilation of the enemy before darkness set in.

The battalion of sparrows moved eastward in two columns from the northwest corner of the State, War and Navy lawn. One of the most interesting features of the "battle" was the warlike precision with which the sparrows moved.

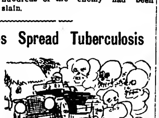
It was estimated by onlookers that either column of sparrows was over three feet wide. They worked in solid block formation and moved rapidly on the corps of army worms, which was solidly intrenched behind breastworks of grass.

Owing to their intrenched position, it was impossible for onlookers to estimate the strength of the worms, but it was generally conceded that the attacking battalion of sparrows was 500 strong.

Like Henry of Navarre at Ivry, the "commander" of the worms held his forces close to the "cannon" of the invading sparrows, but without avail, for the "charge of the five hundred" proved devastating to the intrenched worms.

The "battle" continued throughout the day, and at night not a sparrow was reported dead on the field, while hundreds of the enemy had been slain.

Claimed That Automobiles Spread Tuberculosis



ACTING as agents in the spread of tuberculosis, motor cars and high-powered automobiles are spreading disease and death in the Philippines, according to a report in the quarterly review of the bureau of public works of the islands. This is due to the great clouds of dust raised by the rapidly moving vehicles. The dust finds its way into the houses, which are built close on the edges of the narrow streets, and the high mortality among the Filipinos from tuberculosis is attributed in large measure to it.

The spread and increase of the "white plague" is not confined to human beings, according to the report, but cattle and other live stock are equal sufferers.

The Philippine government is experimenting with native oil on the roads, in the hope of remedying conditions.

Electrical devices to handle the 86,000,000 money orders returned annually to Washington to be audited will save $200,000 a year for the government, according to estimates by Charles A. Kram, auditor for the post-office department.

The tabulations are accomplished through a system of punched cards and electrical counters somewhat similar to the machines used by the federal census bureau. Heretofore, the annual audit of the money order business of the country has taken nearly a year. With the electric card punching and counting system the final settlement of money order accounts can be made within three months of the end of the fiscal year.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

JUDGE FINDS JOY IN HEART COURT

Judge William N. Gemmill, sitting in the Chicago court of domestic relations as the successor to Judge Charles N. Goodnow, re-assigned, the other day declared his work a study of hearts.

Judge Goodnow left the court of domestic relations because he found it filled with heartaches.

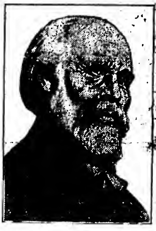
Judge Gemmill took up the labors of the court as the most interesting labor of the law.

"I enjoy the work," said the new judge of the court of hearts. "I have just come from a civil court, largely dry as dust sort of work. Here my work is full of 'heart interest.' It is a study of people and motives. The problems here presented are as intricate and interesting as life itself.

"An unending procession of lives and loves are passed through the court for observation and study.

"The work is far from as full of heartaches and sorrows as the work of a criminal court. There one has to impose long, hard sentences, sometimes death."

REMARKABLE PERSONALITY OF HARDIE

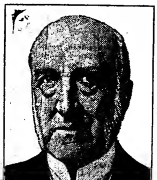


Snowy-haired, deep-chested, powerful, keen-eyed, Keir Hardie, leader of millions of British working men, has just finished his third visit to America. The chairman of the Labor party in the house of commons is a striking personality—picturesque and unforgettable. He came to attend the wedding of his son, who is in business in Brooklyn.

At the age of seven Keir Hardie was set to work in a mine. His father had been a miner before him, his mother a working woman. In the mines he stayed for seventeen years. Today, fifty-six years old, he is the leading figure in Parliament in the fight for improving the condition of working people.

The muscular hand grasp with which he welcomes his caller is a reminder of the days when he used to swing a pick. There is warmth in it as well as strength, a warmth that beams out the steady, kindly gaze from the man's eyes. Warmth and strength are Keir Hardie's characteristics.

REAL TRUTH ABOUT SIDE WHISKERS



The truth about whiskers is out. Turn the spotlight on Chauncey Depew.

Returning to his own, his native land, after his annual wandering on foreign strands, America's ex-champion after-dinner statesman stood on the deck of an Atlantic steamer the other day and admitted that he was the modern father of all hirsute facial adornment.

Mr. Depew was much incensed by the report that an invasion of English whiskers threatens the United States. He fingered his own flowing white ones caressingly as he made the following points:

That he began to raise this same crop fifty years ago.

That forty-nine years and nine months ago they were just as they are now, barring a whiteness of color that is natural at seventy-nine.

That he made many annual trips to England, taking the whiskers with him each time, and just as surely bringing them back to America each time.

That Englishmen, at first deriding him, came finally to imitate him.

And that, considering all these things, a thinker can plainly see it is not an invasion of English whiskers, but of native grown American whiskers that threatens this country.

DEAN OF FRENCH JOURNALISTS QUITS

Henri Rochefort, veteran polemist and dean of French journalists, has laid aside his pen forever.

He is almost eighty-two years old, has been in journalistic harness for half a century, and until the present indisposition has not missed writing an article every day for more than forty years. Even since his eyes began to fail him, only once has he missed dictating his daily article.

And now the doughty old fighter takes what he believes to be only a temporary rest at the imperative order of his physicians. The paper for which he has written so many palpitating articles announces that no one replaces him. It says in effect what Jefferson replied when the French foreign minister welcomed him with the remark: "You replace Dr. Franklin." "No," replied the author of Jeffersonian simplicity; "no one can replace Dr. Franklin; I merely succeed him." As long as a shadow of hope remains of his reappearance, no one will succeed Henri Rochefort.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Iroquois Too Much for the Court Interpreter

NEW YORK.—Proceedings in the Jefferson Market police court were brought to a standstill the other day, and Interpreter Lichtenstein was forced to admit that he had met his Waterloo after many victories in untangling strange tongues when two women members of the Iroquois tribe of Indians appeared before Magistrate Herbert, one charging the other with felonious assault, the weapon being a can of tomatoes.

Mrs. Cecilia Hyde, 45 years old, of 526 Broome street, whose Indian name is Kaluwalon, charged Mrs. Ida Dominick, 30 years old, who is known to her tribe as Kalukwas, with assault after a dispute in the Broome street house in which they both live.

When the case was called and Policeman Cronin of the Macdougal Street station house arraigned Kalukwas, and motioned Kaluwalon to approach the bench, it was learned that, although bearing English names, neither complainant nor defendant spoke English. Court Interpreter Lichtenstein was called, but after a short struggle with the Iroquois gutturals begged to be excused.

"You are the interpreter of this court, are you not?" said the magistrate.

"Yes, your honor."

"Then interpret."

"I cannot."

"Why?"

"Because I am not an Indian."

"Well, what are we going to do?" the magistrate said. "I must hear this case."

Chief Clerk George P. Richter, a Tammany brave, said that he would try to help out, since he had spent his vacations for the last ten years at Caughnawaga, and had picked up some of the Iroquois dialect.

Mrs. Hyde testified that Mrs. Dominick bent her over the head with a can of tomatoes, cutting open her forehead and splitting her scalp.

Mrs. Dominick admitted the charge, but said that she had just cause. The case was finally dismissed.

He Was Not Crazy; He Did Not Go Home

I'D RUTHER SPEND MY TIME IN JAIL THAN GO HOME WITH HER

HOUSTON, TEX.—"I had rather go to jail than to go home with my wife" were the words of a middle-aged man who in company with his wife called at the office of Night Chief of Police Heck a few nights ago. The man and woman faced the chief together and the man spoke first, his words bringing tears to the eyes of his better half.

"My wife has been hounding me around the street for the past two hours," said the husband, "and has been trying to get me to go home again. A night in jail would be pleasant compared with the misery of spending the night with my wife."

"We can't lock you up," said Chief Heck, "because you have done nothing to be punished for. You are not crazy, are you?" he asked.

"No, I am not crazy," replied the husband. "If I was I would go on home with my wife."

The couple entered the office shortly after 9 o'clock and all efforts on the part of Chief Heck to pacify the husband proved unsuccessful. The hours slipped by and before either the man or woman realized it, midnight was near. Both were sleepy, the man was nodding in his chair.

Chief Heck was called away from his office on an urgent call and when he returned both sat in their chairs sound asleep. He roused them, gave them a warning to agree and be happy and the husband and wife walked away arm in arm.

"Willie Buck" Stirs Up a Big Police Station

CHICAGO.—"Willie Buck, vagrancy," was the way it was written the other night on the arrest-book at the Maxwell street police station.

Two bondsmen interested themselves in the prisoner, and a restaurant-keeper brought him food, and all of them, after closer acquaintance, agreed that he did "buck."

"Willie Buck" is known to residents in the vicinity of Fourteenth street and Union avenue as the neighborhood goat. On this particular night he became unusually strenuous and was "arrested."

The goat was put in the patrol wagon and taken to the police station. Desk Sergeant Kelliher entered in the arrest-book the name "Willie Buck," and opposite that the charge "vagrancy."

Manny Abrams, a bondsman, went to interview "Willie Buck" after reading the name on the book. Meantime the jailer had unlocked the cell door, and when the goat caught sight of Abrams peering through the darkened cell there was a sudden rush, and the bondsman lay on the floor, gasping for breath.

William Brett, another bondsman, received the same treatment when he went to the cell to discuss a possible bond.

Max Goldman, proprietor of a restaurant near the police station, prepared a big steak and "trimmings" when informed by telephone that "Willie Buck" wanted something to eat.

Ten seconds after he entered the cell aisle Goldman was on the floor, the hot steak reposing on his neck, and broken dishes were scattered in several directions. The goat had successfully defended itself against interruption for the night and crawled into a corner and went to sleep.

Unusual Vocabulary of an Indianapolis Parrot

SHUT UP
OH MY! OH MY!! THIS PLACE IS SO COMMON TH' ROOMERS MAKE ME TIRED !!??!

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Polly is a beautifully marked King parrot, the property of Frank Hoffman, who conducts a downtown cafe, and among those who have heard the bird talk, it is easy to find some who will back her as the champion ornithological chatterbox of the city. Hoffman has rooms above his cafe which he rents.

One of the roomers recently was employed by a local automobile factory as a test car driver and one of his characteristics was his proneness to sleep late every morning. Daily one of his working companions stopped at the cafe to waken him and Polly is frequently heard, early in the morning, going over the wakening conversation. She repeats the words of the caller and the sleepy responses of the belated one in bed, accompanied by the groans that only a sleepy man early in the morning can make, the gradually increasing clearness of the responses, and the final yawn and assurance that the sleeper has been fully awakened and is on his feet. Newcomers to the rooms often believe they are listening to a real early morning tragedy.

Polly spent some of her years in a room where there was a telephone, and much of her vocabulary was picked up there. Often now she is heard repeating one end of complete telephone conversations. Mrs. Hoffman declares the bird's mimic of the voice in the rooms where the phone was stationed is perfect.

A few days ago a bath was given her and shortly after Hoffman entered the room where she was drying in the sun.

"Frank, come here," she called. "Polly is all wet."

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

THE CAT'S USEFUL WHISKERS.

We are apt to think that the cat's ability to see in the dark is due entirely to its eyes, but competent authority assures us that the feline's power in this respect is due almost as much to its "whiskers." These delicate hairs that project from the muzzle of the cat family are wonderful mechanisms, says Harper's Weekly. Each one grows from a follicle or gland, served to the utmost sensibility. Its slightest contact with any obstacle is instantly felt by the animal, though the hair itself may be tough and insensible. The exaggerated whiskers on the muzzle often project to such a distance that from point to point they indicate the exact width of the body of the beast. Consider the lion stealing through the jungle at night in search of prey, when the least stir of a twig gives alarm. The lion's whiskers indicate through the nicest nerves, any object that may be in his path. A touch stops him short before pushing through some close thicket where the rustling leaves and boughs would betray his presence. Wherever his head may be thrust without a warning from the vibrissae there his body may pass noiselessly. It is the aid given him by his whiskers, in conjunction with the soft cushions of his feet, that enables him to proceed as silently as the snake.

The hour of dining has advanced with the centuries. Froissart mentions waiting on the duke of Lancaster at five in the afternoon after he had supped and was about to go to bed, and the preface of the Heptameron shows that the queen of Navarre dined at ten o'clock in the morning. From the Northumberland Household Book, dated 1512, we learn that the ducal family rose at six, breakfasted at seven, dined at ten, supped at four, and retired for the night at nine, says the London Chronicle. Louis XIV. did not dine till 12, while his contemporaries, Cromwell and Charles II., took the meal at one. In 1700 the hour was advanced to two; in 1751 we find the duchess of Somerset dining at three, and in 1760 Cowper speaks of four o'clock as the fashionable time. After the battle of Waterloo the dinner hour was altered to six, from which time it has advanced by half-hour stages to eight. So that in 400 years the dinner hour had gradually moved through at least ten hours of the day.

American habits and customs, especially American clothes, are apparently becoming fashionable among Germany's young men. Young Germany no longer contents itself with the sartorial products of the Fatherland, says the London Answers. The exaggerated university suits of American cut and manufacture please them better, and most of them are never more genuinely flattered than when they are mistaken for "Amerikaner." German clothiers have, in consequence, been obliged to lay in large stocks of American clothing to meet the growing demand.

England's new torpedo boat destroyers will be given names from Shakespeare and Scott. So, in the near future, we may expect to see "The Merry Wives of Windsor" engaging in battle, accompanied by "The Two Gentlemen of Verona," "The Lady of the Lake," and "The Antiquary." The war correspondent of the future probably will be chosen from among the book reviewers.

The advice to substitute beans for meat will receive a setback through the explosion of some boiling beans in a Colorado town. The beans tore the stove to pieces and threw the owner of the house out the kitchen door. With the militant spirit abroad as it is, the adoption of beans as the principal article of diet had best be postponed.

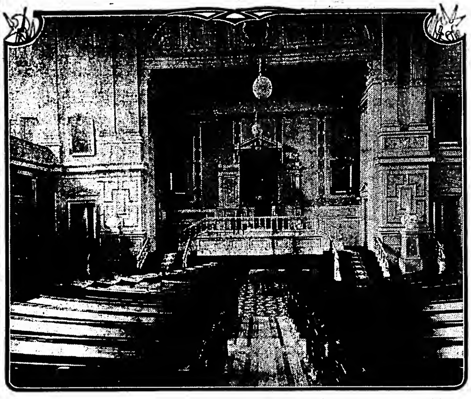
A Chicago girl while playing the piano was struck by lightning, although not seriously hurt. But whether the casualty is to be viewed as accident or retribution is a question the neighbors are discussing—that is, of course, if the girl was the average performer and the neighbors average neighbors.

A Texas girl announces her willingness to marry any man who will consent to have the ceremony performed in a cage of lions. And all we have to say is that the man who takes the offer will deserve anything that happens to him during the ceremony and afterward.

It is now announced that a disgruntled employe destroyed Mona Lisa's inscrutable smiles with sulphuric acid. Which settles the inscrutability of the smile for all time, as the pleasantry of no mystery can survive a sulphuric acid bath.

The automobile, says a St. Paul preacher, has done more for sin than any other one thing. Let us not be discouraged. Somebody is almost sure to discover a method of keeping tires from being punctured.

WHERE BULGARIA'S WARLIKE DEPUTIES MEET



THIS is the hall in Sofia in which the Bulgarian chamber of deputies is holding sessions and determining on the country's course of action during the Balkan crisis.

TURKS BEGIN WAR

SULTAN'S TROOPS INVADE SERVIA AND HAVE FIRED ON HER SUBJECTS.

POWERS CONFER IN PARIS

Seven Armies Now Being Mobilized—Situation in Balkans Alarming—Turkey Despairs of Peace, Names Abdul Pasha Commander.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Acting Secretary of State Wilson is in receipt of a cablegram from Ambassador Rockhill at Constantinople fully verifying reports that Balkan war is imminent. The entire Turkish army, the ambassador says, is being mobilized in expectation of an early clash. All news from the Balkans is of an alarming nature.

Paris, Oct. 4.—A conference was held at the French foreign office to discuss means of averting war in the Balkans. Representatives at Paris of all the powers interested in the eastern embroglio were present, but no announcement was made of the result.

Belgrade, Servia, Oct. 4.—Turkish troops have invaded Servian territory and fired upon unoffending Servian subjects, according to an announcement from the war minister. Fifty Turkish soldiers fired upon the town of Rashka and the inhabitants are fleeing in fear of their lives.

Vienna, Oct. 4.—With seven separate armies being mobilized in the Balkans, the war situation in southeastern Europe reached its most acute stage.

While the foreign office had no confirmation of news reports that fighting had begun and that a joint ultimatum had been presented by the Balkan states to Constantinople, nevertheless the reports were accepted as true.

These were followed by another report that the Turks had seized a Greek merchantman of Salonika.

STATE TICKET IS NAMED

University Man in Garb of Soldier of '76 Leads Cheering—Battdorf for State Secretary.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 3.—Enthusiasm pervaded the Michigan state convention of the National Progressive party in naming its first state ticket here.

During the afternoon session "Yellmaster" Lloyd M. Otis of the University of Michigan, dressed as a soldier of '76, led the delegates in "rahs" for the men prominent in the organization and leadership of the new party. The ticket named follows:

Secretary of state—Howard H. Battdorf, Battle Creek.

State treasurer—Frank C. Holmes, Alpena.

Auditor general—Herbert F. Baker, Sheboygan.

Attorney general—Julius P. Kirby, Saginaw.

Land commissioner—Oscar O. Linden, Escanaba.

Justice of the supreme court—Edward H. Lynus, St. Johns (long term), Willard G. Turner, Muskegon (short term).

Oil Company Is Bankrupt.

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 3.—The Central Fuel Oil company, an oil producing company in Oklahoma, chartered in this state, was adjudged a bankrupt by Judge Bradford in the United States district court Tuesday.

Ex-Mayor of Elgin Dead.

Elgin, Ill., Oct. 3.—David F. Barclay, ten years mayor of Elgin, president of the First National bank and identified with Elgin's civic and commercial progress for fifty years, died Tuesday from paralysis.

DE PALMA WINS CUP

VANDERBILT TROPHY CAPTURED AT 69 MILE PER HOUR GAIT.

Coast Driver Takes Lead Early in Contest and Wins When Tetzlaff Retires.

Wauwatosa, Wis., Oct. 4.—Ralph de Palma, driving a Mercedes car, won the eighth Vanderbilt cup automobile race Wednesday over the new Wauwatosa road course and $3,000 in cash in 4 hours 20 minutes and 31.54 seconds, for a distance of 299 miles 2,764 feet.

This was an average speed of 69 miles per hour, or five miles per hour slower than Ralph Mulford's time in last year's Vanderbilt race at Savannah.

Hughie Hughes, driving a Mercer, was second, 42 4-5 seconds behind De Palma, and Spencer Wishart, Mercedes, was third.

Hughes averaged 68 4-5 miles per hour.

De Palma's victory was made possible by engine trouble which drove Teddy Tetzlaff and his Fiat out of the race after he had driven 200 miles at the rate of 72 miles an hour.

FOURTEEN KILLED; 50 HURT

Boston-New York Express Train Plunges to Destruction—Engine Explodes, Cars Burn.

Naugatuck, Conn., Oct. 5.—Fourteen persons are known to have been killed and fifty injured when the second section of the Boston-New York express leaving New Haven at 3:55 jumped the tracks at Naugatuck Junction while taking the crossover from one of the four tracks to another, Thursday.

The tracks torn from beneath it, the locomotive toppled over and plunged down the steep embankment at the side of the track. Both the engineer and fireman were killed. The baggage car on the forward end of the train was catapulted out of danger, but the Pullman cars quickly caught fire from the burning coals scattered by the locomotive and within an hour were almost completely destroyed. Nine bodies were taken out of the wreckage and more were extricated later.

The engine exploded practically at the same moment that it left the rails, according to eye witnesses.

MURDER U. S. VICE-CONSUL

Two Other Americans Slain at Same Time by Mexican Rebels Near Durango.

Mexico, City, Oct. 4.—Allen McCanghlan, United States vice-consul at Durango; Robert L. Russell, manager of the San Juan Taviche hacienda, and James N. Cliff, owner of the same property, were murdered Wednesday near the city of Durango by Mexican rebels. Details of the killing have not arrived, but United States Consul Theodore C. Hamm of Durango has informed American Ambassador Wilson and the latter has made a demand on the Mexican government for troops to hunt down the murderers.

Fifth Death in Navy Blast.

Newport, R. I., Oct. 5.—The fifth death, that of First Class Fireman Delaney, due to the explosion of the steam chest on the torpedo boat destroyer Walke occurred here last Thursday.

John Dillon Badly Hurt.

Swineford, Ireland, Oct. 5.—John Dillon, member of parliament, was thrown from a dogcart Thursday and badly injured in the head while visiting his constituency in the County of Mayo.

MORGAN CHIPPED IN

FINANCIER TESTIFIED HE GAVE $150,000 TO REPUBLICANS IN 1904.

QUIZZED BY CLAPP PROBERS

Gave No Money to Other Parties—Charles Duell, Assistant Treasurer Under Bliss, Testifies That Insurance Companies Gave $50,000 Each.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The star witness—and a willing one—J. Pierpont Morgan appeared before the senate campaign fund investigating committee Thursday. He testified:

That he contributed $150,000 to the Republican war chest in 1904 in two payments of $100,000 and $50,000, the latter in cash.

That he had no doubt the $50,000 was part of the Harriman $250,000 fund raised for the New York state campaign.

That no contribution was asked by Roosevelt in 1904, and that he had no communication with anyone at the White House on the subject.

That he neither took part in nor knew of any conference of financial interests to discuss their attitude on contributions to the 1904 campaign.

That his relations with Cornelius N. Bliss were very intimate, and "Whenever they wanted anything they sent Mr. Bliss" to him.

That no gratitude was expressed for his donations and "he never experienced much gratitude in this connection."

That he didn't know how much the Republican committee was trying to raise, adding, "I think they would have taken anything they could get."

That his contribution was due to fear of the effect a Democratic victory in New York would have on the country.

That he contributed $30,000 to the Republican national fund in 1908.

That he made no contribution to the preconvention campaign of any presidential candidate this year.

The witness was excused, subject to call by the committee, with the comforting comment, "You know you are entitled to your expenses."

Charles H. Duell followed Mr. Morgan on the stand. Mr. Duell, who in 1904 was assistant treasurer of the Republican national committee, knew of no contribution by John D. Archbold under that name. He knew there had been "several contributions of $100,000 each and that the insurance companies each had given $50,000."

Washington, Oct. 4.—Charges by Senator Joseph M. Dixon that the senate investigation is being directed solely against Colonel Roosevelt and corroboration by George R. Sheldon, former treasurer of the Republican national committee, of the report that Standard Oil contributed $100,000 to the campaign fund of 1904 gave a sensational turn to the hearing of the Clapp committee here Wednesday.

The exchanges between Senators Dixon and Pomerene became so heated that Mr. Pomerene invited Mr. Dixon "outside," but the affair passed off without conflict. Mr. Dixon closed his testimony without giving the names of his informants.

Kankakee Has a $200,000 Fire.

Kankakee, Ill., Oct. 5.—Kankakee was attacked Thursday by the worst fire in its history, two city blocks of buildings being practically destroyed and a loss of $200,000 suffered. Three horses were burned to death.

Jim Corbett Improving.

Philadelphia, Oct. 5.—The condition of James J. Corbett, who was operated on for appendicitis in a hospital here, was improved Thursday, according to the attending physicians. They hope for a speedy recovery.

MISS GOULD IN WRECK

DISTINGUISHED WOMAN ESCAPES INJURIES ON WAY TO CHICAGO.

Engineer and Fireman Are Fatally Hurt When Train Crashes Into Freight Near Buffalo.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—Joy at an act of thoughtful consideration of the daughter of their employing house, followed by a quick plunge to the grim tragedy that has always accompanied their occupation, furnished drama among more than 2,000 delegates gathering for the annual conference of railroad Y. M. C. A. men.

Dainty notes of invitation in which Helen Miller Gould announced her desire that every employe of the Gould lines attending the Chicago conference break bread with her in a dinner at the Congress had just been received.

Then came the brief message over the wires that the train bearing Miss Gould to Chicago had been wrecked near Buffalo.

Later assurances came that Miss Gould and the party of women accompanying her in her private car had escaped unhurt. The wreck occurred when the train carrying Miss Gould's car crashed into a freight train at Wende station, twenty miles east of Buffalo.

The engineer and fireman of the passenger train were so badly scalded that little hope is held out for their recovery.

The dinner at which Miss Gould will be hostess will be a unique affair. It will be informal, and rank in the service of the system will be one of the questions tabooed. President B. F. Bush of the Missouri Pacific will act as toastmaster.

More than fifty railroad executives representing every important system of the United States have accepted invitations to be present at the banquet, making it one of the most notable gatherings of railway heads that has been held in this country.

SERVIANS DEFEAT THE TURKS

Thirty-Two Slain in First Battle on Balkan Frontier—Italy-Turkey Peace Pact Declared.

Constantinople, Oct. 5.—Severe fighting between Turkish and Servian troops is reported to have occurred on the southeastern frontier of Servia in a dispatch from Belgrade received by a news agency here Thursday.

The Turks are said to have lost 30 killed and many wounded, while the Servian casualties are given as two killed and eighteen wounded.

London, Oct. 5.—Peace was declared Thursday between Turkey and Italy.

Under the agreement of settlement Turkey abandons sovereignty over Tripoli, the sultan retaining only the spiritual claims.

Turkey agrees to withdraw her troops and to endeavor to persuade the Arabs to lay down their arms.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRE

Convention Hall, Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 4.—The names of Gov. John A. Dix, Congressman William Sulzer of New York, Herman A. Metz of New York, George B. Burd of Buffalo and Martin H. Glynn of Albany were balloted on Wednesday night for the Democratic nomination for governor and William Sulzer was named by acclamation after others withdrew.

Boston, Oct. 5.—Stephen B. Dow, head of Stephen B. Dow & Co., brokers, who failed recently, was arrested Thursday on a warrant charging him with the larceny of $100,000 from the Franklin Mining company.

Sonnenburg, Germany, Oct. 2.—The death of Lieut. Willy Hefer occurred here Monday. He was injured during the imperial maneuvers in Saxony, when his aeroplane struck a tree while he was making a reconnoitering flight.

Washington, Oct. 4.—The six powers which have failed in the proposed international loan to China have, upon the invitation of Russia, joined a conference to press for the payment of the $50,000,000 Boxer indemnities.

RACER BRUCE-BROWN KILLED

Millionaire Auto Driver Dies of Injuries Received When Machine Smashes Into Ditch.

Milwaukee, Oct. 3.—David Bruce-Brown, the millionaire auto driver, died in a hospital here Tuesday from injuries received when his Vanderbilt race car jumped into a ditch and overturned. His mechanician, Scudelari, was seriously injured.

Bruce-Brown was fitting his big Fiat racer for the Vanderbilt cup race, which started Wednesday, when the accident occurred.

Running at a speed of nearly ninety miles an hour, the Fiat blew a tire after rounding the "hairpin" turn on the Vanderbilt course, and plunged into the ditch.

Aviator Walsh Is Killed.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 5.—Aviator Charles F. Walsh was killed Thursday by a fall with his aeroplane at the interstate fair. He was 2,000 feet in the air when his mechanism went wrong and he dropped to the earth.

Three Die in Collision.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 5.—A west-bound train on the Pennsylvania railroad struck an automobile Thursday at the Wood street crossing in Wilkinsburg, a suburb. Three of the occupants, two men and a woman, were killed.

WHEN A TONIC IS NECESSARY

If You Are Run Down and Debilitated the Health Can Only Be Restored by Building Up the Blood.

When the body is weak and the blood thin it is sometimes difficult to find the cause unless a wasting illness has preceded the decline in health.

Obscure influences, something unhealthful in one's surroundings or work, may lead to a slow impoverishment of the blood and an enfeeblement of the whole body. When a serious stage has been reached there seems to be nothing that will account for it.

In such cases a complete change of climate or of work will sometimes effect a cure. It takes a long time, however, and for the great majority of sufferers is out of the question.

Mrs. G. P. Boutwell, of Clear Water, Minn., whose husband is a hardware merchant there, says:

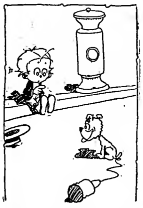
"About two years ago, when I was living at West Union, Iowa, I was all run down through hard work and worry. I called a doctor who said I was suffering from general debility. He treated me for some time but was unable to do much for me. I had cold chills all of the time and seemed to be nearly bloodless. I could not keep anything on my stomach and lived on eggs and milk for some time. My stomach was sour and the gas on it kept me from getting much sleep at night. The doctor's medicine made my stomach feel worse.

"My father had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with benefit and advised me to try them. After a week or so I could notice a change. I soon became stronger, my appetite came back and the headaches disappeared. I was then able to eat without distress and began to do my work. I had a good color and gained in flesh. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cannot be praised too highly."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a general tonic and are useful in all diseases arising from poor blood or weakened nerves, such as sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, pale and sallow complexions and many forms of weakness.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y. A booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," will be sent free upon request. Adv.

LOOKED LIKE IT.



The Kid—Fido, I'm beginning to think when I bought you fer a full-blooded setter dat de dealer played a joke on me!

Youthful Woman Pastor.

Rev. Miss Ina L. Morgan, of the Methodist church of Georgetown and Arrowsic, Me., is the youngest woman pastor in New England. She is in her early twenties and has been engaged in church work for nearly four years, having received a license in 1908 from Bishop John W. Hamilton, of Worcester.

Wrong Guess.

Nan—I've seen your new young man, and I should call him a diamond in the rough.

Fan—Well, he's susceptible to some polish, I'll admit, but you haven't classified him correctly; he's a Jasper.

IT'S THE FOOD.

The True Way to Correct Nervous Troubles.

Nervous troubles are more often caused by improper food and indigestion than most people imagine. Even doctors sometimes overlook this fact. A man says:

"Until two years ago waffles and butter with meat and gravy were the main features of my breakfast. Finally dyspepsia came on and I found myself in a bad condition, worse in the morning than any other time. I would have a full, sick feeling in my stomach, with pains in my heart, sides and head.

"At times I would have no appetite, for days, then I would feel ravenous, never satisfied when I did eat and so nervous I felt like shrieking at the top of my voice. I lost flesh badly and hardly knew which way to turn until one day I bought a box of Grape-Nuts food to see if I could eat that. I tried it without telling the doctor, and liked it fine; made me feel as if I had something to eat that was satisfying and still I didn't have that heaviness that I had felt after eating any other food.

"I hadn't drank any coffee then in five weeks. I kept on with the Grape-Nuts and in a month and a half I had gained 15 pounds, could eat almost anything I wanted, didn't feel badly after eating and my nervousness was all gone. It's a pleasure to be well again."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest. Adv.

ALTRUISTIC ELIZABETH

Agrees That Flirting Is Height of Altruism.

By F. HARRIS DEANS.

"Who's that?" I demanded, as Elizabeth bowed and then tried to look as if she hadn't.

"Where?" she asked, gazing round in every direction but one.

"He's on the ground," I informed her, as she finally glanced skyward; "he hasn't brought his aeroplane out with him today. I mean the man on the other side of the road, who doesn't appear to be able to make up his mind whether to pretend that he didn't see your bow, or that you didn't see his."

"Oh," said Elizabeth uncertainly, "oh—I don't know who he is."

"What made you bow to him, then?"

"I didn't. He bowed to me. I cut him. You know I did. I'll never speak to you again if you say he didn't."

"Anything for the sake of conversation," I said agreeably; "keep talking. You cut him so severely that I saw the blood come—to his face."

"No," said Elizabeth, clutching at my arm in her eagerness, "not really? Do you mean he—blushed?"

"Well," I hedged, "if he wasn't blushing he was feeling particularly healthy at the moment; he distinctly glowed."

"Is he"—with an effort she stopped herself glancing round—"is he still staring at me?—horrid creature!"

"No," I reassured her, looking over my shoulder, "he's gone on."

"Beast!" she snapped viciously, "that's just like him."

"Seeing you are unacquainted," I mentioned mildly, "you seem curiously familiar with his manners."

"I never said I didn't know him."

"You did."

"I didn't. I said I DON'T know him."

"Where's the difference?"

"Wasn't there a law to make children go to school when you were a boy? One's the present tense, and the other's the past."

"I see, and he's a past tenser?"

"M'm," said Elizabeth, with an air of one exhausted with the subject. "Just look at that woman's hat, Dick; did you ever see anything like it?"

"Awful, isn't it?" I agreed.

"How can you know?—you're not looking."

"I know without looking; that's why I let you come out with me sometimes; I hate ugly things, and you always point out where I don't want to look."

"I'm sure I don't; I always tell you if I see anything pretty. There's a smart but over there, now—at least, they were all the rage last year; nobody decent could wear one. . . . I wonder why on earth she wears the thing—it doesn't suit her a bit."

"Where?"

"Perhaps the poor woman hasn't any friends to tell her. She looks a lonely soul."

"More likely they have told her, and that's why she hasn't any friends." She hesitated for a moment, and glanced at me from the corner of her eye. "Talking of friends," she resumed, in a curious tone of embarrassment.

"Don't let's start talking scandal on a lovely day like this," I pleaded.

"I wasn't going to." She paused, and dug at the gravel path with the end of her sunshade. "Let's sit down, shall we? I want to tell you something."

"About—?" I gave a backward jerk of my head as we seated ourselves.

"Ye—es, though I don't know however you guessed."

"Intuition," I said complacently. "I have a frightfully keen intellect some days—I think it must be something in the air." There was a restful silence for a moment, during which I mused over how clever I was, and Elizabeth sat trying to think out how clever she could be.

"I wouldn't tell you," she burst out at length, "only I know it's really my duty."

"Duty!" I sneered disparagingly. "If it's your conscience that's egging you on to tell me, Elizabeth, let's talk of something more interesting."

"And anyhow, if I didn't, somebody else would."

"Ah, that sounds more hopeful. I knew I shouldn't hear much if it only depended on your conscience."

"His name," she said, beginning for once at the beginning, "is Greatorex—Marmaduke Greatorex."

"Marmaduke," I said reflectively—"I knew a boy of that name at school; we called him 'Marmaduke.' Still, it's a good name if you can live up to it—he couldn't; he became a stockbroker in the end."

"I met him," she went on, "at my aunt's last year; he was a misogynist."

"A what?" I cried, aghast at this display of erudition.

"It means a woman hater. I looked it up in the dictionary when they told me what he was."

"Good Lord!" I said, still unsettled. "Fancy having people looking one up in the dictionary! No wonder he looked so depressed."

"He used to say most awful things about us girls," she pursued. "I shouldn't like to tell you half he said."

"Wouldn't you?" I murmured sympathetically. "Try. Don't think to spare me."

"Well, for one thing," she said, thus urged, "he said—he said—well I don't know what he didn't say."

"Don't worry about what he didn't say—that's not the part I feel I shall be interested in."

"Well, he said—mind you, this isn't a quarter as bad as some of them, only I can't remember those—he said the feminine sex—that shows you the sort of man he was, doesn't it?" she broke off. "Fancy saying 'feminine sex.' Well, anyhow—don't get so impatient, I'm telling you as quickly as I can; you keep interrupting so. He said the feminine sex was the rock on which men were—wrecked, or foundered, or—something nautical, anyhow. He was a horrid man."

"To some extent," I admitted, "I can sympathise with your feelings."

"And then he said," she went on, "that marriage was a snare to which woman was a successful but inadequate bait." She paused, flushed with indignation, and eyed me expectantly.

"A felicitous phrase," I said, feeling bound to say something, "but sadly lacking in tact."

"Yes, it was, wasn't it? So, of course——" she spoke in the tone of one who had made many sacrifices—"I had to——"

"Snub him," I interposed. "Naturally. That, of course, accounts for his behavior just now."

Elizabeth flushed a little, and gazed interestedly at the tip of her shoe.

"Well," she said, a trifle awkwardly, "I didn't exactly SNUB him. I—I talked to him—tried to persuade him . . . differently, you know." Her expression was vague.

"Oh," I said, not following her. "What did you say?"

"I didn't say anything. Don't pretend to be dense. Don't you understand?"

"Hanged if I do."

"Why, don't you see, of course I had to convince him that women were not—well, weren't quite what he thought them. I had to try and make him have a higher opinion of them."

"I see," I cried, my brow clearing. "Well?"

"Well?"

"What happened; did you succeed?"

"Temporarily, anyhow."

"Do you mean you couldn't live up to it or what?"

"No, there was nothing to live up to; he—he misunderstood my motives."

"I suppose," I ventured, "he thought you had converted him for personal reasons?"

"I think he must have. I don't think, you know, he could have been quite a gentleman."

"To have entertained such a base suspicion?" I queried.

"Not only that. To say the things he did."

"Why, what did he say?"

"For one thing he called me a flirt. That wasn't flirting, was it?"

"FLIRTING! It was the height of altruism."

"The height of altruism," Elizabeth murmured reflectively, at the same time glancing at me approvingly. "Do you know, I think that's rather a nice description. And it's true, too, isn't it?"

"Why, yes," I answered, "comparatively."

Day Set for Marriages.

Visitors to the quaint old city of Plougastel, in Brittany, are struck with the fact that all marriages are solemnized in a single day of the year. Why this unusual custom prevails is easily explained. The men are all fishermen, many of them going as far as the Newfoundland banks, and are at home only during a few months in the winter. One day in early February is set apart for the weddings. Little courting is done, but much haggling over the dowry of the girls. They have to bring a certain quantity of linen, chickens, pigs, and vegetables. Frequently a match is broken off because a father refuses to add a sack of potatoes to the dowry. On the day set the inhabitants of the entire region go to Plougastel. The whole population goes to church to hear mass, to take communion. Often 50 or more couples are united on the same day. Bride and bridegroom do not walk together until the ceremony has been completed.

It Was the Boss, All Right.

In the window of a downtown restaurant somebody had placed a sign which read:

"SECOND COOK WANTED."

An applicant made his way to the kitchen and found the head cook.

"There's the boss over there," said the galley chief, jerking his head in the direction of a man washing dishes.

"Don't kid me," said the caller. "Tell me if you want me or tell me if you don't. There's no use of ringing in a dishwasher."

The man at the sink picked a stack of plates out of the water and let them all fall to the floor with a smash.

"Now," he exclaimed, "tell me who you think the boss is!"

N. W. BANK GROWTH

RESPONSIBLE FOR MOVING OF RECORD CROP WITHOUT MONEY STRINGENCY.

1,671 NEW INSTITUTIONS

$38,740,905 New Capital—North Dakota's Increase Most Marvelous of All—How Trade Is Aided.

Minneapolis.—Backed by the entire financial strength of 2,560 state and national banks of Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana, with combined capitalization of $76,290,375, the growth of which in number and resources in the past eleven years makes one of the most remarkable instances of progress in the financial history of the world, the farmers are marketing a billion-dollar crop, the demand on Minneapolis for money is less acute than in former years and the outlook is that every call will be met, nothwithstanding the stupendous agricultural production.

The gain of 160 per cent in the banking organizations of Minneapolis in eleven years does not in itself account for the remarkable condition now existing here that is attracting the attention of the financial east. The increase in that time from $7,319,630 to $19,059,520 in Minneapolis capital employed in banking, a growth probably without parallel in any other city in the United States, does not alone explain the situation this year, when a crop great beyond any comparison is moving to market, the call for money is on, there has been no money stringency and bankers predict that there will be none.

The country of which Minneapolis is the financial center, not including the farther states and those portions of Iowa and Wisconsin which do their financing here, but only the four states intimately connected, had 889 banks, state and national, in January, 1901. A period of financial growth the records of which have never before been printed began that year. The last issue of the Banking Register makes possible a compilation which shows that in the intervening years 1,671 state or national banks were organized.

In the table below, which shows the wonderful rise of the northwest in financial strength, is the explanation. It shows the number of banks in the four principal states in Minneapolis trade territory in 1912 and in 1901:

NUMBER OF BANKS.

	1912	1901	Inc.
Minnesota	1,013	475	538
North Dakota	710	159	554
South Dakota	633	209	425
Montana	204	50	154
Totals	2,560	889	1,871

CAPITALIZATION.

	1912	1901	Increase
Minn.	$39,195,000	$25,414,900	$11,790,200
N. D.	13,234,000	2,348,000	10,999,000
S. D.	12,131,675	3,979,800	8,151,875
Mont.	11,729,700	3,806,870	7,922,830
Totals	$76,290,375	$37,549,470	$39,740,905

STATE LANDS LURE.

Back to the Farm Movement Shown by Auditor Iverson's Report.

St. Paul.—Minnesota state lands are not being bought by non-resident speculators, but by people who intend to farm them according to the report of State Auditor Iverson, on sales for the years 1911 and 1912.

The average number of acres sold to non-residents was 180 in 1911 and 188 in 1912; to residents of Minnesota counties other than in which the land was located, 157 acres in 1911 and 144 in 1912; to residents of the counties in which the land was located, 73 acres in 1911 and 77 in 1912. The general average was 112 in 1911 and 109 in 1912.

The total amount of sales in 1911 was $638,013.60, averaging $6.73 per acre, exclusive of timber, and in 1912 the total amount of sales was $1,087,199.14, averaging $6.46 per acre, exclusive of timber.

In 1911 there were 943 buyers of 94,745.76 acres of land, divided as follows: Non-residents of state 27,267 acres, Minnesota people non-residents of county 31,243.79 acres, and to residents of the counties 36,234.97 acres.

In 1912 there were 1,535 buyers of 168,270.95 acres, divided as follows: Non-residents of the state, 27,146.03 acres; Minnesota people non-residents of county, 72,798.09 acres, and residents of the county 68,326.93 acres.

These figures bear out the contention that outsiders are not grabbing the land for while in 1912 nearly twice as much land was sold, non-residents secured less than they did the preceding year and residents of the state bought more than twice as much.

Warrant Out for Missing Farmer.

Pipestone.—The authorities are looking for Fred Krockenmusz, a farmer residing south of Pipestone, who has disappeared. A warrant has been issued for his arrest, charging grand larceny in the first degree.

Bishop Quayle in the Chair.

Morris, Minn., Oct. 4.—The eighteenth annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in northern Minnesota is holding its sessions here, with Bishop Quayle presiding.

Miners' Bodies Recovered.

Biwabik, Minn., Oct. 4.—In the Ruddy mine the bodies of the three miners overtaken by a cloud-burst, which flooded that mine several weeks ago, were found floating on a mass of fallen planking.

FRED W. CARPENTER

Fred W. Carpenter, of Sauk Center, Minn., formerly secretary to President Taft, and now minister to Morocco, has been appointed minister to Siam in place of Hamilton King, who died recently.

POSSE SEEKS SUITOR.

Bride of Two Weeks Shot At Doorstep.

St. Paul.—All armed with shotguns, knives and any weapons available on short notice, a posse of packinghouse and stockyards employees of South St. Paul have been searching the woods for a man who shot and probably fatally wounded Mrs. Anna Blazich, a bride of two weeks.

As Mrs. Blazich was entering her home with purchases she had made at a store, a man leaped out from the side of the porch and shot her through the head. With the revolver in his hand, he ran through the railroad yards to the woods. Mrs. Blazich was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital, and policemen organized the posse and started after the man.

The St. Paul police were notified to look for Ivan Wickic, a former suitor, who they declared purchased a revolver twenty minutes before the shooting.

The bullet struck Mrs. Blazich in the temple and she was unable to talk. Physicians say she cannot live.

St. Paul—(Later).—Less than six hours after he had made his escape into a wood near South St. Paul, following the shooting of Mrs. Anna Blazich, a man believed to be Ivan Wickie, a former suitor of the woman, was arrested by two cowboys employed at the stock yards as he was crossing the railroad tracks near Inver Grove.

HUTCHINSON'S BIG DAY.

Fiftieth Anniversary of Attack by Sioux Indians.

Hutchinson. — An exceedingly large crowd attended the opening of the 50th anniversary of the Sioux Indian massacre in Hutchinson. The feature of the day's celebration was the cornerstone laying of the new public school building which will be erected on the site where the old school building was burned by the Indians 50 years ago.

The principal address was made by Dr. George Edgar Vincent of the University of Minnesota. Carl A. Anderson, superintendent of county schools, H. L. Merrill, superintendent of city schools; George B. Aikon, state inspector of high schools and state superintendent of schools, B. Schultz, were also speakers at the cornerstone laying.

Carlos Avery, president of the Hutchinson school board, presided at the ceremonies connected with laying the corner stone. Dr. Vincent was given the honor of laying the corner stone and was assisted by O. W. Lundsten, secretary of the school board. The parade, which was one of the features, started through the main streets. It was headed by a large float on which was built a reproduction of the old school building burned 50 years ago.

PREDICT IDEAL AUTUMN.

Weather Man Says Indian Summer Will Last.

Minneapolis. — Fine Indian summer, with its glow of radiance, its afternoons of sunshine and its evenings of agreeable temperatures, is likely to continue the full natural span of life that tradition has assigned to it, according to the prophets at the government weather bureau, who ventured on a long distance prediction.

There is said to be every indication that this "ideal fall weather," as Indian summer is sometimes called in common parlance, will continue for two or three weeks or possibly for the greater part of October.

Ginseng Thief Caught.

Mankato.—The ginseng thief, who last week robbed three farms of $1,000 worth of roots, was captured by Sheriff Anton Osten and Deputy Sheriff Ed. Ario. He proved to be G. H. Bruer, who has been living near Lake Crystal since May 1, and about whose past nothing is known. After his last robbery at Rapidan on Friday, he was traced by officers to his home, they following his wagon tracks eleven miles.

HUTCHINSON IS HOST

CELEBRATION IS ENLIVENED BY REPRODUCTION OF PIONEER DAYS.

6,000 PEOPLE ATTENDED.

Cavalry and Troops on Foot Add to The Gayety of The Occasion.—All Is Success.

Hutchinson.—A mimic Indian uprising seemed to have placed this town in immediate danger, the second and last day of the semi-centennial celebration. Indians galloped through the street, but the people for miles around came by team and auto to the defense of the city.

Before the day was over fully 6,000 people were here, as the day was ideal and the roads fine. The soldiers camping in the public square were constantly firing and the din of battle was heard again after a quiet of 50 years.

Women Preserve Town.

It was due to the women 50 years ago that the town was not abandoned, and they were given appropriate honor in the program. The few families here at the time of the Indian outbreak were ready to go back East but for a petition signed and circulated by Mrs. Ellen Harrington, Mrs. Julie Ells and Mrs. Sarah Harrington. Although picturesque and amusing floats were shown in the parade, the Indians, painted and decorated, and the soldiers on foot and horseback were the chief attraction and sent a thrill through both the old and younger generations. Calling for fair play, Frank Edy, former congressman, discussed the controversy between J. J. Hill and Dean Wood of the university agricultural college. He said: "Both are right and both are wrong."

The afternoon program was begun with appropriate exercises in the public square. A historic pageant was the feature of the day. The old prairie schooner occupied a place of honor in the parade, and decorated floats of various kinds illustrative of pioneer days were also shown.

Streets Illuminated.

Profuse electric illumination on all of the principal streets helped to add to the gayety of the occasion, and almost turned the night into day. The soldiers entertained the crowd during the evening with fancy drills. A company of cavalry made up of young men from the country paraded the principal streets, which together with the presence of the Fort Snelling troops gave Hutchinson a decidedly military appearance.

The celebration concluded with addresses in the public square by Capt. A. H. Reed of Glencoe, A. C. Baker of Brownton, Peter Hanson and others.

ARSON IS CHARGED.

Former Resident of Meeker County Arrested.

Litchfield.—Michael Arthur, a former resident of this county, is in jail charged with arson. L. V. Conley, a deputy state fire marshal, is the complaining witness.

It is alleged in the complaint that Arthur set fire to the premises on forty acres of land owned by J. J. Monahan in Forest Prairie. Included in the loss was the residence said by witnesses to be valued at about $200, whereas it was insured for $800; also household goods, a buggy, etc., which were insured far beyond their value, it is alleged. Arthur left the county soon afterward, and was arrested in South Dakota. The hearing has been set for tomorrow.

E. Lenhardt of this city was the successful bidder for the construction of the city sewer. Work will begin at once.

Mrs. Bert Cook of this city was seriously burned by the explosion of a can of kerosene while she was building a fire.

Yawn Dislocates Her Jaw.

St. Paul.—Mrs. Ralph Downs, the wife of the former chief of police in South St. Paul, yawned slightly in excess of the limitations prescribed for that expression of weariness. Her jaw was dislocated and it required the services of a physician to restore the bone to its normal position. Mrs. Downs suffered great pain and could not speak until the doctor finished his work.

Carmen Declared Reckless.

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 2. — Duluth patrons of street cars have made vigorous protest against alleged intoxication on the part of many strike breaking car crews; one strike breaker was given 30 days straight for intoxication; another man, who it is charged, caused the wrecking of three cars Sunday night was held when he pleaded not guilty.

St. Paul Next.

Northfield.—St. Paul has been decided upon as the next place of meeting of the Congregational Association of Minnesota. This understanding was reached by the association, which held its annual convention in this city. Definite announcement will not be made, however, until the delegates have had an opportunity to return and report to their various churches. Of the St. Paul churches which extended invitations to the association, that of Olivet, probably will be accepted.

WHY THE FIFTH MAN LEFT

He Wore a Wig and the Other Four Men at the Table Were Bald —and Talkative.

In the smoking room of a westbound ocean liner two days out from an English port five men sat at a "small game" of poker. When the chips had been cashed in the men retained their places, and presently one of the party said: "This is funny; four bald heads out of a possible five," and then there was a discussion as to the causes of baldness, in which all took part except the unafflicted man, who was a good listener for a while. He then bade the others good night. When he had gone the youngest of the group, who was less bald than the others, said: "Do you know why Mr. Blank made the getaway? He wears a wig, and is probably as bald as any of us." And for the rest of the journey Mr. Blank's head was the object of study—at a distance—for he never again appeared in the smoking room.

BREAKING OUT ON LEG

Hilltop, Kan.—"About two years ago I began to notice a breaking out on my leg. At first it was very small but soon it began to spread until it formed large blotches. The itching was terrible and almost constant. Many nights I could not sleep at all. After scratching it to relieve the itching it would burn so dreadfully that I thought I could not stand it. For nearly a year I tried all kinds of salves and ointment, but found no relief. Some salves seemed to make it worse until there were ugly sores, which would break open and run.

"One day I saw an advertisement of Cuticura Remedies. I got a sample of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and began by washing the sores with the Cuticura Soap, then applying the Cuticura Ointment twice a day. I noticed a change and got more Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a few weeks I was cured. It has healed so nicely that no scar remains." (Signed) Mrs. Anna A. Lew, Dec. 17, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

More Schoolboy Howlers.

"The Salic law is that you must take everything with a grain of salt."

"Julius Caesar was renowned for his great strength. He threw a bridge across the Rhine."

"The zodiac is the zoo of the sky, where lions, goats and other animals go after they are dead."

"The Pharisees were people who liked to show off their goodness by praying to synonyms."

"An abstract noun is something you can't see when you are looking at it."

"Algebraical symbols are used when you do not know what you are talking about."—Westminster Gazette.

Marie Divided the Candy.

When the uncle of a couple of Brooklyn youngsters last called at the household whereof they form a part he brought with him some pieces of candy, which were given to the little girl to divide with her brother.

Later the uncle summoned this child to the living room and asked:

"Marie, when you divided those five pieces of candy with your brother, did you give him two and a half pieces?"

"No, sir," said Marie. "I saw they weren't going to come out even, so I ate one before I began to divide."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Significant.

"He proposed to her in a canoe."

"Did she accept him?"

"I presume so. The canoe capsized."

Exactly That.

"Why does he wear such a swimming suit as that?"

"For divers reasons."

The Food Tells Its Own Story

It's one dish that a good many thousand people relish greatly for breakfast, lunch or supper.

Post Toasties

Crisped wafers of toasted Indian Corn—a dainty and most delightful dish.

Try with cream and sugar.

"The Memory Lingers"

Postum Cereal Company, Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Instead of it being Wilson and Roosevelt against Taft as the fight was early in the campaign, it has now developed into an united effort of Taft and Wilson against Roosevelt. This condition can exist only because the confidential reports from all over the country to the headquarters of both old parties show Roosevelt to be the strongest candidate with the people.—Northern Light.

Superintendent of schools Mostue is sending out a large number of sample copies to school officers, thanking them for their support. As a rule the school officers of the county are pretty well on to their job, so far as superintendent of schools is concerned, and Mr. Mostue has gained their support by his close attention and interest that he has taken in the Country Schools of the County. We don't want a superintendent to sit by a red hot stove and allow the country schools to "Root hog or die," but we want one who gets around and attends to business, the same as Mr. Mostue does, and as long as he does that he will get the support of the country school officials.

McIntosh have a County division proposition to divide Polk county, and create Columbia county at the November election.

This is a fair proposition for the division of that county which is too large for convenience and will undoubtedly carry this time, as the eastern part are united for it. If Crookston and East Grand Forks turn down the farmers of the eastern end of the county on this division they might regret it, if a county option law should pass the legislature this winter. With the county as it now is there is no question but what Polk would be a county option county from Grand Forks to the eastern boundary.

Now comes Ex- Congressman Halvorson who was elected to Congress by the farmers Alliance in 1890, advising old Alliance men to vote for Brattland for Congress. We were one of the old Alliance men who voted for Halvorson in 1890, and after he was Elected he got lost there at Washington and we have not heard from him since, until last week when it appears that he found his way home and has turned out to be a Socialist, advising people to vote for Brattland. We don't want to send another man down there to get lost for we have not got time to hunt him up, so we advise our old Alliance friends to vote for Steenerson the Progressive Candidate, who Progresses when he gets down to Washington.

Will You Indorse Dishonesty?

We do not publish any thing of any candidate for office casting reflections on his honor or integrity, unless we have the facts on file in our office to prove what we say.

Any man living in eastern Pennington county knows how the Red Lake River was jammed up and dried up by logs, put in by the lumber companies last winter, and that it killed every fish in it. We made a complaint to the Game and Fish commission appointed by governor Eberhart, that had the power to compel them to open an outlet for the passage of fish and the following is a true copy of a letter written by the Deputy game Warden at Thief River Falls: Read it you people that know the facts, then walk up to election and vote for Eberhart, for governor. A man that will keep a gang like that in office.

COPY

January 13. 1912.

Mr. H. A. Rider,
Executive Agent,
Game and Fish Com..
St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Sir:

Your letter advising me to investigate conditions along the Red Lake River and it's mouth, in regards to log jams and dying of fish on account of low water caused by these log jams is without any foundation whatever. As I inspected the River starting from the first jam and inspected every jam from there clear to the mouth and found plenty of water for fish to move either way, I crossed the river at it's mouth and found very few logs there, but about 3½ feet of water at the deepest point. I also made many inquiries from Indians residing at the mouth as to the fish dying and they all told the same, that they had not seen any dead fish, but the water in the lake was about 8½ feet low water mark, which I measured from old marks and found correct. I also had a party with me as scout. Mr. M. Forder, formerly president of the City Council of Thief River Falls, who had also investigated conditions of these log jams in the interest of the City Water & Light Plant, thinking that perhaps the cause of low water might be from these log jams, but found conditions as I report within. Simply low water from which there is no remedy.

Yours Truly.
E. O. Cooke.

It is easy to see that the above letter was written in the interest of the lumber companies to save them the expense of opening that log jam. Every man living in the easter part of Pennington county knows that at the date of that letter Red Lake River was frozen to the bottom, caused by them log jams, and a vote for Eberhart is a vote to retain that kind of men in office.

At the time the above letter was written there was from twenty five to thirty million feet logs jamed into the river which had entirely closed off the water. To day this same gang are working tooth and toe nail for the reelection of Eberhart. Are you farmers going to help them? We say no.

MUST PAY SUBSCRIPTION.

During the last term of the circuit court at Atchison county Missouri, the case of H.F.Staples vs Charles Traub was tried. The suit was brought on a long standing account and among other items was 16 years subscription for the Atchison County Mail claiming he did not take the paper and that he had refused to take the paper from the post-office, and mail box a number of times. The plaintiff proved by post masters and others that Mr. Traub did take the paper during all the 16 years. In the case it was shown that according to law, even if a subscriber does occasionally order a newspaper discontinued or refuse to accept it he cannot get out of paying what he owes for the paper, and the subscriber must pay the arrearage before stopping the paper.

The jury in this case was out only a short time and brought in a verdict for the entire account including the subscription for the Mail 16 years at $1.50 a year, or $24. The costs in the justice court and the circuit court amounted to about $100 besides the attorney fees.

A similar case has been decided by the court of appeals and it was held in that case that any one taking a newspaper must pay for it as long as they take it from the post-office.—Ex.

Foolish Question.

Mrs. [illegible]—Did you see any of the old masters while you were abroad? Mrs. Newrich—Mercy, no! They are all dead.—Exchange.

Paid Advertising:

Allow me through the columns of your esteemed paper to extend to my neighbors and friends throughout the County my sincere thanks for their support and for the nomination tendered me at the Primary Election.

Knowing our teachers, the conditions in our schools and being in the work, it will be a source of pleasure to me serve the people and to do my best for the upholding of our rural schools should I be favored with the election on Nov. 5th.

Fraternally,
—E. A. Mostue.

Wilhelm Michelet

JUDGE OF PROBATE.
Non-Partisan Candidate for Re-election.

I Respectfully Solicit Your Vote and Support,

WILHELM MICHELET,
Thief River Falls, Minn.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Oct. 11th, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. October 7th, 1912. Notice is hereby given that Halver Svendson, of Hilda Minnesota, who on June 27th, 1905, made Homestead Application No. 1196, Serial No. 04488, for Lots 3, 4, Section 1, and Lots 1, 2, Section 2, Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for the District of Minnesota, at Theif River Falls Minn. on the 11th, day of November 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Knut Aslenson, Swan Swanson, O. A. Storonas, of Hilda Minn. Halvor Falkedahl, of Highlanding Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Now comes the news that La Follett will support Wilson for president, which make Wisconsin go stronger than ever for Roosevelt, as the people are getting "next" to these sudden changes, from U. S. Senator down to a country editor, that sends out his paper free, to subscribers, paid for by the corporations to get votes for men like Taft and Eberhart.

Fortunes In Faces.

There's often much truth in the saying "her face is her fortune," but its never said where pimples, skin eruptions blotches, or other blemishes disfigure it. Impure blood is back of them all, and shows the need of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They promote health and beauty. Try them. 25 cents at All Druggists.

Placed.

Mrs. B.—Is she a Mary of the vine clad cottage? Mrs. M.—No, a Martha of the rubber plant flat.—Harper's Bazar.

Thoughts never lack words. It is words that lack thoughts.—Joubert.

Noah Was Lucky.

"What are you smiling about?" asked Noah.

"I was just thinking," replied Japheth, "how lucky it was we could go ahead and build this ark without waiting for an appropriation from congress."—Washington Star.

A Surprise In Store.

Sweet Innocence—Papa says that you can't afford to marry. Guileful Youth—Oh, how absurd! Why, it only costs a few dollars! Sweet Innocence—Is that so? How foolish papa is! I'll tell him.

His Protest.

Mrs. Benham—Before you married me you said that I was a queen. Benham—Well, I no longer believe in a monarchical form of government.—Chicago News.

Saved By His Wife

She's a wise woman who knows just what to do when her husband's life is in danger, but Mrs. R. J. Flint, Braintree, Vt., is of that kind. "She insisted on my using Dr. King's New Discovery," writes Mr. F. "for a dreadful cough, when I was so weak my friends all thought I had only a short time to live, and it completely cured me." A quick cure for coughs and colds, it's the most safe and reliable medicine for many throat and lung troubles—grip, bronchitis, croup, quinsy, tonsilitis, hemorrhages. A trial will convince you. 50cts, and $1.00. Guaranteed by All Druggists

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Sep. 20th, 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 9th, 1912

NOTICE is hereby given that Grace M. Pinkerton, of Torgerson Minn., who on May 15th, 1911, made homestead Entry No. 06180 for S. E. ¼ Section 22 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 2nd day of November, 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

A. T. Illice, of Germantown Minn. John Markuson, E. H. Besancon, of Torgerson Minn. J. H. Hay, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Sept. 20th, 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 18th, 1912. Notice is hereby given that Kittil Jordshaugen, of Germatown Minn., who on Nov. 1, 1904, made Homestead Application No 797, Serial No. 04644, for N. W. ¼ Section 8 Towship 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before The Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn., on the 31st, day of October 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Torgel K. Hegtvedt, Gunder T. Skretvet, Christoffer Vad, Leif T. Jordeshaugen, all of Germantown Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Publication in the Sunbeam Sept. 20,

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. September 18, 1912

Notice is hereby given that Torgel K. Hegtvedt, of Germantown Minn., who on November 1st, 1904, made Homestead Application No. 795 Serial No. 04642, for Lots 6, 7, and E. ½ S. W. ¼ Section 6 Towship 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. on the 31st, day of October 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Leif T. Jordeshaugen, Gunder T. Skretvet Kittil T. Jordshaugen, Christoffer Vad, all of Germantown, Minn.

ARTHUR P. TOUPIN,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Oct. 4, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Sept. 30th, 1912 Notice is hereby given, that Nels Thoreson, of Germantown Minn., who on May 16th, 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 06162 for Lots 1, 2 & S. ½ N. E. ¼ Section 1 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 12th, day of November 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Martin Olson; Robert Kamback; John Haaff, Carl Edseth, all of Germantown Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

A Log On The Track

of the fast express means serious trouble ahead if not removed, so does loss of appetite. It means lack of vitality, loss of strength and nerve weakness. If appetite fails, take Electric Bitters quickly to overcome the cause by toning up the stomach and curing the indigestion. Michael Hessheimer of Lincoln, Neb., had been sick over three years, but six bottles of Electric Bitters put him right on his feet again. They have helped thousands. They give pure blood, strong nerves, good digestion. Only 50 cts at All Druggists.

Some Men Do That Anyway.

"What would you do if you had $1,000,000?"

"Nothing."—Detroit Free Press.

The Limit.

Stern—Say, is Brown's credit good? Kern—Good? Why, he couldn't even borrow trouble.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Power of the Eye.

A [illegible] can threaten like a [illegible] and leveled gun or can insult like hissing or kicking, or, in its altered mood, by beams of kindness it can make the heart dance with joy.—Emerson's "Conduct of Life."

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF GROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9.40 a. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

Popular Jokes.

The most popular joke which has been published in any language in the history of the world is stated to be that which appeared in an obscure corner of the Punch almanac for 1845. It read, "Advice to persons about to marry—Don't!" It would be interesting to know who was its author. Another, founded on a similar subject, was the "Advice to persons who have fallen in love—Fall out!" One of the most brilliant things that ever appeared in our contemporary was the brief dialogue between an inquiring child and his impatient parent: "What is mind?" "No matter." "What is matter?" "Never mind."—Westminster Gazette.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN.

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

We have a fine farm for sale in Deer Park township for only $21 per acre.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof

C. L. Clark started cutting flax this morning which is a soft snap.

Potatoes are beginning to rot in in the ground. It is best to dig them out as soon as posible.

There will be a big farmers picnic at the residence of George Leimers next Sunday. All are invited.

If we had Roosevelt for president, that the government engineers office at st, Paul would be promptly requested to go on a vacation, and not return.

If the present unfavorable weather continues there will not be much plowing done this fall, as the plows have stood rusting in the fields for nearly a month now.

Born;:To Mr, and Mrs walter McAndress on Sunday morning last a bouncing baby boy. Mother and son are doing nicely and Walter is stepping a little higher than usual.

The Dredge on Ditch 47 has got as far north as the section corner on section 20 and are turning west today. It is to be hoped that they will get at least ¼ of a mile further west this fall.

FOR SALE: One cow and one Heifer, that will be fresh in November. Also two bulls one year old last spring. E. A. Mostue.

An examination for positions as rural mail carriers is to be held at Thief River Falls on Saturday November 2nd. If you are desirous of getting into the mail service of your Uncle Sam attend this examination.

The weighing of mail that goes out and comes in has made a lot extra work for the post masters, but it is a good business proposition for the government to know the weight of their mail, and this is the only way they can find out.

The roads are reported to be in horrible condition this side of Thief River Falls. It is likely to be a mistake to have that new state road end one mile this side of town. Better change it and the state road built right up to the elevators, as there would be no use to leave one mile of impassible road at the business end of a 20 mile state graded road.

The lumber companies thought the people was doing to much kicking along Red Lake River, so they will dig a new outlet to Red Lake through Willow river. Or course they can do just as they please as long as they have got Taft appointed engineers at St. Paul, and can spare cash enough from their profits to buy a jug of whisky to hire a country editor to advise people to vote to keep a gang of that kind in power.

Notwithstanding the large amount of rain that we have had the water is going down instead of rising in Red Lake River. This is undoubtly caused by the lumber companies having dug a new channel out of Red Lake into the Willow river. Of course an individual would be promptly stopped if they did this, but a lumber Co. can do just as they please under the present administration, and the beauty of it is that they make money enough out of the deal so they can afford to hire an unprincipled cuss to advise people, in his paper, to vote to keep a gang like that in power,

Guy Mellus who has for two seasons successfully run the Highlanding Creamery, left for Todd county last week, where he will engage in farming. Mr Henry Paulson who ran the Creamery in 1900 will finish out the season for the Highlanding Creamery, as they will close down to give the cows two months vacation about December 1st.

REPORT OF HIGHLADING CREAMERY, FOR AUGUST

Pounds of cream rec'd	22328
Pounds of butter fat	5989,2-10
Average test of cream	26,8-10
Pounds of butter made	7439.
Pounds of butter shipped	7304
Pounds of butter sold patrons	93
Pounds of butter sold others	42
Price paid per lb. for butter fat	27½c
Pounds of overrun	1449.8
Percent of overrun	24,1-5
Receipts
Bal. from last month	$352,78
Rec'd for butter shipped	1744,82
Rec'd for butter sold patrons	22.46
Rec'd for butter sold elsewhere	10,50
Rec'd from other sources	1243
	2192.99
Disbursements
Paid patrons by check	1555,59
Paid patrons by butter and milk	28.86
Paid patrons by hauling	13.85
Paid patrons by supplies	.63
Running expen	114.68
Paid into sinking fund	51,59
Paid cream haulers	6.40
Paid supplies	30,20
Bal. at end of month	391,69
Total	2192,99

Names of patrons having checks for $40 or more.

Sjur Stolaas	45.28
T. S. Jacobson	52.95
O. O. Howard	41.75
T. S. Dahle	40.69
J. Quirk	44.60
Olof B. Henson	70.31
Halvor Swenson	46.39
G. Aabjernson	41,07.
H. Waale	40.12
C.J. Eckwold	56.55

Wm. Vaughan.
Sec'y.

Saved Leg Of Boy

"It seemed that my 14-year old boy would have to lose his leg, on account of an ugly ulcer, caused by a bad bruise," wrote D. F. Howard, Aquone, N. C. "All remedies and doctors treatment failed till we tried Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and cured him with one box." Cures burns, boils, skin eruptions, piles, 25c at All Druggists.

FARMERS PICNIC.

Sunday Oct. 13th there will be a picnic at the farm of George Leimers in Town of Deer Park. Several candidates, and competent orators of the Public Ownership Party will be present and deliver speeches of great importance to the farmers. Ladies and gentlemen you are cordially invited to attend and get acquainted with the issue of the Public Ownership Party,

George Leimers.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE,
Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Bigness of Texas.

The state of Texas is bigger than France, bigger than the whole German empire, bigger than Austria-Hungary, bigger twice over than the United Kingdom. It is rich in natural resources, and if settled as thickly as little Belgium it would have a population of 265,000,000, or nearly three times the present population of the entire United States.

Educated.

Gayboy—Do you know anything about betting on horse races? Oldman—I know all about it. I've quit.

Why Pay Cash

WHEN YOU CAN BUY ON

Easy Credit Terms

PIANOS $124.75 UP.

ORGANS $19.00 UP.

SEWING MACHINES $7.75 UP.

STOVES and RANGES $2.15 UP.

HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE of all kinds at 60 cents up.

IRON and STEEL SAFES, TYPEWRITERS and OFFICE FURNITURE From $6.85 up.

We are the largest manufacturers [illegible] MONTHLY PAYMENTS [illegible]

THE ENGLEWOOD CO.
[illegible] Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

Republican Ticket.

For President:
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
U. S. Senator:
KNUT NELSON.
Governor:
P. V. COLLINS.
Secretary of State:
JULIUS SCHMAHL.
Treasurer—WALTER SMITH
Attorney General:
LYNDON A. SMITH.
Railroad Commissioner (4 years).
IRA B. MILLS.
Congressman at Large:
JAMES MANAHAN.
Congressman for 9.th, Dist.
HALVOR STEENERSON.
Representative to the Legislature
HON. D. P. ONEIL.
County Auditor:
A. H. FASEL.
Treasurer:
ANDREW TROVATON.
Register of Deeds:
NELS J. ANDERSON.
County Attorney:
J. M. BISHOP.
Clerk of Court:
HARRY E. IVES.
County Commissioner 2nd, Dist.
DANIEL SHAW.
5th, District:
A. B. MANDT.

We will publish the State and County non-partisan ticket later.

This column will be for the use of any of the candidates for office, who desire to make a statement to the voters over their own signature. It pays us to have you use it, but if you don't think it pays you don't use it.

AN ERROR: In the announcement of Wilhiem Michelet, the following was left out by mistake. (Paid Advertisement, $5.00 paid by H.G. Hieber of Thief River Falls, Minn., Sec. of the personal Campaign Committee of Wilhelm Michelet, Non partisan Candidate for the office of Judge of Probate in and for Pennington Co., Minn.)

Paid advertising.

Having received the nomination of the Public Ownership Party for candidate for County Commissioner of the 5th commissioner district, I will, if elected, consider myself at the service of the people and use all my efforts in the interests of the tax payers of Pennington County.

I earnestly solicit the support of the voters at the final election November 5th.

Respectfully,
George Leimers.

Paid Advertisement

I wish to thank my supporters for the [illegible] nomination for County Treasurer, and also my opponent and his supporters for the clean, gentlemanly manner in which they conducted their campaign.

On account of my official duties I shall not be able to make much of a personal campaign for the November Election, but will do all I can for all the Republican nominees by the Primary last Tuesday, because they are all good men as far as I know, and were fairly nominated by our party.

I believe it would be bad for the country should our party be defeated, especially so far as Congress and Legislature are concerned.

Very Sincerely,
Andrew Troveton.

HOUSE KEEPER WANTED.

I desire to employ the services of a house keeper on my farm in the town of Kratka. Good conveniences and steady employment. Salary $4.00 a week and board. Call on or address,

John Quirk,
Highlanding Minn.

Subscribe for The Sunbeam.
Pay up your back Subscription.

Official.

"We have had an official warning hot to burn much gas this month."
"I never heard of such a thing."
"Oh, yes: it was last month's bill."—Buffalo Express.

Made It Clear.

Now, Clarice, says the Boston Globe, don't let these things twisted: You get bivalves, see through binoculars, ride bicycles, wish you had biplanes and marry bipeds.

Philosophy and Love

They had known each other a very long time, and they were joined together, perhaps by something more than friendship. The summer, with all its charms, was smiling for him; she was beautiful, and her eyes were like two large stars. But he was at Oxford studying, while she was a girl ready for marriage. Finally he decided that she was not in love with him, and in his soul he found a power that was stronger than love, which pushed him forward to the country of studies—a country containing no dreams or illusions.

He went to Africa for his holiday, and while passing his time idly he learned that she was married.

"It is an old story," said he, ironically, to himself, and tried to think he did not care about her.

Finally he wearied of the long trip, and came back, brown from the African sun, and languishing for her.

She had had time to lose her husband, and had finished mourning. But the capricious nature of this man drove him away as before.

At last he called upon her, thinking that at the door she would meet him with a shower of sweet reproaches. But she received him as always, apparently indifferent, with a good-hearted smile on her pink lips.

"She never loved me," he was thinking, with bitterness in his soul.

Seeing the cloud upon his forehead, she understood him and wanted to distract him by conversation.

"What is the matter with you today?" she asked him with apparent indifference. "You cover yourself with clouds of smoke in order not to look at me. I never saw you so nervous before. What is the matter with you? Tell me."

"Indeed, I have many reasons to be sad and nervous," he answered with a sigh.

"Show me your secret. Tell me all."

He looked directly into her large eyes, but he read there only ordinary curiosity.

"I can't tell you."

"Why?"

"Because you don't help me."

"Because you don't have confidence in me," she answered, indifferently.

"I would be willing to tell you the secret on which the destiny of all the world depended," he said with emotion. "But you will not help me."

"How do you know?"

"I know it because it is not in your disposition, in your character; perhaps not in your blood or in your temperament."

"I am very anxious. Sit down here, look into my eyes, and explain those reproaches that wound me so cruelly."

"I have a very difficult task," he answered smiling, "but I will try. First let us take an example, such as one meets very often in the lives of two loving hearts.

"Somebody loves you, and is suffering because he is not sure of your love. His heart is breaking because of doubt. You won't see such sentiments; you won't do anything. Another woman would see the love, would notice the poison of deception, would put her hand on his shoulder and with one word finish all his suffering. You would never do that. You would keep the love as a snake near your breast. You would torture his soul, and you would rather die of love than show that you loved also."

She was listening to him with attention. Her shapely face reddened; her lips became purple; her black eyes were moist and bright; her bosom heaved, and she said faintly, "And this you are telling me sincerely."

"Sincerely—"

He would have spoken farther, but at this moment he felt two snow-white arms around his neck. The beautiful little head approached his face, the small mouth touched his hair, his burning forehead, his lighted eyes, and finally joined his lips in one long kiss.

Intoxicated and happy, he kept her in his arms, desiring to prolong infinitely this charming moment.

She drew her lips from his, hung on his neck, and looking into his eyes, whispered with wonderful sweetness: "Dear, you were mistaken."

French-Grown Havanas.

The world of smokers in France is to judge by letters and paragraphs in the newspapers, seriously agitated by a step recently taken by the government department which superintends the tobacco monopoly. It has ordered a supply of Havana and Maryland tobacco seed for plantation in France; and it openly proclaims its intention of selling tobacco raised from this newly imported seed as genuine Havana and Maryland. It certainly seems to be a proceeding of dubious commercial morality; and the assumption that the peculiar fascination of a Havana cigar or a pipeful of Virginia tobacco is due merely to the fact that it is grown from a certain seed, and not to any unique conditions of climate or manufacture, seems equally questionable—but the final word is with the monopoly.

Phosphate Rock Production.

Between 1901 and 1911 the production of phosphate rock increased from 1,483,723 long tons, valued at $5,316,403, to 3,053,279 long tons, valued at $11,900,693. There was an increase in production in 1911 over 1910 of nearly four hundred thousand tons.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Giteau Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abraham Parquine, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this section of the Country.

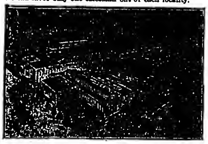
Don't Buy Eleswhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.
Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.



Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it now.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

SERIAL STORY

EXCUSE ME!

By Rupert Hughes

Novelized from the Comedy of the Same Name

ILLUSTRATED From Photographs of the Play as Produced By Henry W. Savage

Copyright, 1911, by M. K. Fly Co.

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Ira Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Mallory decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding hazing. Marjorie is distracted. Ira Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Annie Gattle, a fellow passenger. Mallory vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Mallory reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Mallory finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train. Mallory again makes an unsuccessful hunt for a preacher. Dr. Temple poses as a physician. Mrs. Temple is induced by Mrs. Wellington to smoke a cigar. Sight of preacher on a station platform raises Mallory's hopes, but he takes another train. Missing hand baggage compels the couple to borrow from passengers. Jimmie gets a cinder in his eye and Mrs. Jimmie gives first aid. Coolness is then resumed. Still no clergyman. More borrowing. Dr. Temple puzzled by behavior of different couples. Marjorie's jealousy aroused by Mallory's baseball jargon.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Train Wrecker.

The train-butcher, entering the Observation Room, found only a loving couple. He took in at a glance their desire for solitude. A large part of his business was the forcing of wares on people who did not want them.

His voice and his method suggested the mosquito. Seeing Mallory and Marjorie mutually absorbed in reading each other's eyes, and evidently in need of nothing on earth less than something else to read, the train-butcher decided that his best plan of attack was to make himself a nuisance. It is a plan successfully adopted by organ-grinders, street pianists and other blackmailers under the guise of art, who have nothing so welcome to sell as their absence.

Mallory and Marjorie heard the train boy's hum, but they tried to ignore it.

"Papers, gents and ladies? Yes? No? Paris fashions, lady?"

He shoved a large periodical between their very noses, but Marjorie threw it on the floor, with a bitter glance at her own borrowed plumage:

"Don't show me any Paris fashions!" Then she gave the boy his conge by resuming her chat with Mallory: "How long do we stop at Ogden?"

The train-boy went right on auctioning his papers and magazines, and poking them into the laps of his prey. And they went right on talking to one another and pushing his papers and magazines to the floor.

"I think I'd better get off at Ogden, and take the next train back. That's just what I'll do. Nothing, thank you!" this last to the train-boy.

"But you can't leave me like this," Mallory urged excitedly, with a side glance of "No, no!" to the train-boy.

"I can, and I must, and I will," Marjorie insisted. "I'll go pack my things now."

"But, Marjorie, listen to me."

"Will you let me alone!" This to the gadfly, but to Mallory a dejected wail: "I—I just remembered. I haven't anything to pack."

"And you'll have to give back that waist to Mrs. Temple. You can't get off at Ogden without a waist."

"I'll go anyway. I want to get home."

"Marjorie, if you talk that way—I'll throw you off the train!"

She gasped. He explained: "I wasn't talking to you; I was trying to stop this phonograph." Then he rose, and laid violent hands on the annoyer, shoved him to the corridor, seized his bundle of papers from his arm, and hurled them at his head. They fell in a shower about the train-butcher, who could only feel a certain respect for the one man who had ever treated him as he knew he deserved. He bent to pick up his scattered merchandise, and when he had gathered his stock together, put his head in, and sang out a sincere:

"Excuse me."

But Mallory did not hear him, he was excitedly trying to calm the excited girl, who, having eloped with him, was preparing now to elope back without him.

"Darling, you can't desert me now," he pleaded, "and leave me to go on alone?"

"Well, why don't you do something?" she retorted, in equal desperation. "If I were a man, and I had the girl I loved on a train, I'd get her married if I had to wreck the—" she caught her breath, paused a second in intense thought, and then, with sudden radiance, cried: "Harry, dear!"

"Yes, love!"

"I have an idea—an inspiration!"

"Yes, pet," rather dubiously from him, but with absolute exultation from her: "Let's wreck the train!"

"I don't follow you, sweetheart."

"Don't you see?" she began excitedly. "When there are train wrecks a lot of people get killed, and things. A minister always turns up to administer the last something or other—well—"

"Well?"

"Well, stupid, don't you see? We wreck a train, a minister comes, we nab him, he marries us, and—there we are! Everything's lovely!"

He gave her one of those looks with which a man usually greets what a woman calls an inspiration. He did not honor her invention with analysis. He simply put forward an objection to it, and, man-like, chose the most hateful of all objections:

"It's a lovely idea, but the wreck would delay us for hours and hours, and I'd miss my transport—"

"Harry Mallory, if you mention that odious transport to me again, I know I'll have hydrophobia. I'm going home."

"But, darling," he pleaded, "you can't desert me now, and leave me to go on alone?" She had her answer glib:

"If you really loved me, you'd—"

"Oh, I know," he cut in. "You've said that before. But I'd be court-martialed. I'd lose my career."

"What's a career to a man who truly loves?"

"It's just as much as it is to anybody else—and more."

She could hardly controvert this gracefully, so she sank back with grim resignation. "Well, I've proposed my plan, and you don't like it. Now, suppose you propose something."

The silence was oppressive. They sat like stoughton bottles. There the conductor found them some time later. He gave them a careless look, selected a chair at the end of the car, and began to sort his tickets, spreading them out on another chair, making notes with the pencil he took from atop his ear, and shoved back from time to time.

Ages seemed to pass, and Mallory had not even a suggestion. By this time Marjorie's temper had evaporated, and when he said: "If we could only stop at some town for half an hour," she said: "Maybe the conductor would hold the train for us."

"I hardly think he would."

"He looks like an awfully nice man. You ask him."

"Oh, what's the use?"

Marjorie was getting tired of depending on this charming young man with the very bad luck. She decided to assume command herself. She took recourse naturally to the original feminine methods: "I'll take care of him," she said, with resolution. "A woman can get a man to do almost anything if she flirts a little with him."

"Marjorie!"

"Now, don't you mind anything I do. Remember, it's all for love of you—even if I have to kiss him."

"Marjorie, I won't permit—"

"You have no right to boss me—yet. You subside." She gave him the merest touch, but he fell backward into a chair, utterly aghast at the shameless siren into which desperation had altered the timid little thing he thought he had chosen to love. He was being rapidly initiated into the complex and versatile and fearfully wonderful thing a woman really is, and he was saying to himself, "What have I married?" forgetting, for the moment, that he had not married her yet, and that therein lay the whole trouble.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Delilah and the Conductor.

Like the best of women and the worst of men, Marjorie was perfectly willing to do evil, that good might come of it. She advanced on the innocent conductor, as the lady from Borek must have sidled up to Samson, coquetting with one arch hand other.

and snipping the shears with the

The stupefied Mallory saw Marjorie in a startling imitation of herself at her sweetest; only now it was brazen mimicry, yet how like! She went forward as the shyest young thing in the world, pursed her lips into an ecstatic simper, and began on the unsuspecting official:

"Isn't the country perfectly—"

"Yes, but I'm getting used to it," the conductor growled, without looking up.

His curt indifference jolted Marjorie a trifle, but she rallied her forces, and came back with: "How long do we stop at Ogden?"

"Five minutes," very bluntly.

Marjorie poured maple syrup on her tone, as she purred: "This train of yours is an awfully fast train, isn't it?"

"Sort of," said the conductor, with just a trace of thaw. What followed made him hold his breath, for the outrageous little hussy was actually saying: "The company must have a great deal of confidence in you to entrust the lives and welfare of so many people to your presence of mind and courage."

"Well, of course, I can't say as to that—" Even Mallory could see that the man's reserve was melting fast as Marjorie went on with relentless treacle:

"Talk about soldiers and firemen and life-savers! I think it takes a braver man than any of those to be a conductor—really."

"Well, it is a kind of a responsible job." The conductor swelled his chest a little at that, and Marjorie felt that he was already hers. She hammered the weak spot in his armor:

"Responsible! I should say it is. Mr. Mallory is a soldier, but soldiers are such ferocious, destructive people, while conductors save lives, and—if I were only a man I think it would be my greatest ambition to be a conductor—especially on an overland express."

The conductor told the truth when he confessed: "Well, I never heard it put just that way." Then he spoke with a little more pride, hoping to increase the impression he felt he was making: "The main thing, of course, is to get my train through On Time!"

This was a facer. He was going to get his train through On Time just to oblige Marjorie. She stammered:

"I don't suppose the train, by any accident, would be delayed in leaving Ogden?"

"Not if I can help it," the hero averred, to reassure her.

"I wish it would," Marjorie murmured.

The conductor looked at her in surprise: "Why, what's it to you?" She turned her eyes on him at full candle power, and smiled:

"Oh, I just wanted to do a little shopping there."

"Shopping! While the train waits! Excuse me!"

"You see," Marjorie fluttered, "by a sad mistake, my baggage isn't on the train. And I haven't any—any—I really need to buy some—some things very badly. It's awfully embarrassing to be without them."

"I can imagine," the conductor mumbled. "Why don't you and your husband drop off and take the next train?"

"My husb—Mr. Mallory has to be in San Francisco by tomorrow night. He just has to!"

"So have I."

"But to oblige me? To save me from distress—don't you think you could?" Like a sweet little child she twisted one of the brass buttons on his coat sleeve, and wheedled: "Don't you think you might hold the train just a little tiny half hour?"

He was sorry, but he didn't see how he could. Then she took his breath away again, by asking, out of a clear sky: "Are you married?"

He was as awkward as if she had proposed to him, she answered for him: "Oh, but of course you are. The women wouldn't let a big, handsome, noble brave giant like you escape long." He mopped his brow in agony as she went on: "I'm sure you're a very chivalrous man. I'm sure you would give your life to rescue a maiden in distress. Well, here's your chance. Won't you please hold the train?"

She actually had her cheek almost against his shoulder, though she had to poise tiptoe to reach him. Mallory's dismay was changing to a boiling rage, and the conductor was a pitiable combination of Saint Anthony and Tantalus. "I—I'd love to oblige you," he mumbled, "but it would be as much as my job's worth."

"How much is that?" Marjorie asked, and added reassuringly, "if you lost your job I'm sure my father would get you a better one."

"Maybe," said the conductor, "but—I got this one."

Then his rolling eyes caught sight of the supposed husband gesticulating wildly and evidently clearing for action. He warned Marjorie: "Say, your husband is motioning at you."

"Don't mind him," Marjorie urged, "just listen to me. I implore you. I—" Seeing that he was still resisting, she played her last card, and, crying, "Oh, you can't resist my prayers so cruelly," she threw her arms around his neck, sobbing, "Do you want to break my heart?"

Mallory rushed into the scene and the conductor, tearing Marjorie's arms loose, retreated, gasping, "No! and I don't want your husband to break my head."

Mallory dragged Marjorie away, but she shook her little fist at the conductor, crying: "Do you refuse? Do you dare refuse?"

"I've got to," the conductor abjectly insisted.

Marjorie blazed with fury and the siren became a Scylla. "Then I'll see that my father gets you discharged. If you dare to speak to me again, I'll order my husband to throw you off this train. To think of being refused a simple little favor by a mere conductor! of a stupid old emigrant train!! of all things!!!"

Then she hurled herself into a chair and pounded her heels on the floor in a tantrum that paralyzed Mallory. Even the conductor tapped him on the shoulder and said: "You have my sympathy."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Jewels Damaged in the Post.

An English insurance company, which issues policies in regard to the loss of damage of jewels in transit, had recently to settle a heavy claim arising out of jewels which were damaged in the post. A packet of valuable emeralds was sent to a firm in England from abroad. During the journey a postal servant applied the official date stamp with such vigor that some of the emeralds were chipped. In another recent instance a parcel of stones was so broken in the post that some of the jewels were missing when the parcel arrived.

Eloquence Not Always Persuasion.

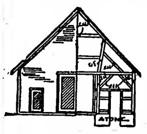
"Eloquence," said Uncle Eben, "is liable to deceive de man dat has it. He 'casionally 'magines folks is agreein' wif 'im when dey's only keepin' quiet for fear of spoilin' a pretty talk."

Live Stock

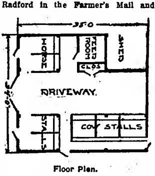
NEAT BARN FOR SMALL FARM

Driveway Makes Convenient Storage for Wagons and Other Implements—Warm in Winter.

This barn should be built for $450, especially where a man is so situated he can do most of the teaming at odd times. In size, it is 34 by 38 feet, and the driveway during the greater part of the year makes a convenient storage for wagons and farm implements. As the distance is not too great to back out with an empty wagon, there are doors at only one end of the driveway. This should make the barn warmer in winter, writes W. A. Radford in the Farmer's Mail and Breeze. A space is left over the driveway for putting hay up into the mow overhead. This mow is capable of holding 15 or 20 tons of hay.



End Elevation.



Floor Plan.

PROPER FEED FOR THE COLT

Something More Than Mere Filling Is Required by Young Animal—Don't Use the Whip.

(By MAY PEINTNER.)

A young and growing animal requires something more than mere filling. It must have nutritious and tissue-building, blood-making food. It is much easier and cheaper to put two years' growth on a colt the first year of its age than it is to "make up" for a year's loss of growth in two or three years. A good growth the first year of a colt's life costs less than at any other age and is twice as valuable to the breeder—a fact that is too often ignored. Spare the feed and spoil the colt is surely true. In training the colt do not use the whip simply because you have it. It is a very poor driver who makes a blow the starting signal. See that there is feed and water in abundance and a clean, dry bed.

Don't neglect the shoeing; it is vital on slippery roads or pavements; nor the blanket in cold weather, when the colt is standing out. Don't overload nor let the colt stand in the sun, nor where water drops on him. We believe that down in the heart of every man is some kindness and sense of justice.

To Avoid the Runty Pig.

Runty pigs stand a poor show at the feeding trough with a bunch of their husky brothers and sisters. As they are crowded out of place naturally they do not get enough to eat to keep them growing and they stay runty.

A trough arranged with V-shaped partitions set strongly in the trough, would give the little fellows an equal show with the big ones, and the weaker ones could get their share of food. A handy man can make such a trough arrangement in an hour or so, and the even growth of his pigs would more than pay for his trouble.

Breaking the Colt.

The earlier the colt is made used to the harness, the better broken the animal will be when it comes time for him to do some light work. It is easier to keep colts from learning bad tricks than to break them of such habits. For that reason have every strap and rope used by the colts so strong that there is no danger of a break. Once a colt finds out that he can get away from a halter or other parts of the harness there will be trouble, perhaps for all time.

Eliminates Hard Work.

The hardest work any farm horse ever performed was to furnish power for the old-fashioned horse-killing threshing machine. The gasoline engine has stopped that species of cruelty.

Value of Good Halters.

It is cheaper to buy good halters than to pay the damages resulting from a runaway.

"HOGGING OFF" IS PRACTICAL

No Better Way to Fatten Swine With Profit to Owner Than to Turn Them Loose in Field.

There is no better way to fatten hogs with profit to the owner, than to turn them loose in the cornfield and let them pick the corn themselves. This is what is called "hogging off corn."

It has been found in experiments by the Minnesota Experiment station and by practical farmers in all parts of the state, writes A. R. Wilson, superintendent of the Minnesota Farmers' Institute, that this method of fattening hogs is a profitable one. Every farmer who has tried it agrees that it is an economical method of fattening pork. The time required to husk and crib corn is saved. Not only that, but the hogs get the corn when it is fresh and more relished. No wonder, then, the station found that more pounds of pork could be made from a bushel of corn by "hogging off," than by eating husked corn.

All that is necessary to make the plan a feasible one is to obtain enough fencing to inclose a small area of corn. It is not advisable to give the hogs a large field to run in at the outset. There will be too large a waste. Twenty pigs weighing 100 pounds each, or their equivalent, should not be allowed to run on more than an acre at a time. On the average, an acre of corn should last three pigs from two to three weeks.

Hogs may be confined in the field as long as weather is suitable. They should not be turned in until the corn has ripened. Farmers should not hesitate to try this method of pork production, for it has been found entirely practical.

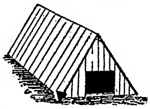
SUITABLE SHELTER FOR HOGS

Some Kind of Protection From Inclement Weather in Fall and Spring Is Important.

When the hogs are turned out to pasture in the spring or fall they need some kind of protection from the weather, and a shed, such as is shown in the accompanying illustration, is very convenient, therefore, to have, says the American Cultivator. It can be made any size desired, but if only about six feet wide, five feet long and four feet high, it can be more easily handled than if larger.

It is composed of one-inch roofing boards spiked to 2x4 studding at the combs and eaves, with the back gable boarded up and the front one left with an opening as is indicated.

A shed like this is very nice to have for sows. They can be given the full run of the pasture or lot, allowed to select their own nesting place, and then, if desired, the shed taken to the nest and set over.



Shelter for Hogs.

It should always stand in such a way as to afford the most protection possible from wind and storm, and court the sunshine, and often a bundle of straw put inside will make it more comfortable, and repay the care required to keep the inmates warm and dry.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

The cry is for hogs—and then some.

Keep the sleeping places dry and clean.

Kindness beats gruffness in getting work out of horses.

Scours in pigs is an indication of indigestion in the mother.

Your horse may intend to please you, but does not understand your wishes.

Try to arrange to give each horse on the farm a three weeks' vacation on grass.

Farming on a business basis eliminates small mules just as it displaces small horses.

Sheep, if given half a chance, and if of good, healthy stock are sure to pay their way.

The levelness with which a horse walks is one of the best evidences that his legs work in harmony.

Sweet clover and alfalfa feed heavily on the lime which accounts for the larger growth of young stock.

After a day's work clean the work horse thoroughly, wash their legs from the knees down and rub dry.

Don't leave the sheep in a dry, short pasture. Give them a chance in a fresh pasture, or give a good grain ration.

The past season has seen more silage beef on the market than ever before, as the feeder has recently taken up the silo.

Beginning in the fall, the hogs may be run on winter wheat and oats, followed by alfalfa, and vetches in the early spring.

A small flock of vigorous sheep on the farm if given good care cannot help but yield good returns for the money invested.

The most successful hog-growers of today are the men who realize the great value of pasture crops as a supplement to grain in growing and fattening hogs.

THE CHILDREN'S HEALTH

In observing the physical characteristics of her children, the careful mother soon learns that health is dependent on the regularity of the bowels. When the bowels become clogged with the stomach's refuse, loss of appetite, restlessness, irritability, and similar evidences of disorder are soon apparent. Keep the bowels regular and a healthy, happy child is assured.

At the first sign of constipation the mother should administer a mild laxative to carry off the congested waste from the stomach that is fermenting and forcing poisonous gases into the system. A simple compound of laxative herbs with pepsin is highly recommended as being very mild, yet positive, in its action, a teaspoonful at bedtime usually serving to bring an easy, thorough, natural movement next morning. This compound is known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and is sold by druggists everywhere for 50c a bottle. A larger bottle, put up especially for the family medicine chest, costs one dollar.

The use of salts and violent purgatives and cathartics should be avoided. They are too harsh and drastic, tending to upset the entire system. Write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 West St., Monticello, Ill., for a trial bottle of his Syrup Pepsin, if you have never used it. He will be glad to send it without any expense to you. Adv.

PARADOXICAL.

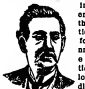
She—I want you to give me a promise.

He—I'll give you a promise, if you'll keep it.

A CLERGYMAN'S TESTIMONY.

The Rev. Edmund Heslop of Wigton, Pa., suffered from Dropsy for a year. His limbs and feet were swollen and puffed. He had heart fluttering, was dizzy and exhausted at the least exertion. Hands and feet were cold and he had such a dragging sensation across the loins that it was difficult to move. After using 5 boxes of Dodds Kidney Pills the swelling disappeared and he felt himself again. He says he has been benefited and blessed by the use of Dodds Kidney Pills. Several months later he wrote: I have not changed my faith in your remedy since the above statement was authorized. Correspond with Rev. E. Heslop about this wonderful remedy.

Dodds Kidney Pills, 50c. per box at your dealer or Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Write for Household Hints, also music of National Anthem (English and German words) and recipes for dainty dishes. All 3 sent free. Adv.



Rev. E. Heslop.

Bane Gude Yells.

It is stated by a returning traveler that the yells introduced by the American Athletes at Stockholm "can be heard all over Sweden."

Some yells those.

YOU CAN CURE CATARRH

By using Cole's Carbolisalve. It is a most effective remedy. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

One proof that a woman is jealous is to hear her say she isn't.

Richest in Healing Qualities FOR BACKACHE, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEYS AND BLADDER
FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Prevents hair falling. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

KODAKS AND FINISHING
Any size 6 exp. film developed 10 cents. 10 or 12 exp. or film. pack 20 cents. KREOEL PHOTO PARLORS, 629 Hennepin Ave., Minn., 46 E. 7th St., St. Paul

Johnson's Medicated Kidney Belts work while you sleep. Not electric. No medicine inwardly. Just wear them. Results surprising. St. Clair Specialty Co., Eaton, Ohio.

Farm lands $8 to $40. Will grow corn, cotton, alfalfa, oats, sugar cane. All kinds fruits and vegetables. Good health. Good water. Short, mild winters. Tied river bottom $12 to $40. Z. T. SISSON, 4084 Olive St., Texarkana, Tex.

THOMPSON'S EYE WATER Quickly relieves weak, inflamed eyes. Sold everywhere 25c. Booklet free. JOHN L. THOMPSON SONS & CO., Troy, N. Y.

A Good School
LARGE ATTENDANCE, LOWEST RATES
Thorough Work. Practical Courses. Accredited. Courses: Preparatory, Commercial, Shorthand, Stenotypy, Teachers, High School, Scientific, Music, Penmanship, Agriculture, Steam and Gas Engineering. Regular tuition, $1.00 per week; board, $1.95. Free Tuition to one student from each postoffice. Write for catalog. Address
SOUTHERN MINNESOTA NORMAL COLLEGE, BOX 830, AUSTIN, MINNESOTA

PISO'S REMEDY
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by Druggists.
25 CTS. 25 CTS.
FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

TRAGEDY OF THE AMERICAN BEAUTY ROSE

MAN WHO CREATED IT IS BEGGAR ON THE STREETS OF WASHINGTON

GEORGE BANCROFT

MRS GEORGE BANCROFT

THE man who made the American Beauty rose is a beggar on the streets of Washington. The statement sounds more like a "curtain lies" for a Theodore Kremer melodrama, or a riotous contrast from Jules Verne, than a setting forth of sober fact; though it is none the less a fact of due and attested sobriety, and even, in all kindness, of some solemnity.

The rose was "created," as the phrase goes, in George Bancroft's famous rose garden, by the historian's erratic old English gardener, John Brady; it was a legacy to Brady at Mr. Bancroft's death, in token of long and honorable service, and of the fact that Brady had brought it to perfection only after years of inexhaustible patience and care; and it was sold for a pittance, but that is getting ahead of the story.

Once upon a time, in 1889, to be precise, after George Bancroft had returned from long diplomatic service in Germany, and had settled down to a tranquilizing old age in his home in Washington, there grew up among the flower enthusiasts of England, America and the continent a zealous quest for a red rose which could be made to bloom in winter.

Mr. Bancroft's ascendency as a rose culturist in this country had been beyond dispute for half a century.

At the time of the inauguration of Abraham Lincoln, Mrs. Lincoln despaired of pleasing herself in the arrangements of the White House garden, so she called on Mr. Bancroft for help. This she received in such good and flowing measure that, in acknowledgment of her debt, she sent to the historian a splendid bouquet of japonicas. In reply he wrote her that "for magnificence, the bouquet was a fair counterpart of Mr. Lincoln's brains."

What of official recognition then was still lacking for Mr. Bancroft's genius as a rose grower was supplied by Herr Bismarck, who so admired the American minister to Berlin that he supplied him with roses and rose cuttings from the great Bismarck estates in Pomerania.

But all this while, despite the genial international co-operation of rose growers, diplomats and statesmen, the red rose refused to grow in winter. Its wintertime behavior was, in fact, exasperating beyond all words. If, after months of herculean effort, a branch could be made to put forth a bud some fine morning, it was a sickly purple by noon, and brown by sunset.

Little yellow roses had thrived, time out of mind, and these, with camellias and japonicas, were the sole reliance of those who would have flowers for winter decoration.

Matters were in this state when Mr. Bancroft moved to Washington, bringing into his charming old house on Lafayette square two trusted servants: Herman, who came from Berlin, and John Brady, the gardener, from England.

John Brady was installed in the quaint L-shaped garden, which ran back to Seventeenth street, and he was instructed, among other things, to reap the glory of creating a tractable red rose.

The task was one which jumped with his own desires. The Bancroft garden was scarcely less a personal pride to Brady than to Bancroft, and both secretly believed that no praise of it could be really to extravagant. It became a rendezvous for Washington's most distinguished persons; how much so, one can guess from President Arthur's dictum that "The president is permitted to accept the invitations of members of his cabinet, Supreme court judges, and—Mr. George Bancroft."

Dozens of times John Brady seemed on the eve of being able to announce the success of his red rose ventures. Once a friend from France brought Mr. Bancroft a cutting of a red rose called "Madame Ferdinand Jemain," which, although it had failed at home, was thought to have possibilities in the American climate. Brady nursed it along with a fair degree of conscientiousness, none too pleased, likely enough, that France had been so premature in this honorable business. But the little alien rose bush sickened and died, and was thrown aside, presumably at the end of its history.

Then came the shocking news from England that William Francis Bennett had won the red rose race. He had had an astonishing luck with his plants, and had finally established their hardihood and their permanence of color. Bancroft and Brady mourned in secret. True, there was still the American championship to be tried for, but the first fine careless rapture of success had been already captured.

A rose culturist in New York had the good fortune, about this time, to make a new flower, which he promptly named the "George Bancroft," but this was not compensation enough, either for the historian or his gardener. So back they went to the seedling beds, with renewed determination.

In the face of such a touching faith and such abounding energy, the fates were bound to be kind. And so, one morning, a delighted yell from his gardener brought Mr. Bancroft scurrying into his garden, to find that in a bed of white and yellow seedlings there stood a strange red rose, looking for all the world as if it had come to stay. Its stem had a stiffness the like of which had never before been seen. Its petals looked to have the hardihood to weather a hundred disasters.

Where it had come from nobody could find out. It might have been a stalwart seed left from the scorned and discredited "Mme. Ferdinand Jemain," and it might have been just that mysterious freak which the rose culturist has come to take for granted under the name of a "sport."

At any rate, there it was, and it remained to be developed.

For it must be known at the outset that getting a single bloom is the least of the rose culturist's troubles. In fact, it merely marks their beginning.

All new brands of roses are grown from these curiosities called "sports." In a bed of seedlings, about once in so often, an orphan rose will appear which will bear no trace of its parentage, and will usually be found to have neither longevity nor the ability to reproduce after its kind. Its seeds will revert to type.

So John Brady set forth on the uphill climb to perfecting his little red "sport." In due time he did it. And when he had three bushes which he could personally guarantee to reproduce red roses after the original pattern he placed them in the garden where they would likeliest be seen. He had not to wait for the clamor of approval. Guests for tea in the afternoon were led into the garden by Mr. Bancroft for a "private view" of the coveted red rose.

"Oh, that must be Bennett's new rose, the English beauty," said the first woman to spy it.

"Not at all, madame," said Bradly, proudly, "that is the American red rose."

"Then it is the American Beauty," said the lady, not to be outdone.

And then and there the name originated, and not all of Brady's stormiest persuasions could ever dislodge it. For the rose's maker had already decided that it should be named for Judge Hagner, a warm friend of Mr. Bancroft, and Brady's bright particular star, and to have the choice of its name and the christening ceremony swept out of his reach at one fell swoop would have tried the patience of a saint.

Brady finally made the best of it, and contented himself with assuring Judge Hagner that things would have been different if he had had any say in them.

From this time on, however, the history of John Brady and his precious rose begins to take a somber turn. Mr. Bancroft died in 1891, bequeathing the American Beauty to Brady as a testament of his affection and appreciation. The famous gardens passed into other hands, and Brady moved, with his large and hungry family and his handful of American Beauty rosebushes, into a little house outside of Washington.

Things went rapidly from bad to worse. Brady had neither money nor the knack of picking up odd jobs. His eldest son was still too young for responsibility, and the ages of the others, in regular succession, diminished punctually by a year. His wife was frail, out of patience with poverty, and worn to exhaustion with the care of children.

Brady survived the first part of this bleak period by observing the Spanish proverb, "Patience, and shuffle the cards." No stress of want could make him part with his rose bushes, though his wife, regarding him as a sort of monomaniac on this subject, put her noblest persuasions into the task of undoing his resolve.

To his reiterated tales of the fortune that would come to him some day through the American Beauty rose Mrs. Brady reasonably replied that she and the children were hungry that very day and hour, and that more than her soul was sick with hope deferred.

But some prescience of the inherent value of his rose kept Brady obdurate to appeals, domestic or professional.

The world of fashion had all but forgotten the interregnum of the American Beauty in the Bancroft gardens. Rose culturists had thought, many of them, that it had never outlived its hayday. Only a few of the more observant had remembered that the treasured bushes had been a legacy from Bancroft to his gardener.

One of these last was the elder of the Field Brothers, wholesale florists on the old Seventh street road, outside of Washington. They made constant offers to Brady—offers which, from the point of view of their own poverty, were handsome enough. But they seemed beneath contempt to the gardener who dreamed of empire.

Not so, however, to Mrs. Brady. She wept, cajoled, threatened. She conjured her husband, in the name of common humanity, not to let his children starve before his very eyes. He made her no reply, other than by the crushing method of leaving the house, to take counsel of his dreams outside.

It was on one of these forlorn occasions that Mrs. Brady's patience snapped and her loyalty faltered. She seized the pampered rose bushes, made haste to Field Brothers, and sold them, one and all, for scarcely more than the price of a single meal.

When this was told to Brady, he touched the hour of his supreme tribulation. His world fell away from beneath his feet. Not once in the 18 years since then has the stupor which came upon him lifted for long enough for realization of his misery to sift through.

Matters went merrily with the rose he made. Field Brothers, by skillful advertising, were able to sell their exclusive right to its reproduction for $5,000. Within a year ten times that amount was being paid for it by enthusiastic purchasers here and abroad.

For ten years past a moderate estimate of the amount of money spent annually all over the world for American Beauty roses is $25,000,000.

John Brady is still homeless in Washington. His wife and the famished children have died, one after another. He himself is the recipient of constant small charities from Washington florists, any of whom will give him bits of work, spraying, or cutting, when his mind can be held to his task.

At the funeral of William R. Smith, the famous old Scotch superintendent of the National Botanical gardens, who had, at eighty, the reputation of knowing more public men—diplomats, statesmen, and politicians—than any other person then living in the United States, there was an assemblage of men aggregating almost incalculable personal distinction. Into the midst of them crept a shabby, bent old man, who, with averted eyes and bowed head sidled into a corner and wept with unmistakable suffering. He was without any doubt the most humble and obscure sorrower at the funeral ceremony. He was John Brady, maker of the American Beauty.

Mercifully he does not feel the infinite pathos of his lot. His real tragedy ended 18 years ago, when, having nothing left to hope, he had nothing left to fear. If you search him out and question him, you will find him curiously apathetic.

"Me? I am nothing—nobody," he will say to you. "My rose? Yes, that was my fortune, but they took it away from me. I cannot make another—I am nothing."

And he will tell you this with the most exquisite manners, learned, perhaps, in the Bancroft gardens. His eyes will lighten, his voice will intone gently and courteously, and for an instant before the lethargy steals over him again you will glimpse the power that could drag from earth and make permanent the most wonderful rose she gives.

He has kept, or perhaps got back, an impressive sweetness of nature. One thing only stirs him to overt flashes of rebellious misery—it is to be asked to see or handle an American Beauty rose.

WAS FEELING WRONG BUMP

Sagacious Phrenologist Mistaken in His Conclusion, as It Turned Out.

The learned professor was giving his public lecture on phrenology, and for purposes of demonstration he invited a boy to the platform, says the New York American. After a critical examination of the lad's cranium, he turned to the audience:

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "the protuberance on this little boy's head is remarkably well developed. It is the bump of philoprogenitiveness. In the present case it proves that the boy has an extraordinary love for his parents. (Addressing the boy.) Isn't that true, Johnny?"

Johnny hesitated a moment, then said:

"Well, I got along pretty well with the old lady, but the old man ain't such a much."

"Why, how is that, my boy?" asked the professor.

"Well, if yuh want me ter let it out, the bump yer blowin' about is where pop hit me yesterday wit a belt buckle."

Important to Mothers
Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over 30 Years.
Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

The faith that inspires is the trust which comes from our time-trusted friends.—W. S. Royston.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle. Adv.

It is the things that are possible but not probable that keep some people from being happy.

CURES ITCHING SKIN DISEASES. Cole's Carbolisalve stops itching and makes the skin smooth. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

A female optimist is a woman who marries a poet.

BACKACHE IS DISCOURAGING
Until You Get After The Cause

Nothing more discouraging than a constant backache.

Lame when you awake. Pains pierce you when you bend or lift. It's hard to work, or to rest.

You sleep poorly and next day is the same old story.

That backache indicates bad kidneys and calls for some good kidney remedy.

None so well recommended as Doan's Kidney Pills.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Here's A California Case—Mrs. E. Walsh, 1649 Tenth Ave., San Francisco, Cal., says: "The sharp, knife-like pains in my back were almost unbearable. I often had to cry out. Once while walking, I had a sudden attack and a doctor had to be called. Finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they made me well."

Get Doan's at Any Drug Store, 50c a Box
DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Make the Liver Do its Duty

Nine times in ten when the liver is right the stomach and bowels are right.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS gently but firmly compel a lazy liver to do its duty.

Cures Constipation, Indigestion, Sick Headache, and Distress After Eating.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.
Genuine must bear Signature
Brent Good

Pettit's Eye Salve Quickly Ends Weak, Sore Eyes

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 41-1912.

Women

From Forty-Five to Fifty Are Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The "change of life" is a most critical period in a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, she may be predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of some organ. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared to meet the needs of women's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

Mrs. Estella Gillispie

ONE CASE OUT OF MANY TO PROVE OUR CLAIMS.

St. Anne, Ill.—"I was passing through the change of life and I was a perfect wreck from female troubles. I had a displacement and bearing down pains, weak fainting spells, dizziness, then numb and cold feelings. Sometimes my feet and limbs were swollen. I was irregular and had so much backache and headache, was nervous, irritable and was despondent. Sometimes my appetite was good but more often it was not. My kidneys troubled me at times and I could walk only a short distance.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I was helped from the first. At the end of two months the swelling had gone down, I was relieved of pain, and could walk with ease. I continued with the medicine and now I do almost all my housework. I know your medicine has saved me from the grave and I am willing for you to publish anything I write to you, for the good of others."—Mrs. ESTELLA GILLISPIE, R.F.D. No. 4, Box 34, St. Anne, Illinois.

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES
$3.00 $3.50 $4.00 $4.50 AND $5.00
FOR MEN AND WOMEN

Boys wear W. L. Douglas $2.00, $2.50 & $3.00 School Shoes, because one pair will positively outwear two pairs of ordinary shoes, same as the men's shoes.

W.L.Douglas makes and sells more $3.00, $3.50 & $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS.

The workmanship which has made W. L. Douglas shoes famous the world over is maintained in every pair.

Ask your dealer to show you W. L. Douglas latest fashions for fall and winter wear, notice the short vamps which make the foot look smaller, points in a shoe particularly desired by young men. Also the conservative styles which have made W. L. Douglas shoes a household word everywhere.

If you could visit W. L. Douglas large factories at Brockton, Mass., and see for yourself how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they are warranted to fit better, look better, hold their shape and wear longer than any other make for the price.

Fast Color Eyelets.

CAUTION.—To protect you against inferior shoes, W. L. Douglas stamps his name on the bottom. Look for the stamp. Beware of substitutes. W. L. Douglas shoes are sold in 78 own stores and shoe dealers everywhere. No matter where you live, they are within your reach. If your dealer cannot supply you, write direct to factory for catalog showing how to order by mail. Shoes sent everywhere, delivery charges prepaid. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

The Corrector of Destinies

Being Tales of Randolph Mason as Related by
His Private Secretary, Courtland Parks

The LAND PIRATE

By Melville Davisson Post

Copyright by Edward J. Clode

Reforms, it would seem, only cause the devil to change his clothes. The advance of civilization is a progress in disguises; the agents by which the Emperor of the Hoof carries on his gentle arts are always costumed appropriately to the times, but the agents themselves remain the same. For example, would you find again the free-booters, hanged so long ago at the yard-arm, you have but to look closely at the financial literature that floods the mails.

Usually, the man of average sense can instantly put his finger on the fraud hidden under the glittering promise; but now and then one comes across a so-called financial proposition so fair, so set about with unquestionable safeguards, that the keenest scrutiny cannot discover in it a possibility of loss. These are the schemes of the great masters—disguised sloops of Kidd, Morgan and Bonnet.

I found such a scheme one day in a letter among my mail, and laid it on my table under the ink-pot. It ran in this fashion:

> The Bank holds the money. The safest proposition ever offered to investors. We are placing on the market blocks of stock of the Union Consolidated Oil Company under these unparalleled conditions: You deposit the amount of your subscription to your own credit in the Driller's Bank of Pittsburg, a certificate of deposit is issued to you in your name and held by you. You also get the stock certificate. You keep both exclusively in your own possession. We ask only that you turn over to this Company the certificate of deposit issued you by the Bank when the Oil Company has paid to you, in dividends on your stock, a sum equal to the amount of your investment. This is the only stock ever offered in any market which is not subject to loss. You keep your money safely on deposit with one of the greatest banks in America and, at the same time, make the sort of investment out of which John D. Rockefeller became the richest man in the world. Write today for our detailed plan.
>
> The Union Consolidated Oil Company,
> 75-81-103 Iron Bldg., Pittsburg, Pa.

I was held and puzzled by this striking proposition. It seemed to be drafted with an eye only to the protection of the investor. If it had failed to name the bank in which the funds were to be deposited, or had named one of a lower standard, I should instantly have doubted its good faith; but the Driller's bank of Pittsburg was well rated; it had a capital of five millions; its stockholders were, for the most part, men who had made fortunes in the oil fields of western Pennsylvania. It was naturally the bank which such a company would select. Where then was the flaw? What advantage did such a plan offer to this company? The money was not paid to it, but to a responsible bank on deposit to the investor's credit; the company could not get it. The money would be returned by the bank, unless an equal sum were paid by the company to the stockholders. It would, indeed, be difficult to devise a safer scheme. Almost any one would speculate under such conditions; it was removing the element of chance from the game, and yet here evidently were large sums expended in exploitation. Surely a deception was hidden somewhere there, so the circular fascinated me like a page of puzzles. It lay under my eye for a week; then I dropped it into a pigeonhole of the desk.

Two years later Captain Roger Shelton called to see Randolph Mason. I have rarely met a man so aptly cast for his part as this Captain Shelton. He was tall, somewhat unevenly fattened, clothed in light worsted, with a style of coat provincially called "cutaway," always kept buttoned, a top hat and very shiny patent leathers. His eyes were alert and his speech rapid and persuasive. His mouth, however, was loose in the under lip—the real Captain Shelton flying there his signal. His manner tended quickly to establish relations of amiable fellowship; he strove for that with a certain breezy frankness.

Some one on lower Broadway had sent him to Randolph Mason. He required a little assistance, he explained, of a business rather than of a legal nature. He had struck a hard place in a trade. If he could get over it, his fortune was established.

The captain seemed an ideal promoter. He strove, with no slight cunning, to inform himself through me about Randolph Mason. He led to his queries always by two roads, like a commander of infantry; when one was found guarded, he crossed quickly to the other. I think, too, that his knowledge of men was fairly accurate, for, when he came, presently, before Randolph Mason himself, his manner perceptibly changed, the "hail fellow" vanished, he stated his business with a certain approach to dignity, and it was only when the "murder," so to speak, was out, that the real man came visibly to the surface.

Randolph Mason gave the Pennsylvanian close attention. He led him almost persuasively into detail. He unearthed here and there a covered portion of his story until the nature of the affair came wholly into daylight. The art of subtle inquiry, in the use of which Shelton had a certain skill, was turned masterfully against him, and so unobtrusively that each elicited feature seemed to follow some voluntary statement like an inevitable sequel.

Captain Shelton had intended to give such elements of his story as he deemed necessary to his end; but under his handling by Randolph Mason he was unable to stop at his own marked points. When he laid his hands on a protruding limb of his story he somehow astonishingly drew up with it the whole hidden body. The point upon which he wished aid, badly put (as he had intended), was commonplace enough. He held ten thousand acres of land under oil leases, lying solidly in a parallelogram with the exception of two tracts of nine hundred and twelve hundred acres respectively. These two tracts were owned by two directors of a certain savings bank in New England. The larger tract he did not want, but the nine-hundred-acre tract he greatly wished; it was the only territory of the whole block lying, in his opinion, above oil-bearing strata. He exhibited a map showing in red this strip of land running across the parallelogram, and explained that the oil-bearing rocks in this region sloped on either side, forming a synclinal, and that this synclinal lay almost wholly within the tract colored red on the map. It was, therefore, the storehouse of the whole region. Now the difficulty was that these two men had an agreement that one would not sell without the other. Each demanded the same price for his property, one hundred thousand dollars in cash. The tract lying over the synclinal was worth half a million dollars, the other was worthless. Captain Shelton could, of course, purchase both, but he did not have the amount. He had in available cash on deposit about eighty thousand dollars. He could not get another dollar. He had labored for years, he said, to locate this el dorado. He had found it at last, like a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. By right of discovery it belonged to him; he had earned it with his wits; he wished now to possess it.

Such were the well-pruned facts that Captain Shelton had selected for presentation to Randolph Mason; but the narrative, under Mason's touches, would not stop with two directors of a conservative savings bank in New England holding tracts of oil land in a distant state remaining unexplained; it would not stop with a mysterious pact binding them to a common price; it would not stop at eighty thousand dollars clean cash in Shelton's hand unaccompanied by any avenues of credit. The parts of the story could not be separated without disclosing glaring discrepancies. Wherever the narrative was cut, it bled. In his effort to avoid this obvious result, the man said more than he intended and in the end told everything that he had meant to conceal.

Captain Shelton was a financial buccaneer. Some two years earlier, in a gust of fortune, his brig had sunk and he had come, with five hundred dollars, perilously ashore. Faced with a desperate need for a new sloop, he hit finally upon this delectable plan. The country at large was in a hysteria of industrial consolidation, the markets gorged with securities, and the banks necessarily short of ready money. He went to the president of the Driller's Bank of Pittsburg and offered to secure for it a million of dollars in non-interest-bearing deposits, guaranteed to remain undisturbed in the possession of the bank for at least one year, provided the bank would pay him three per cent. per annum for the deposit.

The president at once agreed, and, presuming that it was Shelton's intention to canvass for deposits, loaded him with literature of the bank. The excellent captain dropped these pamphlets into the waste basket and walked over to a cheap lodging on Fourth Avenue. There, from a drunken roustabout, for a hundred dollars, he bought a bagful of oil leases on worthless territory lying along the east side of the Ohio River above St. Mary's. Then he got a charter from the secretary of state of West Virginia, and organized the Union Consolidated Oil Company with a capital of five millions. For two dollars and fifty cents he bought a seal, and for five more a book of stock certificates excellently printed on bank-note paper.

Then the captain sat down at a hotel desk in the city of Pittsburg and wrote the literature which had come to me in the mail two years before.

This he put in the hands of a mailing list agency of New England with a deposit on account of two hundred dollars. With the remaining money he rented three furnished rooms on the nineteenth floor of the Iron Building, and sat down to await the arrival of his fortune.

The president of the Driller's Bank sent for Captain Shelton and demanded an explanation of his remarkable plan. The captain instantly invited an inspection of the company. He exhibited recorded leases, legally valid, covering some ten thousand acres of land, and a corporation properly organized, the lease holds transferred in payment of the stock—every detail entirely within the law. He pointed out that under his plan no man could lose a dollar of his money. It would remain on deposit with the bank to the depositor's credit while he, Shelton, tested the territory. If these lands proved oil-producing, as he thought they would, then his stockholders would make enormous profits. If they proved worthless, no man would lose a cent, the company would be dissolved, the certificates cancelled and every stockholder permitted to withdraw his deposit. Then he spoke thus pointedly:

"Your bank's good, isn't it? You will pay the people's money back to them, won't you? I can't rob them, and I suppose you won't."

The president of the Driller's Bank determined to lay the matter before his directors. In the meantime, a tide of small deposits began to arrive. When the directors met on the second Tuesday of the month, there were a hundred thousand dollars in these deposits, increasing with every mail. The bank needed the money, it was loaded with industrial securities. The directors hesitated, and finally continued the matter until the next meeting. The tide swelled into a flood, the matter never came up again before the board, and Captain Shelton secured not one million, as he had promised, but in all nearly two million dollars in deposits.

The entrance of the two bank directors from Massachusetts followed a little later on. Shelton had sent his literature broadly scattered into New England, reaching for persons there with small annuities and little savings in banks. His plan touched the very king-bolt in the nature of these people, a possibility of wealth without risk. The income from their deposits in savings banks was slight. This speculation involved only the transfer of deposits to a different bank with a try at an el dorado for a rider. Having determined that the Driller's Bank of Pittsburg was solvent, deposits went flooding westward. So great were the withdrawals that two directors of one of these banks in Massachusetts, at the suggestion of the depositors, went to Pittsburg to look into the matter.

Captain Shelton was advised. He met these gentlemen at the Pennsylvania station, entertained them at the best hostelry, directed their attention to the stability of the Driller's Bank, and then carried them down into the oil field. There they found blindfolded Fortune scattering her favors like a tipsy Vestal.

Captain Shelton counted well upon his heady air. He brought forth his maps, but he spoke little and sanely. The topsy-turvy condition spoke for him. He posed as one sober, careful, far-sighted, in a community of drunkards. Here were opportunities to be seized, wisely held in hand and made to produce, not a casual pot of gold, but a great fortune lasting for a century. He brought shrewdly to the strangers' notice the two tracts lying within his parallelogram of leased territory. They instantly inquired why these tracts were not included, and he replied that at the time the company leases were taken they could not be had, and now he could not secure them without the consent of the stockholders, a thing impracticable. He would take these two tracts in his own name, but such an act might subject him to criticism. This was, of course, a lie. The roustabout from whom Shelton had secured his leases omitted these tracts because the owners demanded twenty-five cents an acre bonus. Around these two tracts Shelton masked his arts of suggestion. He wished these men's fingers dipped with his in the dish, a little of their gold on the table, a wager left here behind them on the spin of the wheel.

When the two bank directors returned to New England, they took with them the fee simple titles of these two tracts. They took with them also the impression, but not the certainty, that Captain Shelton was merely an adventurer. Able to judge accurately any situation in New England, they were at sea here. The bank in Pittsburg was certainly solvent. The territory advertised by Shelton was certainly covered by his leases.

Eighteen months later, the Union Consolidated Oil Company was dissolved and its stock cancelled. The bank returned the deposits and paid Roger Shelton eighty thousand dollars in interest. He feared to place this money in bank lest some one suing him might attach it, and kept it in a safety deposit box of a New York trust company. He had learned that the two bank directors were now in New York, and had hurried here hoping to purchase the tract of land he wished; but, on reflection, he hesitated to approach them. They would be greatly suspicious of him, and he would not risk having the deed taken in the name of any other person. He desired to get hold of the tract lying over the synclinal, and he would, if necessary, give all the money he had for it. This was the story skillfully unmasked by Randolph Mason.

The captain, when the cat was out, began to regret his rashness. His secret had escaped him; it was an indiscretion to be amended by greater caution. He was taken swiftly with a trembling seizure of suspicions.

"You have overlooked the names of these gentlemen from Massachusetts," said Randolph Mason.

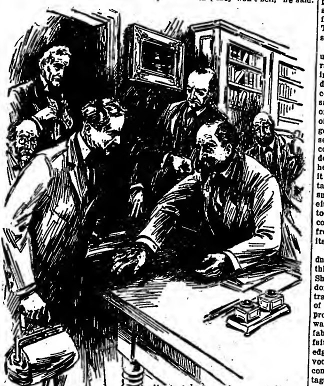
A certain cunning dodged along Captain Shelton's features.

"I have not overlooked it," he replied "I don't intend to tell them. I expect my regular lawyer to be present when these men are seen. I came to you for a plan. When I get that, my lawyer will do the rest. I don't mean these Yankees to sleep on the trade. The deeds and the cash will go on the table together. When they are exchanged, the matter will be ended. That's my way of doing business. Now, what's your plan?"

"My plan," said Mason, "will conform to your way of doing business. Have these men here at two o'clock. Let them know nothing of the object of this conference. But you, on your part, take every precaution. Come a half-hour earlier with your attorney. Bring the deeds and the cash with you, Bring also a notary. I would have you take no chance. I would have you omit no safeguard which your instincts suggest."

Captain Shelton was greatly reassured; but a doubt remained.

"If I come, they won't sell," he said.



He struck the Pennsylvanian with the clenched fingers of his left.

"That's the very trouble I'm trying to get around."

"I will get around that," replied Randolph Mason.

"Then," said Captain Shelton, "you will have to pretend to represent some one else, and leave me to my lawyer."

"Your foresight is amazing," replied Mason. "I shall leave you entirely to your lawyer. I shall pretend to represent, let us say, the stockholders of the Union Consolidated Oil Company."

"Good!" cried the captain, "that lie will do the work!"

Randolph Mason arose, and waited for his visitor to depart.

"I think," he remarked, "that it will do the work excellently."

The men who met in Randolph Mason's private office were of most incongruous types. My visual memory of this conference remains clear-cut, like the climax of some drama; there was the notary, a tired old man, looking on unconcerned from a chair by the door; Captain Shelton, his under lip painfully tightened, seated on one side of the library table with his attorney at his elbow. This attorney merits a word of comment; he was the ablest practitioner of his class in New York, a class abandoned wholly to intrigue, schooled smatteringly in the law through attendance and experience at trials, but past masters of trickery; he was a little, rotund man, bald, with a fringe of hair running from the top of one ear around to the other; a face as expressionless as wood; eyes steady as though set in by an optician. The man's hands alone betrayed his thoughts—they were as nimble as the fore paws of a mink. Opposite were the two New Englanders, an uncle and his nephew—the elder, tall, grave, somber; the younger, a youth, powerfully built, his face fresh with health, his hands suggesting the strength of ivory—and Randolph Mason, walking up and down by the bookcases.

Mason introduced the matter with this remarkable statement to the men from Massachusetts: He represented certain of the stockholders of the Union Consolidated Oil Company, acting for the benefit of all. The stockholders of that company had lost in interest on their deposits, through Captain Roger Shelton, some eighty thousand dollars. This money Captain Shelton was now ready to return. He wished to do so through these directors, leaving them to distribute it in detail to the stockholders. However, in the manner of this restitution, Captain Shelton wished to avoid the appearance of compounding a fraud. Mason had, therefore, called this meeting to propose that these two directors sell their tracts of worthless oil territory to Captain Shelton in consideration of this money and, after deducting their individual expenditures, refund the balance of it to the various stockholders of the Union Consolidated Oil Company.

The two bank directors, who had been until now greatly mystified, agreed instantly to this proposition, the elder speaking for the other. They considered their investment in this oil territory somewhat in the nature of a trust, and had determined to hold the tracts indefinitely, in the hope that at some future time they would yield enough money to repay what the stockholders of the company had lost. They had gone to Pittsburg as envoys, in a way, for the stockholders, and any gain arising from that journey was equitably the property of all. They had consequently asked one hundred thousand dollars in cash for each of these tracts, and had agreed to pool the two properties, so that if oil were ever discovered on either tract, it would pay in full the losses of the stockholders. This price they knew to be prohibitive, but the tracts were either to adjust the matter or remain unsold until the end of time.

The Pennsylvanian, sitting with a calf-skin satchel on his knees, observed the difficulty in the way of his fortune thus easily overcome with a sudden mounting joy he could not wholly conceal. His face fell into the sanctimonious expression of one who, at the cost of abnegations, would be perfect. Even the hands of the inscrutable attorney opened wide their fingers as in admiration of a master. The next statement of Mason won still further their amazed approval.

He said that the two sales must be understood to be complete and separate transaction, concluded absolutely in every detail upon the signing of the deed, and, in order that no claim could be afterward set up that in this sale Captain Shelton took advantage of any secret knowledge of the value of either of the two tracts, he suggested that Shelton be permitted to select the tract which at this time he considered the more valuable, in order that his opinion might be known before the deeds were signed, pay for it seventy-nine thousand dollars, and take the other tract at a nominal sum, say one thousand dollars. Then if either tract should prove in the future to be oil-producing, Captain Shelton could enjoy that good fortune free from any imputation of deception in its purchase.

The attorney's nimble fingers danced on the rungs of his chair—this piece of strategy was excellent. Shelton, too, instantly saw its wisdom. If he took, now, the worthless tract at the large price, the very fact of this selection would conclusively prove that when this worthless tract was purchased he knew nothing of the fabulous value of the other. His good faith, his innocence of secret knowledge, would be here and now irrevocably established for all time to come. Those who sold estates for pottage usually came crying to the courts, and if the deeds showed on their faces that the purchaser was himself mistaken in the value of these estates, that cry would fail. Separate, the two sales ought also to be, that no one other than the signer of the deed could afterward claim an attaching equity.

The two New Englanders assented to this, and Captain Shelton instantly selected the worthless tract. The attorney took two deeds from his pocket and laid them before him on the table. He then stated in detail the terms of the purchase; seventy-nine thousand dollars in cash for the tract of twelve hundred acres, one thousand dollars in cash for the tract of nine hundred acres; the two sales distinct, separate transaction directly between the parties named in the deed. He wished this agreement clearly understood. The sentimental reason moving Roger Shelton to this purchase, as given by Randolph Mason, was an observation beside the point. He alone represented Roger Shelton. The purchase of these tracts was now a clean-cut matter of business, showing wholly on the face of the deed. Then he took up one of the deeds, wrote into it the consideration, seventy-nine thousand dollars, and handed it to the younger man, who, it happened, was the owner of this tract. The latter looked swiftly over the deed and signed it, the notary took his acknowledgment, affixed the seal and returned the deed to the attorney, who looked over it and nodded to his client.

Captain Shelton set his calf-skin satchel on the table, unlocked it with a brass key, took out a thousand dollars in one-hundred-dollar bills and pushed the satchel across the table.

"There's your money," he said, "and I throw in the satchel."

The New Englander took the money out in packs, counted it and put it back; then he reached over on the table, took the brass key, locked the satchel, set it down on the floor between his feet and tucked the key into the pocket of his waistcoat. The attorney put the executed deed into his pocket, wrote the consideration of one thousand dollars into the other deed and pushed it, likewise, across the table. The elder New Englander spread out the deed before him and carefully read it, his forefinger moving slowly along each line. When he came to the end, he fixed his eye-glasses a little more securely to his nose, took up a pen and dipped it into the ink-pot. At this moment, Randolph Mason, standing behind him, leaned over swiftly, picked up the deed and tore it in two.

Instantly Roger Shelton threw himself across the table, grabbing for the leather satchel. The younger New Englander, amazed at this violent incident, but instinctively determined to protect the money now in his possession at any cost, gripped the handle of the satchel with his right and, rising a little, struck the Pennsylvanian with the clenched fingers of his left. The long body of Captain Shelton slid back, across the table, crashing his chair. The little bald attorney was immediately on his feet, his fingers twitching like live electric wires, but his face still as expressionless as wood. He saw instantly that his client had been outwitted, trapped and, perhaps, ruined; that the attempt to recover the money by force had failed; that further deception and intrigue would likewise equally fail. This athletic young man, muscled like a blacksmith, his hands clenched, his shoulders thrown loosely forward, it were folly to assail with blows. It were equally folly to assail with wiles that other there, calmly tearing the deed to ribbons, running the strips of paper backward and forward through his fingers.

The plan had crashed without a warning, and yet the attorney's presence of mind was not a whit shaken. His face held its set like plaster, not a nerve quivered, not a muscle sprung—he had been schooled to meet the unforseen. He had gone through a thousand staggering crises where the life, the reputation, the fortune of his client were in a flash periled. He understood instantly, judged the situation, and acted at once. He thrust the pack of one thousand dollars, left lying on the table, into his pocket and helped his dazed client to his feet and to the door. Then he turned back to Randolph Mason.

"Your destruction of this deed will not do any good," he said. "The contract for the sale of this tract of land was definitely made and concluded here, in the presence of this notary as a witness; the signing of the deed is a mere physical act in no way affecting this sale. I shall at once institute a suit for the specific performance of this contract of sale and have a court commissioner make the deed, if this man refuses. The testimony of the notary, as the only disinterested person present, will insure the success of that suit."

"You will hardly institute such a suit, I think."

"Why will I not institute it?" replied the attorney, his voice rising to a stronger volume.

Mason advanced slowly with his verbal prodding.

"Well," he said, "let us say that such a suit would be founded on a moral wrong. This tract of land is thought by your client to be fabulously rich. It lies, I believe, above a synclinal in the oil-bearing strata. That is, it contains the oil reservoir of the whole region around it. It is worth, your client tells me, a half-million dollars. To take it from the owner for a mere thousand would be a striking injustice. If the law permitted this wrong, would your conscience permit it?"

The attorney standing at the door laughed without disturbing the muscles of his face.

"We will take exactly what the law gives us," he said.

"I thought that," replied Randolph Mason, his prodding ended, his voice now lashing like a whip, "and, therefore, I have taken care to see that the law does not permit this wrong to become effective. If you look at chapter ninety-eight of the Code of the state in which this oil territory lies, you will discover that no contract for the sale of real estate can be enforced in its courts unless that contract, or some agreement or memorandum of it, be in writing and signed by the party to be charged thereby or his agents. A contract for the sale of land in that state may be made in the presence of a hundred witnesses, every detail agreed it, the bargain struck, or assented to, ended, and yet it cannot be enforced in its courts without some signed writing. This act is called the Statute of Frauds. I commend it, likewise, to you for the value of its name."

The hope rising in Roger Shelton's eyes, called up by the words of his counsel, died there. His mouth, bleeding from the impact of his enemy's knuckles on the bone, fell into a baggy gaping. He turned painfully through the door. The attorney remained a moment, looking at Randolph Mason. He had been outwitted, balked, juggled with, then grilled on the fire, and yet he came forth unmoved, a Narraganset from the stake. He followed his client slowly out, his face placid as though every nerve in it were cut.

The two bank directors, realizing now the full import of Mason's remarkable strategy, came forward with profound expressions of thankfulness. The unfair gains of a rascal had been skillfully choked out of him. Restitution had been made to tricked persons, and yet nothing of value had been lost. The el dorado sighted was there, remaining in its owner's hands.

For the legal principle involved in this story see Sec. 1, of chapter 98 of the Code of West Virginia, called the Statute of Frauds.

THE SUNBEAM.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1912. NO. 30.

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

What Occurred When the Big Liner Pulled Out

MY HUSBAND HE HAS DESERTED ME

NEW YORK.—The last visitor had gone ashore from a big liner the other morning. The last adieu had been said. The second cabin gangplank had been drawn in. Fussy little tugs were drawing tight on the hawsers preparatory to pulling the liner out of the pier. Sailormen were unlashing the first cabin gangway, ready to haul her on board. The captain and his officers were on the bridge telegraphing to the engine room—

But the steamer did not sail on time.

Through the hundreds on the pier, whose waving handkerchiefs and flags were bidding goodby to departing ones, a woman came dashing like Sam White through a Harvard line-up. In a trice she bounded onto the first cabin gangplank, nor would she budge.

"My husband," she shrieked in accents wild, as the poets say. "My husband," she repeated, "he has deserted me! he has deserted me!"

"Well, go ashore and let us sail," ejaculated an exasperated sailorman.

The liner was now ten minutes late.

Then he came through the crowd. He didn't seem to be making any undue effort to hurry. Perhaps he couldn't. He was a bespectacled little man, laden down with more bundles than a Baxter street peddler.

"My husband," she shrieked. "There he is. I thought he was deserting me."

"I am Gustav Atesh," was all he had time to tell a shipnews reporter before she dragged him up the first cabin gangway, and as the liner headed out into the stream she could be seen dragging him back toward the second cabin. The big vessel sailed fifteen minutes late.

Wife Turns at Last and Beats Tiny Spouse

YOU WOLF I'LL HAVE YOU PINCHED !!!

CHICAGO.—Peter Lombard of 517 South Halsted street weighs about 125 pounds. His wife weighs 200, and is about four inches taller than her husband. In spite of these discrepancies, Lombard beat her whenever he took the notion—and the notion struck him frequently to the last three years—according to her testimony before Municipal Judge Caverly the other day.

The night before, she said, he came home in fighting mood again. Mrs. Lombard objected to taking a beating, but her husband insisted she was looking at the subject in a wrong light. Then she lost her patience, picked up an iron pot from the kitchen stove and whaled him over the head with it. The argument was effective. Lombard appeared in court with his head bandaged.

Big Mrs. Lombard took the witness stand and explained what happened to little Mr. Lombard.

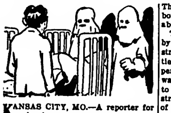
"We were married about four years ago," she said. "A year later my husband decided he wouldn't work any longer. So he retired. The fact that he hadn't any money didn't seem to bother him, but I worried about it. I got hungry occasionally."

Judge Caverly looked Lombard over and smiled.

"You look like a man who has been tamed," he said. "I don't think you'll beat your wife again. Take him home, Mrs. Lombard, and the next time he starts a massacre, you know about what to do."

Lombard and his wife departed arm-in-arm, their domestic troubles—like Lombard's head—apparently patched up.

What a Reporter Saw in the Room of Dread



KANSAS CITY, MO.—A reporter for a local newspaper wanted to be taken on a sight-seeing tour of the General hospital. Dr. L. W. Luscher, superintendent of the institution, granted the request. "I'll take you myself and we'll start in on the third floor," he said.

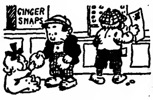
The particular part of the third floor in which they began their visit seemed an unusual place, even to the visitor, unaccustomed to sights in a hospital. Nurses and orderlies appeared ghostly in white garments and heavy white masks entirely covering the face and head, with only room enough to see. They also wore rubber gloves.

The visitor saw two rows of ten beds each, separated by a wide aisle. Thirteen of the beds were occupied. The hands and feet of a few were bound to prevent them from tossing about in their beds and falling out.

The visitor was deeply impressed by the strange scene. He had so strongly sympathized with the patients that he had not asked the superintendent any questions. As he was leaving the big room he wanted to know about the masks, the restraining bonds on the hands and feet of the patients, and finally the disease with which they were infected.

"That big room is the isolation ward for patients infected with cerebro-spinal meningitis," replied the superintendent. The visitor's spine began to creep. Then he thought of his heels and took to them as fast as he could, reaching the elevator just as it had passed out of sight. While the visitor waited Dr. Luscher continued: "Those masks are to prevent possible infection, but the attendants do not know whether or not they are immune from infection with the deadly germs. They work blindly, as all do in caring for meningitis patients. They are heroes and heroines, facing death as long as—" but the eulogy never was finished, for the visitor hurried into the elevator.

Boy Pirates Hush Baby's Cries With Cookies



MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—Just like all the money in the world was the way $22 looked to two twelve-year-old robbers who looted the till of a Lake street grocery, fed a baby gingersnaps to keep it quiet while they made the raid, and then fled to Lake Minnetonka, where they planned to become pirates, with a cave on Michael's island for headquarters. The pirate flag was never raised, for the sight of two youngsters buying ice cream sodas by the half dozen and dickering with boatmen to charter a launch was too bizarre to escape the notice of Chief of Police John Powers of Excelsior. With but $5 of the money spent, the pirate cruise ended in the city jail.

The boys told their own story when they were locked up. They said they went into Gust Johnson's grocery, 523 East Lake street, just to spend a few pennies. They found the store deserted save for Lucile, Johnson's baby daughter.

"We opened the cash register," said one of the prisoners. "Then the baby cried. I gave it a ginger cooky out of a box near the register. It laughed and stopped crying. We took $22 from the register. We went downtown right away, and took a car for the lake. We slept back of a store all night, and then we looked around. We thought we would dig a cave on the island and live there."

Of a Copper Hew.

Here is an essay composed by a boy of nine on Cromwell: "Cromwell was a wicked man, and killed lots of men. He had a nose of copper hew, under which dwelt a truly religious soul."—Christian Life.

WHO'S WHO and Why

WHEN ITALY'S KING AND QUEEN PLAY

During their past summer vacation, the king and queen of Italy were more in the public eye than ever, owing to the war. They are at present at their estate of San Rossore, near Pisa, whence they frequently go to visit hospitals to see wounded soldiers from Africa, to review troops, and take part in other functions on which the heart of the nation is now concentrated.

The royal yacht Yela is in constant demand, and the king and queen generally take their small family of four along, as they are all excellent sailors. Princess Yolanda, who is quite a photographer, has been devoting herself principally to sea views. The privacy with which the king always moves gives rise to many piquant incidents. For a ruler who goes about in his own kingdom as much as Victor Emanual III does, he is not known to many officials.

The Yela put in Spezia recently, and was boarded by the harbor-master. Princess Yolanda was about to take a snapshot of him, when he exclaimed: "It is against the rules; you cannot take photographs; you had better give me the machine." The princess, too young to stand on her dignity, burst into tears and gave up the camera, when the king appeared on deck and laughingly restored peace.

ESTRADA SAYS NICARAGUA PLUNDERED

"Zelaya's government plundered Nicaragua so shamelessly that in spite of its inexhaustible natural resources our country is bankrupt. Neither the state nor private citizens have at their command the capital necessary to develop Nicaragua. When I overthrew by the force of arms the Zelaya clique I hoped that peace would finally reign in my country. General Mena has shattered my hopes. I know now that we should no longer jeopard our future by a silly pride in our anarchistic independence. Some larger nation must help us out, and if the United States cannot do it, who can?"

According to Gen. Juan Estrada, former president of Nicaragua, such is the present situation. The general is now in this country and is living in Brooklyn at the Hotel St. George with his political associate, General Moncada.

The ex-president is a strikingly handsome, powerful and impressive man of forty-five, with large flashing eyes.

RENOUNCES WORLD FOR MISSION WORK

William H. Borden, young Chicago millionaire, was ordained a minister of the gospel the other night at Moody church. He has sacrificed all other ambitions to his desire to become a minister and devote his life to work in the Chinese missionary field.

Mr. Borden is a graduate of Yale university and Princeton theological seminary. Although still a young man, he has devoted many years of his life and a great deal of his wealth to church work. He is a son of the late W. B. Borden and a brother of John Borden.

While Mr. Borden was attending Yale university he founded the Hope mission in New Haven, a rescue home for "down-and-outs," and donated the building and equipment, at a personal cost of more than $20,000. Since his departure from the university the work in the mission is being carried on by other men in college.

Mr. Borden has long intended to gratify his lifelong desire to serve as a missionary in China. At the solicitation of the Student Missionary Volunteer association he will spend the winter visiting the colleges of the country and making addresses to the students on the subject of Christianity.

His tour of the colleges will begin in New York and will extend from coast to coast.

DECLARES WARS SOON BE ABOLISHED

In an address on "The Natural Forces in America Working Toward International Peace" before the International Peace Congress at Geneva, Switzerland, Mrs. Elmer Black, chairman of the propaganda committee of the American Peace and Arbitration league, declared that war as a means of settling differences between nations will soon be abolished. She said that there were certain invincible forces working toward this end, with little noise, but with irresistible power.

Using conditions in America as an example, she said in part:

"There are certain great natural forces working in America toward the final consummation of world peace. These natural forces are developing the processes of social and economic evolution through which we are working out our part in the world's destiny.

"First among these I place the remarkable awakening of our people to the general subject of conservation. We are unquestionably alive to the importance of conserving our material and human resources, and this is a condition opposed to war."

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Uncle Sam Spoils an Indian Adoption Romance

I DON'T THINK YOU OUGHT TO HAVE THIS ADOPTION

WASHINGTON.—Uncle Sam, money grubber, who seems to have lost all his sentiment, has spoiled the pretty romance of the adoption of Robert D. Heinl and his bride into the Blackfeet tribe of Indians.

Mr. Heinl, who is a Washington correspondent, and his bride, formerly Miss Helen Corbin, were admitted to the tribe at a picturesque ceremony in Glacier National Park, Mont., shortly before their marriage. Chief Three Bears acted for the tribe and bestowed upon the couple the tribal names of "Black Eagle" and "Little Woman."

The redskins made their new paleface brethren welcome, Mr. Heinl having long been in their good graces through his sympathy and affection for the vanishing race of Americans, of which he has made an exhaustive study.

The tribe extended hearty welcome to "Black Eagle" and his bride, therefore, but Uncle Sam, through the Indian office, now says that he cannot allow his wards to acquire tribal additions in this manner.

The acting chief of the Indian Bureau says the adoption is not legal because the Indian bureau will not confirm it.

The acting chief said:

"We will disapprove of this adoption matter when it is brought to our notice for verification. The Indians themselves, I feel sure, must have looked on it simply as a joke. They were admitted to the tribe by an Indian ceremony, and not by a legal one, which requires a tribal council before the superintendent of the reservation and other officers.

"Only people descended from the tribe and who have Indian blood in them are ever admitted to a tribe. The Indians are wards of the nation and receive a certain allotment, therefore, any new member of the tribe is a ward of the nation and would have an allotment of lands and money. We will not allow Mr. and Mrs. Heinl to become members of the tribe, even if they waive their rights to apportionments."

Love Germs and Lingerie Are Coincidental

YOU ARE TOO YOUNG TO WEAR THESE THINGS

A LOT of the idiosyncrasies of young girls and budding debutantes, susceptibility to love affairs and their romantic notions generally, among other things, were explained to several hundred mothers the other day by Dr. Eleanora C. Follkmar at the exhibition hall of the Congress of Hygiene and Demography.

Dr. Follkmar, who is a stoutish lady of middle age, told her sisters to denude their daughters of pretty shoes and corsets. She condemned especially the brand of corsets which conduce to the "waspish waist."

Of the activity of the love germ in the budding belle she said:

"The period of passage from girlhood to womanhood is the period of self-consciousness, of early love affairs, of hero devotion, worship or devotion to ideals.

"This is also the period of bad tempers and the use of slang and profane words. During this period girls should not be allowed to wear corsets or high heeled shoes. Neither should they be allowed to use stimulants, not even tea or coffee. They should get plenty of sleep and not be allowed to go much into society or take part in strenuous pastimes.

"Nature has provided every girl with a corset of bony framework, covered with muscles and ligaments for the thorax and pelvis and several layers of muscles for the abdomen and back. Tight lacing at this period deforms the bony framework."

Staying in One's Bed Is the Only Good Answe

LAUNDRY PRICES
GOING UP
PLEASE, OH PLEASE—FER MY SAKE, DON'T DO IT

LAUNDRY prices in Washington are going up. This is the aeroplane age. Meat and rents are already well on their way for altitude records, having broken all former attempts. Rent, clothing, coal, and sundries are soaring. "Everybody's doin' it," and now the laundry men are going to do it, too.

"Who are we, that we should pay ten cents more for steak and not charge an additional cent for our collar processes?" asked one laundryman.

"There comes a tide in the affairs of men, when, unless one gets in the swim, one finds everything going out and nothing coming in," said another.

The "cleaners" feel that they have enough. Therefore, Washingtonians are to pay three cents for their collars and 15 to 20 cents for their shirts soon, and, if they wear pleated evening shirts, they may even cost them 25 cents.

Heretofore, however, the common "peepul" thought that he had one advantage. Cleanliness remained conservative in price. Water and soap were within his reach. He could afford to run a laundry bill.

Even had he only three collars and two lonesome shirts, the world did not need to know it. They could take their regular turns at the laundry and one could maintain a bold front before the world. His neighbors did not need to know that he wintered upon two dozen lumps of coal, and brought his little ones up on a diet of oleomargarine and meatless capsules.

Provided he had the price to pay his rent, there was not much more that he needed in order to appear prosperous to his fellows.

His last hope is about to vanish into thin air.

Preserve Pears by Martha Washington's Recipe

MARTHA WASHINGTON'S RECIPE
PUT THEM INTO BOYLING LYE FOR AN MINUTE REMOVE—ALL THIS SOUNDS GOOD BUT THE BOILING IN LYE

MARTHA WASHINGTON'S recipe for preserving pears in brandy has been discovered by Mrs. Arvilla McDonough, of 1401 Massachusetts avenue Northwest. Mrs. McDonough has in her possession some valuable papers of the Washington family, and following the discovery in Washington several days ago of a jar of brandy and pears put up by Mrs. Washington, Mrs. McDonough gave the Herald a copy of the famous recipe. The jar of pears is in the possession of J. W. Mossburg, 1404 Pennsylvania avenue Northwest.

The recipe in its archaic language follows: "Ye pears shoulde be very freshe. Washe and put yhem into boyling lye for an minute. Remove and put yhem into cold water. Nexte put ye fruit into a prepared sirope of sugar and water. Use an half pound of sugar for everie pound of ye fruit; water to dissolve. Now cooke for an quarter of an hour. Remove and put on plates to cool. Boyle sirupe down to one-half its original quantitie. Put sirupe and pears into jars and add brandy. Seal while hote."

Mrs. McDonough is going to preserve about four bushels of pears according to the recipe of Mrs. Washington. She believes the recipe to be very good with the exception of the "boyling lye" part, but she is going to try it at any rate.

Felt Himself Defrauded.

Householder—"I give you my word, three seventy-five is all I have in the house." Burglar—"Well, say! When ye figure me time, an' me tools, how d'ye expect me to make any profit at that rate?"—Life.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. MINN

THE SAVING HABIT.

One of the most difficult and at the same time most essential of habits to form is that of saving. Of course, there are many persons in all walks of life who, although they are in comfortable circumstances, are so penurious as to be absolutely opposed to parting even with their pennies. Their very lives are controlled by the idea of getting along with as little as possible even at the risk of earning for themselves a reputation for stinginess. Such persons, however, make up a class all to themselves, and generally deserve the contempt in which they are held by their fellow-beings. On the other hand, the spendthrift deserves as much, if not more, condemnation, perhaps, for the facility with which he allows his often hard-earned money to slip through his hands. There is a golden mean between these two extremes of character and it is found in the ability of a man to save from his earnings sufficient for the proverbial rainy day. The advantages of saving may be demonstrated to us in many ways and on many occasions, but it remains for necessity to impress its importance upon our minds. It may be that the manner of living may account in large measure for the universal habit of spending all that we make—the opportunities for doing so are very great and at the same time seem very real and imperative, and it is only after the pocket is empty and we face stern necessity that we are able to discriminate between opportunity and temptation.

Palestine is fast becoming one of the great orange-growing countries of the world. Much fruit of excellent quality is being shipped every year to London and other markets in northern Europe, and this year the crop of the district near Jaffa, the port of Jerusalem, is estimated at 1,500,000 boxes. Farther up the Syrian coast Tyre and Sidon are expected to reach a total of 400,000 cases of oranges exported and 200,000 cases of lemons. For a small country Palestine has many interesting and valuable products. Its olive groves are as productive as they are ancient, and its vineyards yield grapes of fine quality in great abundance. Notwithstanding the drawback of a sometimes very deficient and usually scanty water supply, Syria produces a large quantity of excellent food. But it is not easy to think of Palestine's exports of oranges without thinking of the immeasurably more important exports and ideas and ideals from that little country. By comparison with the moral and spiritual forces which have gone out from Syria to enrich the world, all the products of the soil which can be shipped from the ports as long as the earth shall endure will be of little significance.

There has been a great deal of gossip to the effect that the little Don Jaime, younger son of King Alfonso of Spain, is physically and mentally defective. A recent dispatch from Madrid announces that nine physicians recently held a consultation on his case and pronounce him perfectly normal, though he is afflicted with an affection of the ears which has persisted since his birth. When there is any shadow of basis for sensational statements concerning members of royalty, correspondents who thrive on gossip are sure to make the most of it.

North Pacific whalers are not unanimous in accepting the theory that whale fisheries are playing out on account of the extinction of the whales. One captain who notes that his ship and another made a kill of 187 last year and only 54 this year, thinks the recent volcanic disturbances have made changes in ocean currents that have diverted the small fish on which the whales depend for food. He thinks that in time the whales will be back in their old-time haunts, or discovered in their new ones.

The United States consul at Prague says there are practically no flies in Bohemia. He attributes the phenomenon to the fact that "everything is made of brick, stone or concrete, and the streets are cleaned several times a day." The reason why the fly is feared is that his habits are so dirty. Yet where he is numerous, his numbers indicate the presence of dirt. Undoubtedly the best way to get rid of flies is not to "swat" them, but to clean up.

A Scranton pedagogue says the teacher's first aim should be to interest the child, therefore he urges the use of slang. The teacher's standing on one foot might also interest the pupil and be about as useful, but it is not advocated.

A groom of twenty-nine who eloped with a bride of eighty may not have picked a budding beauty; but he has the consolation of knowing he hasn't [illegible] himself to a mother-in-law.

FOES OF CRUELTY IN CONVENTION

AMERICAN HUMANE ASSOCIATION BEGINS ANNUAL MEETING DISCUSSING IMPORTANT TOPIC.

A THREE DAY SESSION

Eminent Men and Women Make Addresses Pertaining To the Treatment Of Children.

Indianapolis, Oct. 14.—The thirty-sixth annual meeting of the American Humane association opened here today. Many delegates representing anti-cruelty associations and societies in all parts of the United States are in attendance. The sessions will last for three days and will be devoted first to the consideration of work for children and the second half of the sessions to the consideration of animals.

This evening a meeting will be held at which addresses will be made by Governor Marshall, Senator John W. Kern, Dr. William O. Stillman, president of the American Humane association; Mayor Samuel Shank of Indianapolis, and Dr. Francis H. Rowley, president of the Massachusetts S. P. C. A.

Many important addresses pertaining to the treatment of children and looking to the elimination of child labor have been prepared by eminent men and women, who have devoted their lives to this humane cause. "Save the child, is the ruling spirit of the day," said President Stillman at the opening of the congress. "This noble work should engage the attention of every man and woman in the country, and I venture to believe that within a few years such a thing as little children working in factories will not be heard of."

COLDER WEATHER.

Drop in Temperature Due Wednesday or Thursday.

Washington, Oct. 14.—Unsettled and rainy weather throughout the gulf and south Atlantic states, during the first part of the coming week is predicted by the weather bureau as a result of reports of a tropical storm now entering the gulf of Mexico from the Caribbean sea.

"Seasonable temperatures will prevail throughout the country until after the passage of this disturbance when a change to a considerably lower temperature is probable over much of the country. This change to colder will appear in the northwest Wednesday or Thursday," says the weekly report.

Auto Ditched by a Cow.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 14.—Forced to careen over a fifteen-foot cliff on a road here because of the gyrations of a frightened cow hitched to the rear of a farm wagon it was passing, the automobile of Attorney G. F. Brice, with Brice at the wheel rolled over its occupants, killing Miss Alice Holmes, 21, a stenographer, who was seated next to Brice. Miss Berthe Holmes, 18, and Mrs. H. B. McCabe, who occupied the rear seat, were dangerously hurt. The accident occurred while the party were returning from a pleasure trip.

1 Killed, 5 Hurt in Storm.

Minneapolis, Oct. 14.—Automobile, railway, streetcar and motorcycle accidents were numerous in Minneapolis in the blinding rainstorm Friday night, and one man was killed, three others were seriously injured and two were painfully hurt. The rain continued thirteen hours, with a total of 1.13 inches. It was followed by a drop of 35 degrees in temperature.

17 Injured in Collision.

Norristown, Pa., Oct. 14.—Seventeen persons, the majority women, were seriously injured two miles from here, when two trolley cars on the Reading Transit company crashed in a head-on collision. Several may die. The motorman of one car was hurled from the platform and later found with both legs cut off.

Steamers Ground in Storm.

Detroit, Oct. 14.—The big steel steamer, George W. Perkins and Rensselaer, are hard aground as the result of the violent wind storm which swept the Great Lakes.

Bloodshed in Strike.

Bingham, Utah, Oct. 14.—An attack on a Greek hillside settlement by fifty deputy sheriffs, which resulted in bloodshed, and several minor disturbances broke the truce that has prevailed among those involved in the copper mine strike.

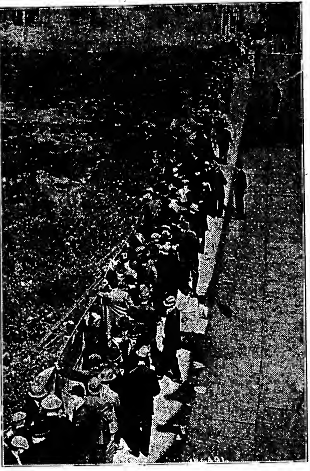
U. S. Attorney Hulbert Resigns.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—A. R. Hulbert, assistant United States district Attorney who has had charge of government prosecutions under the pure food laws has resigned, effective Nov. 1.

Mexican Rebels Rob Train.

El Paso, Oct. 14.—Rebels held up a passenger train 150 miles south of here on the border, rifled the mail and express cars, and kidnaped John T. Cameron, a wealthy stock broker of El Paso. The train was allowed to proceed south.

HALF A MILE OF BASEBALL FANS



HERE are the baseball fans of New York patiently waiting for their turn at the box office in a line which formed at midnight Oct. 6 and at 10 a. m. Oct. 7, stretched from the entrance to the Polo Grounds at 157th street, to 147th street, a distance of half a mile.

TURKS ARE TAKEN

MONTENEGRIN TROOPS DEFEAT SULTAN'S FORCES ON DETCHITCH MOUNTAIN.

LOSSES PLACED AT THOUSAND

Tide of Thirty-Hour Battle Is Turned by King Nicholas, Who Attacked Enemy Both Front and Rear at Same Time.

Podgoritza, Oct. 11.—"To the American People: We will fight at this moment against the oppressor of our Christian brothers for their deliverance. I hope the sympathies of your great country will not fail us.

"NICHOLAS."

Podgoritza, Montenegro, Oct. 11.—The Montenegrin army, commanded by Crown Prince Danilo, after a battle lasting for thirty hours, captured the Turkish forces on the Detchitch mountain. The losses on both sides are estimated at 1,000.

The Montenegrins began cannonading the Turks at dawn, but for several hours the Turks, who had been greatly reinforced during the night, seemed to have the better of the conflict. King Nicholas, directing the Montenegrins from his headquarters in the hills, turned the tide of battle at noon by sending a strong force of artillery under cover of a heavy fire from the front to the enemy's rear, and between two fires the guns of the Turks were soon silenced. They fought stubbornly during the afternoon, however.

Another strong Montenegrin force has engaged a Turkish regiment near the Turkish town of Tushi, 16 miles from here. Still another division of Montenegrins has crossed the frontier near Berana.

The losses on both sides in the battle of Detchitch will probably reach 1,000 dead and wounded. The Montenegrins captured practically all of the Turkish field pieces and much ammunition.

Vienna, Oct. 11.—Many Albanian villages to the north of the Boyane river are in flames, according to a dispatch to the Neue Freie Presse from Cattaro. Many fugitives, including some wounded men, have arrived at Scutari. Some peasants who fled to the frontier posts at Szamesi were slain by Montenegrins.

Vienna, Oct. 11.—Eighty thousand Russian troops are mobilized along the frontier where the Balkan war rages. Thus the peace of all Europe is considered swaying on a pivot. That Austria will participate in the Balkan conflict was indicated positively by Foreign Minister Von Berchtold, who said: "We have important interests which we will protect at any cost."

Famous War Singer Is Dead.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Jules Lumbard, famous singer of the Civil war, died Thursday as he had lived, peacefully, and with relatives gathered about him, at the home of his sister-in-law in this city.

Suffers $100,000 Fire Loss.

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 12.—Fire from spontaneous combustion resulted in a hundred thousand dollar loss to the Metropolitan block, corner of Dubuque and Washington streets, here, last Thursday.

ARCHBOLD ON STAND

OIL MAGNATE ADMITS WRITING FORAKER-HANNA LETTERS.

Witness in Senate Inquiry Says Money Was Sent for Counsel Fees for Services Rendered.

Washington, Oct. 11.—John D. Archbold "has no doubt" that he wrote them all. This was the burden of the Standard Oil magnate's answers when, as a witness before the senate committee investigating campaign funds, he was called on to identify a large number of published letters to public men containing checks and discussing political matters.

Among Mr. Archbold's correspondents were former Senators Foraker, Quay and Hanna and former Representatives Grosvenor and Sibley.

Certificates of deposit sent to Mr. Foraker, he said, were for payment of legal services to the Standard Oil company of Ohio. Some of the letters said to have been written to him by the men named Mr. Archbold could not remember having received, but was not prepared to say he had not. Mr. Archbold did not deny the authorship of any of the letters attributed to him.

Mr. Archbold testified that a receipt Cornelius N. Bliss gave him for the company's $100,000 contribution to the Roosevelt campaign fund of 1904 had been destroyed just before the death of H. H. Rogers.

"It was not a thing of pleasure to look at," said Archbold.

UNION LEADER ADMITS GUILT

Edward Clark, Cincinnati Man, Changes Plea to "Guilty" in Dynamite Conspiracy Case.

Indianapolis, Oct. 9.—Edward Clark of Cincinnati pleaded guilty Monday to the government's charges in the dynamite conspiracy. Clark was business agent and president of the Cincinnati local of the Structural Iron Workers' union from 1908 to 1911.

As soon as court opened District Attorney Charles W. Miller addressed Federal Judge A. B. Anderson:

"If it please the court, the defendant Clark of Cincinnati wishes to change his plea from 'not guilty' to 'guilty.'"

"Do you plead guilty?" asked Judge Anderson.

"I plead guilty," said Clark.

Greek Aviator Off to War.

Berlin, N. J., Oct. 11.—The armies of the Balkan states will be augmented by an American aeroplane if Angelo Stergias of this town can get his machine through to Athens safely. The biplane will leave New York on the next steamship sailing for Greece, and Angelo will accompany it, to offer his services to the Greek army, in which he formerly served.

James J. Hill Buys St. Paul Bank.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 12—James J. Hill has completed the purchase of the Second National bank of this city, which has been pending for some days. He gave his personal check for $1,240,000 for the property Thursday.

Man Long Treasurer Embezzler.

Marysville, Cal., Oct. 12.—George E. Pine, twenty-three years treasurer of Yuba county, was jailed here Thursday, under sentence to five years' imprisonment for embezzling $9,400 of the county funds.

TURKEY LOSES OPENING BATTLE

MONTENEGRINS ARE VICTORS, CAPTURING FORT — SLAUGHTER OF PRISONERS REPORTED.

POWERS STILL HOPEFUL

Think That Peace May Yet Be Restored—140,000 Asiatic Troops To Constantinople.

Belgrade, Servia, Oct. 12.—Prince Alexander and a section of the general staff left here last night for the frontier. The royal train is in readiness at the station for King Peter.

London, Oct. 12.—Scutari has been occupied by the Montenegrins, according to a dispatch from Budapest. The news was unconfirmed and was doubted here. If true, it marks a heavy disaster for the Turks. The town is the most important in northern Albania and a Turkish stronghold.

Constantinople, Oct. 12.—Fighting between the Turkish and Montenegrin troops is still in progress in the region of Tushi to the north of Scutari.

Podgoritza, Montenegro.—The Montenegrin troops followed up their success in capturing Detchich mountain from the Turks by taking the Turkish fort which dominates the town of Tushi from Schipcinck hill.

The Turks offered a stubborn resistance but the Montenegrins succeeded in rushing the position after several furious assaults, that the Turks repulsed. Both forces suffered heavy losses in killed and wounded. The fighting lasted fourteen hours. The road to the Turkish town of Tushi from the north is now open to the advance of the Montenegrin army.

Montenegro claims the first victory in the Balkan war by the capture of the fort and the strong Turkish position on Detchitch mountain, whose commander surrendered late yesterday with the bulk of his forces. Montenegrins also crossed the frontier near Berana and, according to the Turkish account, have been repulsed.

400,000 in Turkish Army.

Constantinople.—(Wireless from a steamer in the Dardanelles to Kustendje, Rumania.)

No fewer than 140,000 Turkish troops from Asia Minor will, it is estimated, be concentrated within a week in European Turkey. This will bring the effective force of the Turkish army there up to 400,000 men.

Indications Point to War.

Athens, Greece.—All the indications here point to war.

Bulgarians Prepare to Leave.

Saskatoon, Sask. — Thirty Bulgarians in the employ of one firm gave notice that in the event of their native country being involved in war, they would leave at once for home. In addition to the Bulgarians there are over 100 natives of the Balkan states here who will also leave if their services are required.

BANDITS BUNGLE HOLDUP

Gun Fight On Moving Train Results in Capture.

Fort Smith, Ark., Oct. 12.—Four bandits bungled the holdup of a northbound Kansas City Southern passenger train between Hatfield and Mena, Ark. One was wounded and captured and the other outlaws escaped after a revolver fight with Express Messenger Merrill Burgett of Kansas City, Mo., in which Burgett exhausted his ammunition and was badly beaten. Burgett shot the robber, who was discovered an hour later after his companions had deserted him. The robber is being conveyed to Mena.

An armed posse is pursuing the bandits. Burgett is in a hospital at Mena. He will recover.

While the robbers were forcing entrance, Burgett ran to the safes, took out the valuable packages and hid them.

"Best Way" to See Giants' Win.

Oneonta, N. Y., Oct. 12.—When taken from a freight train in the local yards at midnight two 11-year-old boys from Binghamton, N. Y., explained their presence on the train by the statement that they were trying to get to New York "to see the Giants beat the Red Sox."

Enginsman Stunned By Lightning.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Lightning struck the engine of a Chicago & North-Western railway passenger train as it was nearing Waukegan, Ill. The train dashed into Waukegan with the engineer and fireman stunned. The fireman was the first to recover and found Engineer S. W. Woodmansee sitting in his place and leaning against the throttle. The fireman brought the train to a stop and Woodmansee was taken to a hospital.

Taft to View Battleships.

Beverly, Mass., Oct. 12.—President Taft is on his way to New York on the Mayflower to review the big American fleet Monday and Tuesday.

Man Is 21 on Day Before Birthday.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—A man is 21 years old the day before his 21st birthday and is entitled to vote on that day, according to an opinion given here by Charles H. Mitchell, attorney for the board of election commissioners.

SHARP PAINS IN THE BACK

Point to Hidden Kidney Trouble.

Have you a lame back, aching day and night? Do you feel a sharp pain after bending over? When the kidneys seem sore and the action irregular, use Doan's Kidney Pills, which have cured thousands.

A Washington Case—

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

H. R. Hatch, 2516 Cedar St., Everett, Wash., says: "Severe pains in my back made me miserable. The kidney secretions burned in passing and looked like blood. My back got so bad I could hardly walk and any jar sent sharp stabs of pain through me. After specialists failed, Doan's Kidney Pills completely cured me."

Get Doan's at Any Drug Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., Buffalo, New York

Palliating News.

"Oh, dear, officer, was my poor husband shot when you got him to the station?"

"No, madam; only half shot."

Mean Hint.

"Men are what their diet makes them."

"You must have been eating a great deal of sheepshead fish lately."

Unsophisticated.

"Darling," said the fond youth, producing a ring, "which is the right finger?"

"For goodness sake, Algy!" responded the maiden, "don't you know? Nineteen years old and never been engaged to a girl before!"

Call to Arms.

"Bang!" went the rifles at the maneuvers.

"Oo-oo," screamed the pretty girl—a nice, decorous, surprised little scream. She stepped backward into the surprised arms of a young man. "Oh," said she, blushing, "I was frightened by the rifles. I beg your pardon."

"Not at all," said the young man. "Let's go over and watch the artillery."

Wise Young Man.

That was a very wise Cambridge student of whom the London story tellers were talking some time ago. One of his college friends finding himself without funds, went to this Solomon of students to borrow. He found him in bed. Seizing him by the shoulder, he shook him.

"I say," he said, "are you asleep?"

"Why do you ask?" queried the other, sleepily.

"I want to borrow a sovereign."

"Yes," said the other, turning over and closing his eyes. "I'm asleep."

Explains the Undertaker's Grouch.

"Who is that fellow sitting humped up and muttering to himself out there on the horse block?"

"Aw, that's Ezra Toombs, the undertaker," replied the landlord of the Skeedee tavern. "He's feeling sore over the way his business has been going of late. You see, the doctor gave Judge Feebles two weeks to live; that was six weeks ago, and the judge is up and around now and figgerin' on marryin' again. Every time Ezra meets the doctor he asks him, 'How about it, hey?' and they have a row. And now he's sittin' out there watching a tramp painter gilding the weather vane of the church across the street. Ezra says, by Heck, he's about ready to move away, things is so dead here."—Kansas City Star.

"GOOD STUFF."

A Confirmed Coffee Drinker Takes to Postum.

A housewife was recently surprised when cook served Postum instead of coffee. She says:

"For the last five or six years I have been troubled with nervousness, indigestion and heart trouble. I couldn't get any benefit from the doctor's medicine so finally he ordered me to stop drinking coffee, which I did.

"I drank hot water while taking the doctor's medicine, with some improvement, then went back to coffee with the same old trouble as before.

"A new servant girl told me about Postum—said her folks used it and liked it in place of coffee. We got a package but I told her I did not believe my husband would like it, as he was a great coffee drinker.

"To my surprise he called for a third cup, said it was 'good stuff' and wanted to know what it was. We have used Postum ever since and both feel better than we have in years.

"My husband used to have had spells with his stomach and would be sick three or four days, during which time he could not eat or drink anything. But since he gave up coffee and took to Postum, he has had no more trouble, and we now fully believe it was all caused by coffee.

"I have not had any return of my former trouble since drinking Postum, and feel better and can do more work than in the last ten years. We tell everyone about it—some say they tried it and did not like it. I tell them it makes all the difference as to how it's made. It should be made according to directions—then it is delicious."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest. Adv.

SERIAL STORY

EXCUSE ME!

Novelized from the Comedy of the Same Name

By Rupert Hughes

ILLUSTRATED From Photographs of the Play as Produced By Henry W. Savage

Copyright, 1911, by A. C. Fly Co.

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Ira Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Mallory decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding hazing. Marjorie is distracted. Ira Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Annie Gattle, a fellow passenger. Mallory vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Mallory reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Mallory finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train. Mallory again makes an unsuccessful hunt for a preacher. Dr. Temple poses as a physician. Mrs. Temple is induced by Mrs. Wellington to smoke a cigar. Sight of preacher on a station platform raises Mallory's hopes, but he takes another train. Missing hand baggage compels the couple to borrow from passengers. Jimmie gets a cinder in his eye and Mrs. Jimmie gives first aid. Coolness is then resumed. Still no clergyman. More borrowing. Dr. Temple puzzled by behavior of different couples. Marjorie's jealousy aroused by Mallory's baseball jargon. Marjorie suggests wrecking the train in hopes that accident will produce a preacher. Also tries to induce the conductor to hold the train so she can shop.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Dog-on Dog Again.

As the conductor left the Mallorys to their own devices, it rushed over him anew what sacrilege had been attempted—a fool bride had asked him to stop the Trans-American of all trains!—to go shopping of all things!

He stormed into the smoking room to open the safety valve of his wrath, and found the porter just coming out of the buffet cell with a tray, two hollow-stemmed glasses and a bottle swaddled in a napkin.

"Say, Ellsworth, what in —— do you suppose that female back there wants?—wants me to hold the Trans-American while—"

But the porter was in a flurry himself. He was about to serve champagne, and he cut the conductor short:

"'Scuse me, boss, but thay's a lovin' couple in the stateroom forward that is in a powerful hurry for this. I can't talk to you now. I'll see you later." And he swaggered off, leaving the door of the buffet open. The conductor paused to close it, glanced in, started, stared, glared, roared: "What's this! Well, I'll be—a dog smuggled in here! I'll break that coon's head. Come out of there, you miserable or'nary hound." He seized the incredulous Snoozleums by the scruff of his neck, growling, "It's you for the baggage car ahead," and dashed out with his prey, just as Mallory, now getting new bearings on Marjorie's character, spoke across the rampart of his Napoleonically folded arms:

"Well, you're a nice one!—making violent love to a conductor before my very eyes. A minute more and I would have—"

She silenced him with a snap: "Don't you speak to me! I hate you! I hate all men. The more I know men the more I like—" this reminded her, and she asked anxiously: "Where is Snoozleums?"

Mallory, impatient at the shift of subject, snapped back: "Oh, I left him in the buffet with the waiter. What I want to know is how you dare to—"

"Was it a colored waiter?"

"Of course. But I'm not speaking of—"

"But suppose he should bite him?"

"Oh, you can't hurt those nigger waiters. I started to say—"

"But I can't have Snoozleums biting colored people. It might not agree with him. Get him at once."

Mallory trembled with suppressed rage like an overloaded boiler, but he gave up and growled: "Oh, Lord, all right. I'll get him when I've finished—"

"Go get him this minute. And bring the poor darling back to his mother."

"His mother! Ye gods!" cried Mallory, wildly. He turned away and dashed into the men's room with a furious: "Where's that damned dog?"

He met the porter just returning. The porter smiled: "He's right in heah, sir," and opened the buffet door. His eyes popped and his jaw sagged: "Why, I lef' him hare just a minute ago."

"You left the window open, too," Mallory observed. "Well, I guess he's gone."

The porter was panic-stricken: "Oh, I'm turrible sorry, boss, I wouldn't have lost dat dog fer a fortune. If you was to hit me with a axe I wouldn't mind."

To his utter befuddlement, Mallory grinned and winked at him, and murmured: "Oh, that's all right. Don't worry." And actually laid half a dollar in his palm. Leaving the black lids batting over the starting eyes, Mallory pulled his smile into a long face and went back to Marjorie like an undertaker: "My love, prepare yourself for bad news."

Marjorie looked up, startled and apprehensive: "Snoozleums is ill. He did bite the darkey."

"Worse than that—he—he—fell out of the window."

"When!" she shrieked, "in heaven's name—when?"

"He was there just a minute ago, the waiter says."

Marjorie went into instant hysterics, wringing her hands and sobbing: "Oh, my darling, my poor child—stop the train at once!"

She began to pound Mallory's shoulders and shake him frantically. He had never seen her this way either. He was getting his education in advance. He tried to calm her with inexpert words: "How can I stop the train? Now, dearie, he was a nice dog, but after all, he was only a dog."

She rounded on him like a panther: "Only a dog! He was worth a dozen men like you. You find the conductor at once, command him to stop this train—and back up! I don't care if he has to go back ten miles. Run, tell him at once. Now, you run!"

Mallory stared at her as if she had gone mad, but he set out to run somewhere, anywhere. Marjorie paced up and down distractedly, tearing her hair and moaning, "Snoozleums, Snoozleums! My child. My poor child!" At length her wildly roving eyes noted the bell rope. She stared, pondered, nodded her head, clutched at it, could not reach it, jumped for it several times in vain, then seized a chair, swung it into place, stood up in it, gripped the rope, and came down on it with all her weight, dropping to the floor and jumping up and down in a frenzied dance. In the distance the engine could be heard faintly whistling, whistling for every pull.

The engineer, far ahead, could not imagine what unheard-of crisis could bring about such mad signals. The fireman yelled:

"I bet that crazy conductor is attacked with an epilettic fit."

But there was no disputing the command. The engine was reversed, the air brakes set, the sand run out and every effort made to pull the iron horse, as it were, back on its haunches.

The grinding, squealing, jolting, shook the train like an earthquake. The shrieking of the whistle froze the blood like a woman's cry of "Murder!" in the night. The women among the passengers echoed the screams. The men turned pale and braced themselves for the shock of collision. Some of them were mumbling prayers. Dr. Temple and Jimmie Wellington, with one idea in their dissimilar souls, dashed from the smoking room to go to their wives.

Ashton and Wedgewood, with no one to care for but themselves, seized windows and tried to fight them open. At last they budged a sash and knelt down to thrust their heads out.

"I don't see a beastly thing ahead," said Wedgewood, "except the heads of other fools."

"We're slowing down though," said Ashton, "she stops! We're safe. Thank God!" And he collapsed into a chair. Wedgewood collapsed into another, gasping: "Whatevah are we safe from, I wondah?"

The train-crew and various passengers descended and ran alongside the train asking questions. Panic gave way to mystery. Even Dr. Temple came back into the smoking room to finish a precious cigar he had been at work on. He was followed by Little Jimmie, who had not quite reached his wife when the stopping of the train put an end to his excuse for chivalry. He was regretfully mumbling:

"K would have been such a good shansh to shave my life's wife—I mean my—I don't know what I mean." He sank into a chair and ordered a drink; then suddenly remembered his vow, and with great heroism, rescinded the order.

Mallory, finding that the train was checked just before he reached the conductor, saw that official's bewildered wrath at the stoppage and had a fearsome intuition that Marjorie had somehow done the deed. He hurried back to the observation room, where he found her charging up and down, still distraught. He paused at a safe distance and said:

"The train has stopped, my dear. Somebody rang the bell."

"I guess somebody did!" Marjorie answered, with a proud toss of the head. "Where's the conductor?"

"He's looking for the fellow that pulled the rope."

"You go tell him to back up—and slowly, too."

"No, thank you!" said Mallory. He was a brave young man, but he was not bearding the conductors of stopped expresses. Already the conductor's voice was heard in the smoking room, where he appeared with the rush and roar of a Bashan bull. "Well!" he bellowed, "which one of you guys pulled that rope?"

"It was nobody here, sir," Dr. Temple meekly explained. The conductor transfixed him with a baleful glare: "I wouldn't believe a gambler on oath. I bet you did it."

"I assure you, sir," Wedgewood interposed, "he didn't touch it. I was heah."

The conductor waved him aside and charged into the observation room, followed by all the passengers in an awe-struck rabble. Here, too, the conductor thundered: "Who pulled that rope? Speak up somebody."

Mallory was about to sacrifice himself to save Marjorie, but she met the conductor's black rage with the withering contempt of a young queen: "I pulled the old rope. Whom did you suppose?"

The conductor almost dropped with apoplexy at finding himself with nobody to vent his immense rage on, but this pink and white slip. "You!" he gulped, "well, what in— Say, in the name of—why, don't you know it's a penitentiary offense to stop a train this way?"

Marjorie tossed her head a little higher, grew a little calmer: "What do I care? I want you to back up."

The conductor was reduced to a wet rag, a feeble echo: "Back up—the train up?"

"Yes, back the train up," Marjorie answered, resolutely, "and go slowly till I tell you to stop."

The conductor stared at her a moment, then whirled on Mallory: "Say, what in hell's the matter with your wife?"

Mallory was saved from the problem of answering by Marjorie's abrupt change from a young Tsarina rebuking a serf, to a terrified mother. She flung out imploring palms and with a gush of tears pleaded: "Won't you please back up? My darling child fell off the train."

The conductor's rage fell away in an instant. "Your child fell off the train!" he gasped. "Good Lord! How old was he?"

With one hand he was groping for the bell cord to give the signal, with the other he opened the door to look back along the track.

"He was two years old," Marjorie sobbed.

"Oh, that's too bad!" the conductor groaned. "What did he look like?"

"He had a pink ribbon round his neck."

"A pink ribbon—oh, the poor little fellow! the poor little fellow!"

"And a long curly tail."

The conductor swung round with a yell: "A curly tail!—your son?"

"My dog!" Marjorie roared back at him.

The conductor's voice cracked weakly as he shrieked: "Your dog! You stopped this train for a fool dog?"

"He wasn't a fool dog," Marjorie retorted, facing him down, "he knows more than you do."

The conductor threw up his hands: "Well, don't you women beat—" He studied Marjorie as if she were some curious freak of nature. Suddenly an idea struck into his daze: "Say, what kind of a dog was it?—a measly little cheese-hound?"

"He was a noble, beautiful soul with wonderful eyes and adorable ears."

The conductor was growing weaker and weaker: "Well, don't worry. I got him. He's in the baggage car."

Marjorie stared at him unbelievingly. The news seemed too gloriously beautiful to be true. "He isn't dead—Snoozleums is not dead!" she cried, "he lives! He lives! You have saved him." And once more she flung herself upon the conductor. He tried to bat her off like a gnat, and Mallory came to his rescue by dragging her away and shoving her into a chair. But she saw only the noble conductor: "Oh, you dear, good, kind angel. Get him at once."

"He stays in the baggage car," the conductor answered, firmly and as he supposed, finally.

"But Snoozleums doesn't like baggage cars," Marjorie smiled. "He won't ride in one."

"He'll ride in this one or I'll wring his neck."

"You fiend in human flesh!" Marjorie shrank away from him in horror, and he found courage to seize the bell rope and yank it viciously with a sardonic: "Please, may I start this train?"

The whistle tooted faintly. The bell began to hammer, the train to creak and writhe and click. The conductor pulled his cap down hard and started forward. Marjorie seized his sleeve: "Oh, I implore you, don't consign that poor sweet child to the horrid baggage car. If you have a human heart in your breast, hear my prayer."

The conductor surrendered unconditionally: "Oh, Lord, all right, all right. I'll lose my job, but if you'll keep quiet, I'll bring him to you." And he slunk out meekly, followed by the passengers, who were shaking their heads in wonderment at this most amazing feat of this most amazing bride.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Cure.

Miss Fay Templeton, at a supper at the Ritz-Carlton in New York given in honor of her return to the stage, praised the American business man.

"I have only one fault to find with him," she said. "He works too hard. Hence, of an evening, he is sometimes a little dull.

"But intelligent wives can soon cure their husbands of overworking. I know a wife—she and her good man are in Egypt now—who came down to dinner one night in a somber black robe.

"Her husband—a frightfully overworked millionaire—looked at her costume and exclaimed:

"'Why on earth, my love, are you wearing a dress like that? It's positively half-mourning.'

"'Of course it's half mourning,' she replied. 'When you come home from the office, don't you always complain that you're half dead?'"

Rare Muskrat Trapped.

An albino muskrat, white as snow, with pink eyes, was trapped in the big Pierce swamp near Fairfield, N. J., the first ever caught in that state.

IS UP TO SHIPPERS

CAR QUESTION IS MADE A QUESTION FOR THOSE OF THE NORTHWEST.

WHERE TROUBLE LIES.

Quick Loading Needed, Says J. T. Conley—Tells of South Dakota Prosperity in An Interview.

Minneapolis.—Upon the shippers of the Northwest depends very largely whether the railroads, by continued preventive measures successfully exercised up to this time, will be able to handle the mammoth crop without trouble, or a very serious car scarcity will develop in November, in the opinion of J. T. Conley, assistant general freight agent of the Milwaukee, who is back from an exhaustive examination into South Dakota conditions.

Cheerfulness Everywhere.

"The mental change in South Dakota is the most remarkable feature in the Northwest this year," Mr. Conley said, "and it means much for Minneapolis, for all South Dakota is cheerful. I went not only through the big producing counties where enormous crops were raised this year, but also into the country west of the James river and south of Edmunds county, where, we had been told, the production was light compared with the enormous yields east of the James. In that supposedly thinner county I found that some excellent crops had been raised. South Dakota is filled with money and optimism and the people are going to spend the money. Minneapolis is going to find South Dakota buying heavily here and there is only one unfavorable possibility in sight. That is car scarcity.

"Up to this time the Milwaukee road has been able, and is still able, to handle all the business, because of the extensive preparation made well in advance. Traffic is now beginning to thicken to a degree that necessitates the conservation of every wheel that we have been able to move. We are now up against a shippers' proposition.

Up to Shippers.

"Minneapolis has already developed, in several recent instances, minor congestions incident to delay in unloading cars promptly, or in loading empties set on industry tracks that, had not immediate and effective action been taken would soon have resulted in blockades of serious proportions. By insistently punching up the shippers we have in each instance made a clearance. Today everything is clear in the terminals and the big tonnage moving this way is coming along all right. But the situation is in the hands of the shippers, who can make or mar it by promptness or delay in handling cars in the Minneapolis terminals."

South Dakota is doing much improvement work, Mr. Conley said. New homes and new business buildings, grain elevators and other structures are going up. The total volume of business being done in the state is very big. Minneapolis, he said, is in closer touch with South Dakota this year than ever, and nearly every South Dakotan one meets speaks of a recent visit to Minneapolis or an intention to make such a visit in the near future.

WARD TO HELP.

Secretary of Federation for Social Service Coming to Minnesota.

Winona. — The Winona Methodist district is to be visited the end of this month by Rev. Harry E. Ward of Chicago, secretary of the Methodist federation for social service. Mr. Ward will adress the men's club of Central church here on the evening of Oct. 28, and the following day, Oct. 29, will be in Rochester and attend the meeting of Winona district stewards. On the same day the organization of District Superintendent J. C. Craig's country life commission will take place and Rev. E. C. Hickman, who will take charge will speak.

WINONA INTERESTED.

La Crosse Water Power Company Properties to Be Sold Friday.

Winona. — Winonans are awaiting with interest the sale at Black River Falls of the properties of the La Crosse Water Power company under the receivership with which it is now operated. The La Crosse Water Power company owns a controlling interest in the stock of the Winona Railway & Light company, which is now under a separate receivership, and there may be developments in the Winona receivership soon after the sale at Black River Falls. Under the receivership here the service across Lake Winona has been abandoned, but it is hoped that under new management the bridge may be restored and other needed improvements made.

Ambitious 2-Year-Old Boy.

Mankato.—The 2-year-old son of Mrs. Bessie Rosholt of Warba, Minn., who is visiting relatives near Mapleton, met with an unusual accident. He was demonstrating to other children his ability as a climber, and scrambled to the top of one of the bee hives. The bees resented the disturbance in their characteristic manner, and the children's cries brought the older members of the family to the rescue. It was found the little fellow had been stung more than one hundred times.

MINN. MAN DIES IN BATTLE

GEORGE O. BURGESS DIES IN CLASH DURING ENGAGEMENT

Rear Admiral Sutherland Expects Peace in Republic Within a Month.

Washington, Oct. 10.—Details of the surrender of the town of Leon by Nicaraguan revolutionists to American marines and sailors under Lieutenant Colonel Long and the loss of three American lives through the treachery of drunken rebels, were received at the state department from Minister Weitzel at Managua.

The deaths brought the total of Americans killed by the rebels up to seven, the loss of four at Barranca Hill, on the road to Leon, having been previously reported.

In his advices to Minister Weitzel, Rear Admiral Southerland said he expected peace in the republic within a month. The chief revolutionary bands have been crushed and their leaders captured and exiled.

Names of Men Killed.

The men killed at Leon were:

Roy G. Morton, turret captain on the Colorado, son of Mrs. S. M. Olson, Los Angeles, Calif.

George O. Burgess, ordinary seaman, Colorado, son of Ora Burgess, Stillwater, Minn.

Marine Private John Bartels, brother of Annie Puttcomer, Melrose Park, Cook county, Ill.

Although three were reported wounded, the name of only one, Private Freek Kittsmiller, could be found in the records here. Private Kittsmiller, whose wounds are serious, is the son of Mrs. Marguerite Kittsmiller, Lewiston, Idaho.

Those reported wounded, but whose names do not appear in the records, were Lampher, ordinary seamen, Colorado, and Deidsre, marine, Company D.

"The credit for this successful termination of a most critical condition," said Admiral Southerland in his report, "is principally due to the firmness, good judgment, ability and tact of Lieutenant Colonel Long since he has had charge of the situation at that place."

WARRANT FOR OFFICIAL.

Public Accountants Declare Fraudulent Claims.

Grand Rapids.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of F. E. Reusswig, former chairman of the board of directors of school district No. 6, charging him with knowingly consenting to the payment of fraudulent claims against the district. The warrant was issued after the findings of the Marwick-Mitchell company, public accountants, which examined the books of the school district for the county commissioners, on the request of the county attorney.

The charge preferred against Reusswig is based on orders issued to Miss Frances Bluntach, who taught two months at the Sand Lake school, beginning Sept. 1, 1910. For these two months, Miss Bluntach received $45 a month, but the examiner's report disclosed that seven orders of $45 each had been issued in Miss Bluntach's name. The handwriting indorsing three of the orders, it is said, differs widely from those indorsed by Miss Bluntach.

Three other similar cases, it is alleged, were disclosed by the accountants' report. Ralph Underwood, who taught at the Round Lake school in 1910-1911, received $350 for his services, but orders were issued in his name that total $414, according to the accountants' findings.

Two orders for $45 each were issued to Rose Zimmerman for teaching in the Moose Park school in 1910-1911. Miss Zimmerman says she did not teach in the district during those years and did not receive the orders issued in her name.

Farm Assessments Raised.

Fergus Falls.—County Auditor Lincoln has received notice from the state tax commission that the proposed 50 per cent increase in farm land assessments will be put into effect. The tax commission gave notice some time ago that it proposed to make this increase to apply to all lands and village real estate in this county, and a delegation was sent to St. Paul to make a protest. The commission reserved its decision temporarily, but now announces that it will put the 50 per cent increase into effect on all real estate except in the villages of Perham, Pelican Rapids and Battle Lake. Perham is to be raised 25 per cent and Pelican Rapids and Battle Lake 40 per cent. An average increase of about 10 per cent is also made on all personal property in the county.

Democratic Candidate Withdraws.

Park Rapids.—P. D. Winship, democratic candidate for the legislature, has withdrawn. There are still three candidates, one democrat and two republicans, with two members to be elected.

Eighty Two Warrants.

Minneapolis. — Eighty-two complaints against dog-owners, charged with violating the leash or muzzle law, were issued by the assistant city attorney Tuesday. Five policemen and one Humane society agent are responsible for this number of warrants.

Victim a Stillwater Youth.

Stillwater, Minn., Oct. 10.—George O. Burgess, who was killed during an engagement at Leon, Nicaragua, enlisted in the United States navy from Stillwater, five years ago.

MINNESOTA GREEKS ARE LOYAL

HUNDREDS OF NATIVE SONS TO FIGHT.

Volunteer Reserves Only Await the Word to Start for the Front.

Minneapolis.—With several hundreds of cheers for Christianity and hisses for the Mohammedan Turks, 500 Greeks of Minneapolis and St. Paul pledged their lives for their native country and promised to return to Athens at once to assist the Grecian troops and the soldiers of the Balkan republics in their war against Turkey.

The oldest Greek residents of Minneapolis declared that never before in the history of the Greek community had there been such enthusiasm. Within 20 minutes after the close of the speeches more than $2,000 was pledged for the cause of their country.

"This war is not a war of conquest," declared each of the eight speakers. "It is a war for Christ and Christianity. For many centuries the Christian countries of the world have been humiliated by barbarian fanatics of Turkey. They have massacred the Christians and spat in the faces of those who do not believe in Mohammed. This war is a religious war, like our forefathers fought centuries ago."

The reserves were called on to return to their native land first. There are about 150 reserves living in Minneapolis who have had previous military experience. They had not completed their military service for Greece, but were given permission to leave the country on the promise to return should their service be needed.

The first party of these reserves will leave Minneapolis for New York, where, where they will take ship for Athens. It is not known for certain how many will be in the party. When names were called everybody apparently was anxious to go. One old man who looked to be 80 years old, jumped on a chair and with cheers for the king of Greece yelled: "I am too old to fight, but my blood boils when I think of the outrages that have been committed against our country and religion."

There was almost a riot at the meeting to see who would be the first to sign a paper indicating his desire to return to Greece at once. The honor finally went to Captain Dookekos, who is a veteran of the war with Turkey in 1897.

TO CENSOR PICTURES.

Suggestion by Governor Is Acted Upon at Bemidji.

Bemidji. — Acting upon suggestions regarding moving pictures made here recently by Governor Eberhart, a movement has been started to have the pictures censored by a local committee. The proposition was advanced by Thomas J. Burke of the commercial club, whose plan is to have the city council appoint a committee of censors composed of the city superintendent of schools, an aldermen and a private citizen.

Feathers for Men's Hats.

Minneapolis. — S. S. Thorpe has just returned from Europe with the news that fashion dictates that men are to wear feathers in their hats during the coming winter. Mr. Thorpe wore a rich green fedora hat, but he had removed a bunch of feathers, as he did not wish to "rush the season." The Swiss mountain climbers have in seasons past stuck a bright red or green feather in their hat bands, but the modish hat designers have improved on this millinery confection with the use of whole bird's wing. Fuzzy hats are chosen so that the fuzz and feathers will combine harmoniously. As Mr. Thorpe described the mode, somewhat vaguely, a whole plover's wing is used—about the size of a man's hand. The wing is dyed in red, purple, rose colored and green and then placed jauntily in the rear, a bit to the left.

Killed by Kick of Horse.

St. Peter.—Patrick Kneefe, of Oshawa township, received fatal injuries when kicked by a horse. When carried from the stable it was found his skull was fractured, and he died four hours later. Mr. Kneefe narrowly escaped a violent death nine years ago while helping sink a well. A premature explosion of dynamite killed his three companions, and Kneefe was maimed. He leaves a wife and nine children.

Would Increase Bond Limit.

St. Cloud.—Either the repeal of the special law creating the St. Cloud independent school district, or some amendment which will make it possible for the district t bond for more than $35,000, will be asked of the legislature. A plan is being evolved by members of the board which will be presented at the next meeting.

NICOLLET COUNTY RECORD.

Criminal Court Has Had No Case to Consider for a Year.

St. Peter.—There are no violations of law for a grand jury to investigate in Nicollet county. Jurors for the October term of the district court were drawn, and no provision was made for a grand jury. Last April no grand jurors were drawn, and in dispensing with them this month the county makes a record of having gone a year without a criminal case on the calendar.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

WHO IS P. V. COLLINS?

The nomination of P.V. Collins for Governor of Minnesota by the Progressive Party was as much a surprise to himself as to anybody. He has not sought nor wanted any office. He knew nothing whatever of the move to make him nominee until the nomination was made.

"I have an office of greater responsibility and greater opportunity to help mankind than any political office," said Mr. Collins, "and that is the position of editor of my paper."

But the demand that he head the Progressive ticket in Minnesota came with such unanimity in the Committee of Fifty, that as the chairman said next day, "Mr. Collins' nomination actually seems like an inspiration."

P.V. Collins is the editor of The Northwestern Agriculturist of Minneapolis, the man who undoubtedly is better known amongst the farmers of Minnesota and the entire Northwest than any other. It was he who was selected by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt to make the speech on behalf of the farmers of America, seconding Roosevelt's presidential nomination in the National Progressive Convention last August. It was through a letter from P. V. Collins, early in February, 1911, that Colonel Roosevelt's attention was first called to the inequality and injustice to farmers contained in the Taft Reciprocity Pact, and that is shown by Colonel Roosevelt's personal letter to him dated February 27, 1911, and Roosevelt's first public declaration on Reciprocity was through a letter to Mr. Collins expressing the same views, February 29, 1912.

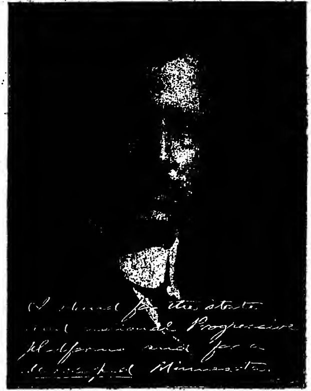
In the meanwhile, P.V. Collins had been active and influential in crystallizing the sentiment against the pact.

Seventy members of the Legislature called a mass meeting in St. Paul, April 1911, to hear an able address by Mr. Collins exposing the Taft Pact, and at that meeting a delegation of farmers was appointed to go to Congress and fight the pact, and Mr. Collins was made the official spokesman of that delegation. In advance of the State Fair 1911, he announced a meeting of farmers to organize and he called to order at the Fair an assemblage of over ten thousand farmers to organize The Farmers' League of Minnesota to defend farmers' interests in legislation, and he was made state secretary of the League.

• • •

Mr. Collins' paper circulated two monster petitions of protest to Congress against the Canadian Reciprocity Pact, each of which was signed by between 30,000 and 40,000 farmers. The first was a protest against Congress passing the law and this enormous petition (as big as a bass drum) was carried to Washington by Mr. Collins when he headed the delegation of farmers. The other petition filled a barrel, and urged Congress to repeal the law before Canada accepted it. These petitions created a sensation in Congress for they contained far more signatures than all other petitions combined.

In many other ways Mr. Collins has proved a powerful friend of agriculture, and during his last twenty years as editor of The Northwestern Agriculturist he has gained a national reputation. He has been president of the National Agricultural Press League and of the National Editorial Association and vice-president for America of the World's Press Congress held in St. Louis in 1904.



Sincerely
P.V.Collins

• • •

P. V. Collins was born in Camden, Preble County, Ohio, in 1860, the son of Samuel and Abigail J Collins. He is therefore of American ancestry but with cosmopolitan experience. He married Miss Mary Graves Rheads, in St. Peter in 1889.

Prior to coming to Minnesota, in 1886, Mr. Collins had been a newspaper writer in the East and in 1885-1886 he had been engaged in Paris, France, as special correspondent of the New York Tribune and Boston Globe. He came directly from Paris to St. Peter, Minnesota, where he purchased the St. Peter Tribune from Governor A. R. McGill. Three years later he purchased Skordemannen, a Swedish farm paper, and in 1890 he sold the Tribune and brought Skordemannen to Minneapolis. Although he could not even read Swedish, he showed his nerve in making a business success of the Swedish farm paper; of course he employed competent Swedish editors—one of whom afterwards became, and is now, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Hon. C. G. Schultz. Mr. Collins sold Skordemannen in 1893 and then bought The Northwestern Agriculturist, which at that time had only 9,000 circulation a month; it now exceeds 130,000 a week, or over half a million a month.

Mr. Collins is a member of the Commercial Club and Civic and Commerce Associations of Minneapolis, and a member of Westminster Presbyterian Church.

This wide cosmopolitan experience both in agricultural and city matters, ensures in Mr. P. V. Collins a breadth of view and a grasp of affairs that is unusual. He has never before been a candidate for office.

• • • •

In personal character he is absolutely fearless. He is bold and outspoken in his fight for a square deal to all classes of citizens and to all parts of the state. He denounces brewery meddling in politics, and that of any other special interest. He stands for a business policy in development of the unoccupied lands of the state, improvement of roads, agricultural education, reapportionment of legislature representation, and, summing it all up, he says:

"I stand squarely upon the national and state Progressive platforms and for a developed Minnesota." —Northwestern Agriculturist.

We have devoted some space to the publication of the above article in order to introduce Mr. Collins to our farmer subscribers. He is a true Republican and has always supported the Republican ticket, until this row arose over Reciprocity. He now declines to support Taft because he is trying to injure the farmers of Minnesota. Don't you think he would make a better governor to look after the interest of the farmers of this state than Adolph Eberhart would? We do and shall place an X opposite his name on November 5th.

Paid Advertising:

Allow me through the columns of your esteemed paper to extend to my neighbors and friends throughout the County my sincere thanks for their support and for the nomination tendered me at the Primary Election.

Knowing our teachers, the conditions in our schools and being in the work, it will be a source of pleasure to me serve the people and to do my best for the upholding of our rural schools should I be favored with the election on Nov. 5th.

Fraternally,
E.A.Mostue,

(Paid Advertisement, $5.00 paid by H.G. Hieber of Thief River Falls, Minn., Sec. of the personal Campaign Committee of Wilhelm Michelet, Non partisan Candidate for the office of Judge of Probate in and for Pennington Co., Minn.)

Wilhelm Michelet

JUDGE OF PROBATE.
Non-Partisan Candidate for Re-election.

I Respectfully Solicit Your Vote and Support,

WILHELM MICHELET,
Thief River Falls, Minn.

PNEUMONIA

left me with a frightful cough and very weak. I had spells when I could hardly breathe or speak for 10 to 20 minutes. My doctor could not help me, but I was completely cured by

DR. KING'S
New Discovery

Mrs. J. E. Cox, Joliet, Ill.
50c AND $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Saved By His Wife

She's a wise woman who knows just what to do when her husband's life is in danger, but Mrs. R. J. Flint, Braintree, Vt., is of that kind. "She insisted on my using Dr. King's New Discovery," writes Mr. F. "for a dreadful cough, when I was so weak my friends all thought I had only a short time to live, and it completely cured me." A quick cure for coughs and colds, it's the most safe and reliable medicine for many throat and lung troubles—grip, bronchitis, croup, quinsy, tonsilitis, hemorrhages. A trial will convince you. 50cts and $1.00. Guaranteed by All Druggists.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Sep. 20th, 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 9th, 1912

NOTICE is hereby given that Grace M. Pinkerton, of Torgerson Minn., who on May 15th, 1911, made homestead Entry No. 06130 for S. E. ¼ Section 22 Township 154 N. Range 40 W Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before N.W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 2nd day of November, 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

A.T.Rice, of Germantown Minn. John Markuson, E. H. Besancon, of Torgerson Minn. J. H. May, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Sept. 20th, 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 13th, 1912. Notice is hereby given that Kittil Jordshaugen, of Germantown Minn., who on Nov. 1, 1904, made Homestead Application No 797, Serial No. 04644, for N.W. ¼ Section 8 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before The Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn., on the 31st, day of October 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Torgel K. Hegtvedt, Gunder T. Skretvet. Christoffer Vad, Leif T. Jordeshaugen, all of Germantown Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Publication in the Sunbeam Sept. 20,

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. September 13, 1912. Notice is hereby given that Torgel K. Hegtvedt, of Germantown Minn., who on November 14, 1904, made Homestead Application No. 795. Serial No. 04642, for Lots 6, 7, and E. ½ S.W. ¼ Section 6 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. on the 31st, day of October 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Leif T. Jordeshaugen, Gunder T. Skretvet, Kittil T. Jordshaugen, Christoffer Vad, all of Germantown, Minn.

ARTHUR P. TOUPIN,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Oct. 4, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Sept. 30th, 1912. Notice is hereby given, that Nels Thorstenson, of Germantown Minn., who on May 16th, 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 06102 for Lots 1, 2 & S. ½ N. E. ¼ Section 9 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 12th, day of November 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Martin Olson, Robert Kamback, John Gsaff, Carl Edseth, all of Germantown Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Dangerous Rights.

The Theorist—A man has a right to insist upon being the head of his own household.

The Pessimist—Ye-es, and a man also has a right to slap a tiger on the nose, but— —Satire.

The Hen's Effort.

"Oh, mamma, the hen is sitting on the vacuum cleaner!" "Perhaps she's only trying to lay the dust, dear."

A Log On The Track

of the fast express means serious trouble ahead if not removed, so does loss of appetite. It means lack of vitality, loss of strength and nerve weakness. If appetite fails, take Electric Bitters quickly to overcome the cause by toning up the stomach and curing the indigestion. Michael Hessheimer of Lincoln, Neb., had been sick over three years, but six bottles of Electric Bitters put him right on his feet again. They have helped thousands. They give pure blood, strong nerves, good digestion. Only 50 cts at All Druggists.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Bigest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF GROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9,40 a. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m,

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year: four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Oct. 11th, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. October 7th, 1912. Notice is hereby given that Halver Svendson, of Hilda Minnesota, who on June 27th, 1905, made Homestead Application No. 4199, Serial No. 04459, for lots 3, 4, Section 1, and Lots 1, 2, Section 2, Township 153 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for the District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 11th, day of November 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Knut Aslakson, Swan Swanson, O. A. Stovnes, of Hilda Minn. Halvor Falkedahl, of Highlanding Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns
For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

[illegible] Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

W.G.Hunt,

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

We have a fine farm for sale in Deer Park township for only $21 per acre,

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof

There is another storm on tap to-day, but it is mostly wind.

Ye Editor made a trip to Thief River Falls to-day, to take some action on the digging of ditch 47,

The farmers have been improving the fine weather this week harvesting and stacking flax.

Walter McAndress drove down to Thief River Falls Wednesday, and Mrs. McAndress will return home with him to-morrow.

Gunder G. Hanson the Pioneer farmer and politician, of Hilda passed Highlanding on Wednesday on his return from a business trip to Polk county.

We wish to call the attention of our farmer readers to the article published on another page regarding P. V. Collins, as we would like to have them read it, before they go to Election.

J. Griffith has ditch 55 finished and will move his dredge down to the lower end of ditch 53, This will make two dredges working on this ditch, which will assure its being finished this fall.

Ted Thoreson, who has been digging potatoes for T. S. Jacobson the Highlanding Leading Socialist dug out a potato Wednesday weighing 3 lbs. which was formed in the shape of a Teddy Bear. Roosevelt will be elected Nov. 5th, 1912

John Lattimor has started mowing flax with a scythe so as to have an income after Nov. 5th. John is a good fellow but his feet don't track on Minnesota politics so he has adopted the methods of the bed bug, any thing to make a living.

T. A. Libek. living in Mayfield Township received the generous donations of $20. 75 at the Young Peoples Society last Sunday to aid him in paying for the cost of an operation. which he must have. Mr. Libok is a poor man and wishes to extend his thanks to the people for their kindness in assisting him.

In making up our Republican list of county officials last week, the name of our popular Sheriff Jesse LaBree was left out by mistake. We just make this statement to set at rest any stories that have sprung up to the affect that we were not supporting J. W. LaBree, we are supporting him and expect to vote for him on Nov. 5th.

The dredge that is digging on Ditch 47 seems to be out of gasoline for their engines at out all of the time, but a little delay more or less don't make any difference now as the question will be in the courts next week to test the matter and see if a ditch contractor can hold up a ditch like that for years and years and years. Deprive the petitioners of the use of their land and stop the building of roads through the country.

The Young People's Society Meeting held at the residence of George Lemmers, in Deer Park township last Sunday, was largely attended and a very good program was rendered. There was to have been some speaking done by the candidates of the socialist party at the same place and date; but about all the time was taken up by the society, but Mr. Naplin, their candidate for County Attorney gave the young people a very appropriate short speech.

TO LIVE IN FACT.

Life is what we are alive to. It is not a length, but breadth. To be alive only to appetite, pleasure, pride, money making and not to goodness and kindness, purity and love, history, poetry, music, flowers, God and eternal hopes, is to be all but dead. [illegible]

An Anarchist attempted to assassinate Colonel Roosevelt at Milwaukee last Monday night. The wound is not likely to prove fatal but will lay him up for the balance of the campaign, but his friends will be more active than ever, as they feel that he was shot while defending the rights of the common people.

We used to have boats run on the river to bring up goods, but the lumber companies appropiated the Red Lake River to their own use, and the Taft engineers at St. Paul swore that they never touched it, and Taft promoted Major Shunk for his faithful services. If you like that kind of men in office vote for Taft and Eberhart.

Saved Leg Of Boy

"It seemed that my 14-year old boy would have to lose his leg, on account of an ugly ulcer. caused by a bad bruise." wrote D.F Howard, Aquone, N. C. "All remedies and doctors treatment failed till we tried Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and cured him with one box." Cures burns, boils, skin eruptions, piles. 25c at All Druggists.

HEAL IT WITH
Bucklen's
THE ONLY GENUINE
Arnica Salve
KEEPS FLESH IN TONE FROM SKIN TO BONE.
Heals Everything Healable, Burns, Boils, Sores, Ulcers, Piles, Eczema, Cuts, Corns, Wounds and Bruises.
SATISFIES, OR MONEY BACK.
25c AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

The Burglar's Talisman.

Coal is used for other than heating purposes. For centuries a piece of coal carried on the person has been held to bring good luck. This belief still survives among burglars. They invariably carry a small piece of coal with them when they start out on an expedition. The more successful they are and the greater their good luck in avoiding capture the more highly do they prize their talisman. This belief in the virtues of coal is accounted for by the old superstition, traceable to sun worship, of regarding any object associated with fire as an emblem of the solar rays and a preservative against evil spirits.—London Chronicle.

Gilbert's Witty Comment.

Sir W. S. Gilbert's wit and humor were always ready. He was a fine raconteur and a good after dinner speaker. Rutland Barrington, the old Savoyard, said that "staying in Gilbert's house was like living in a literary fireworks factory."

Barrington played the Captain in "Pinafore." At rehearsal one day Gilbert, who was an autocratic and magnificent stage manager, told him to cross the stage, which represented the deck of H. M. S. Pinafore, and sit on a skylight "in a pensive attitude." Barrington obeyed orders, but unfortunately the skylight had only been rigged up temporarily, and the portly Barrington crashed through it.

"That's an ex-pensive attitude," said Gilbert in a flash.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

hy Pay Cas
WHEN YOU CAN BUY ON Easy Credit Terms
PIANOS [illegible]
ORGANS [illegible]
SEWING MACHINES [illegible]
STOVES and RANGES [illegible]
HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE
Of all kinds at 60 cents up.
IRON and STEEL SAFES,
TYPEWRITERS and OFFICE FURNITURE [illegible]
[illegible]

Republican Ticket.

For President:
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
U. S. Senator:
KNUT NELSON.
Governor:
P. V. COLLINS.
Treasurer—WALTER SMITH
Attorney General:
LYNDON A. SMITH.
Railroad Commissioner (4 years)
IRA B. MILLS.
Congressman at Large:
JAMES MANAHAN.
Congressman for 9th, Dist.
HALVOR STEENERSON.
Representative to the Legislature
HON. D. P. ONEIL
County Auditor:
A. H. FASEL.
Treasurer:
ANDREW TROVATON.
For Sheriff;
W. J. LABREE
Register of Deeds:
NELS J. ANDERSON.
For Coroner
H.R.HALVORSON
Gor County Surveyor
C. H. MARTZ
County Attorney:
J. M. BISHOP.
Clerk of Court:
HARRY E. IVES.
County Commissioner 2nd Dist.
DANIEL SHAW.
5th, District:
A. B. MANDT.

We will publish the State and County non-patisan ticket later.

This column will be for the use of any of the candidates for office, who desire to make a statement to the voters over their own signature: It pays us to have you use it, but if you don't think it pays you don't use it.

Paid advertising.

Having received the nomination of the Public Ownership Party for candidate for County Commissioner of the 5th commissioner district, I will, if elected, consider myself at the service of the people and use all my efforts in the interests of the tax payers of Pennington County.

I earnestly solicit the support of the voters at the final election November 5th.

Respectfully
George Lemmers,

TO THE VOTERS

I wish to express to the voters of our County my appreciation of your splendid support given me at the primaries just held for Pennington County. The vote for the county attorney was as follows to-it:

For J. M. Bishop, Republican Candidate for County attorney 895 votes, O. A. Naplin, Socialist candidate for County attorney 170 votes, E. M. Stanton, Democratic candidate for County attorney 62 votes.

The above figures are absolutely correct. About 600 of my votes were given me by the farming communities and the remainder of the vote by the City of Thief River Falls.

I will greatly appreciate a continuation of your splendid vote and support at the general election to be held on November 5th, 1912,

Very sincerely yours,
J. M. Bishop, Republican nominee for county attorney for Pennington county, Minnesota

Paid Advertisement

I wish to thank my supporters for the republican nomination for County Treasurer, and also my opponent and his supporters for the clean, gentlemanly manner in which they conducted their campaign.

On account of my official duties I shall not be able to make much of a personal campaign for the November Election, but will do all I can for all the Republican nominees by the Primary last Tuesday, because they are all good men as far as I know, and were fairly nominated by our party.

I believe it would be bad for the country should our party be defeated, especially so far as Congress and legislature are concerned.

Very Sincerely,
Andrew Trovaton.

MUST PAY SUBSCRIPTION.

During the last term of the circuit court at Atchison county Missouri, the case of H. F. Staples vs Charles Traub was tried. The suit was brought on a long standing account and among other items was 16 years subscription for the Atchison County Mail claiming he did not take the paper and that he had refused to take the paper from the post-office and mail box a number of times. The plaintiff proved by postmasters and others that Mr. Traub did take the paper during all the 16 years. In the case it was shown that according to law, even if a subscriber does occasionally order a newspaper discontinued or refuse to accept it he cannot get out of paying what he owes for the paper, and the subscriber must pay the arrearage before stopping the paper.

The jury in this case was out only a short time and brought in a verdict for the entire account including the subscription for the Mail-16 years at $1.50 a year, or $24. The costs in the justice court and the circuit court amounted to about $100 besides the attorney fees.

A similar case has been decided by the court of appeals and it was held in that case that any one taking a newspaper must pay for it as long as they take it from the post-office —Ex.

Fortunes in Faces.

There's often much truth in the saying "her face is her fortune," but its never said where pimples, skin eruptions blotches, or other blemishes disfigure it. Impure blood is back of them all, and shows the need of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They promote health and beauty. Try them. 25 cents at All Druggists.

HOUSE KEEPER WANTED.

I desire to employ the services of a house keeper on my farm in the town of Krane. Good conveniences and steady employment Salary $4.00 a week and board. Call on or address,

John Quirk,
Highlanding Minn

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the American College of dress making.

Highlanding, Minn.

Subscribe for The Sunbeam.
Pay up your back Subscription.

The Giraffe as it Feeds.

The singular shape of the giraffe is adapted to its habits of life. It feeds on the young branches and top shoots of the trees, and its long fore legs and neck enable it to browse at a far greater height than any other animal, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. In feeding it stretches up its neck and with its long prehensile tongue, which it can protrude to a surprising distance, hooks down the tender shoots and leaves into its mouth. But the creature's peculiar form, though enabling it to feed on what it likes best, is sometimes the cause of its destruction. The fore legs are so long that to reach the ground it has to stretch them wide apart and bend down its neck in a semicircle, and while drinking in this defenseless attitude the lion or leopard springs upon it and overpowers it before it can recover itself.

Splinters in the Fingers.

When you get a splinter in your finger it is sometimes possible to get at it by pressing the point of a needle under it, but unless you have deft fingers or a pair of tweezers you may not be able to pull it out even then. A new pen nib is a very good substitute for a pair of tweezers. Lay the nib over the splinter so as to hold it. Then press down hard enough to separate the nibs. If you now let the point down level with the splinter and allow the nibs to close again they will take hold, and you can draw the splinter out. Remember that any metal thing that is to be applied to a wound, such as a needle, penknife or pen, should be passed lightly through a flame first, so as to disinfect it. A few jets of a match will do.—New York Sun.

Not on the Level.

"How can mountain climbers be believed?"

"Why not?"

"How can such a thing as mountain climbing be on the level?"—[illegible] American.

The man who cannot [illegible] any mental thing is a green hand in life.—[illegible]

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Giteau Vic. Pre.
Larry O'Niel, Abraham Parquine, T. L. Cruson.
J. A. Duffy, Cashier. T. L. Cruzon, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line or Dry Goods. that ever came into this Section of the Country.

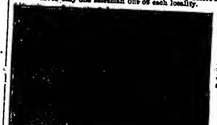
Don't Buy Eleswhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.
Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 30-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.



Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars. It will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and [illegible]

FACTORY PRICES [illegible]

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED [illegible]

COASTER-BRAKES [illegible]

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

[illegible]

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

GUADALAJARA'S DOOM is NEAR

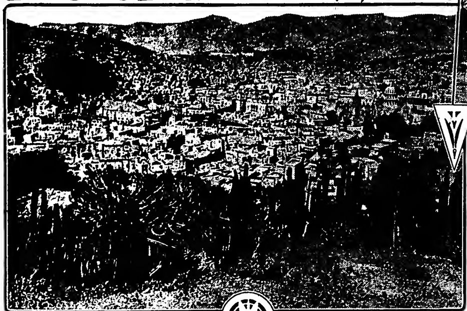
STREET SCENE



GUADALAJARA from the EAST

MARKET SCENE

BECAUSE the crater of a boiling, seething volcano is directly beneath this city of 150,000 souls, in all probability Guadalajara, which is the state capital of Jalisco, will be moved to a point some distance from what scientists say is to be one of the most active volcanoes on the entire American continent. The subterranean volcano has caused 340 earthquakes in the last three months. Twice, once in July and once in August, the shocks became so heavy that they practically depopulated the city for nearly a week on each occasion.

Seven scientists headed by Prof. Ramon Leon of the seismographic branch of the National Observatory have just finished a report on the quakes and their causes. They declare that Guadalajara, with its 150,000 inhabitants, is built in the crater of a giant volcano which was active about 1,800 years ago. Below the city, they add, is the center of this crater, in which a new crater has formed, likely to break out at any time.

They warn the residents of Guadalajara that beneath them is an enormous caldron of molten stone and burning coal and sulphur combined with gases which come from still further down in the bowls of the earth. The report urges that the city be moved, or that at least the inhabitants abandon it immediately. The center of the crater is located a trifle west of the main plaza and practically under the state palace or capitol of the state of Jalisco.

Scientific measurements, soundings with a diamond drill and experiments with the gases which have been pouring through cracks in the earth in the city are given, with detailed results of the study. Professor Leon and his associates deduce that as surely as science can forecast the city will be destroyed by this buried crater, which they say is enormous, though they admit that they cannot with accuracy foretell when the volcano will burst forth.

They infer that the destruction will come within a year, for they say that the volcano, whose caldron is placed 300 feet below the surface of the earth, is what is known as ripe for the explosion. The report goes on to say that this is the first instance in the history of the world in which a city has been located over the crater of a volcano and that the heat from the buried bowl of fire accounts for the warm climate of Guadalajara, which, while 5,000 feet above the sea, has the temperature all the year round of a coastal resort, with practically no change between summer and winter.

Increasing heat noticed in this part of Jalisco for the past year and recorded by the local branch of the government weather bureau first gave Professor Leon the idea that subterranean fires were responsible for the climate. Then came the earthquakes, the opening of fissures in the main streets of the capital of the state, and the escape of large volumes of sulphur laden gases from these fissures.

Fullest publicity is being given to the report here, and government officials are seriously considering the removal of the capital to Juanacatlan on the Santiago river.

The removal will follow the taking away of all the government papers, which have been transferred to Mexico City already. The state palace or capitol in Guadalajara is one of the largest and most beautiful of all the buildings of its kind in Mexico and cost approximately 7,000,000 pesos. It fronts on the main plaza or public square and occupies one entire end, being nearly three hundred yards in length.

Guaralajara is the second city in the republic, ranking next to Mexico City in population and above it in wealth, being second only to Merida, Yucatan, in this respect. It is the market place of two of the richest states in Mexico, Jalisco and Michoacah, and is commonly called "the Pearl of the Occident," while the surrounding territory is known as the granary of Mexico.

For these reasons the people who live here are loath to leave the city. The Catholic church will be especially hard hit if the removal idea is carried out. The cathedral, which is one of the finest in Mexico, contains more gold and silver ornaments than any other church save the cathedral of Puebla, and has in addition the distinction of having been completed in 1618 and of having been almost destroyed by an earthquake in 1750. It was severely shaken in 1818, and cracked in three places by the first series of the 340 quakes of the past three months, in June, 1912. The towers are 200 feet high, Byzantine in construction and the structure occupies one of the most valuable pieces of land in Guadalajara.

The most precious art possession of the entire republic is contained in the sacristy of the cathedral. It is Murillo's painting of the "Assumption of the Virgin," and it hangs directly above the entrance. In point of color and freshness this painting is better than any Murillo now known to the art world of Europe or America, while the work is one of the best examples of the famous master.

The beauty of this canvas has attracted thousands, and not a few offers have been made to purchase it, one of $250,000 coming from a New York financier. Seven times thieves have attempted to cut it from its frame, but each time they were foiled by the vigilance of the priests. Four of the would-be robbers were captured and are now serving terms or have died in the prisons of Jalisco.

In June, 1818, when the cathedral was nearly destroyed, the section of wall on which this painting is fastened stood through all the quake. In June, 1912, when a crack more than a foot wide was opened in the top of the wall above this painting the gash ran downward almost to the end of the mahogany frame and then divided into two cracks or fissures, encircling the canvas, but never touching it. The Indians believe, and the priests aid them in this belief, that nothing can harm "la santissima Virgen de Guadalajara," and so far the terrific tremblers have failed to injure it in the least.

The canvas was given to the Guadalajara diocese by the king of Spain shortly after the Peninsular war as a mark of gratitude for the large sums of money turned over to the crown by this branch of the church in Mexico and it was hidden ten years in a niche in the cathedral to keep it from the French at the time of the occupation of Mexico.

"The top of the bowl of the crater beneath Guadalajara," said Professor Garcia while here, "is approximately 1,500 feet in diameter, but the actual bowl is much wider. I should say it is a quarter of a mile in width, and how deep no man can say.

"The composition of the escaping gases indicates that they are coming from burning coal and sulphur in a molten state, precisely the combination which causes the eruptions of Mount Colima, the only active volcano on the North American continent, about 90 miles due south of Guadalajara. Undoubtedly Colima, which blows off in a regular eruption about the middle of every September, is connected in some unknown manner with the hot springs, miniature geysers and many dead volcanoes which cover the territory, reaching from the southern end of the Sierra Nayarit, about 60 miles north of Guadalajara, to the sea at Manzanillo.

"I would not care to prophesy, but I believe that the annual fall eruption of Colima will see some sort of disturbance here, though it may be only heavy earthquakes and not the breaking out of the volcano. We ran diamond drills so deep into the earth in the center of Guadalajara that they came back almost red hot, no matter how slowly we operated them. We lowered the best thermometers into the holes made by these drills and they recorded heat beyond the melting point of lead.

"We analyzed the gases coming from the fissures in various parts of the city and we found that they were not surface gases, coming from pockets in the earth and released by the earthquake, but that they exhibited all the characteristics of gases which have been taken from the vents of Colima and Popocatepetl volcanoes.

"Lastly we traced the scores of earthquake shocks which were felt here during the ten days of our stay and we found that every one was volcanic in its origin and not caused by the slipping of faults in the earth, as are some of the coastal quakes of this country and the United States. All were trepidatory, that is to say, up and down quakes, usually local in character and not oscillatory, as are most earthquakes which extend over a large section of the world's surface.

"This was our first hint that the quakes were volcanic—the confined area over which the tremors were felt. Then the seismograph, which was brought here from Mexico City and set up, indicated with its needle finger that the source of the shocks were almost beneath the city.

"We knew the quakes were volcanic and confined to an area not more than 100 miles in diameter. Neither Colima nor any other volcano in Mexico was in eruption. We had to look closer to Guadalajara for the cause. We made a trip through the surrounding country and discovered that the city lies in the center of what was once a volcano.

"The walls of this ancient crater are fully 15 miles on all sides from the city. From the character of the stone composing these walls, their evidences of fire and the condition of the lava fragments which litter the bowl of the crater, I should say it was last active from 1,800 to 2,000 years ago.

"The mountain range which surrounds the city on all sides is the wall of this ancient crater. On the north and east, you know, the plateau of Mexico slopes downward to these ranges; on the west and south the ancient volcano wall slopes away 5,000 feet downward through some 70 or 80 miles to the Pacific ocean. This was an ideal location for a volcano, and precisely similar to the location of Colima, still active, and Orizaba, which, while still smoking, has not been active for 400 years.

"Now, in the center of this ancient crater, which must have been larger than any volcano of which we have knowledge at the present day, was the blow hole, or vent. Over this blow hole the Spaniards who conquered Mexico set up the city of Guadalajara, little thinking that they were selecting a veritable death trap for their settlement. Slowly through the eighteen or twenty centuries since it was last active this central melting pot of the old volcano has been forming a new and equally powerful mass of molten material, which sooner or later will blow Guadalajara off the face of the earth.

"An earthquake, landslides, cloudbursts or other elemental disturbances filled the opening of this ancient crater with a cap 300 feet in thickness. This cap, much thicker than that which any other volcano has had to blow off, is the only thing that has saved Guadalajara from destruction years ago. How long it will protect the city now is a question no man can answer and prove the answer. It may be years; to my mind it is a matter of months; in any event, I believe that the only way to save the capital is to move it bodily and move it while there is time to do so."

Aside from its scientific interest, and from the unique situation of a city built on a volcano, there remains the very practical problem which confronts Guadalajara—the job of moving a city of 150,000 souls to a new location. So far, Juanacatlan is the most likely candidate for the honor of being the capital of Jalisco, but there are a number of other towns out of range of the buried crater, all of which will be considered before the change is made.

All sorts of wild propositions to tap the crater and draw off the menacing fires have been made to the authorities of Guadalajara, but the men of science say there is no way to curb the demon of fire caged by nature below and that the city must be removed or it will be destroyed. One man proposed to turn the waters of the Santiago river into a huge tunnel, driven to the heart of the crater, but the earthquake specialists quickly informed the city officials that this merely would cause an immediate and more terrible explosion than if the crater were left to itself.

Another man offered to tunnel into the crater from a point five miles outside the city, and on the slightly lower or western side, and let the contents of the crater flow out. He was disappointed when informed that his tunnel would have to be about 500 feet in diameter and that the heat would be so great a hundred feet from the inner end of the tunnel that human beings could not endure it.

Thus it appears that unless a "surgeon for earthquakes" appears, and that very shortly, Guadalajara will have to pick up her houses and move to a new location. The result to real estate owners and men who have bought or built some of the fine blocks which mark the main streets of the Jalisco capital will be financial ruin.

Some of these men profess to doubt the word of the scientists and to believe that the city is safe. They will throw their influence and their votes against moving the city unless they can be convinced that there is a very real personal danger for themselves and their families.

PATERNAL WISDOM.

"Son, are you really determined to get married?"

"Yes, father."

"And you feel that you can support a wife?"

"Oh, yes."

"Well, just remember that the dictionary says 'to support' also means 'to endure.'"

A PROFESSIONAL TRICK.

The Young Lawyer—How do you expect to prove that your client is mentally irresponsible?

The Old Lawyer—Easy enough. His wife has preserved all his old love letters and I'm going to read 'em to the jury.

Every Boy and Girl Wants a Watch!

Liggett & Myers

Duke's Mixture

We want every smoker in this country to know how good Liggett & Myers Duke's Mixture is. Every grain in that big one and a half ounce 5c sack is pure, clean tobacco—a delightful smoke in a pipe or any other way you wish to use it.

And with each sack you now get

A Free Present Coupon

These coupons are good for hundreds of valuable presents, such as watches, toilet articles, silverware, furniture, and dozens of other articles suitable for every member of the family.

You will surely like Duke's Mixture, made by Liggett & Myers at Durham, N. C., and the presents cannot fail to please you and yours.

As a special offer, during October and November only we will send you our new illustrated catalog of presents FREE. Just send us your name and address on a postal.

Coupons from Duke's Mixture may be assorted with tags from HORSE SHOE, J. T., TINSLEY'S NATURAL LEAF, GRANGER TWIST, coupons from FOUR ROSES (10c-tin double coupon), PICK PLUG CUT, PIEDMONT CIGARETTES, CLIX CIGARETTES, and other tags or coupons issued by us.

Address—Premium Dept.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

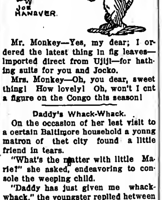
For DISTEMPER Pink Eye, Epizootic Shipping Fever & Catarrhal Fever

Sure cure and positive preventive, no matter how horses at any age are infected or "exposed." Liquid, given on the tongue; acts on the Blood and Glands; expels the poisonous germs from the body. Cures Distemper in Dogs and Sheep and Cholera in Poultry. Largest selling live stock remedy. Cures La Grippe among human beings and is a fine Kidney remedy. 50c and $1 a bottle; $5 and $10 a dozen. Cut this out. Keep it. Show to your druggist, who will get it for you. Free Booklet, "Distemper, Causes and Cures." Special Agents wanted.

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER CURE

SPOHN MEDICAL CO., Chemists and Bacteriologists GOSHEN, IND., U. S. A.

TRUE TO HER SEX.



JOE HANAVER.

Mr. Monkey—Yes, my dear; I ordered the latest thing in fig leaves—imported direct from Ujiji—for bathing suits for you and Jocko.

Mrs. Monkey—Oh, you dear, sweet thing! How lovely! Oh, won't I cut a figure on the Congo this season!

Daddy's Whack-Whack.

On the occasion of her last visit to a certain Baltimore household a young matron of that city found a little friend in tears.

"What's the matter with little Marie?" she asked, endeavoring to console the weeping child.

"Daddy has just given me whack-whack," the youngster replied between sobs.

"Thoughtless daddy!" exclaimed the young woman, repressing a smile. "And where did he whack-whack little Marie?"

"On the back of my tummy," was the answer.

Timely Reminder.

"We are still mining ore, growing cotton and manufacturing steel," said the American host.

"Why do you tell me that?" inquired the foreign visitor.

"I just want to remind you that the country is producing something besides politics."

God has placed the genius of women in their hearts, because the works of this genius are always works of love.—Alphonse De Lamatine.

A CURE FOR PILES.

Cole's Carbolisalve stops itching and pain—and cures piles. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

Accounted For.

"The piece was very raw."

"Then it deserved a roasting."

Protected Both Ways.

Two conservative ladies of old-fashioned notions were traveling in the west and, becoming interested in a young girl on the train, finally asked why she was making so long a journey alone. They were greatly shocked at her blithe explanation:

"Well, you see, my mother and stepfather live at one end of the journey, and my father and stepmother live at the other. They send me to each other twice a year, so there isn't a bit of danger with four parents all on the lookout!"

TAKE FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS For Backache Rheumatism Kidneys and Bladder

FREE TO ALL SUFFERERS

If you feel "out of sorts"—"run down" or "got the blues," suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., write for my FREE book. It is the most instructive medical book ever written. It tells all about these diseases and the remarkable cures effected by the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2, No. 3 and you can decide for yourself if it is the remedy for your ailment. Don't send a cent. It's absolutely FREE. No "follow-up" circulars. Dr. LeClerc Med. Co., Haverstock Rd., Hampstead, London, Eng.

Don't Persecute Your Bowels

Cut out cathartics and purgatives. They are brutal, harsh, unnecessary. Try

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Purely vegetable. Act gently on the liver, eliminate bile, and soothe the delicate membrane of the bowel. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Sick Headache and Indigestion, as millions know.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

Farm lands $8 to $40. Will grow corn, cotton, alfalfa, oats, sugar cane. All kinds fruits and vegetables. Good health. Good water. Short, mild winters. Red river bottom $12 to $40. Z. T. SISSON, 2124 Olive St., Texarkana, Tex.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results

Pettit's GOOD FOR Eye SORE EYES Salve

PISO'S REMEDY

Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by Druggists.

FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

25 CTS 25 CTS

HOW THEY PROPOSE

What Men Do and What They Say.

By HERBERT DROCER.

"Mama, how do men propose?" Rosie asked. She glanced shyly at her mother.

Mrs. Farnam looked up, a merry twinkle dancing beneath her hazel brows, which soon disappeared, to be succeeded by a more steady, questioning gaze. At thirty-five, she appeared scarcely older than her daughter. In fact, the two had been mistaken for sisters on more occasions than one. The widow was round faced and plump.

The two had paused at their task of dusting and rearranging the furniture. In the dining-room, where they had dropped into seats, was the confusion that one might expect where an only daughter had celebrated her seventeenth anniversary with a birthday party the evening before.

"Mama, did you hear me?" repeated the girl.

"Yes, daughter," replied the mother. "I was merely wondering why you asked."

"Because I want to know how men propose—and what they do—and what they say—and whether they—"

But Rosie got no further. The mother, leaning back in her chair, broke out in a laugh so clear and hearty that the daughter, too, in spite of her puckered lips and look of hurt surprise, finally caught the infection and smiled.

"Ma, please do be sensible," at last the girl broke in, persuasively.

"Well, daughter, I am. But, really, you will soon be able to answer that with more authority than I. It only happened to me once," hesitating reflectively, "and that seems such a long, long time ago."

As the widow ceased speaking, a tear glistened in her eye. After a brief interval of silence the girl crept up to her mother's side and folded her arms gently about the latter's neck.

"There, mama, don't feel bad," soothed the daughter, filled with recollections of the loneliness and the struggles that her mother endured, following the death of a father whom the girl could not remember. "It was foolish of me to ask such a silly question. I might have known it would lead to something like—"

"I Want to Know How Men Propose."

"No, dear, not silly at all. And I'll not be a baby again. There," as a smile rekindled her face. "I really mean it, you will have a proposal before your next birthday comes."

"Oh, mama, mama, do you really think so? And why?"

"Can't you see? It's plain to everyone. When he wasn't hanging at your elbows last night, he was tripping around after me. And why else should he be so considerate to me, if I were not the mother of the girl he likes?"

"Who? Who, mama? Do you mean—"

"Yes, Henry, of course. I am sure he—"

"Oh, I hope so—I hope so."

The mother regarded her child thoughtfully, then asked: "Do you really love him so much?"

"Now, mama, why do you put it that way?" returned the girl, while a shadow seemed to gather over her brows. "No, come to think of it, I don't believe I love him at all, I—"

"Why, daughter, you amaze me," cried the mother in astonishment. "Than why were you so delighted? I can't understand."

"Because—because," plainly abashed, "I just wanted him—anyone—to propose. I wanted to see how he would act, and what he would do, and what he would say, and all that."

Rosie pulled a ring, set with emeralds and pearls, from her finger and toyed with it in her lap, during the silence that ensued. The mother looked on, then arose and walked to the window where she stood gazing at the whirling eddies of snow driven with the late February storm. When she turned back into the room, she seemed less perplexed, and said in a matter-of-fact way:

"Henry is a splendid chance, my little girl. He has a good heart and a good business. I am not eager for you to marry—and there is lots of time yet—but any mother wants to see her daughter—"

"But, mama, he's so much older than I."

"Yes, you are very young—too young to marry—not too young to become engaged. How old is Henry?"

"I don't know," replied the maiden, candidly. "I never thought to ask him. But he seems—oh, even older than you."

The mother laughed. "And this from a little girl who should not try to flatter her mama."

During the month or so that followed Henry came regularly, sometimes so often as two and three times a week, to the Farnam residence. Since the morning after her birthday party Rosie had seemed less at ease and, at times, half frightened, when in his company. Especially was this the case when they were not joined by her mother, who usually, because of the cold weather and the necessity of economizing in fuel, sat with the two. At such intervals when the widow was absent, Henry, also, was restless and wandering in attention.

But it could not be winter always. Spring breezes came at last over the Ozarks into Missouri. The sun shone, robins flitted between the boughs of maples beginning to rejuvenate with the rise and flow of sap through their trunks, and out in the pasture, just then turning faintly to green, young colts frolicked and raced beside their mothers. Life and love were unfolding from a single bud.

Then, on a night, when Henry came, the weather was warm. He called to them through an open window as he passed and, hurrying around to a side door, he entered the dining room, where the mother and daughter sat. Mrs. Farnam remained with the couple only a short time, when, without pretext, she withdrew to the front porch.

She was gazing absently into the east, where the moon was rising, and giving only a half attentive ear to the medley of insect voices just then awakening, when she was startled, not a half hour after she had found her seat, by the sudden appearance of Rosie, who rushed to her side and whispered breathlessly in her ear.

"Oh, mama, mama," the girl exclaimed in subdued tones, "I just know Henry is going to propose! What shall I do?"

"Do! Why, I thought you wanted him to propose."

"No; I don't—I don't—not since you told me," she cried, almost on the verge of tears.

"Well, daughter, what's caused you to think all this? Did he say—"

"He said he wanted to see you. I know he wants to ask if he can propose."

"How silly!" interposed the mother, with a laugh not wholly natural.

"Oh, he said he wanted to see you alone—that he must see you—that he couldn't stand it any longer—that—"

"It? Stand what, dear?"

"Oh, mama, do go in—do! And tell him that he must not propose to me, any more, and that I'm going to be an old maid, and that—"

"Don't worry yourself so, little girl—it's nothing!" enjoined the mother, as she arose.

Rosie, left alone, for a time grew more excited. Then, as the minutes passed and her mother did not return, her agitation began to pass away, and gradually she became calm. Suddenly she leaped upright from her chair, at the prompting of a bold thought.

Why shouldn't she hear what was being said between Henry and her mother? It concerned her.

She crept lightly into the hallway and through the parlor toward the folding doors that separated it from the dining room. The doors were a foot or two apart, and over them was hung a curtain. Screened within its folds, she stood in an attitude of listening.

At the first she distinguished no word or sound. Then, there came to her ears a low, suppressed sob, that of a woman's. Could her mother be crying? And why? Then, a voice—Henry's.

"It's you, Mrs. Farnam—Mary, it's you I love—it's you, you I have always loved. There—don't cry. Do look up and tell me—"

But Rosie could restrain herself no longer. Tearing the curtains apart, she hurst into the room. Between her cries and tears and half hysterical laughter, she rushed to them, and, in an effort to gather the two within her arms, embraced both, exclaiming:

"Of course, Henry, she loves you. Of course she does; she always did and always will. And now, mama," with a little shout of delight, "I know how they do, and what they say, and how they act, and—I'm a goose!"

(Copyright, 1912, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The Vicious Circle.

Apropos of the rise in meat prices, Representative Redfield said the other day in Brooklyn:

"The way everything keeps going up, it will soon become discouraging. I can imagine an idle savage from the tropics saying scornfully to some industrious clerk or mill operative:

" 'Why do you work?'

" 'To live.'

" 'And why do you live?'

" 'Why do I live?'

" 'Yes, that is what I said. Why do you live?'

" 'Er—er— to work' "—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Lack of Tact.

"What made you ask Mrs. De Style such a personal question as did she belong to the progressive movement?"

"Why not? Nothing personal in that."

"Isn't there. She's on her way to Reno to get a divorce from her third husband."

ROAD and FARM IMPROVEMENT

HARMFUL POTATO EEL-WORM

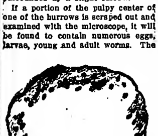
Rejection of Several Carloads of Tubers Cause for Considerable Worry Among Growers.

(By S. B. DOTEN.)

The rejection of several carloads of potatoes on account of the presence of the potato eel-worm is cause for considerable concern among growers in some of the western states.

The surface of a badly diseased potato is more or less wrinkled and dotted with circular or oval pimples somewhat smaller than a pinhead, or with more irregular and larger nodules. The nodules are of a grayish or brownish color, more or less depressed in the center, and sometimes surrounded by a slight furrow.

If a portion of the pulpy center of one of the burrows is scraped out and examined with the microscope, it will be found to contain numerous eggs, larvae, young and adult worms. The adults are at most one twenty-fifth of an inch long. The potato cells have broken walls and the starch grains are fewer in number than in healthy tissue and those present are of smaller size.



Potato Damaged by Eel-Worm.

The disease is spread by planting infested seed potatoes. It is not definitely known to what extent the worms may live and multiply in the soil itself or how long a soil may remain infected. The important point can be settled only by careful observation and experiment.

Only a few carloads of potatoes were rejected, so that it does not appear that the disease is as yet widespread. The efforts of some dishonest shippers to dispose of potatoes known to be diseased, either for food or seed, should be guarded against by every grower, shipper and all who deal in potatoes, making themselves familiar with the appearance of the disease, and combining in an honest effort to stamp it out. Some sort of inspection service should be immediately established in the sections where potatoes are grown for shipment purposes. Care should be exercised in the purchase of seed potatoes, to insure that the disease is not introduced into regions as yet free from it. It will probably be necessary to quarantine against infected localities, in case the disease becomes widespread.

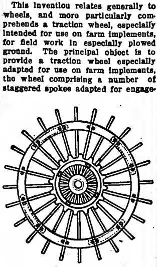
How to free infected soil from the parasite is a question which the knowledge at present at our command will not permit us to answer satisfactorily. The best advice for the present, it seems to us, is to plant infected fields with some other kind of crop, preferably grain or alfalfa rather than a root crop, such as sugar beets, which might be attacked by the same pest.

TRACTION WHEEL FOR FARM

It Is Especially Intended for Use on Implements for Field Work in Plowed Ground.

In speaking of and illustrating an invention of J. E. McWilliams of Hitchcock, Okla., the Scientific American says:

This invention relates generally to wheels, and more particularly comprehends a traction wheel, especially intended for use on farm implements, for field work in especially plowed ground. The principal object is to provide a traction wheel especially adapted for use on farm implements, the wheel comprising a number of staggered spokes adapted for engagement with the ground whereby the implement may be drawn thereover. This invention overcomes the disadvantages following the use of a rim wheel; the wheel involves a number of radiating and staggering spokes adapted for engagement with the ground, thereby avoiding the packing of the ground after being furrowed by implements having flat rim wheels. The illustration shows a side view of the wheel.



Traction Wheel for Farm Use.

AFTER THE GRIP PURIFY THE BLOOD

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Are the Best Blood Builder and Will Cure You as They Cured This Woman.

It is of the utmost importance to your health, if you have suffered from the grip, that you cleanse the blood of the lingering germs and put it in condition to resist disease.

After the acute attack the sufferer is left with a debilitated system, is short of breath upon the slightest exertion and is affected by every change of weather. The system is in such a weakened condition that it is powerless to resist the attack of such diseases as pneumonia and bronchitis.

This is a condition which emphatically calls for a tonic for the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine for this purpose for they act directly on the blood which they cleanse of all impurities. They tone up the nerves and give health and strength to the debilitated system.

The debility which follows an attack of the grip can only be cured by making the blood rich and red. This Dr. Williams' Pink Pills never fail to do promptly and it explains how they cured Mrs. F. R. Boyd, of No. 607 South Ninth street, Minneapolis, Minn. She says:

"I was never well after an attack of the grip a few years ago until I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before this I had found nothing that helped me. I was all run down, pale and thin. My appetite was poor and my head ached continually. I didn't feel like myself at all.

"Someone finally recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to me and I found them just the medicine for my case. They gave me a hearty appetite and a good, clear color. I got back my vitality and was soon a well woman. I can safely say that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do all that is claimed for them. I heartily recommend them."

If you are suffering from after-effects of the grip or other wasting disease, try the remedy that has cured so many stubborn cases, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, upon receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. A copy of our booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," is free on request. Adv.

Absorbed.

A college professor noted for his concentration of thought, returned home from a scientific meeting one night, still pondering deeply upon the subject that had been discussed. As he entered his room he heard a noise that seemed to come from under the bed.

"Is there someone there?" he asked, absently.

"No, professor," answered the intruder, who knew his peculiarities.

"That's strange," muttered the professor. "I was almost sure I heard someone under the bed."

Righteous Indignation.

Little Ruth was the youngest daughter in a very strict Presbyterian family that especially abhorred profanity.

One day little Ruth became exceedingly exasperated with one of her dollies. In her baby vocabulary she could find no words to express adequately her disapproval of dolly's conduct.

Finally, throwing the offending dolly across the room, she cried, feelingly:

"My gracious! I wish I belonged to a family that sweared!"

PIMPLES COVERED FACE

1613 Dayton St., Chicago, Ill.—"My face was very red and irritated and was covered with pimples. The pimples festered and came to a head. They itched and burned and when I scratched them became sore. I tried soaps and they would not stop the itching and burning of the skin. This lasted for a month or more. At last I tried Cuticura Ointment and Soap. They took out the burning and itching of the skin, soothing it very much and giving the relief that the others failed to give me. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment about three weeks and was completely cured." (Signed) Miss Clara Mueller, Mar. 16, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

Reason Was Plain.

"My husband has deserted me and I want a warrant," announced the large lady.

"What reason did he give for deserting you?" asked the prosecutor.

"I don't want any lip from you. I want a warrant. I don't know what reason he had."

"I think I understand his reason," said the official feebly, as he proceeded to draw up a warrant.

CURES BURNS AND CUTS.
Cole's Carbolisalve stops the pain instantly. Cures quick. No scar. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

Not New.

First Neighbor—Have you heard tell of them new-fangled trial marriages?

Second Neighbor—I don't see nothing new-fangled about 'em. Mine's been a trial for me for the last twenty years!—Judge.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle. Adv.

Every time you tell your troubles you are wasting the other fellow's time.

SAW NO CAUSE FOR WORRY

Small Boy Pretty Well Satisfied That the Future Was Not Likely to Be a Hard One.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer says:

A Lakewood woman was recently reading to her little boy the story of a young lad whose father was taken ill and died, after which he set himself diligently to work to support himself and mother. When she had finished the story she said:

"Dear Billy, if your papa were to die would you work to support your dear mamma?"

"Naw!" said Billy, unexpectedly.

"But why not?"

"Ain't we got a good house to live in?"

"Yes, dearie—but we can't eat the house, you know."

"Ain't there a lot o' stuff in the pantry?"

"Yes, but that won't last forever."

"It'll last till you git another husband, won't it? You're a pretty good looker, ma!"

Mamma gave up right there.

Pure From Start to Finish.

There is perhaps nothing in daily use in the home in which purity is so important as it is in baking powder. On its purity depends the purity of the materials used, the success of the bakings, etc. And possibly the one thing that has served to make Calumet Baking Powder so much of a favorite with the critical cooks of the country, is the fact that Calumet is pure from start to finish.

You can rely on Calumet's purity for the simple reason that every ounce of the materials used is first tested by experienced chemists and then mixed with the utmost care to insure its uniformity. And standing in the can or changes of weather, etc., cannot alter it in any respect.

But perhaps the best thing of all, is the fact that Calumet never fails. Every baking in which Calumet is used, is sure to come from the oven as light and as fluffy as you can wish. This not only means wholesome, tasty foods—but a big economy as well. Try Calumet next bake-day—it's the best baking powder made—for two World's Pure Food Expositions, one in Chicago, 1907, one at Paris, France, 1912—have given it the highest awards. Adv.

Big Difference.

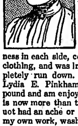
"Did you have any osculatory entertainment at your party?"

"No; only some kissing games."

BACKACHE NOT A DISEASE

But a Symptom, a Danger Signal Which Every Woman Should Heed.

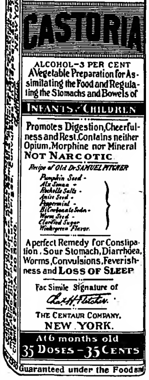
Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Woodall's experience.



Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 42–1912.



900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS & CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Winkergreen Flavor.
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY.
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES – 35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food and

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

227 Bushels of Corn to the Acre

This crop was raised in the season of 1911 by a boy in Mississippi. Can you do as well on your high priced land? Living is pleasant in the south. You can be outdoors all the time and can raise from 2 to 4 crops a year. Alfalfa, cotton, corn, oats, cowpeas, cabbage, sweet and Irish potatoes, tomatoes and fruits of all kinds grow equally well.

Go South, Young Man and Grow Rich

For beautifully illustrated booklets and full information write to J. C. CLAIR, Immigration Commissioner, Room D600, Central Station, I. C. R. R., Chicago

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

$3.00 $3.50 $4.00 $4.50 AND $5.00

FOR MEN AND WOMEN

Boys wear W. L. Douglas $2.00, $2.50 & $3.00 School Shoes, because one pair will positively outwear two pairs of ordinary shoes, same as the men's shoes.

W.L.Douglas makes and sells more $3.00, $3.50 & $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS.

The workmanship which has made W. L. Douglas shoes famous the world over is maintained in every pair.

Ask your dealer to show you W. L. Douglas latest fashions for fall and winter wear, notice the short vamps which make the foot look smaller, points in a shoe particularly desired by young men. Also the conservative styles which have made W. L. Douglas shoes a household word everywhere.

If you could visit W. L. Douglas large factories at Brockton, Mass., and see for yourself how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they are warranted to fit better, look better, hold their shape and wear longer than any other make for the price.

Fast Color Eyelets.

CAUTION.—To protect you against inferior shoes, W. L. Douglas stamps his name on the bottom. Look for the stamp. Beware of substitutes. W. L. Douglas shoes are sold in 78 own stores and shoe dealers everywhere. No matter where you live, they are within your reach. If your dealer cannot supply you, write direct to factory for catalog showing how to order by mail. Shoes sent everywhere, delivery charges prepaid. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES

Color more goods brighter and faster colors than any other dye. One 10c package colors all fibers. They dye in cold water better than any other dye. You can dye any garment without ripping apart. Write for free booklet—How to Dye, Bleach and Mix Colors. MONROE DRUG COMPANY, Quincy, Ill.

The Corrector of Destinies

Being Tales of Randolph Mason as Related by His Private Secretary, Courtland Parks

The Virgin of the Mountain

By Melville Davisson Post

Copyright by Edward J. Clode

On any Sunday evening of last year one could have seen the Marquis Mazaccra dining at the Dresden, on Fifth avenue. The observer may not have known this remarkable man nor anything of his history, but he would instantly have noticed his fine, sinewy figure, and his features, clean-cut and regular like those of an Italian bronze.

It is well to remember that every country maintains a kingdom lying within the boundaries of this republic. I do not mean the fiction of sovereignty attaching to the legations at Washington, but a phantom state rather, keeping the customs, the traditions, even the very laws, of the mother country.

It was only in this kingdom of Italy that Signore Mazaccra was a marquis. Uptown in New York, he was merely a star of heavy opera, one Ricardo Robini, with a voice like that of many sirens, and yet the man, plying this emasculated trade, was in fact a ruthless, calculating, steel-nerved sentinel, presenting himself, thus singing, in the world's most public places, and reporting each night to that phantom kingdom of Italy, set down like a well-fitting shadow over the streets and buildings of New York.

The Marquis Mazaccra lived openly, lodged in a suite at the Dresden. And yet for weeks the district attorney of New York had known that this man ought to be in the electric chair; his assistants knew it, the police officers of the city knew it. On a memorandum in a pigeonhole of the district attorney's desk he was written down as guilty of murder in the first degree—willful, premeditated murder. The district attorney neglected, nay, it should be written, refused, to apprehend him on a criminal warrant.

Let us not too hastily denounce this district attorney of New York. He was an incorruptible public servant, able, persistent, fearless. Why, then, this immunity to the Marquis Mazaccra, as of one heaven born, amenable to no law? Why was he not sent promptly to the electric chair, and after to dimmer audiences? To know this it is necessary to know first a chapter of Italian history.

If, when one is dropping his copper tribute into the dish of the collector at Sorrento, he will look to his left hand along the Bay of Naples, he will observe a villa built of ancient Sicilian marble clinging like a bit of flung-up sea foam to a little promontory of the shore, having for background a lemon grove, the thick branches supported by a lath trellis, like that commonly built for vines.

When the singing marquis came into his inheritance there remained only this villa, the half-acre of lemon grove and the steps to the sea, out of what was once the finest estate in Salerno. Even the treasures of the villa had, for the most part, gone elsewhere in exchange for lire, that the dissolute father of the marquis might maintain to the last day his midnight court of revels for the ballet of the Neapolitan opera, coming up the stone stairway, laughing, shouting, singing bits of dissolute songs, as though escaped by some enchantment from the halls of Morgana the Fay, under the sea.

One night, crowned with a wreath of wilted roses, brought by the first arrivals from their dancing floor, the old marquis, running forward to welcome Lauretta Matteo—the white devil of Naples—stumbled, and was himself welcomed by the master of all devils.

The young marquis, arriving swiftly from a military school at Milan, found himself to have inherited a corpse, and little else. Every item of his inheritance had gone down the stone stairway, except this patch of garden, this house, this dead body of the marquis and an ancient painting of the Virgin hanging in its heavy frame in the hall. This painting the old marquis had not dared to sell, having a care for the welfare of his body into the bargain. It was painted from some round-faced Tuscan model of middle age and was wholly without beauty except its coloring, which was wonderfully fresh and bright. Nevertheless, it was the most adored Virgin in the south of Europe, with a miracle to its credit beyond that of any Virgin of the cathedrals—not a mere straightening of legs or a healing of afflicted infants, but the saving of the whole village of Torre del Greco, its meadows, its crops, its villas, its churches, its gardens, as well, also, as its cripples and its babies.

The manner of it was that on a certain good Tuesday, with scarce a rumble of warning, Vesuvius began to pour forth ashes, sulphurous fumes and lava. The alarmed but pious people of Torre del Greco began at once to carry in procession every holy relic to be found in any of the churches, but without effect. The sulphurous cloud remained, the ashes continued to fall, the black, viscous streams of lava drew always a little nearer, scarifying the meadows like hell-vomit. When the list of these holy objects had been exhausted, a certain padre of Sorrento remembered the Virgin of the Marquis Mazaccra, and went instantly in a boat to borrow it. It was carried through the streets of Torre del Greco behind lighted candles. That night the eruption of Vesuvius ceased, and the marquis's Virgin was on the instant famous. She was called now the Virgin of the Mountain.

There is this virtue in a miracle, that one does not have to repeat it, like a clown's trick, to keep one's reputation shining. The Virgin of the Mountain continued the patron of Torre del Greco. Twice a year, in May and in October, the painting was borrowed of the marquis and carried in procession through Torre del Greco.

It was May and but seven days before the festival of Torre del Greco, when the old voluptuary of Sorrento fared forth so swiftly with a guest he had not invited. The new marquis was scarcely warm in his bare house and the old one cold in his before the procession of boats, each with its comfortable priest, came to the stone steps and bore away the Virgin of the Mountain to her semi-annual worshiping.

An American tourist chose that morning to ascend Vesuvius. Passing through Torre del Greco, he was met by the procession of the Virgin, and his driver was ordered by the priests to pull up by the roadside until the holy ceremony was ended. The tourist, standing up on his carriage seat, observed that the procession was not likely to pass within any reasonable time, and as the ceremony was in no wise holy to him,—a fact which he stated clearly enough in his own language, he ordered his driver to go on. The driver declined, having, like the old marquis, an eye to the welfare of his soul, whereupon the tourist, not caring a whit for his soul, caught up the lines and drove into the procession.

A crowd of women with their hair streaming down their backs were passing at that moment. These promptly seized the horses, cut the traces of the harness, pulled the linch-pins out of the axles, and trundled the carriage into the gutter. They then, in a variety of ways, explained to the tourist the esteem in which they held him. He, likewise, gave his views no less picturesquely, finally declaring that he would buy the confounded Virgin as soon as he got down from Vesuvius, and hang her up in a Carnegie library—a threat at that moment lost on the un-Englished peasants of Torre del Greco, but otherwise an expression fated, like an oracle. It was not lost, however, on the guide who sat beside him, but accurately remembered and accurately repeated in reply to innumerable queries.

One does not know what hand the long-baffled mountain took in the business. At any rate, the following morning the American called on the new marquis and asked him to name a price for his picture. The young man declined. The American offered a thousand lira, then ten, finally twenty. The marquis still declined, and the American in disgust returned to Naples. The young marquis locked up his house and went to the inn at Sorrento for his dinner. This hostelry is maintained by the pleasantest thief in Italy. Over his wine the marquis had the incident of the procession related with endless comment; so many gesticulating witnesses came forward to be heard that the marquis was compelled to remain the night under the roof of this pleasantest thief. When he returned at sunrise and opened the door of the villa with its iron key, he found the Virgin of the Mountain vanished; the canvas had been cut out of the frame.

The man, overwhelmed with this tremendous disaster, sat down on a bench in his hall, covered his face with his hands and abandoned himself to despair, forgetful of the open door and the sun now shining through it. He was aroused by a voice offering him the salutation of the morning and the benediction of God. He looked up to see the padre of Sorrento standing in the door. The old man had come early, tramping down the mountain through the wet lemon groves, to warn the young marquis against that devil's threat of the American and to bring peace to his house.

The young marquis took one of his hands from over his face and pointed to the empty frame hanging on the wall. The padre, following his finger, groaned like one struck with a mortal agony and backed slowly out of the door. Then, livid, quivering, his teeth rattling like castanets, he cursed the new Marquis Mazaccra with hideous, excoriating curses.

"Thou who hast sold, like Judas, not Christ, but the Mother of Christ!"

The boy leaped up like one prodded with a hot spit.

"No, no, padre!" he cried, "I have not sold it. It was stolen. See, it was cut from the frame. I have not sold it!"

The old man pointed a long, shaking finger over the threshold.

"Thou art a liar," he said, "like thy master, who is the father of liars."

Then he gathered his skirts closely about his legs, shook the dust from his feet and went swiftly down the steps.

The boy instantly saw the hell-storm that would descend on him when the padre got back to his people with the news.

He gathered quickly what he could carry tied up in a cloth and fled to Naples. A steamer was just going out of the harbor for America. He went aboard, took his place in the steerage with the emigrants and came to New York. Here he repaired directly to those in authority over the phantom kingdom of Italy and laid the entire matter before them. In this new kingdom, as in the old one, he was the Marquis Mazaccra and a person of peculiar distinction. Moreover, here his story was believed.

The new kingdom of Italy decided for the marquis and went into secret counsel on his case. The young man had a plan of his own. He knew the face of the American who had come to buy the Virgin of the Mountain, and he had, also, the finest voice in the military school at Milan. Why not, then, get a place in grand opera, if it could be managed. There could be no better station for a sentinel posted to find a millionaire than that. Sooner or later the man would come in with such audiences if he were living.

The matter was easily managed through Filippo Marchesi, himself an Italian born in Amalfi.

In the Marquis Mazaccra's throat was a voice descended from the stars. He gained swiftly everything to be had over a footlight. Within five years he was richer than any other marquis born in the villa at Sorrento.

More northern and colder blood would doubtless, after these years, have given up the Virgin of the Mountain, and gone about enjoyment of its much goods, like that certain rich man. But not so this blood, brewed in its sun-vat by the Mediterranean.

All this was related in minutest detail by the servant Pietro to Randolph Mason. The occasion for it was the finding of the Virgin of the Mountain. Not by the Marquis Mazaccra nor the host of Italian servants in New York, all commissioned by the authority on the East side to search, but by accident. An Italian paper hanger, sent to help with the interior decoration of a house on East Forty-eighth street, had discovered the painting rolled up in a closet of a room on the second floor whose door he had opened to find a place for his paste pots. The house belonged to Tolman Perkins, a retired iron manufacturer. This man, like all those who, having got a fortune by middle life and having come to New York to enjoy it, had found inactivity unbearable, and had gone wandering over the earth. He was about to return from a three years' sauntering through the Japanese east, and the caretakers were getting the house in order for him.

The fame of Randolph Mason had been carried by Pietro into the kingdom of New Italy. The authority there wished to know how the picture might be recovered and adequate vengeance visited on Tolman Perkins. Pietro laid the matter before Randolph Mason one night after dinner.

Randolph Mason bade Pietro sit down in a chair before him, and he explained with great patience the avenues of redress. A suit could be instituted in the circuit court of the United States by this Mazaccra, a subject of King Victor Emanuel the Third of Italy, against Tolman Perkins, to secure the painting and adequate damages. The picture could be taken, meanwhile into the custody of the court by a proper writ. This was the direct legal plan available in such a case, and to be advised. If this authority on the East side preferred not to go with such a matter into the courts, then he would give it a plan by which the matter could be adjusted without the running of any risk. But first, Pietro should go back to New Italy, state exactly what Randolph Mason had said, and learn which of the two plans the authority there preferred to follow.

But, in the meantime, the Marquis Mazaccra had elected to follow his own plan. Taking the place of the Italian paper hanger who had found the picture of the Virgin of the Mountain, and disguised as that workman, he went on the day following the discovery to the house on Forty-eighth street and brought the painting away with him inclosed in a roll of burlap.

Pietro reported to Randolph Mason that the stolen picture had been thus recovered and that the authority of New Italy now considered the matter ended.

The Marquis Mazaccra, however, did not consider it thus ended. The score with Tolman Perkins remained yet to be settled. The Latin mind was not accustomed to the idea of punitive damages at law for an injury.

On a certain Sunday morning, a few days after the recovery of the picture of the Virgin of the Mountain, New York was astonished by a homicide belonging, in its deliberate, cruel and theatric details, to some inquisitorial era. Mr. Tolman Perkins, a bachelor, was found by his valet at seven o'clock on this Sunday morning, in the library of his house on Forty-eighth street in a dying condition.

Mr. Perkins, insensible from loss of blood, was taken immediately to a hospital and a saline solution injected into his veins. He revived a little and attempted to talk, but was unable to do so. A pencil was put into his fingers and he was asked to write the name of the person who had attacked him. Finally, after repeated efforts, he wrote the following words:

"It was that Italian, the Marquis Mazaccra, who did it. When I get well I will kill him."

He died at three o'clock. But the curtain was not yet rung down on the tragedy.

I happened to be with Randolph Mason at about five o'clock when, through the window, I noticed Pietro enter the back gate of the house with an Italian fruit vender.

"Oh, Mr. Mason," he said, "a terrible thing has happened! The Marquis Mazaccra is lost!"

Then, hurriedly, gesticulating with his hands and shoulders, he poured forth the whole story: How a wax impression of the lock on the Forty-eighth street house had been taken for the Marquis Mazaccra after the picture of the Virgin had been brought away, and a key made; how with this key the marquis had admitted himself to the presence of Tolman Perkins in his library, seized him from behind as he sat reading by his table, and visited upon him this ghastly ordeal of retributive justice; how Tolman Perkins, contrary to every human possibility, by reason of a blood-clot forming in the wound, had lived long enough to tell who had killed him. The Italian janitor at the hospital had made a copy of his dying statement; the Marquis Mazaccra was instantly notified, and by the direction of that authority on the East side, of whom I have spoken, had come instantly, disguised thus, to Randolph Mason. He was there by the door.

"Let me see this statement," said Mason.

Pietro handed him a piece of wrapping paper containing these lines in pencil:

"It was that Italian, the Marquis Mazaccra, who did it. When I get well I will kill him."

"You will at once," said Mason to the marquis, "abandon this absurd disguise, and immediately return to your usual life at the Dresden, conducting yourself there as though nothing unusual had happened. Refuse to be interviewed. If you are fortunate enough to be arrested, decline to make any statement whatever and send immediately for me."

"Sir," he said, "I never in my life have been accustomed to take directions from any man; but since I have come to you for directions, I shall implicitly obey them."

Then he picked up his basket from the floor and went out of the room, followed by Pietro.

From the great newspapers of America nothing can be hidden; neither a flight on the wings of the morning nor a dwelling in the uttermost parts of the sea provides adequate cover. On Monday morning the whole story of Tolman Perkins' killing was laid in detail before the world under headlines inquiring who the Marquis Mazaccra was.

Friday, Saturday, a week passed, and the Marquis Mazaccra was not yet taken into custody.

The people, waxing vitriolic, began now to speculate; conjecture to wag its double-pointed tongue.

In the mean time the district attorney remained as silent as the unmolested, singing marquis. However, ten days after the death of Tolman Perkins, the district attorney did act. He caused the valet to be arrested.

When I told Randolph Mason of this his eyes narrowed and his under jaw moved resolutely forward.

"Parks," he said, "I am coming to have an interest in this district attorney. Let us visit him."

Then he summoned the marquis from the Dresden, and three of us went in a carriage to the Criminal Court building. We were brought almost immediately into the presence of the district attorney.

"Sir," said Randolph Mason, "permit me to present to you the Marquis Mazaccra."

For a moment there was an expression of the keenest inquiry in the steady eyes of the lawyer, then he arose and bowed courteously.

"May I inquire," he said, "why I am thus strikingly honored?"

I saw instantly that no fears cudgeled this unusual man.

"You have caused an innocent man to be arrested for the killing of Tolman Perkins," said Mason; "we came to say that."

"How do you know that he is innocent?" said the lawyer.

"I know it," replied Mason, "in precisely the same manner that you, yourself, know it, and with the same conviction."

"I would prefer," said the district attorney, "to hear the Marquis Mazaccra upon that point."

"With pleasure," replied the Italian. "The valet did not kill Tolman Perkins."

"Who did kill him?" said the lawyer instantly.

"Pardon me," replied the marquis; "is not that query a trifle beside the point?"

"Suppose," said the district attorney, slowly, "I should cause you to be detained as a witness in this matter!"

"Sir," said Mason, "it would be an act of the purest idiocy. He would decline to answer, on the ground that such an answer would tend to incriminate him, and so be immediately discharged. You must, my dear sir, be content with the word of the marquis as a gentleman."

"Why not, rather," said the district attorney, speaking even more slowly, "arrest the Marquis Mazaccra for this murder?"

"Indeed why not?" replied Mason. "You are quite convinced that he is guilty of it."

"Do you admit it, then?" said the lawyer.

"Pardon me," said Mason, "I am his counsel and shall always formally deny it."

"Gentlemen," said the district attorney, "this interview is preposterous."

"At any rate," replied Mason, "it is ended. Good morning."

Then he turned abruptly and walked out of the room. The marquis bowed to the district attorney and followed Mason, while I came at their heels.

On the following morning the storm of public condemnation doubled around the head of the district attorney of New York. The story of the mysterious visit of the Marquis Mazaccra and his counsel to the Criminal Court building was elaborately published.

The members of the party opposed in politics to the district attorney denounced him with savage comment. If he was afraid to prosecute the Italian Robini, it would find an attorney who was not afraid. It then named a certain lawyer in politics, one Theodore Fagan, a person of large municipal influence and considerable prominence, a man of no profound legal learning and of little legitimate practice, nevertheless a person of ambitious and unfailing assurance. This party demanded that Fagan should be sworn in as an assistant district attorney and the prosecution of the Marquis Mazaccra put entirely into his hands.

Contrary to every expectation, the district attorney of New York instantly assented to this proposition, without a word of explanation or comment. Fagan, fortified by his tremendous assurance, began at once to carry his mob directions into effect. Immediately after he was clothed with the authority of an assistant district attorney, he caused the Italian marquis to be arrested.

Within a week of the date of the arrest, the Marquis Mazaccra, alias Ricardo Robini, was indicted for the murder of Tolman Perkins. His case was advanced on the docket, a jury was impaneled, and the man placed on trial for his life. The valet, released and sitting in the court room, was the chief witness for the people. Randolph Mason appeared as counsel for the prisoner, but his conduct of the defense was so acquiescent that Fagan's friends facetiously named him the co-counsel for the people.

Finally, having at great length established the death of Tolman Perkins and its circumstances, Mr. Fagan arose. He stepped dramatically before his table, threw back his shoulders, and caught up the third button of his coat.

"If your honor please," he said, "I have reason to believe that the prisoner is relying for his defense upon our inability to identify him as the Marquis Mazaccra. I have therefore called a number of Italian witnesses. Will your honor direct the interpreter to be sworn?"

Then he whirled about triumphantly into his chair like one who has gloriously spiked the only cannon of his enemy.

The reporters at the table paused a moment with their pencils suspended above their notebooks. This, then, was the solution of Mason's indifference. If the prisoner could not be identified as the Marquis Mazaccra, he could not, of course, be convicted. This was a vital point—the savage battle for the prisoner's life would begin now. They waited, fingers tightening on pencils, for the report of the opening gun. Every glance in the court room winged to Randolph Mason. It was an instant of peculiar dramatic stress. Then it puffed out.

"Your honor," said Mason, "we admit the identity of the Marquis Mazaccra."

The joy of Mr. Fagan could not be concealed; it sat glowing on his face as he got once more to his feet. The only gap in his evidence had been bridged for him. The road to the conviction of his prisoner lay now unbroken before him in the sun.

"If your honor please," he said, "I have proved the incidents of the murder, the death of the victim, and the circumstances attendant on the dying declaration of the deceased. I wish now to introduce that declaration, to connect the prisoner with this killing. The identity of this prisoner with the Marquis Mazaccra having been now admitted, I take it that the people have made their case."

Then, posing on one foot, and raising his voice until it carried to the bailiffs at the door, he read the original statement of Tolman Perkins:

"'It was that Italian, the Marquis Mazaccra, who did it. When I get well, I will kill him.'"

If any one had been at that moment observing closely the face of the presiding judge, he would have noticed a curious transition there, as of lights swiftly changed behind the immobile features. The judge was an able and conservative trier of causes, and made it a point never to read any notices of a crime, nor to be advised in any manner of public opinion, nor of any comment antedating the trial of the prisoner. He thus got his knowledge of the case solely from the evidence produced before him on the trial.

"May I inquire, Mr. Fagan," he said, "if you have any evidence further than this declaration to offer for the people?"

"No, your honor," replied the lawyer. "This seems quite enough to establish the guilt of the prisoner. The people rest with it."

The judge looked down at Randolph Mason.

"Has counsel for the prisoner anything to say on the admissibility of this evidence?"

"No," replied Mason, rising; "I object merely to its introduction, and move the court to direct a verdict of not guilty. We have no evidence to offer."

Mr. Theodore Fagan arose then, buttoned his frock coat, thrust his right hand into its breast, and delivered an oration on a homicide. When Mr. Fagan returned finally, steaming, to his chair, the judge arose and addressed the jury.

"Gentlemen," he said, "there is no more difficult duty than that of passing upon the guilt or innocence of one charged with a crime; therefore the law, out of an interminable experience, has laid down certain definite rules by which courts are to be governed in the exercise of that duty. These rules are said to be the very refinement of reason. They at least insure a certain order and a certain uniformity of result not otherwise attainable. They are rigid, accurately determined and binding alike on all courts of justice. It is certain that now and then the observance of these permits a guilty man to escape punishment. But, in the mean time, they are the safeguards of persons unjustly accused and preserve the innocent from passion, prejudice or a public preconception of guilt.

"In the case before you, evidence has established the violent death of a citizen, and the circumstances attendant on it; in fact, the perpetration of the highest crime under that of treason. If, in addition thereto, proper evidence should be presented tending to connect the prisoner with that killing, you would have the right, under the law, to say whether he is guilty or not guilty of the crime. The assistant district attorney offered the statement of the deceased, naming the Marquis Mazaccra. The identity of that person with the accused is admitted. This is the only testimony offered on that point. If it is admissible and proper, the guilt or innocence of the accused will remain with you to be determined. If not, it becomes my duty to take the case out of your hands and direct an acquittal.

"As a general rule of law, one speaking against an accused must first be sworn, and an opportunity given for his cross-examination, before his statement can be heard as evidence; but there is an exception made in that certain class of evidence commonly named dying declarations, that is, statements germane to the issue made by one about to die. Here the law assumes that a man in the immediate presence of death will not probably lie, and his statement is admissible as evidence, with the usual presumption of truth in its favor. But, it must affirmatively and conclusively appear that the deceased, at the time of making such a declaration, believed himself about to die, had, in fact, abandoned all hope of life. If he entertained any hope of recovery, or any doubt of death, his statement is not admissible as evidence. It is not material that he did in fact die, even with the words of the declaration on his lips, if he did not believe death impending.

"This is the rule. Let us now apply it to the declaration of Tolman Perkins: 'It was that Italian, the Marquis Mazaccra, who did it. When I get well I will kill him.' Did the decedent believe that he was about to die when he made this statement? Had he abandoned hope of life? Clearly not. His statement itself will establish the contrary beyond a doubt. 'When I get well I will kill him.' Here is more than a hope of life. Here is a threat of retribution, based on a conviction of recovery. This statement of the decedent is, therefore, not an admissible dying declaration. It cannot be introduced as evidence. It is a worthless recital, before the law.

"Now, gentlemen of the jury, there is no evidence whatever, other than this inadmissible statement, tending to connect the accused with this homicide. I shall, therefore, sustain the motion made by counsel for the accused. You are directed to find a verdict of 'not guilty.' And the Marquis Mazaccra, alias Ricardo Robini, is discharged."

The following morning the district attorney of New York had his triumph. His statement to the electorate of the city marked the greatness of the man; it was dignified, concise and without exultation. Being aware that the statement of Tolman Perkins was not admissible as evidence, and that the Italian would be acquitted if seized and tried, his plan was to set the police machinery at work on the case in the hope of finding some evidence connecting the accused with the crime. Finally, when the great wave of public opinion descended on him, he determined to yield to its wishes and thereby give the people an object lesson, an example of the danger of public clamor when directed against the administration of the law. He looked upon the result as a thing not to be deplored, rather as a public good, tending to strengthen the confidence of the people in the integrity of its public servants.

It was now clear to me why Randolph Mason had tried to goad the district attorney into a trial. There was danger in delay, something might be discovered; but a trial upon the evidence in the possession of the people must result in acquittal, and, if the man was once acquitted, he could not again be tried, no matter what after-evidence was discovered.

The Marquis Mazaccra saw it all, too; but he made no fulsome offer of thanks to Randolph Mason in the court room. He maintained there his bearing of an aristocrat, the air of a man lightly indifferent to sun or shadow. Later, on his way to an Italian steamer, he came in for a moment.

"Mr. Mason," he said, "I wish to thank you for my life."

"Sir," said Mason, "I had no interest in your life. The adjustment of your problem was the only thing of interest to me."

I have not been lately in Italy, but I am told that if one will double the copper coins dropped into the dish of the collector at Sorrento, he will be rowed along the bay to the villa of the Marquis Mazaccra, and, if he increase this wage to a lira, he will be shown the Virgin of the Mountain.

For the legal principle involved in this story see Greenleaf, or any textbook on evidence.

THE SUNBEAM.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1912. NO. 31.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

One New York Policeman's Devotion to Duty

LEGGO
OH, YOU GREAT BIG HANDSOME BEAR

NEW YORK.—A new form of torture for policemen, more sinister than graft investigations, more painful than winter wind whipping around a fixed post, and possessed of possibilities as deadly as the burglar's bullet, was put to the test on placid Washington Heights the other night and described in Harlem court the other morning by a red faced young policeman.

Facing the victim—Policeman Geiger of the West One Hundred and Fifty-second street station—as he told Magistrate House about it, was a handsome, dark haired woman, who frequently blushed and murmured "Impossible! Oh, I couldn't have done that!"

"Yes, your honor, she kissed me," stammered Geiger. "Right out in the middle of Amsterdam avenue at One Hundred and Fortieth street she kissed me, and there's nothing in the manual that says part of a policeman's duty is being kissed by strangers."

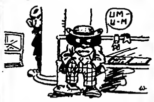
"Couldn't you have escaped if you didn't like it?" asked the court.

"I was on fixed post, your honor," groaned the youthful guardian of the peace.

"Oh," said his honor, "that's devotion to duty!"

Mrs. Margaret Hoeflatt, who said she was 30 and lived at 1071 Freeman street, the Bronx, smiled sweetly but incredulously as she paid a ten dollar fine. She said Geiger looked like a truthful young officer, and she wouldn't dispute his word, though she didn't remember a thing about it.

Deacon Given Plenty of Time for Meditation



BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—"Some folks say that a nigger won't steal," are among the lines of a song that is very popular with the street corner quartets, and of course is sung in an ironical vein. As a matter of fact, however, to the casual observer at the daily sessions of the police court here are few negroes who steal.

The other morning an undersized, brown-skinned negro was arraigned before the recorder's court on a charge of petit larceny. He gave his name as Charles Reader, and also informed John Douglas that he was a member of the Baptist church and a deacon at that. The specific charge against the diminutive Ethiopian was the theft of half a dozen watch fobs.

The store detective stated that he observed the defendant lingering around the counter whereon is displayed an assortment of jewelry that fairly dazzles the eye—that is when the electric lights were all ablaze—and that he further observed the negro shove a watch fob on the floor and cover it with his foot. He watched the operation repeated until no less than half a dozen fobs, resplendant with jewels that rivalled the colors of the rainbow, were on the floor and covered by the ample feet of the little deacon.

"Are you guilty of attempting to steal the articles referred to?" asked the judge.

"Ah doesn't deny dat ma fut war on dat jewelry, but hit slipped offen de counter an' ah jest couldn't 'sist kiverin' hit wid ma shoe."

"Did the other article slip off the counter also?"

"Jedge, hit war cur'os how dem odders got ter de flo' dat must er bin dar all ready an' jedge, while ah stood dar somethin' came ter ma mind dat ah had bettah put dem back on de counter an jest as ah war pickin' dem up ah war 'rested."

"Deacon, it is evident that you are given to meditation and for one of your peculiar talents your opportunity for such should be increased. In order to give you plenty of time to reflect I will assess you $25 and 25 days extra."

Police Stop Shower of Vegetables at a Feast

CLEVELAND, O.—While Patrolmen Mangan and Oliver went to 1420 Caton court the other day to investigate a riot call they were the target for tomatoes, bricks, dishpans and old shoes, thrown, police say, with surprisingly good aim by four colored persons in the house. When the bombardment ceased the officers placed the quartet under arerst.

At the station they gave the names of Mary Redmond, fifty-three years old; Bertha Owens, twenty-seven years old; Mary Jefferies, fourteen years old and Thomas Owens, thirty-nine years old. All gave their address as 1420 Caton court.

The police say the four had a chicken feast in the house. Dinner started at 12 o'clock. At 2 o'clock neighbors thought the "Honey Boy Evans troupe" had forgotten to leave town and were having another ball game in the vicinity. They notified the police.

Lieutenant Sterling sent the officers there on the run. When they knocked at the door it was opened.

"What's all the noise about?" asked Oliver.

"We am just celebretin', ain't we, folks," said Owens.

"And we sure are some celebrants," said one of the women as she hurled a bottle at the officers. It whistled by Oliver's ear, and tomatoes, bricks and dishes followed. The door was then banged shut and the two officers, their appearance decidedly marred, held a conference. Oliver wiped the remains of a tomato off his face while Mangan nurses a bump on his head. They decided to break down the door and rush the inhabitants.

Angry Cook Creates Havoc With Soup Dishes

CHICAGO.—Unfortunately for the customers and waiters in B. Clayton's restaurant, 446 North Clark street, the cook was not feeling well that night. The cook was Miss Emma Johnson and the night Monday.

Something, as yet unrevealed, but hinted at as indigestion, had spoiled Miss Johnson's temper in the afternoon, and by evening she was in such a rage that the waiters, accustomed to take a customer's order with that superior air many waiters have, were subdued and almost subservient in their attitude, even toward those who ordered "ham and."

Things went along smoothly for a time, considering Miss Johnson's state of mind, because of the conciliatory attitude of the waiters toward her, until one disingenuously ventured to return to her a steak which had been criticised by a diner as "overdone."

Almost simultaneously dishes began to fly in the kitchen in such profusion that some hurtled through the door into the dining room. They were followed by Miss Johnson, who, with an armful and selecting customers and waiters indiscriminately as targets, let fly in every direction, and with vigor.

Imagination cannot picture the ensuing scene—overturned soup tureens, diners covered with gravy, others making for the door with spinach in their hair, others strangling on hot coffee suddenly swallowed as they received an unexpected blow on the chin from one of the pieces of Miss Johnson's artillery—but why prolong the agony?

That Miss Johnson was fined ten dollars and costs by Municipal Judge Maxwell because of her temper may be some consolation to the waiters and customers.

In the PUBLIC EYE

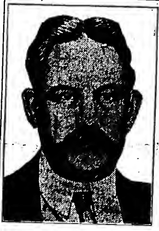
PRESIDENT FALLIERES IS CALLED STINGY

President Faltieres is again being subjected to criticism on the score of parsimony. When, a few years ago, the king and queen of Norway were guests of the republic, an accident happened at Versailles which might easily have had fatal consequences for the queen and Mme. Fallieres.

The postillion who was riding one of the horses drawing the state landau, in which they sat, took too sharp a turn in crosing a bridge spanning the ornamental lake near Trianon, and fell with his mount into the water. Happily the carriage remained on the bank.

It was stated at the time that since M. Fallieres' installation the Elysee stable was farmed out, and that horses and servants were supplied by a contractor. Thus the accident was explained on the ground of the postillion's inexperience. M. Fallieres was then accused of farming out his stables in order to reduce the expenses of his occupation of the Elysee, and a part of the Paris press denounced his efforts to economize at the expense of the prestige of the republic.

BEARS MEXICANS' PLEA TO PRESIDENT



Senor Zeferino Dominguez, a wealthy Mexican planter, as representative of land owners, agriculturists and other citizens of the twenty-seven states of Mexico, recently submitted to President Taft a plan which, he hopes, will bring peace, and insure, permanent freedom from unrest in his country.

Regarding his plans, Senor Dominguez said:

"The plan I have in view is that the land owners of Mexico join with the government in giving the poor people access to the land. At present 7,000 families own all the land in Mexico. There are 12,000,000 persons who own nothing and have no interest whatever in the land.

"The way to pacify the poor people is to give them an interest in something. As the situation stands, they can earn more in two hours' looting than in one year's work.

"The plan I offer includes also the establishment and maintenance of a strong army for defense and for the suppression of outlawry. We suggest that the army be a form of militia and that the soldiers, when not engaged in military duties, be employed on farms set aside for the purpose."

RAJ RANA OF JHALAWAR A REFORMER

The Raj Rana of Jhalawar, whose portrait is herewith presented, is the representative of a most illustrious branch of the Solar race, the ruler of an important state, and a reformer who is endeavoring to introduce modern conditions without giving umbrage to the upholders of past traditions, than which, as we know, there is no more difficult task. The historian of India shows how the British conquered the peninsula from a number of races by converting the enemies of one period into the allies of the next; but it has never been made sufficiently clear that there was one race with which England never warred, the Rajputs of Rajasthan, "the Land of Princes." It was due to the wisdom of an ancestor of the Rana of Jhalawar, that the Rajputs sought and obtained an alliance and protection in the critical period of the eighteenth century, when the Marathas seemed for a moment likely to anticipate Great Britain in the unification of India. This prince was Zalim Singh Regut, and, practically speaking, ruler of Kotah for fifty years. Of him Colonel Tod, in perhaps the most entrancing work that any Englishman has penned on India, has given a vivid picture of this wise man.

WINS NOMINATION AFTER SIX DEFEATS

William Sulzer, representative in congress from, New York city, was nominated for governor of New York state the other day by the Democratic state convention. It was the seventh time he had been a candidate for this nomination.

Mr. Sulzer was born in Elizabeth, N. J., March 18, 1863. His father, Thomas Sulzer, was a German patriot of the school of Sigel and Schurz, and after the revolution of 1848 was imprisoned. Escaping, he went to Switzerland, and came to America in 1851, settling in New Jersey. When William was a baby his parents moved to New York city, and his residence has never been changed since.

William Sulzer was graduated from Columbia college, where he studied law. He acquired a reputation as a speaker and debater in the Cooper Union Debating society. After graduation he took up the practice of law, and also entered actively into politics, his first public appearance being as a speaker for Cleveland in the campaign of 1884.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

National Museum Is Given Very Rare Collection

WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Julian James of Washington has recently deposited in the United States National Museum the collection of Colonel Theodorus Bailey Myers, a noted connoisseur of New York, which has come down through inheritance and been added to by his son, the late Lieutenant Commander T. B. Myers-Mason of the United States navy.

The collection consists of more than 500 objects which the museum authorities have classified under the headings of ceramics, ethnology, archaeology, technology and graphic arts.

This collection contains a splendid series of oriental weapons, consisting of Japanese armor, bows, spears, pistols and guns; Chinese swords and spears of superb metal work; wonderful ancient Hindu armor, inlaid with gold and silver, and many implements of warfare from India; Turkish and North African weapons and domestic implements, and many similer objects from Korea and the East Indies. It is also rich in Japanese and Chinese fabrics, embroidery and lacquers.

Especially attractive to those interested in the history of the development of ordnance is the extensive collection of firearms, which contains dueling pistols, sporting guns, models of cannon and other examples of obsolete weapons which Commander Myers-Mason gathered during his lifetime.

In the collection are included many fine specimens of blue and polychrome Delft plates, as well as extremely valuable examples of Spanish blue and Hispano-Moresque copper-luster ware.

The trousseau of an Equadorian Indian bride is conspicuous among the ethnological collections. It is made up of bracelets, necklaces, armlets and waistbands, decorated with a great variety of teeth, seeds, beetle wings and other objects of savage fashion.

Many of the Korean objects were presented to Commander Myers-Mason by a prince of that country who visited America and was entertained by him.

Capitol's Pied Piper Has a Two-Year Contract

THE proudest boast of Prof. Louis Hirsch, is that he is "rough on rats." Unofficially, he is known as the "Pied Piper of Washington," ever since he signed a contract with the government to rid the capitol and other federal buildings at Washington of rats, mice, roaches, and other vermin, and to keep the buildings permanently so rid.

Prof. Hirsch—his title is not merely assumed for business glamor, for he is a graduate of a German university and speaks several languages fluently and to perfection—has a two years contract with the government, as well as a contract to supply his chemicals to the various departments.

The professor has a simple method of his own for geting rid of rats. He does not let them die in their holes or in the building. He leads them out, like the Pied Piper of Hamelin, and induces them to die outside their hiding places. He first attracts the attention of the rats by giving them something they like. As soon as a few find the choice food, they communicate the fact to the whole rat colony.

Then he gives them some more, to make sure they have all got a bite of the appetizing dainty. The next step is to feed them the accustomed bait with a bountiful supply of effective poison larded upon it. The effect of the poison is to make the rat so warm inside that it rushes into the air and scurries around for water. It scurries until it drops dead.

Must Kill Rats to Get Rid of Plague Danger

THE government experts, after studying 1,000,000 serum inoculations and 100,000 plague deaths in India, announce their conclusions as follows in regard to combating that disease in America:

The eradication of rats is the all-important thing.

Inoculation of human beings confers a certain degree of immunity against plague for a few months only by reducing the chance of contracting the infection and still further reducing the chances of deaths therefrom. Inoculation is not eradication.

Situations demanding the inoculation of the people in mass may again be encountered in some countries, but could hardly arise in American communities. Even in groups of people who have been intimately exposed to plague infection inoculation is of doubtful applicability. In such a case it would be preferable to resort to the more rapid means of passive immunization by the use of anti-plague serum either alone or in connection with inoculation. Workers in plague laboratories and hospitals, rat catchers, fumigators, etc., should be inoculated at least once every six months.

The use of anti-plague serum for the immunization of a whole community is altogether impracticable, because of its excessive cost, the limited supply available, the short duration of the immunity conferred, and the excessive discomfort and actual danger accompanying the repeated administration of serum at such intervals as would be necessary to maintain immunity.

Inoculation consists in injecting into a person a solution of killed or attenuated living plague bacilli. Passive immunization consists in injecting into a person a solution of the blood of some animal (usually a horse) that has been itself immunized against plague by repeated injections, first of dead and then of living plague bacilli.

Washington Is Very Fond of Eagles and Lions

WASHINGTON is tremendously fond of eagles and lions, both alive and in effigy. The eagles may be found perched on flagstaffs, fence posts and official doors and on the maces of the house and the senate. No lamppost is truly complete unless surmounted by a bronze eagle. Note the great array of them in the avenue of the presidents, commonly called Sixteenth street.

As for the lions, four in bronze frighten you as you try to gaze upon the spot where some day a great statue of General Grant will stand. They are grand animals from the point of view of fine art. Congressman McCall almost bows to them.

They also guard that great depository of fine arts, the main door of the Corcoran Art gallery. However, they seem asleep.

Then one cannot enter or leave the great Connecticut bridge without the assent of the huge lions in stone there. They bid you welcome and speed you away. The Sixteenth street bridge is guarded in the same way. Some owners of private residences have taken the cue to guard themselves in this manner, huge lions arresting attention before visitors may enter the portals.

Might Get Even With Mosquito.

An observer in India has found a small fly of the midge class with its proboscis inserted in the abdomen of a mosquito, engaged in sucking the mosquito's blood. There is comfort, if not benefit, in this bit of news. Why can't we import this midge? The mosquitoes would know how it is themselves then, perhaps.—Farm and Fireside.

THE SUNBEAM.
W. O. HUNT, Publisher.
SUNBEAM. - - MINN

PLEASURES OF THE POOR

"The pains of poverty," wrote Thomas De Quincey, "I had lately seen too much of; more than I wished to remember; but the pleasures of the poor, their consolations of spirit, and their reposes from bodily toil, can never become oppressive to contemplate." Indeed there are pleasures of the poor, says the Kansas City Star. One is not so sure of the delight of "reposes from bodily toil." That phrase, as used by De Quincey, is reminiscent of Senator Vest's story of the little negro boy who was pounding his finger with a hammer and was crying from the pain. "Why do you do that?" the senator asked him. "Oh," he said, "it feels so good when I quit." But if the toil is not oppressive, surely the period of rest is the sweeter because of it. The pleasures of the poor include a love of good reading and leisure for it; appetites for the best eating in the world, boiled dinners; childhood, storing memories of swimmin' holes and bare feet and circuses and humble bee fights; the treat of an occasional good play; the notmiserly exultation at money put by for a rainy day; the selfish satisfaction of self-sacrifice; the romance of youth where marriage is of helpmates, "pardners." Oh, there are pleasures of the poor—and a country whose pioneers knew them so well, whose newer communities know them yet so well, must restore them by eradicating needless unillumined poverty.

Many persons are worrying, in print and out of it, lest woman is "making a man of herself," and in her eagerness to grasp new opportunities is forgetting her immemorial privileges. But there is an equally serious cause for anxiety in man's indifference to certain of his prerogatives. He seems to be forgetting the pleasures that accrue to him as a parent. "Pa" is no longer "onto his job." He has turned his responsibilities over to the feminine side of the house, and is starving a profound need of his nature in so doing. There has been rather too much idealization of motherhood at the expense of fatherhood. Not infrequently it is the father rather than the mother who is able to attain to the vision of the family as a sacred institution. He may be more intimate with the children than the mother, and have depths of understanding and tenderness which she lacks. But whether he exceeds her or not in spiritual comprehension of his sons and daughters, should he be shut out of that inner room and confidence into which all parents and children should enter by right of community of interest? No question about it, the American father too often is out in the cold. Perhaps he made the blunder in stepping out there himself, but none the less it is the business of the women who are wise and the children who are dutiful to see that he is brought back into heart association with the others.

There's one good thing about the dog days coming so late; they are the insect-breeding days. The flies and mosquitoes when they begin their season early have a way of setting upon people's garments just before they go indoors and of darting inside whenever screens are opened for a minute. When the insects begin their season late there isn't a chance for so many of them to get into the house.

An electrical scientist destroys all the mites in cheese by electrocution. He did not count them, but he estimated that in one cheese weighing two pounds there were 5,000,000 mites. Of course the dead ones were all left in the cheese, which arouses the query: What is the difference between eating a dead mite and a living one?

A French aviator predicts air machines which will fly at a speed of about two hundred miles an hour. At present what an alarmed public is looking for in travel of all kinds is less attention to whirling haste to a goal and more prospect of getting there alive.

It is said that side whiskers and frilled shirts of the olden time are to be revived for masculine fashions. The denunciations which feminine styles have been receiving will now have the field of criticism broadened, and the woman will have the chance of their lives to hit back.

Five hundred students worked their way through Columbia last year; which is highly creditable both to them and Columbia. But we venture a conjecture that they did not do it by standing around yelling after football matches, or by imbibing cocktails.

It sometimes brings up unpleasant recollections when you dig up last winter's derby and contemplate its fatigued and generally dilapidated ap-

EXCITING MOMENT IN THE FIFTH GAME

IN this photograph, taken during the fifth game of the world's championship series, Steve Yerkes is shown sliding to third base after tripling to center and sending in Hooper with the first run for Boston.

WIDOW FACES BECKER

MRS. ROSENTHAL ACCUSES EX-POLICE OFFICAL FROM STAND.

Tells of Business Relations Between Her Husband and Lieutenant Charged With His Murder.

New York, Oct. 17.—The widow of Herman Rosenthal, the murdered gambler, and fifteen other witnesses, testified at the trial of Police Lieutenant Becker, adding what seemed to be a mass of corroboration to the confessions of Rose, Webber and Vallon as to the relations between Becker and her husband.

J. E. Hallen, a white-haired convict from Sing Sing, who was in the Tombs until a few weeks ago, swore that from his cell he had heard Becker admit to Lieutenant White that he had been a party to the killing of Rosenthal.

Mrs. Rosenthal told of her husband's meeting with Becker at the Elks' club on Thanksgiving eve. The lieutenant, she declared, placed his arms around Rosenthal and said: "Well, Herman, how's things?"

Rosenthal complained that his affairs were not as flourishing as they might be, and Becker declared "Everything will be right."

Then she quickly was led to the day of the raid.

Becker tried to smash down the door and she ran downstairs to let him in.

"For heaven's sake," she said to him, "what does this mean? Are you trying to break up our home?"

Becker, she swore, followed her inside and said:

"It had to be Herman or me. Tell Herman he doesn't owe anything."

She referred to the $1,500 loaned her husband on the mortgage.

NEWS FROM FAR AND NEAR

Hobart, Tasmania, Oct. 19.—Twenty-two miners were missing Thursday at the North Mount Lyell mine, following the disastrous fire which began Saturday. There is little chance that any of the missing are alive.

Sofia, Bulgaria Oct. 16.—Lieut. Sherman Miles, U. S. A., arrived here Monday to represent the United States as military attache in the event of war between Bulgaria and Turkey.

Boston, Oct. 17.—Robert Gibson Larimer of Bellefonte, Pa., was arrested here Tuesday, charged with being a fugitive from justice in Winnipeg, Manitoba. The Winnipeg police charged him with larceny of $40,000.

FOREST FIRE CAUSES ALARM

Two Villages in Northern Michigan Are Menaced by Flames of Burning Woods.

Houghton, Mich., Oct. 17.—A forest fire of serious proportions is raging between the village of South Range and Trail Mountain, 20 miles from here. The villages are mining locations, unequipped for fighting serious fires and much anxiety is felt. The Northern Forest Protective association has been appealed to and is taking steps to confine the fires.

American Consul Commits Suicide.

Teneriffe, Canary Islands, Oct. 19.—William Whitney Kitchen, United States consul at Laguna, committed suicide here Thursday by shooting. He was a sufferer from chronic heart disease.

Falls Heir to $200,000.

Kewanee, Ill., Oct. 19.—Mrs. Emma Chance, a widow living here, was notified Thursday that she is one of the heirs of Jacob Vinnerman, who died in Kansas City. She will get $200,-

ROOSEVELT IS O. K.

EX-PRESIDENT RESUMES CAMPAIGN FROM HIS BED AT MERCY HOSPITAL.

ANSWERS MANY DISPATCHES

Doctors Hold That Distinguished Patient, While Not Absolutely Out of Danger, Has Nothing Further to Fear From Wound.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Theodore Roosevelt, convinced that he is beyond all possible danger, resumed the active campaign from his sick room in Mercy hospital Thursday by dictating a statement in which he requested his political opponents to continue the fight as if nothing had happened to him.

"If I had been killed the fight would have gone on exactly the same," declared the colonel in this pronouncement. He practically challenged Woodrow Wilson to abandon his intention of quitting the stump and characterizes Bryan's declaration that the act of an assassin should not determine the issues of the campaign as "manly and proper."

The colonel woke feeling, as he expressed it, "like a Bull Moose." In the afternoon he overcame Mrs. Roosevelt's objections to work long enough to send for Stenographer Martin and dictate the situation that put him back into politics.

Then he answered dispatches from President Taft, Cardinal Gibbons, the crown prince and princess of Germany and several other of those who had sent messages of sympathy. In the late afternoon he was informed that Hiram W. Johnson, candidate for vice-president, would be here and make three speeches. Colonel Roosevelt expressed great pleasure at this news.

The colonel has not yet passed from the danger zone, but his physicians have every confidence that he will do so. An examination showed that his lungs are in good shape and that his general condition is excellent. His pulse, respiration and temperature have been normal and his blood count, which was sent up by the injection of the anti-tetanus serum, is where it should be once more.

WILLIAM MARCONI LOSES EYE

Wireless Operator Has Right Severely Injured in an Auto Accident in September.

Rome, Oct. 19.—The right eye of William Marconi, the wireless inventor, was removed here Thursday by Doctor Bayardi, the famous Turin surgeon. The operation, which was performed at the hospital of the naval department at Spezia, was entirely successful and the patient's condition was reported as satisfactory.

Mr. Marconi was injured in an automobile accident near Borghetto on September 25.

Senator Heyburn is Dead.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Senator Weldon B. Heyburn of Idaho died in his apartments here Thursday. Senator Heyburn had been ill for several weeks.

Blows Up Homes With Dynamite.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 19.—Peter Messing, a carpenter, dynamited the homes of William Jackson and William Bigger at Pleasant Valley, Thursday, cut and seriously injured three persons and attempted suicide.

Aviator Dies From Fall.

Chalons, France, Oct. 19.—Another French military aviator, Lieutenant Blann, was killed Thursday. He was flying in his monoplane when one of the wings broke and he fell from a height of 1,200 feet.

TURKEY OPENS WAR

PORTE BEGINS HOSTILITIES AGAINST SERVIA AND BULGARIA.

Tribesmen Are Defeated by Serbs After an Attack on Post Near Boundary.

London, Oct. 19.—Turkey, on Thursday, made formal declaration of war against Bulgaria and Servia, and hostilities are now in progress with Greece and Montenegro.

Two hundred Arnaut tribesmen were killed in a battle with the Servian troops on the frontier near Prtepolie, in the northern part of the Janjek of Novipazar. The tribesmen attacked, but were repulsed by the Servians.

King Ferdinand, with his staff, has left Sofia for the headquarters of the Bulgarian army near the Turkish frontier. It is believed he will issue a proclamation to his nation or make a formal declaration of war from that position.

The Ottoman government handed the Servian and Bulgarian ministers here their passports, and they left immediately.

More than 100 battalions of Turkish troops are already at the ports of Asia Minor and only awaiting the conclusion of peace with Italy to be shipped to re-enforce the army now concentrating against the Balkan allies.

Athens, Greece, Oct. 19.—Fighting between the Greek army and the Turkish forces stationed along the frontier has begun.

A daring feat was accomplished by the commanders of the Greek gunboats A and D. At 2 o'clock in the morning they made a dash to force the Turkish blockade at the narrow entrance to the Gulf of Arta, one side of which is Turkish and the other Greek. They were observed from the Turkish fort at Prevesa, which dominates the entrance, and a heavy fire was directed on them, which they returned with spirit.

They succeeded in fighting their way through, and at 4:30 reached the Greek town of Vonitza, on the southern shore of the bay, with very little damage.

Podoritza, Montenegro, Oct. 19.—The Montenegrins have captured Berana, after ten days' severe fighting. Seven thousand Turks and Albanians made their escape, but 1,200 troops, 14 guns and two months' supplies were captured.

London, Oct. 17.—A preliminary peace treaty was signed Tuesday by the Italian and Turkish delegates at Onchy, Switzerland.

The preliminary pact provides for a continuance of the cessation of hostilities that obtained during the progress of the pourparlers. Details as to the next steps to be taken toward the re-establishment of permanent peace are lacking.

Munsey Gave $118,000.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Frank A. Munsey, the publisher, testified Thursday before the Clapp committee, investigating campaign contributions, that his total contributions to Colonel Roosevelt's campaign this year had been $118,005.72.

Arrest Mayor and Wife.

Little Falls, N. Y., Oct. 19.—George R. Lun, Socialist mayor of Schenectady, was again arrested Thursday, and his wife also was taken into custody, as a result of their attempts to address the textile mill workers.

Kill Two Nevada Strikers.

Ely, Nev., Oct. 19.—Two Greek strikers were killed at McGill Thursday, where the attempts of union men to close the Steptoe mill and smelter caused Governor Oddie to order the mobilization of the state police.

RED SOX ARE VICTORS

AMERICAN LEAGUERS TAKE DECIDING GAME OF WORLD'S SERIES—SCORE 3 TO 2.

BEDIENT WINS FINAL GAME

Bedient Opposes the Mighty Mathewson and Triumphs Only After a Hard Up Hill Struggle—Game Tied in the 7th—Winning Run in 10th.

Boston, Oct. 18.—With the Giants struggling on the short end of a 3 to 2 score at the end of a ten-inning battle, and Jake Stahl's Red Sox the victorious champions of the universe, the greatest world's series of many years was fought to a fighting finish here Wednesday.

Three to three was the way the world's series stood when the game opened in Fenway park under a bright and spotless sky. One team must win, and the team that did would be the world's champions.

Two innings passed and no man crossed the home plate. Then New York hammered in a run. Red Murray, with Devore on third, burst the leather for a double. The Giants hung on. Matty, unmoved by the terrific howling and cheering, wound up as deliberately and easily as if he were pitching a practice game. And for seven innings Boston hurled itself against the impenetrable defense of the Giants. Likewise, McGraw's men clouted and fought to no avail. A youngster, Bedient, was holding the fort for the Red Legs.

The seventh inning brought the first change. New York slipped and a pinch hitter, Olaf Hendriksen, was sent in to win, turned the tide. Hendriksen faced Matty with two on base. Jake Stahl had sounded the rally with a single and Wagner had walked. Olaf was a new one for the Giant star. What was his groove, what was his weakness? Matty didn't know and he guessed wrong. Olaf doubled, scoring Stahl, tying the count, bringing the Boston Red Legs once more within reaching distance of the world's pennant. In the eighth inning Wood went in.

It was the tenth round in which the game was won and lost. The Giants, batting their mightiest, scored another run. Murray and Merkle were the heroes.

Boston came to bat. An error by Snodgrass on Engel's hit started the flurry. Engle took second on an out. Yerkes walked. Tris Speaker was at bat. The cheers of the crowd seemed to penetrate into the hearts of the Boston men. Speaker's swing landed. A crack, and the ball was soaring into right. Lewis walked. The bases were full. There was only one out. Anything would do. A double play was all there was to be feared. Gardner flied out, a long fly, which shattered the last dreams of McGraw and scored Yerkes.

The Score.

New York.	R.	B.H.	P.O.	A.	E.
Devore, rf	1	1	4	1	0
Doyle, 2b	0	0	0	5	1
Snodgrass, cf	0	1	4	1	1
Murray, lf	1	2	2	0	0
Merkle, 1b	0	1	11	0	0
Herzog, 3b	0	2	2	1	0
Meyers, c	0	0	4	1	0
Fletcher, ss	0	1	2	2	0
Shafer, ss	0	0	0	0	0
Mathewson, p	0	1	0	3	0
*McCormick	0	0	0	0	0
Totals	2	9	x29	15	2

*Batted for Fletcher in ninth.
x—Two out when winning run scored.

Boston.	R.	B.H.	P.O.	A.	E.
Hooper, rf	0	0	3	0	0
Yerkes, 2b	1	1	0	3	0
Speaker, cf	0	2	2	0	1
Lewis, lf	0	0	1	0	0
Gardner, 3b	0	1	1	4	2
Stahl, 1b	1	2	15	0	1
Wagner, ss	0	1	3	5	1
Cady, c	0	0	5	2	0
Bedient, p	0	0	0	1	0
Wood, p	0	0	0	3	0
*Hendrichsen	0	1	0	0	0
Engle	1	0	0	0	0
Totals	3	8	30	18	5

*Batted for Bedient in seventh.
Batted for Wood in tenth.

New York ......0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 1—2
Boston ....0 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 0 2—3

The seventh game of the world's series was played at Boston Tuesday. The Giants defeated Red Sox 11 to 4. Wood hurled for the Red Sox, and Tesreau for New York. Score by innings was:

New York ....6 1 0 0 0 2 1 0 1—11
Boston ....0 1 0 0 0 0 2 1 0—4

New York was victorious in the sixth game which was played in New York on Wednesday. Marquard pitched for the Giants and O'Brien and Collins for Red Sox. Score by innings was:

Boston ....2 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—2
New York..........5 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 x—5

Hugh Bedient of the Red Sox downed Giants in fifth game at Fenway Park, Boston, on Saturday. Mathewson was on the slab for New York. Final score by innings was:

Boston ....0 0 2 0 0 0 0 0 *—2
New York...........0 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 0—1

Oil Agent Halts Hearing.

New York, Oct. 18.—The hearings in the Waters-Pierce-Standard Oil litigation halted Wednesday when Howard Bayne, a Standard Oil agent for the acquisition of oil properties in Texas, refused to testify.

Suitor or Dog? Death.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 18.—Miss Lulu Montgomery, proprietor of a dressmaking establishment, was told by her sweetheart she must either give him up or her pet dog. She committed suicide Wednesday.

Will Soon Wake Up.

Cincinnati woman declares she has discovered a man without a fault. Wait till they've been married ten years.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Knew a Poet's Troubles.

"Had a queer experience recently," said the Billville poet. "Robber held me up on the highway. Didn't have a cent in my pocket—only a poem which I was takin' to the editor."

"Didn't take the poem, did he?"

"No. Read three lines of it, handed it back to me and said: 'Friend, here's $2. You need it worse than I do.'"—Atlanta Constitution.

The Farmer's Search.

While plowing, a Crawford county farmer near Halper had the misfortune to lose a small part from his cultivator in the plowed ground. Soon a neighbor came by. "Lost something?" he asked. Soon another came by and asked the same question. And then another. Pretty soon a man he didn't like anyhow approached. "Lost something?" he asked. The farmer looked up in supreme disgust. "Oh, no; just digging worms for my pet buzzard," he replied.—Kansas City Star.

Optimists.

For non-committal brevity of speech, commend us to the Yankee lord of the soil. One such, who was obliged to make a physician daily visits, had an unvarying answer to the question, "How do you feel today?" "Well," he would reply, showing as little interest in the subject as possible, "I ain't no wuss." Further than that he wished to say nothing, and it took the cunning of a serpent to discover his real feelings. A man who was knocked down in the street by a snow-slide was assailed by a sympathizing crowd with condolence and question. "Did it hurt you?" inquired one of his rescuers as he brushed the snow from the clothes of the well-powdered victim. "Well," was the cautious answer, "it ain't done me no good."—Argonaut.

Liquid Measure.

It was the time of the singing lesson at the local council school, and the teacher was explaining to the young hopefuls that if a "treble," and "alto," a "tenor" and a "bass" sung together, their united efforts would constitute a quartet.

There seemed no trouble about that, and the teacher thought the class was getting on very nicely.

"Now, Jimmy, leave off pinching your brother's leg and listen to me," said she. "If a bass and a tenor sang together, what would you call that?"

Jimmy was the son of the local milkman, and a bright lad withal. His answer was not long in coming.

"Please, miss," said he, "that would be a 'pintette.'"

GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

"Hi, Eddie! Come an' help me select a cent's worth of candy, an' I'll let you stand by and watch me eat it."

A DOCTOR'S TRIALS.
He Sometimes Gets Sick Like Other People.

Even doing good to people is hard work if you have too much of it to do.

An overworked Ohio doctor tells his experience:

"About three years ago as the result of doing two men's work, attending a large practice and looking after the details of another business, my health broke down completely, and I was little better than a physical wreck.

"I suffered from indigestion and constipation, loss of weight and appetite, bloating and pain after meals, loss of memory and lack of nerve force for continued mental application.

"I became irritable, easily angered and despondent without cause. The heart's action became irregular and weak, with frequent attacks of palpitation during the first hour or two after retiring.

"Some Grape-Nuts and cut banana came for my lunch one day and pleased me particularly with the result. I got more satisfaction from it than from anything I had eaten for months, and on further investigation and use, adopted Grape-Nuts for my morning and evening meals, served usually with cream and a sprinkle of salt or sugar.

"My improvement was rapid and permanent, in weight as well as in physical and mental endurance. In a word, I am filled with the joy of living again, and continue the daily use of Grape-Nuts for breakfast and often for the evening meal.

"The little pamphlet, 'The Road to Wellville,' found in pkgs., is invariably saved and handed to some needy patient along with the indicated remedy."

"There's a reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest. Adv.

ATTEMPT TO KILL ROOSEVELT

Man Fires 32-calibre Revolver Wounding Ex-President In Breast

Milwaukee, Oct. 16.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was shot and perhaps seriously wounded as he was leaving the Gilpatrick hotel for the Auditorium to make a speech.

Colonel Roosevelt's life probably was saved by a manuscript of the speech which he delivered. The bullet struck the manuscript which retarded its force as it passed through into the flesh.

The assailant was prevented from firing a second shot by Albert H. Martin, one of Colonel Roosevelt's two secretaries.

Roosevelt Felt No Pain.

The colonel felt no pain at the time the shot was fired and was not aware that he was shot until he was on the way to the Auditorium. His attention was then called to a hole in his overcoat, and he found that his shirt was soaked with blood. He insisted that he was not hurt badly. A superficial examination of the wound was made when he reached the Auditorium, and three physicians agreed that he was in no immediate grave danger.

The wound was regarded as superficial and the colonel went on to the hall and began his speech after he had seen the assassin arrested and taken to the police station.

Henry F. Cochems seized the would-be assassin and held him until policemen came up. A mob surged around the man, who apparently is a radical on the subject of Roosevelt's running for another term as president, but the police succeeded in landing him safely in the central station.

The assailant, who is small of stature, admitted firing the shot and said that "any man looking for a third term ought to be shot."

In notes found in the man's pockets at the police station, were statements that the man had been visited in a dream by the spirit of William McKinley, who had said, indicating Colonel Roosevelt, "this is my murderer, avenge my death."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The prisoner told the police after an hour's examination that he was John Schrank of 370 East Tenth st., New York.

Colonel Roosevelt had just stepped into an automobile when the would-be assassin pushed his way through the crowd in the street and fired.

Martin Leaps Onto Assailant.

Martin, who was standing in the car with the colonel, leaped onto the man's shoulders and bore him to the ground. Captain A. O. Girard, of Milwaukee, who was on the front seat, jumped almost at the same time and in an instant the man was overpowered and disarmed.

A wild cry of "Lynch him!" went up from the crowd. Colonel Roosevelt spoke to the people and told them to spare the assailant. The man was taken into the hotel and held there until he was removed to the police station. In spite of the entreaties of physicians, Colonel Roosevelt insisted upon delivering his address.

"I will make this speech or die, one or the other," he said.

Harry F. Cochems, one of the Wisconsin Progressive leaders, told the great crowd which had assembled in the Auditorium that Colonel Roosevelt had been shot and asked the people to be calm.

The crowd was thrown almost into a panic by the announcement, but Colonel Roosevelt calmed the people by rising and assuring them that he was not badly hurt. Then he began his address.

Several times he seemed to be growing weak, and members of his party rose to help him. He mentioned them to sit down.

"Let me alone. I'm all right," he said.

As soon as Colonel Roosevelt had assured himself that the assassin was safe in the hands of the police, he gave orders to drive on to the Auditorium.

They had driven hardly one of the four blocks from the hotel to the Auditorium when John McGrath, another of Colonel Roosevelt's secretaries, uttered a sharp exclamation and pointed to the colonel's breast.

"Look, colonel," he said, "there is a hole in your overcoat."

Colonel Roosevelt looked down, saw the hole, then unbuttoned the big brown army coat which he was wearing and thrust his hand beneath it. When he withdrew it his fingers were stained with blood.

Colonel Roosevelt was not at all dismayed by his discovery.

"It looks as though I had been hit," he said, "but I don't think it is anything serious."

Dr. Scurrey Terrell of Dallas, Texas, who had entered the automobile just before it started off, insisted that the colonel return to the hotel. He would not hear of it, however, and the car was driven to the Auditorium.

As soon as they reached the building, Colonel Roosevelt was taken into a dressing room and his outer garments were removed.

Dr. Terrell with the help of Dr. John Stratton of Milwaukee and Dr. S. S. Sorenson of Racine, Wis., who were in the audience and came to the dressing room on a call from the platform, made a superficial examination of the wound. They agreed that it was impossible to hazard a guess as to the extent of the colonel's injuries and that he should by all means go at once to a hospital."

"I will deliver this speech or die," said the colonel.

After the meeting closed Roosevelt was rushed to his automobile and flashed through the streets to the emergency hospital.

The operating room had been placed in readiness to receive Colonel Roosevelt and six of the leading surgeons of Milwaukee were awaiting his arrival. Colonel Roosevelt was undressed and placed upon the operating table although he insisted that he was not badly hurt and that the doctors were taking it too seriously.

An examination of the wound showed that it had been made by a bullet of large size.

It entered the fleshy part of the right breast, half way between the collar bone and lower rib. The physicians found that they knew no more after their examination and, as to the location of the bullet, and it was decided to send for an X-ray machine to determine to what depth the missile had penetrated.

While he was waiting for the X-ray machine, Colonel Roosevelt sat up on the operating table and talked politics and joked with the physicians.

Assailant Talks Freely.

After a long cross examination Colonel Roosevelt's assailant, John Schrenk, talked more freely.

The shooting was the result of a carefully laid plan by Schrank, which was often frustrated, but in which he finally succeeded, according to his story.

The man talked freely after his first stubborn refusal to give his name when he was arrested by Sergeant Mooney at the Gilpatrick hotel.

According to his story, he formerly ran a saloon at 370 E. Tenth Street between avenues B and C, New York city. He was born in Erding, Bavaria, two hours out of Munich, the capital. He is 36 years old and came to this country when he was nine years old with his parents. He had been engaged in the saloon business, as proprietor and as an employe of members of his family nearly all his life, until he decided that it was his duty to kill Colonel Roosevelt.

Acquainted With Colonel.

He said he had been personally acquainted with Roosevelt since the colonel was police commissioner of New York in 1895.

He said he deemed it his duty, after much consideration of the situation, to put him out of the way. He was living at his home address at that time he said, but soon after he had a dream in which former President McKinley appeared to him. He was told by McKinley, in this dream that it was not Czolgosz who murdered him but Roosevelt. He said McKinley, in his dream, told him that the blood was on Roosevelt's hands and that Roosevelt had killed him so that he might become president.

Felix Diaz In Open Revolt.

Mexico City, Oct. 15.—The newspapers here issued extra editions declaring that Felix Diaz, nephew of Porfirio Diaz, erstwhile president of Mexico, is in open revolt against the Madero government and has gone to Oaxaca state to head a new revolutionary army.

Mrs. A. W. Astor in U. S.

New York, Oct. 15.—Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, first wife of the late John Jacob Astor, and her daughter Muriel, are arrivals from Europe.

More Confident Tone.

New York, Oct. 15.—The panicky conditions which prevailed all over Europe last Saturday are greatly improved, largely as a result of reports indicating the early signing of a peace treaty between Italy and Turkey. In Paris and Berlin concerted action on the part of leading banking interests was effective in checking further declines, but all the continental exchanges continued to show more or less apprehension. Consols fell to a new low point in London, where coppers suffered another sharp break.

FORTUNE IS ADRIFT

GUST HITS CLERK AND SCATTERS $115,000 IN CHECKS OVER DOWNTOWN MINNEAPOLIS.

MOST OF THEM FOUND

Finders, Like "Old Doc Yak," Rush to the Given Company's Offices Hoping For Reward.

Minneapolis.—A frisky wind blew $115,000 in checks from the bank book of the Minnesota Grain company, 66 Chamber of Commerce, sending probably the largest sum ever tossed about in the air in all directions. The loss was not discovered until the clerk, C. M. Reese, reached the bank and went to take the checks out for deposit.

For the rest of the afternoon pedestrians were finding thousands of dollars on the streets, and by night the greater part of the $115,000 had been recovered. Payment was stopped on the checks that were still missing.

Holds His Hat and Loses Checks.

According to officials of the company Reese left the Chamber of Commerce about 1 o'clock, intending to go to the bank. When he reached the corner of the Chamber he was struck by a strong gust.

Reese was kept busy holding his coat and hat on, and the checks, loosely folded in the book, were swirled away. Behind Reese the paper slips were flying merrily, but he plodded along without noticing them. He crossed Third avenue, his trail marked with thousands of dollars worth of checks.

Had Not Missed Them.

When he entered a bank at Second avenue south he stepped up to the window and presented the book. All there was left was the book, without a single check. Frightened at the discovery, he ran from the bank and retraced his steps.

Here and there he could see slips of paper fluttering in all directions. As he picked one up here, another there, pedestrians joined him in his search. Many checks were recovered but many were still to be recovered. At the office of the company people were streaming in with checks, many dreaming of rewards.

Emulates "Doc Yak."

Patrolman Joseph Berry found a check for $3,703.15 as he was walking on Third street, a block from where Reese had been. Immediately visions of a life of travel, free from "beats" and "pinches" appeared before the officer as he turned his steps toward the offices of the company whose name was on the check. When he reached there he met many "dreamers" who were ahead of him. Maurice Raise, a Court House barber, found a check of $750. Others found checks of larger figures and most of the finders returned them.

In the meantime Reese was chasing checks. Across the street from the Chamber, under a billboard in a vacant lot, he found a bunch that a miniature whirlwind had piled up in a corner.

MAY CHANGE DATE.

Committee Appointed by Fair Board Will Make Recommendation.

Minneapolis.—Providing the Minnesota State fair can retain its place in the circuit of fairs held every fall in the Northern Mississippi valley, it is probable that the 1913 state fair will be held the second full week in September instead of the first, as has been the custom.

Such a recommendation will be made to the state fair board Nov. 8 by Chairman C. F. Mahnke of the committee on the date for next year. The committee consists of Mr. Mahnke, J. B. Irwin, Minneapolis, and E. W. Randall, St. Paul.

Exhibitors and farmers interested in the state fair were canvassed by the committee to learn their pleasure on the new date. All who replied agree that the question depends on the ability of Minnesota to hold her place in the circuit of fairs.

Cattle men are anxious to have the date left unchanged, but they are outnumbered by the garden products men, who want an extra week. County fair officials also desire the delay.

Unless it is possible for Minnesota to hold its fair the second week in September and retain its place in the circuit the date will not be changed. The annual meeting of the Minnesota Agricultural society in January will pass definitely on the matter.

Albert Lea Office Robbed.

Albert Lea.—The third of a series of burglaries here the past week was discovered at the Smith, Wright & Sons office on North Broadway. Entrance was gained by breaking a window at the rear of the building. The cash drawer was broken into and $20 taken.

Anniversary for St. John's.

Winona.—St. John's Catholic church of this city will on Oct. 27 celebrate the silver or 25th anniversary of its organization. Rt. Rev. P. R. Heffron, D.D., will take a prominent part in the celebration and the Very Rev. Procopius Neuzil Prior, O. S. B., of Chicago, will also be in attendance. At the morning mass, confirmation will be administered to a class of 30 by Bishop Heffron. A fine new pipe organ will be dedicated. In the evening the school children and choir will present a musical program

PROSPERITY OF MINN.

Immigration Commissioner Prepares Statistics.

St. Paul.—Here are some facts and figures about Minnesota which H. J. Maxfield, state immigration commissioner, has compiled.

Minnesota has over 30,000,000 acres of land that yet remains in its primitive state and of this amount, experts estimate that 90 per cent, or 27,000,000 acres are fit for cultivation.

That means that there yet remain 165,000 160-acre farms, capable of producing everything that is grown in a northern temperate climate, and situated amid all the accessories of modern civilization.

Minnesota has 2,600,000 acres of state school lands that can be obtained on 40 years' time purchase. The average price of these lands is $6.75 an acre.

Minnesota has about 1,250,000 acres of government land subject to homestead entry.

A Great Potato State.

Statistics show that Minnesota has become one of the great potato raising states, producing in 1910 more than 18,400,000 bushels. Last year's produce was still higher.

Minnesota is an excellent fruit-producing state. Apples, plums and cherries can be produced in most localities with as much certainty and much less trouble than in most of the Eastern and Middle states. Raspberries, blackberries and strawberries are indigenous to the soil and grow prolifically. Fruit trees and berry bushes of all kinds are singularly free from diseases and insect pests.

Minnesota offers exceptional opportunities for the raising and breeding of stock of all kinds, and the Twin Cities afford a good market for all kinds of livestock.

State Fitted for Sheep.

Sheep raising both for the fleece and the mutton, opens up great possibilities to the Minnesota farmer. The soil, climate and both natural and cultivated pasturage are especially fitted for the raising of sheep.

Minnesota is the largest producer of iron ore of the states in the Union. Its mining operations demand an immense amount of labor both skilled and unskilled. The lumber industry employs an army of men during the logging season and the supply of capable farm laborers is never equal to the demand.

Minnesota possesses the largest school fund of any state. Its university takes a leading position among the universities of the country. Its common school system is comprehensive and complete and every locality is supplied with ample school facilities.

Trout streams abound in the state, small game such as rabbits, quail, pheasants and prairie chickens are plentiful.

TO CONSERVE HEALTH.

Representative of State Board Demonstrates Methods.

Mankato.—Dr. E. B. Hoag, engaged by the Minnesota state board of health to promote health supervision in the public schools of the state, has been spending a week here. He gave several lectures in the normal and city schools, the first being to the teachers of the public schools. Dr. Hoag offers plans for health supervision to meet local conditions. He showed what can be done in places where there are little or no funds for the purpose. Mankato is the second city to be selected by the state board of health for Dr. Hoag to visit.

In his talk to the public school teachers, Dr. Hoag explained in detail the methods for physical observation of school children by the teachers, and showed that even without medical inspection the teachers can accomplish a great deal of good along this line.

During the week he visited the various buildings and demonstrated methods of physical observation to the teachers.

A short course of lectures, probably five in number, were given to the students of the normal school on the topic, "The Physical Observation of Children." The state health authorities hope that by giving instruction in the normal schools the future teachers of the state will have some practical knowledge along the line of health conservation.

Dr. Hoag believes there should be at least one trained medical officer in the schools, and in cities of more than 2,000 or 3,000 population one or more school nurses.

Albert Lea Warned.

Albert Lea.—A report from the state fire warden's office on conditions in the Albert Lea business district has been received by Fire Warden Alex McKee of this city. While it provides for the removal of buildings and the cleaning of basements containing packing, waste paper and combustible materials and the doing away of old electric wiring, it is on the whole a favorable report.

Tragedy and Romance.

Minneapolis.—Five whole days of questioning failed to shake the vow of Mrs. Joseph Boniske not to divulge the secret of her wish to die. She died in the City hospital and her husband says he believes she died in a desire that he might go on with a musical career she fancied she had checked. But Boniske was locked up in the East Side police station. The Boniskes were married in Collinsville, Ind., five months ago. Their married life was marked by financial difficulties

ILLINOIS SURPRIZED.

Farmers At Springfield Fair Marveled At Gopher Exhibit.

St. Paul.—The best display of agricultural products at the Illinois state fair was that made by Minnesota, according to H. J. Maxfield, state immigration commissioner, who returned from Springfield, Ill., where he had charge of the Minnesota exhibit.

"Great interest was shown in our exhibit at all times," said Mr. Maxfield," it was generally considered to be the best display of agricultural products, judged from all angles, of any at the fair.

"One thing of which we convinced them was that we could grow corn in Minnesota. The display of this product was the greatest I have ever seen, and still our corn was about as good as the best. The citizens of the Central States were astonished at this feature of our exhibit.

"Another fact we proved to them was that Minnesota is an apple state. The apples shown in our display were the finest at the fair.

"Illinois is far behind Minnesota in the interest taken in scientific agriculture. Up-to-date methods are not in use. In a side trip which I took into central Illinois I found that the stand of corn averaged not nearly as good as it does in Minnesota. Many of the fields will not go thirty bushels to the acre. If the farmers of Illinois took as much care in the selection and testing of seeds as we do here in Minnesota they would not have had the poor stand.

"They are just beginning to take hold of the good roads movement down there.

"The management of the Illinois fair claim the greatest exhibition on earth, but it was not as large as our fair, or as educational. There were only three county exhibits."

30 PASSENGERS HURT.

Twin City Train on Chicago Great Western in Head-on Crash.

Spring Valley.—At least thirty persons were injured in the collision between the Twin City passenger train on the Chicago Great Western road and an extra freight, a mile and a quarter north of this place.

A partial list of the injured follows:

Miss Mabel Seymoure, Rochester, Minn., hurt in head and neck; injured internally. Her case is the most serious. She is being cared for at a hotel in Spring Valley.

Mrs. —— Anderson, Red Wing, cut about the head, face and abdomen.

Mrs. —— Shoyer, Osage, Iowa, badly cut about the face.

Mr. —— Bower, Spring Valley, back severely wrenched.

Fireman M. M. Holmes of the passenger train slightly bruised.

Conductor Frank A. Mellen, 81 East George street, St. Paul, hand and leg injured.

Conductor Frank Hillman of the freight, seriously scalded.

Brakemen slightly hurt.

Twenty other unidentified persons were slightly injured.

The two trains came together head-on at a curve where thick foliage concealed each from the other. The freight was a special consisting only of an engine and a caboose. The two engines were practically demolished.

G. N. SHOWS GAIN.

Railroad's Earnings for Year Are 8 Per Cent Higher.

St. Paul. — The 1912 earnings of the Great Northern railroad for the fiscal year which ended June 30 show an increase of $4,940,186 or a little more than 8 per cent of the earnings of the road for the previous year. The road's gross earnings for the year were $66,197,818.99.

Freight revenue for the year amounted to $47,877,359.05, an increase of $4,494,194 compared with the preceding year. Passenger receipts amounted to $13,623,008.91, showing an increase of $200,951.79 over 1911.

The Great Northern is now engaged in building three new branch lines, one from Fargo to Surrey, N. D., another from Vaughan to Gilman, Mont., and the third from Stanley to Wildrose, N. D. During the year the company purchased 20 new locomotives, 58 passenger cars, 2,100 freight cars and spent considerable sums of money in improving roadbeds and building bridges.

Fargo Incident Recalled.

Fargo.—It is believed by many here that the man who shot and wounded Theodore Roosevelt in Milwaukee is the same man who attacked the former president during his appearance here on September 5, 1910. The man gave the police his name as John Anderson. He later followed Roosevelt to Milwaukee and attacked him there during a public appearance a few days later. In Fargo the man attacked Roosevelt during a speech in a public park. The man flew into a rage and attempted to rush toward the speaker.

Special Issue in Pipestone.

Pipestone.—Voters of the county of Pipestone are to be given an opportunity to state whether or not they favor the county commissioners purchasing grounds for county fair purposes. A special election will be held in connection with the general election on Nov. 5. It is proposed to expend a sum not to exceed $7,000 for grounds. The voters once turned down a similar proposition, and it is believed the opinion of many has been changed as a result of the recent successful fair.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS
Are Richest in Curative Qualities
FOR BACKACHE, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

Every mother is firmly convinced that she is capable of picking a better husband for her daughter than she did for herself.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over 30 Years.
Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Part of the Truth.

"Robert, dear, how do you suppose these dozens and dozens of empty bottles ever got into our cellar?"

"Why, I don't know, my dear. I never bought an empty bottle in my life."—Fun.

Dull.

"Was your aviation meet a success?"

"No, not much of a one. There were only three accidents and no fatalities."

Accounted for.

"I will not let my wife go to these fashionable bridge parties."

"I'm glad you take that stand. So you think it is immoral to gamble?"

"No, but she's such a wretched player."

Diplomacy in Small Things.

Little Eloise Ceve, aged seven years, was visiting her grandmother in Madison, Va., and was sent to carry a saucer of ice cream to a neighbor. By the exercise of infinite care she conveyed her burden safely to the house and gave it into the hands of the lady for whom it was intended. The lady, however, was less careful than Eloise had been, and dropped the saucer and broke it.

"You needn't mind about that," said the little diplomat, without an instant's hesitation. "I don't think grandma has a cup to match the saucer. If she has I will go right home and break it myself."—Popular Magazine.

Accelerated Brain Activity.

In the early days of Wisconsin, two of the most prominent lawyers of the state were George B. Smith and I. S. Sloan, the latter of whom had a habit of injecting into his remarks to the court the expression, "Your honor, I have an idea." A certain case had been dragging along through a hot summer day when Sloan sprang to his feet, with his remark, "Your honor, I have an idea."

Smith immediately bounded up, assumed an impressive attitude, and in great solemnity said:

"May it please the court, I move that a writ of habeas corpus be issued by this court immediately to take the learned gentleman's idea out of solitary confinement."—Popular Magazine.

Open Air Schools Grow in Favor.

With the opening of the fall school term, over 200 open air schools and fresh air classes for tuberculous, and anaemic children, and also for all children in certain rooms and grades, will be in operation in various parts of the United States, according to the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. All of these schools have been established since January, 1907, when the first institution of this character was opened in Providence, R. I. On January 1st, 1910, there were only 13 open air schools in this country and a year later the number had increased only to 29. Thus, the real growth in this movement has been within the last two years. Massachusetts now leads the states with 86 fresh air schools and classes for tuberculous, anaemic and other school children, Boston alone having over 80. New York comes next with 29, and Ohio is third with 21. Open air schools have now been established in nearly 50 cities in 19 different states.

A Million Persons

Breakfast every morning on

Post Toasties

Suppose you try the food with cream and sugar, as part of breakfast or supper.

You may be sure it will be a delicious part.

"The Memory Lingers"

Postum Cereal Company, Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879.

There seems to be some difference in the political opinion of all candidates for state and county office accept on one subject and that is that they are the best man for the position that they are expecting to be elected to.

One of the most important amendments to the Constitutions that is to be voted on at the next election is amendment number 6-section 2 which reads:

"Section 2. Number of members. The senate shall be composed of sixty-three (63) members, and the house of representatives shall be composed of such number of members as may be prescribed by law. The representation in both houses shall be apportioned as nearly equal as practical, throughout the different sections of the state in proportion to the population thereof, exclusive of Indians not taxable under the provisions of law. Provided, however, that a county may be divided into several legislative districts, but no county or any of the parts thereof shall ever constitute or be a part of more than seven (7) senatorial districts and not more than seven senators shall ever be apportioned to any one county."

PURPOSE AND EFFECT. The purpose and object of this amendment is to limit the State senate to sixty-three (63) members and to prevent any one county having more than seven (7) senators.

Yours respectfully,
Lyndon A. Smith.
Attorney Generol.

This is one of the amendments that should be voted yes on by every voter living north of the twin cities. It has got so now thot the cities dictate who is to be governor and state officials ond if we do not clip their wings they will soon dictate whol laws we shall have passed.

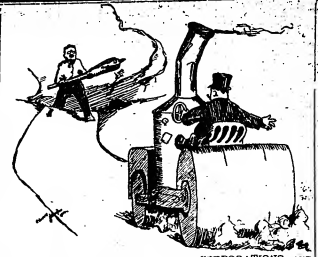
RINGDAHLS PLATFORM.

As there has been no answer to our challenge to P. M. Ringdal to disclose his religion we make this statement:

We do not like to quarrel with any man about his religion or politics and regret that we got in this controversy, but as it is now we feel that we have placed ourselves in the position of proving what we said, or acknowledging that we lied. We got the following from a newspaper called "Truth About God and Life.

"A cheerful greeting and best wishes for a long, happy, healthy and wealthy life to all. This little educator is distributed by the Church of Humanity to introduce to all people Kerr's great discoveries in nature that the Universe contains no real God, thot man contains no soul, and that life is ended forever at death—that all Gods, Saviors, Souls, Saints, Devils, Spirits, Angels, Heaven, Hell, Purgatory, etc., are purely mythical, having no real existence whatever in Nature. This church has over 300 enrolled members in the United States and is duly organized and incorporated to teach these discoveries. Ernst Heckel, the great German Biologist, is a member of this church. All are invited to subscribe for this little educator that it may come to their homes monthly to teach them these wonderful modern discoveries, and as soon as they learn them they are requested to join the Church of Humanity. No fees or dues to pay."

This is Mr. Ringdals church platform. If you want to vote for him for governor, its no more than fair that you know his religion. Without Ringdal this church would have 299 members.



STOP! YOU HAVE REPRESENTED THE CORPORATIONS AND TRUSTS LONG ENOUGH! STOP, I SAY! CAN'T YOU SEE I HAVE MY BIG STICK. THE PEOPLE WILL SPEAK NOV. 5th.

DISARMING FATE.

A Domestic Dialogue That Made Old Deacon Wood Wise.

"I notice Mrs. Simmons is having a new porch put on to her house," said Deacon Wood, polishing his glasses.

"Yes," said his wife; "she always wanted one clear across the front of the house, but Silas never would build one, so the first thing she did with the insurance money was to have one."

The deacon looked at his paper thoughtfully for a moment, then remarked:

"The Widder Davis is setting out a good many flowers, isn't she? She keeps getting seed catalogues at the post-office."

"Yes," replied his wife; "her heart's been set on a posy garden a good many years, but I should almost think 'twould make Jed Davis turn over in his grave. He always thought flowers was such a foolish waste of time and money."

For a time the deacon was silent, then he said, "Wasn't that a new rubber tired buggy I saw Prunella White in yesterday?"

"Yes," said his wife, with animation, "and I'm glad she's got it at last. She rode around for years in an old farm wagon, though Leander could well afford a decent buggy for her and the girls, but if he'd lived they'd never have had one."

For a time the deacon remained sunk in thought; then he asked:

"If you had a considerable sum of money to do just what you wanted with, Mandy, what would you get?"

"I'd have me a hardwood floor in that kitchen," his wife said firmly. "I never scrub that old floor but what I run my fingers full of slivers."

"Mandy," said her husband, with fervor, "you'll see the carpenters at work on that new floor tomorrow mornin'." And the deacon resumed his paper with a sigh of relief.—Youth's Companion.

DO YOU RIDE, WALK OR PUSH?

An Old Stage Coach Story From a Political Viewpoint.

The following story was told at a political banquet by a well known politician:

"I was going to the seashore, and the jerkwater railroad left me at a wretched station about ten miles from the resort. However, we were consoled by the information that the lumbering old stage made a daily trip, and I went to bargain for my fare.

"'Do you want to go first, second or third class?' asked the driver.

"True to my creed that nothing was too good for me, I chose a first class passage at 75 cents.

"'All right. Git in and choose your seat.'

"I watched the other passengers pay their quarters and half dollars, but when we started I found a twenty-five cent man on my left and a fifty cent man on my right. In fact, all passengers were sandwiched in regardless of unsocial benefits.

"I was mad clear through, but luckily did not boil over. We jogged along until we struck an awful piece of road, when the driver stopped, stuck the blacksnake whip into the socket, tied the lines round it, jumped off his seat, jerked open the door and shouted:

"'All you twenty-five cent men and you fifty cent men must get out and let the seventy-five cent gent stay where he is. The fifty cent men must walk and the twenty-five cent men must push or we'll never get the stage out of this goldarn sinkhole!'

"And, gentlemen, this is the political situation. The seventy-five cent men are riding, the fifty cent men are walking, and the poor twenty-five cent beggar is pushing the political machine. Are you riding or walking or pushing?"—St. Louis Republic.

Fluctuations of the Sun.

It would appear from the researches of the astronomers that the exact shape of the sun is not known. The generally accepted idea that the sun is a sphere is, some hold, at least open to question. Practically every series of measures shows departures from a spherical form. Of course the departures, considering the great size of the solar globe, are very minute. There seems to be a fluctuation in the shape of the sun corresponding in period with the sun spot cycle. There are also indications of a fluctuation having a period of about twenty-eight days.—Exchange.

Paid Advertising:

Allow me through the columns of your esteemed paper to extend to my neighbors and friends throughout the County my sincere thanks for their support and for the nomination tendered me at the Primary Election.

Knowing our teachers, the conditions in our schools and being in the work, it will be a source of pleasure to me serve the people and to do my best for the upholding of our rural schools should I be favored with the election on Nov. 5th.

Fraternally,
E. A. Mostue.

(Paid Advertisement. $5 00 paid by H. G. Hieber of Thief River Falls, Minn., Sec. of the personal Campaign Committee of Wilhelm Michelet. Non partisan Candidate for the office of Judge of Probate in and for Pennington Co., Minn.)

Wilhelm Michelet

JUDGE OF PROBATE.

Non-Partisan Candidate for Re-election,

I Respectfully Solicit Your Vote and Support,

WILHELM MICHELET,
Thief River Falls, Minn.

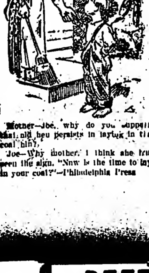
PNEUMONIA

left me with a frightful cough and very weak. I had spells when I could hardly breathe or speak for 10 to 20 minutes. My doctor could not help me, but I was completely cured by

DR. KING'S
New Discovery

Mrs. J. E. Cox, Joliet, Ill.
50c AND $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Biddy Takes the Tip



Mother—Joe, why do you suppose that old hen persists in laying in the coal bin?

Joe—Why mother, I think she has seen the sign, "Now is the time to lay in your coal?"—Philadelphia Press

Saved By His Wife

She's a wise woman who knows just what to do when her husband's life is in danger, but Mrs. R. J. Flint, Braintree, Vt., is of that kind. "She insisted on my using Dr. King's New Discovery," writes Mr. F. "for a dreadful cough, when I was so weak my friends all thought I had only a short time to live, and it completely cured me." A quick cure for coughs and colds, it's the most safe and reliable medicine for many throat and lung troubles—grip, bronchitis, croup, quinsy, tonsilitis, hemorrhages. A trial will convince you. 50cts, and $1.00. Guaranteed by All Druggists

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. In the Sunbeam Sep. 20th, 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 9th, 1912

NOTICE is hereby given that Grace M. Pinkerton, of Torgerson Minn., who on May 15th, 1911, made homestead Entry No. 06180 for S. E. ¼ Section 22 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarraet, Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 2nd day of November, 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

A. T. Rice, of Germantown Minn. John Markuson, E. H. Besancon, of Torgerson Minn. J. H. Hay, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. In the Sunbeam Sept. 20th, 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 18th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Kittil Jordshaugen, of Germantown Minn., who on Nov. 1, 1904, made Homestead Application No 797, Serial No. 04644, for N. W. ¼ Section 8 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before The Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn., on the 31st, day of October 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Torgel K. Hegtvedt, Gunder T. Skretvet. Christoffer Vad, Leif T Jordeshaugen, all of Germantown Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin.
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Publication in the Sunbeam Sept. 20,

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. September 18. 1912

Notice is hereby given that Torgel K. Hagtvedt, of Germantown Minn., who on November 1st, 1904, made Homestead Application No. 795 Serial No. 04642, for Lots 6, 7, and E. ½ S. W. ¼ Section 6 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before the Register and Receiver of the U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. on the 31st, day of October 1912

Claimant names as witnesses:

Leif T. Jordeshaugen, Gunder T. Skretvet Kittil T. Jordshaugen, Christoffer Vad, all of Germantown, Minn.

ARTHUR P. TOUPIN,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. In the Sunbeam Oct. 4, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Sept. 30th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given, that Nels Thorstenson, of Germantown Minn., who on May 16th, 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 06162 for Lots 1, 2 & 3. ½ N. E. ¼ Section 1 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet. U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 19th. day of November 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses

Martin Olson, Robert Ramback, John Graff, Carl Edseth, all of Germantown Minn

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Dangerous Rights.

The Theorist—A man has a right to insist upon being the head of his own household.

The Pessimist—Ye-es, and a man also has a right to slap a tiger on the nose bh!—

—Satire.

The Hen's Effort.

"Oh, mamma, the hen is sitting on the vacuum cleaner!" "Perhaps she's only trying to lay the dust, dear."

A Log On The Track

of the fast express means serious trouble ahead if not removed, so does loss of appetite. It means lack of vitality, loss of strength and nerve weakness. If appetite fails, take Electric Bitters quickly to overcome the cause by toning up the stomach and curing the indigestion. Michael Hesshelmer of Lincoln, Neb., had been sick over three years, but six bottles of Electric Bitters put him right on his feet again. They have helped thousands. They give pure blood, strong nerves, good digestion. Only 50 cts at All Druggists.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9,40 a. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns
For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine [illegible] Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

[illegible]

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. In the Sunbeam Oct. 11th, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S Land Office at Crookston Minn. October 5th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Halvor Stulsdal, of Hilda Minnesota, who on June 27th, 1905, made Homestead Application No. [illegible] Serial No. 04[illegible], for Lots 3, 4, Section 1, and Lots 1, 2, Section 2 Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five Year Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for the District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 11th, day of November 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Knut Attenboe, Swan Swenson, O. A. [illegible], of Hilda Minn. Halvor Falkedahl, of Highlanding Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

We have a fine farm for sale in Deer Park township for only $21 per acre.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof

The fields are now getting in good shape for plowing.

Edward Singer has moved up to Liner, where he has put in a store.

Yo-Editor made a flying trip to Thief River Falls last Sunday, returning Monday evening.

We understand that the walking dredge on ditch 48 has been laid up for the past week.

Roosevelt is on the way to recovery but he has lost lots of time which of course means lots of votes.

Knut Dale will move his threshing machine over to Sigurdson this week, and will thrash his and Martin Hyland's flax crop.

County Surveyor C. H. Martz is up this way to-day looking after the placing of culverts in state ditches.

The roads are now in very fair condition to Thief River Falls, and our merchants should improve them to get their falls trading done.

It will soon be dry on the marshes, and as that early snow killed the grass dead, it is best to be careful about setting out fires.

Action was commenced in District Court this week by W. G. Hunt against the contractors and Bonding Co., on ditch 47. J. M. Bishop has been employed as the attorney for the Plaintiff.

We are pleased to note that the Republican candidates are making a united campaign for the straight ticket, and it looks to us from this distance like they are sure winners.

There is no reason why any Republican should run after the other parties to pick out a candidate for county office as the republican county ticket is composed of honorable men that are well qualified for the position they seek. Vote it straight.

Judging by the large amount of flax that is still standing in the fields between here and Thief River Falls this fine weather is about what is badly needed. Two or three weeks more of the same kind, begin to make the farmers forget that September storm.

We seen a funny political card at Thief River Falls Monday. All the republican candidates for county office were on it, except J.M. Bishop and in his place was E.M. Stanton. The ticket was repudiated by the other republican candidates

Candidates for office should have more sense than to hold a farmer up for a two hours political talk, this time of the year, and especially this year when the farm work is so far behind. We believe the farmers will like the candidates better who do not bother them, than they will the ones who do.

If there had been able put onto that old floating "setter" dredge on ditch 47, one year ago last June like Earnest Freed, who is now running it, that ditch would have been completed long ago; the farmers would have had the two years use of their lands and there would have been no trouble between the contractors and petitioners.

Naming a Town.

The late Colonel Sanders was canvassing Montana for votes for himself for governor. He came to a little settlement, not yet named.

He met a man and said, "I am Wilbur F. Sanders."

"Yes," said the man.

"I am running for governor. Will you vote for me, my friend?"

"No."

"Well," said Sanders, producing a bottle, "will you have a drink?"

"You bet!" said the man.

And that is actually the way the town of Ubet got its name.—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

SHE DIDN'T LIKE CARLYLE.

Janet Ross Tells a Couple of Tales to Justify Her Aversion.

Two good stories of Carlyle appear in "The Fourth Generation," by Janet Ross, the daughter of the brilliant Lady Duff-Gordon:

"The one of our many visitors to Queen square whom I cordially disliked was Mr. Carlyle. He was a great friend of Mrs. Austin and professed to admire Lucykin, as he called my mother, very much. One afternoon he had a discussion with her on German literature, and, her wonderful eloquence and fire prevailing, Carlyle lost his temper and burst forth in his Scotch tongue, 'You're just a windbag, Lucie; you're just a windbag!' I had been listening with all my ears, as my grandmother always spoke with such enthusiasm about him; but, furious at my mother being, as I thought, 'called names' by so uncouth a man, I interrupted and exclaimed, 'My papa says men should be civil to women!' For which pert remark I was reproved by my mother. Mr. Carlyle, however, was not offended and only observed, 'Lucykin, that child of yours has an eye for an inference.'"

At a later age she had this experience with him: "My cousin, Henry Reeve, 'the great Henry,' as we called him, while others irreverently knew him as 'Baron Puffendorf,' was always kind to me. When I stayed with him in Rutland Gate I took up my cob, and we used to ride in the park with his friend, Charles Greville, whom I did not much like, with Delane, jaunty and kindly, who had a smile and a nod for every one and looked fresher than many of the young girls, although he was up till 2 or 3 every morning at the Times office, and with Mr. Carlyle.

"Henry welcomed Carlyle with effusion, but generally managed that Delane or Charles Greville should ride with him, while I had to go with Carlyle. One day as we were trotting his wideawake blew off. A civil workingman picked it up and ran after us. Instead of giving him a sixpence or even a twopence, Carlyle said: 'Thank ye, my mon. Ye can just say ye've picked up the hat of Thomas Carlyle.' I felt so ashamed that I told Eothen he must come and meet me in the park and take me away from the sage."

Saved Leg Of Boy

"It seemed that my 14-year old boy would have to lose his leg, on account of an ugly ulcer, caused by a bad bruise," wrote D. F. Howard, Aquone, N. C. "All remedies and doctors treatment failed till we tried Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and cured him with one box." Cures burns, boils, skin eruptions, piles. 25c at All Druggists.

HEAL IT WITH
Bucklen's
THE ONLY GENUINE
Arnica Salve
KEEPS FLESH IN TONE
FROM SKIN TO BONE.
Heals Everything Healable. Burns, Boils, Sores, Ulcers, Piles, Eczema, Cuts, Corns, Wounds and Bruises.
SATISFIES, OR MONEY BACK.
25c AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Subscribe for The Sunbeam.

Pay up your back Subscription.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

Suggested Improvements.

"I wish I were the weather man."

"Then what would happen?"

"We'd have a shower every time the lawn needed sprinkling."

"Huh! I'd beat that."

"What would you do?"

"I'd have a cloudburst every time my wife suggested a picnic."

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE,
Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Republican Ticket.

For President:
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
U. S. Senator:
KNUT NELSON.
Governor:
P. V. COLLINS.
Treasurer—WALTER SMITH.
Attorney General:
LYNDON A. SMITH.
Railroad Commissioner (4 years)
IRA B. MILES.
Congressman at Large:
JAMES MANAHAN.
Congressman for 9th, Dist.
HALVOR STEENERSON.
Representative to the Legislature
HON. D. P. ONEIL.
County Auditor:
A. H. FASEL.
Treasurer:
ANDREW TROVATON.
For Sheriff;
W. J. LaBREE.
Register of Deeds:
NELS J. ANDERSON.
For Coroner
H. R. HALVORSON.
For County Surveyor
C. H. MARTZ.
County Attorney:
J. M. BISHOP.
Clerk of Court:
HARRY E. IVES.
County Commissioner 2nd Dist.
DANIEL SHAW.
5th, District:
A. B. MANDT.

We will publish the State and County non-partisan ticket later.

This column will be for the use of any of the candidates for office, who desire to make a statement to the voters over their own signature. It pays us to have you use it, but if you don't think it pays you don't use it.

Paid advertising.

Having received the nomination of the Public Ownership Party for candidate for County Commissioner of the 5th commissioner district, I will, if elected, consider myself at the service of the people and use all my efforts in the interests of the tax payers of Pennington County.

I earnestly solicit the support of the voters at the final election November 5th.

Respectfully
George Lemmers

TO THE VOTERS

I wish to express to the voters of the County my appreciation of your splendid support given me at the primaries just held for Pennington County. The vote for the county attorney was as follows:

For J. M. Bishop, Republican Candidate for County attorney 895 votes, O. A. Naplin, Socialist candidate for County attorney 170 votes, E. M. Stanton, Democratic candidate for county attorney 62 votes.

The above figures are absolutly correct. About 600 of my votes were given me by the farming community and the remainder of the vote by the City of Thief River Falls.

I will greatly appreciate a continuation of your splendid vote and support at the general election to be held on November 5th, 1912.

Very sincerely yours,
J. M. Bishop, Republican nominee for county attorney for Pennington county, Minnesota

Paid Advertisement

I wish to thank my supporters for the republican nomination for County Treasurer, and also my opponent and his supporters for the clean, gentlemanly manner in which they conducted their campaign.

On account of my official duties I shall [illegible] able to make much of a personal [illegible] for the November Election, [illegible] will do all I can [illegible] the Republican nominees by the Primary last [illegible], because they are all good men [illegible] I know and were fairly nominated by our party.

I believe it would be bad for the country should our party be defeated, especially so far as Congress and Legislature [illegible] concerned.

Very Sincerely,
Andrew Trovaton.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Oct. 25th, 1912.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Oct. 23rd, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Hans P. Dahl, of Naptuna Minn., who on October 2nd, 1911, made Homestead Application Serial No. 06694, for S.E.¼ S.W.¼, Sec. 13, E.½ N.W.¼ & S.W.¼ N.W.¼ Section 24 Township 154 N, Range 39 W. 5th Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 4th day of December 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Joseph Dahl, of Okle Minn. Alfred Nelson Selma Nelson, Jacob H. Dahl, of Naptuna Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Oct. 25.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. October 22nd, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Johan E. Udstrand of Torgerson Minn. who on Dec. 11th, 1905, made Homestead Entry No. 1251, Serial No. 04510, for W.½ N.W.¼ Section 28 Township 154 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 5th, day of December 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Fortunes In Faces.

There's often much truth in the saying "her face is her fortune," but it's never said where pimples, skin eruptions, blotches, or other blemishes disfigure it. Impure blood is back of them all, and shows the need of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They promote health and beauty. Try them. 25 cents at All Druggists.

HOUSE KEEPER WANTED.

I desire to employ the services of a house keeper on my farm in the town of Kratka. Good conveniences and steady employment. Salary $4.00 a week and board. Call on or address,

John Quirk,
Highlanding Minn.

JUDGE OSCAR HALLAM.

Primary Nominee for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Why She Called.

Maid—Did you call me, ma'am?

Mme. Parvenu—Yes, I just wanted to tell you that I didn't need you just at present.—Fliegende Blätter.

Sliding Bread.

When cutting bread turn the loaf upside down, and you will find that you can cut thinner and more even slices.

A Basis of Confidence.

"By Jove," said Wilkes after the vaudeville performance was over, "it must take a lot of nerve for that man to lean up against a board while his wife hurled all those knives at him."

"Nerve nothing!" retorted Bilkes. "He's perfectly aware she couldn't hit him if she tried."—Harper's.

Explained.

"I hear Miss Strong and her chucked poor Thompson," said [illegible].

"Sad, but true," said Wilkins.

"Why, I always thought Thompy was a brick," said Dabney.

"He is," said Wilkins. "That's why she threw him, I guess."—Judge.

NEW BANK.

FIRST
STATE BANK,
OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Gibeau, Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abraham Parquine, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You
Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Eleswhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.
Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's
$50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR
SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

RHEUMATISM A DISEASE OF THE BLOOD

The Treatment Which Is Most Successful Is Directed Toward Building Up and Purifying the Vital Fluid.

That rheumatism is a disease of the blood is shown by the fact that it is hereditary in certain families, and that there is a marked thinning of the blood immediately following its attack.

In the following brief statement are described symptoms which every patient will recognize and the means by which a cure was effected in this case is described with equal fidelity.

If you are suffering from any form of rheumatism with loss of flesh and strength, and thinning of the blood, the remedy that was so effective here deserves a thorough trial.

"About fifteen years ago," says Mrs. Rhoda Pettit, of Louisville, Neb., "after exposure to dampness and wet and being in a run-down condition from overwork, I began to suffer from inflammatory rheumatism. Both my father and mother were sufferers from the same disease. My right side was afflicted and had I no use of my right limb. The cords of the limb seemed to be drawn up. Often the pains would shift from one part of the body to another and, while they were worse in my right limb, they were very severe through the small of my back. There was a sensation as though I was being cut with a knife. My limbs and feet were swollen so that I could not put on my shoes. I suffered intense agony all of the time and when the attacks were severe I was confined to bed for weeks. My stomach was in bad shape. I was troubled with heartburn and gas. I lost weight and my strength was all gone.

"I took medicine from a doctor and tried several other remedies and liniments but nothing helped me until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had taken them only a short time before I could feel the new blood and after a fair trial I was able to walk. The pills made me a strong, healthy woman and I am entirely cured of the rheumatism. I know I would not be living today if I had not tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. The genuine are sold only in packages bearing the full trade-mark. Adv.

Tuberculosis Day Oct. 27.

Cordial approval and indorsement of Tuberculosis day which will be observed by the churches of the country on October 27, is expressed by President Taft in a letter to Homer Folks of New York, president of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. From present indications, Tuberculosis day will be observed by almost every religious denomination in the United States and not less than 50,000 sermons on tuberculosis will be preached on October 27, or in the weeks preceding or following that date.

For the Car.

"She worries every time he takes the car out."

"Yes, I don't blame her. They had to save a long time to get that car."

HARD FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

It's hard enough to keep house if in perfect health, but a woman who is weak, tired and suffering all of the time with an aching back has a heavy burden to carry. Any woman in this condition has good cause to suspect kidney trouble, especially if the kidney action seems disordered at all. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands of women suffering in this way. It is the best-recommended special kidney remedy.

A NORTH DAKOTA CASE.

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

Mrs. C. J. Tyler, Casdo, N. Dak., says: "For years I had kidney trouble. My feet and limbs swelled and I couldn't sleep more than two hours at a time. In the morning I was all worn out. My back was lame and I had sharp pains when I stooped. Doan's Kidney Pills have removed all this trouble."

Get Doan's at any Drug Store, 50c. a Box

Doan's Kidney Pills

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

Go South, Young Man

Don't Freeze To Death Trying To Make a Living

Go to Mississippi or Louisiana where you can be outdoors all the time. Where you can grow two to four crops a year and where the fertility of the soil is inexhaustible. Land is cheap now. Go and look at it before it is too late. The road to the south is the sure highway to fortune. Write today for illustrated booklets and full information about the money-making opportunities in these states.

J. C. CLAIR, Immigration Comm., I. C. R. R.
Room H600, Central Station, Chicago.

25 CTS PISO'S REMEDY 25 CTS

Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by Druggists.

FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

SERIAL STORY

EXCUSE ME!

Novelized from the Comedy of the Same Name

By Rupert Hughes

ILLUSTRATED From Photographs of the Play as Produced By Henry W. Savage

Copyright, 1911, by H. K. Fly Co.

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Ira Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Mallory decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding hazing. Marjorie is distracted. Ira Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Annie Gattle, a fellow passenger. Mallory vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Mallory reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Mallory finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train. Mallory again makes an unsuccessful hunt for a preacher. Dr. Temple poses as a physician. Mrs. Temple is induced by Mrs. Wellington to smoke a cigar. Sight of preacher on a station platform raises Mallory's hopes, but he takes another train. Missing hand baggage compels the couple to borrow from passengers. Jimmie gets a cinder in his eye and Mrs. Jimmie gives first aid. Coolness is then resumed. Still no clergyman. More borrowing. Dr. Temple puzzled by behavior of different couples. Marjorie's jealousy aroused by Mallory's baseball jargon. Marjorie suggests wrecking the train in hopes that accident will produce a preacher. Also tries to induce the conductor to hold the train so she can shop. Marjorie's dog is missing. She pulls the cord, stopping the train. Conductor restores dog and lovers quarrel.

CHAPTER XXVII.—Continued.

When they were close once more, Marjorie, as radiant as April after a storm, turned her sunshiny smile on Mallory:

"Isn't it glorious to have our little Snoozleums alive and well?"

But Mallory was feeling like a March day. He answered with a sleety chill: "You care more for the dog than you do for me."

"Why shouldn't I?" Marjorie answered with wide eyes, "Snoozleums never would have brought me on a wild goose elopement like this. Heaven knows he didn't want to come."

Mallory repeated the indictment: "You love a dog better than you love your husband."

"My what?" Marjorie laughed, then she spoke with lofty condescension: "Harry Mallory, if you're going to be jealous of that dog, I'll never marry you the longest day I live."

"So you'll let a dog come between us?" he demanded.

"I wouldn't give up Snoozleums for a hundred husbands," she retorted.

"I'm glad to know it in time," Mallory said. "You'd better give me back that wedding ring."

Marjorie's heart stopped at this, but her pride was in arms. She drew herself up, slid the ring from her finger, and held it out as if she scorned it: "With pleasure. Good afternoon, Mr. Mallory."

Mallory took it as if it were the merest trifle, bowed and murmured: "Good afternoon, Miss Newton."

He stalked out and she turned her back on him. A casual witness would have said that they were too indifferent to each other even to feel anger. As a matter of romantic fact, each was on fire with love, and aching madly with regret. Each longed for strength to whirl round with outflung arms of reconciliation, and neither could be so brave. And so they parted, each harking back fiercely for one word of recall from the other. But neither spoke, and Marjorie sat staring at nothing through raining eyes, while Mallory strode into the Men's Room as melancholy as Hamlet with Yorick's skull in his hands.

It was their first great quarrel, and they were convinced that the world might as well come to an end.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Woman-Hater's Relapse.

The observation room was as lonely as a deserted battlefield and Marjorie as doleful as a wounded soldier left behind, and perishing of thirst, when the conductor came back with Snoozleums in his arms.

He regarded with contemptuous awe the petty cause of so great an event as the stopping of the Trans-American. He expected to see Marjorie receive the returned prodigal with wild rapture, but she didn't even smile when he said:

"Here's your powder-puff."

She just took Snoozleums on her lap, and, looking up with wet eyes and a sad smile, murmured:

"Thank you very much. You're the nicest conductor I ever met. If you ever want another position, I'll see that my father gets you one."

It was like offering the kaiser a new job, but the conductor swallowed the insult and sought to repay it with irony.

"Thanks. And if you ever want to run this road for a couple of weeks, just let me know."

Marjorie nodded appreciatively and said: "I will. You're very kind."

And that completed the rout of that conductor. He retired in disorder, leaving Marjorie to fondle Snoozleums with a neglectful indifference that would have greatly flattered Mallory, if he could have seen through the partition that divided them.

But he was witnessing with the cynical superiority of an aged and disillusioned man the, to him, childish behavior of Ira Lathrop, an eleventh-hour Orlando.

For just as Mallory moped into the smoking-room at one door, Ira Lathrop swept in at the other, his face rubicund with embarrassment and ecstasy. He had donned an old frock coat with creases like ruts from long exile in his trunk. But he was feeling like an heir apparent; and he startled everybody by his jovial hail:

"Well, boys—er—gentlemen — the drinks are on me. Waiter, take the orders."

Little Jimmie woke with a start, rose hastily to his feet and sainted, saying: "Present! Who said take the orders?"

"I did," said Lathrop, "I'm giving a party. Waiter, take the orders."

"Sarsaparilla," said Dr. Temple, but they howled him down and ordered other things. The porter shook his head sadly: "Nothin' but sof' drinks in Utah, gemman."

A groan went up from the clubmembers, and Lathrop groaned loudest of all:

"Well, we've got to drink something. Take the orders. We'll all have sarsaparilla."

Little Jimmie Wellington came to the rescue.

"Don't do anything desperate, gentlemen," he said, with a look of divine philanthropy. "The bar's closed, but Little Jimmie Wellington is here with the life preserver." From his hip-pocket he produced a silver flask that looked to be big enough to carry a regiment through the Alps. It was greeted with a salvo, and Lathrop said to Jimmie: "I apologize for everything I have said—and thought—about you." He turned to the porter: "There ain't any law against giving this way, is there?"

The porter grinned: "Not if you-all bribe the exercise-inspector." And he held out a glass for the bribe, murmuring, "Don't git tired," as it was poured. He set it inside his sanctum and then bustled round with ice-filled glasses and a siphon.

When Little Jimmie offered of the flask to Dr. Temple, the clergyman put out his hand with a politely horrified: "No, thank you."

Lathrop frightened him with a sudden comment: "Look at that gesture! Doc, I'd almost swear you were a parson."

Mallory whirled on him with the eyes of a hawk about to pounce, and "The very idea!" was the best disclaimer Dr. Temple could manage, suddenly finding himself suspected. Ashton put in with, "The only way to disprove it, Doc, is to join us."

The poor old clergyman, too deeply involved in his deception to brave confession now, decided to do and dare all. He stammered, "Er—eh—certainly," and held out his hand for his share of the poison. Little Jimmie winked at the others and almost filled the glass. The innocent doctor bowed his thanks. When the porter reached him and prepared to fill the remainder of the glass from the siphon, the parson waved him aside with a misguided caution:

"No, thanks. I'll not mix them."

Mallory turned away with a sigh: "He takes his straight. He's no parson."

Then they forgot the doctor in curiosity as to Lathrop's sudden spasm of generosity—with Wellington's liquor. Wedgewood voiced the general curiosity when he said:

"What's the old woman-hater up to now?"

"Woman-hater?" laughed Ira. "It's the old story. I'm going to follow Mallory's example—marriage."

"I hope you succeed," said Mallory.

"Wherever did you pick up the bride?" said Wedgewood, mellowing with the long glass in his hand.

"Brides are easy," said Mallory, with surprising cynicism. "Where do you get the parson?"

"Hang the parson," Wedgewood repeated, "Who's the gel?"

"I'll bet I know who she is," Ashton interposed; "it's that nectarine of a damsel who got on at Green River."

"Not the same!" Lathrop roared. "I found my bride blooming here all the while. Girl I used to spark back in Brattleboro, Vt. I've been vowing for years that I'd live and die an old maid. I've kept my head out of the noose all this time—till I struck this train and met up with Anne. We got to talking over old times—waking up old sentiments. She got on my nerves. I got on hers. Finally I said, 'Aw, hell, let's get married. Save price of one stateroom to Chica anyway.' She says, 'Damned if I don't!'—or words to that effect."

Mallory broke in with feverish interest: "But you said you were going to get married on this train."

"Nothing easier. Here's how!" and he raised his glass, but Mallory hauled it down to demand: "How? that's what I want to know. How are you going to get married on this parsonless express. Have you got a little minister in your suitcase?"

Ira beamed with added pride as he explained:

"Well, you see, when I used to court Anne I had a rival—Charlie Selby his name was. I thought he cut me out, but he became a clergyman in Utah—Oh, Charlie! I telegraphed him that I was passing through Ogden, and would he come down to the train and marry me to a charming lady. He always wanted to marry Anna. I thought it would be a durned good joke to let him marry her—to me."

"D-did he accept?" Mallory asked, excitedly, "is he coming?"

"He is—he did—here's his telegram," said Ira. "He brings the license and the ring." He passed it over, and as Mallory read it a look of hope spread across his face. But Ira was saying: "We're going to have the wedding obsequies right here in this car. You're all invited. Will you come?"

There was a general yell of acceptance and Ashton began to sing, "There Was I Waiting at the Church". Then he led a sort of Indian war-dance round the next victim of the matrimonial stake. At the end of the hullaballoo all the men charged their glasses, and drained them with an uproarious "How!"

Poor Dr. Temple had taken luxurious delight in the success of his disguise and in the prospect of watching some other clergyman working while he rested. He joined the dance as gaily, if not as gracefully, as any of the rest, and in a final triumph of recklessness, he tossed off a bumper of straight whisky.

Instantly his "How!" changed to "Wow!" and then his throat clamped fast with a terrific spasm that flung the tears from his eyes. He bent and writhed in a silent paroxysm till he was pounded and shaken back to life and water poured down his throat to reopen a passage.

The others thought he had merely choked and made no comment other than sympathy. They could not have dreamed that the old "physician" was as ignorant of the taste as of the vigor of pure spirits.

After a riot of handshaking and good wishes, Ira was permitted to escape with his life. Mallory followed him to the vestibule, where he caught him by the sleeve with an anxious:

"Excuse me."

"Well, my boy—"

"Your minister—after you get through with him—may I use him?"

"May you—what? Why do you want a minister?"

"To get married."

"Again? Good Lord, are you a Mormon?"

"Me a Mormon!"

"Then what do you want with an extra wife? It's against the law—even in Utah."

"You don't understand."

"My boy, one of us is disgracefully drunk."

"Well, I'm not," said Mallory, and then after a fierce inner debate, he decided to take Lathrop into his confidence. The words came hard after so long a duplicity, but at last they were out:

"Mr. Lathrop, I'm not really married to my wife."

"You young scoundrel!"

But his fury changed to pity when he heard the history of Mallory's ill-fated efforts, and he promised not only to lend Mallory his minister at second-hand, but also to keep the whole affair a secret, for Mallory explained his intention of having his own ceremony in the baggage-car, or somewhere out of sight of the other passengers.

Mallory's face was now aglow as the cold embers of hope leaped into sudden blaze. He wrung Lathrop's hand, saying: "Lord love you, you've saved my life—wife—both."

Then he turned and ran to Marjorie with the good news. He had quite forgotten their epoch-making separation. And she was so glad to see him smiling at her again that she forgot it, too. He came tearing into the observation room and took her by the shoulders, whispering: "Oh, Marjorie, Marjorie, I've got him! I've got him!"

"No, I've got him," she said, swinging Snoozleums into view.

Mallory swung him back out of the way: "I don't mean a poodle, I mean a parson. I've got a parson."

"No! I can't believe it! Where is he?" She began to dance with delight, but she stopped when he explained:

"Well, I haven't got him yet, but I'm going to get one."

"What—again?" she groaned, weary of this old bunco game of hope.

"It's a real live one this time," Mallory insisted. "Mr. Lathrop has ordered a minister and he's going to lend him to me as soon as he's through with him, and we'll be married on this train."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Achievements in Art.

Brian G. Hughes, whose practical jokes so often delight, said at a recent dinner:

"I don't mind practical jokes on human beings, but when it comes to animals I draw the line.

"Two artists were once bragging to each other.

"'I painted up a lump of pig iron to look like cork,' said the first artist, 'and, by jove! when I threw it into the East river it floated.'

"Now," said Mr. Hughes, "there was no harm in that. But listen to the second artist. He said, with a cruel, unfeeling laugh:

"'I painted a lump of pig iron once to look like a roast of beef, and my dog ate three-quarters of it before he discovered his mistake.'"—Los Angeles Times.

Good Roads Hint.

"Of course we are opposed to machine methods in elections." "Well," replied Farmer Corntossel, "I must admit that I'd like to see the steam roller took out o' politics an' put back where it belongs in the road-making business."

DR. CALDWELL'S GUIDE TO GOOD HEALTH

The natural tendency of people in this busy age to demand of the digestive organs more than nature intended they should perform, frequently results in throwing the entire digestive system into disorder. When the stomach fails to freely digest and distribute that which is eaten, the bowels become clogged with a mass of waste and refuse which ferments and generates poisonous gases that are gradually forced into the blood, causing distress and often serious illness.

Dr. W. B. Caldwell says that if the bowels are kept regular there will be much less sickness, and prescribes a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that is most effective in relieving any congestion of matter in the bowels. This compound can be bought in any drug store under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and costs only 50 cents a bottle. It is mild in its action, pleasant to the taste and positive in effect, a dose at night bringing relief next morning, naturally and without griping or other discomfort. A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in the house will save many times its cost in doctor bills. Your name and address on a postal to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 West St., Monticello, Ill., will bring a free trial bottle by return mail. Adv.

Height of Assurance.

A man was charged with stealing a horse, and after a long trial the jury acquitted him. Later in the day the men came back and asked the judge for a warrant against the lawyer who had successfully defended him.

"What's the charge?" inquired the judge.

"Why, your honor," replied the man, "you see, I didn't have the money to pay him his fee, so he took the horse I stole."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Jackson's Relief.

Wilson (who has met his friend whom he hasn't seen for some time)—Let me see, you knew poor old Jackson, didn't you?

Johnson—Yes, I knew him well.

Wilson—Then you will be pleased to hear he is out of his misery at last.

Johnson—You don't say so. Poor old fellow; but I always thought he would pop off suddenly. When did he die?

Wilson—Oh, he's not dead; it's his wife.

HANDS ITCHED AND BURNED

Abbotsford, Wis.—"My son had eczema on his hands for about one year. The eczema started with a rash. His hands were sore so he could not close them, and when he wet his hands they hurt him so he could hardly wash. His hands itched and burned just terrible and if he would scratch them, they would break out into sores. He could not get any rest or sleep, and his hands looked quite bad.

"We had medicine and salve and it kept getting worse all the time. I got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after washing his hands with the Cuticura Soap and putting some of the Cuticura Ointment on two times a day and tying cloths on them for about six months they got well and have not broken out since. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured him entirely." (Signed) Mrs. Lawrence Kiehl, Feb. 13, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

Classy List of Pies.

The gentleman with a concave front and a large watch chain alighted from the train at a junction in a western state, and rapidly made his way to the dining-room of the only hotel in the place.

"What kind of pies have you here?" he asked eagerly of the kittenish old lady who stood at his elbow.

"All four kinds," she replied, with an air of disdain.

"What are they?"

"Open-faced, cross-bar, kivered up, and the kind mother used to make," was the catalogue which she gave.—Popular Magazine.

Suspicion continues to snoop around until he finds what he is looking for.

CURES ITCHING SKIN DISEASES. Cole's Carbolisalve stops itching and makes the skin smooth. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

A high priced box at the opera seems less expensive to some people than the cheapest church pew.

Stiff Joints Sprains, Bruises

are relieved at once by an application of Sloan's Liniment. Don't rub, just lay on lightly.

"Sloan's Liniment has done more good than anything I have ever tried for stiff joints. I got my hand hurt so badly that I had to stop work right in the busiest time of the year. I thought at first that I would have to have my hand taken off, but I got a bottle of Sloan's Liniment and cured my hand."
WILTON WHEELER, Morris, Ala.

Good for Broken Sinews

G. G. JONES, Baldwin, L. I., writes: "I used Sloan's Liniment for broken sinews above the knee cap caused by a fall and to my great satisfaction was able to resume work in less than three weeks after the accident."

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

Fine for Sprain

MR. HENRY A. VOEHL, 84 Somerset St., Plainfield, N. J., writes: "A friend sprained his ankle so badly that it went black. He laughed when I told him that I would have him out in a week. I applied Sloan's Liniment and in four days he was working and said Sloan's was a right good Liniment."

Price 25c., 50c., and $1.00

Sloan's Book on horses, cattle, sheep and poultry sent free.

Address Dr. Earl S. Sloan

Boston, Mass., U.S.A.

CANADA'S OFFERING TO THE SETTLER

THE AMERICAN RUSH TO WESTERN CANADA IS INCREASING

Free Homesteads In the new Districts of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta there are thousands of Free Homesteads left, which to the man making entry in 3 years time will be worth from $20 to $25 per acre. These lands are well adapted to grain growing and cattle raising.

EXCELLENT RAILWAY FACILITIES

In many cases the railways in Canada have been built in advance of settlement, and in a short time there will not be a settler who need be more than ten or twelve miles from a line of railway. Railway Rates are regulated by Government Commission.

Social Conditions

The American Settler is at home in Western Canada. He is not a stranger in a strange land, having nearly a million of his own people already settled there. If you desire to know why the condition of the Canadian Settler is prosperous write and send for literature, rates, etc., to

R. A. GARRETT,
315 Jackson Street,
St. Paul, Minn.

Canadian Government Agents, or address Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada.

Constipation Vanishes Forever

Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable — act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

TYPEWRITERS

All makes from $15 up. Over 1000 to select from, all guaranteed. Machines rented 3 months for $5. Write for bargain list No. 4. AMERICAN WRITING MACHINE CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

KODAKS AND FINISHING

Any size 6 exp. film developed 10 cents. 10 or 12 exp. or film, pack 20 cents. KREGEL PHOTO PARLORS, 620 Hennepin Ave., Minn., 46 E. 7th St., St. Paul

Pettit's Eye Salve RELIEVES TIRED EYES

Readers of this paper desiring to buy anything advertised in its columns should insist upon having what they ask for, refusing all substitutes or imitations of Minneapolis. The only school of the kind that pays its men for shop work. Next class Nov. 5.

Y.M.C.A. AUTOMOBILE SCHOOL

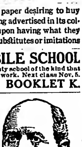
WRITE FOR BOOKLET K.

W.L.DOUGLAS SHOES

$3.00 $3.50 $4.00 $4.50 AND $5.00

FOR MEN AND WOMEN

Boys wear W. L. Douglas $2.00, $2.50 & $3.00 School Shoes, because one pair will positively outwear two pairs of ordinary shoes, same as the men's shoes.



W.L.Douglas makes and sells more $3.00, $3.50 & $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS.

The workmanship which has made W. L. Douglas shoes famous the world over is maintained in every pair.

Ask your dealer to show you W. L. Douglas latest fashions for fall and winter wear, notice the short vamps which make the foot look smaller, points in a shoe particularly desired by young men. Also the conservative styles which have made W. L. Douglas shoes a household word everywhere.

If you could visit W. L. Douglas large factories at Brockton, Mass., and see for yourself how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they are warranted to fit better, look better, hold their shape and wear longer than any other make for the price.

Fast Color Eyelets.

CAUTION.—To protect you against inferior shoes, W. L. Douglas stamps his name on the bottom. Look for the stamp. Beware of substitutes. W. L. Douglas shoes are sold in 78 own stores and shoe dealers everywhere. No matter where you live, they are within your reach. If your dealer cannot supply you, write direct to factory for catalog showing how to order by mail. Shoes sent everywhere, delivery charges prepaid. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

SUCCESS FOLLOWS JUDICIOUS FARMING

IN WESTERN CANADA IT IS CERTAIN.

The story of the Big Farmer in Western Canada, and the immense profits he has made in the growing of grain, has been told and retold. He has been found in all parts of the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. His splendid farm buildings have been pictured, his traction outfits described and his princely surroundings, resultant of his success in growing grain, have been portrayed by letter, press and camera. It certainly is not to his discredit that by successfully applying common sense and up-to-date methods to the conditions that climate, a good soil, and splendid market have placed at hand, that he has made the best use of them. He is not too proud to admit that he came to the country a very few years ago handicapped as to money, leaving behind him unpaid mortgages in his old home land (which are now wiped out), and he is still today the same good-hearted fellow he was in the days that he had to work for a neighbor, while the neighbor broke the land on his homestead, which went to make up the settlement duties.

Then, there, too, is the farmer and the farmer's son, already wealthy, who has bought large holdings in Western Canada, in either Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, who has made forty to one hundred per cent. on his investment, whose big grain crops and whose immense cattle herds are helping to improve the country. Health and strength, energy and push, and bull dog grit are as essential in Western Canada as in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, or any of the states from which so many of these people come, and then, when you have added to that a fair amount of means, with which to make a start, the land which is only waiting for the skill of the husbandman will quickly respond.

But there is the smaller farmer, the man who has not made sufficient in four or five years, that he might comfortably retire if he felt like it. There are many of them in all the three Provinces. It is not the less to his credit that he has earned his homestead by the three years residence, that he is free from debt, and has a reasonable bank account. He, too, came to the country handicapped by debts, and with very little means. He is contented, has a good home, land free of encumbrance, some stock, and with good prospects. One of these writes: "I formerly lived near Dayton, Ohio, on a rented farm, had as good a chance as the average renter, but after ten years of hard work, satisfied myself that if I ever expected to secure a home, I would have to undertake something else. Hearing of Western Canada, I investigated, and seven years ago last Spring settled in a homestead and purchased (on time) an adjoining half section, arriving with a carload of household effects and farm implements, including four horses and three cows, and $1,800 in money—my ten years' work in Ohio.

"The first year our crops gave us feed, the second year 100 acres of wheat gave us $1,800; no failure of crop since starting here. I have now 22 head of horses, 15 head of cattle, and 35 hogs. We own 1,120 acres of land, and have same all under cultivation. Was offered at one time $35.00 per acre for a half section where we live, and all the other land could be sold today on present market at $30.00 per acre. Should we care to dispose of our holdings, could pay all debts and have over $30,000 to the good, but the question is where could we go to invest our money and get as good returns as here?

"We have equally as good, if not better prospects for crops this year, as we had three years ago, when our wheat reached from 30 to 48 bushels per acre. I never believed such crops could be raised until I saw them myself. I had 15 acres that year that made 50 bushels to the acre. Our harvest will be ready by the 12th. We have this season in crop 400 acres of wheat, 125 of oats, 90 of flax, and run three binders, with four men to do the stooking.

"We certainly like this country, and the winters, although the winters are cold at times, but we do not suffer as one would think. What we have accomplished here can be duplicated in almost any of the new districts. If anyone doubts anything I have said in this letter, tell them to come here, and I can prove every word I have written."

The name of the writer can be had from the Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, who can give the names of hundreds of others equally successful. Adv.

Steamboat Memories.

London Opinion, commenting on the recent celebration of the centenary of the steamboat, remarks that it is interesting to note that the British admiralty of that period rejected the invention with the declaration that "a paddle wheel steamboat could be of no use in navigation," and that a Dr. Lardner, a pundit of that day who proved that "no steam vessel could ever cross the Atlantic, lived long enough to bolt to America in a steamer along with another man's wife!"

Easy Road in Music.

"My boy Louis is indolent," said the musician, "but I must say he is smart."

"Is he going to follow in your footsteps?"

"No. I learned to play the clarinet and I've got to march at least eight miles every time there is a parade. Louis is learning the harp, so they will have to let him sit down."

JACK AND CARRIE

The Latter's Idea Brought Business to the Former and Happiness to Both

By GILBERT O. BURLINGAME.

Jack was an advertising solicitor who had not yet made good, and Carrie a stenographer who was tired of pounding out those "Yours of the 3rd inst. received and contents duly noted" kind of letters. Both wanted a home and had decided that together they could make a pretty good imitation of the real thing, but—

That but covered a whole lot of space.

Jack still had to make good, which translated means—prove to the firm for which he tramped the streets each day that he earned more than the beggarly fifteen per which did not fill his wants, although in dollar bills it did his pay envelope.

The time was night, probably about ten, as it usually took Jack and Carrie that long to dispose of news items relative to their friends, and the very personal questions which always arise between lovers, and then Carrie opened fire with this question:

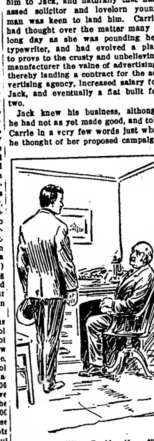
"Opened up on anything yet?"

Jack shook his head.

"I have an idea," Carrie then declared, and without going into details of the questions she forced Jack to ask, it was as follows:

There was a certain manufacturer of a household necessity who utterly refused to advertise, declaring that he had no faith in the efficacy of it, and against Jack's repeated efforts he had turned a deaf ear. The advertising agency had exhausted all their good men on him before consigning him to Jack, and naturally that harassed solicitor and lovelorn young man was keen to land him. Carrie had thought over the matter many a long day as she was pounding her typewriter, and had evolved a plan to prove to the crusty and unbelieving manufacturer the value of advertising, thereby landing a contract for the advertising agency, increased salary for Jack, and eventually a flat built for two.

Jack knew his business, although he had not as yet made good, and told Carrie in a very few words just what he thought of her proposed campaign.



"Hello! What Do You Know?"

The next day it was opened, not with a band or any other noisy demonstration, but effectively. Within the next week the crusty manufacturer began to sit up straighter in his swivel chair, for his postage bill was visibly increased, and the mail man carried two bags and threatened to give over delivering the mail at all. The fifty or more dealers in his household commodity began to rub their eyes and send in doubled orders, while a number of advertising agencies began sending out their star men to renew the attack upon him. The latter only stared, goggled and refused to see them.

Up in the dingy little office where Carrie pounded out her usual letters, a feeling of contentment prevailed to such an extent that the boss forgot to "knock," and the office boy actually washed his face. Jack walked on air, and could have been found studying ads setting forth the delights of three and four room flats. At the end of ten days he called upon the crusty manufacturer, sending in his card with this line written across the bottom:

"I can show you the ad which is proving its own worth."

"Show him in," thundered the great man, for that was just what he was trying to find out.

The visitor gave a jaunty slant to his hat, recalled all Carrie's instructions, and made his way into the hitherto closed office, for he had never before penetrated beyond the office boy barrier in his visits.

"Hello! Well, what do you know?" was the way the manufacturer greeted him, but Jack knew he had something to tell that the other wanted, so he waited until he had taken a chair, pushed back his hat, and then he responded curtly:

"What you are trying to find out. Business has been rushing you lately, hasn't it?"

The crusty manufacturer turned with a glare upon his caller, asking:

"What business is that of yours?"

Jack rose with dignity, saying slowly and with emphasis:

"I did not come here to be yelled at, but to give some important information."

The manufacturer grunted. "If any of you advertising men give anything away, I'm here to get it," but he waved Jack back to his chair. Having thus asserted his independence, the visitor took out his pocket book and extracted a clipping which he laid before the magnate. The latter adjusted his glasses and read it.

It was an ad. containing a simple statement of the merits of the household necessity, with the crusty manufacturer's name and address below; and the clipping was cut out so as to give the name of the paper and date of its appearance. After the manufacturer had studied it carefully he raised his eyebrows and asked:

"Well, what's the answer?"

"This ad. appeared once. You received enough mail to make you think a cyclone had struck you. Now if that one ad. produced results like that, how about a regular campaign?"

The crusty manufacturer fixed Jack with a pair of shrewd old eyes. After he had looked him through and through, he asked:

"If I sign up with your agency, will you put me next?"

"To what?" Jack asked, although he quite understood what was meant.

"The method. I'm not such a fool as to believe an ordinary ad. like that would have legitimately brought out the responses it did."

"Yes, I will," Jack returned heartily, producing a contract.

"Another thing, I'll sign up for a rattling good campaign if you'll take care of my account," the magnate continued, as he shook down his fountain pen.

"Write that into the contract, and then you will be sure," Jack modestly suggested, and with a twinkle in his eyes the other did so, and as he saw the amount to be expended Jack knew he had made good, or Carrie had, to give that clever young woman her due.

"Now, how'd you do it?" the manufacturer insisted.

"Easy," was the reply. "I put in the ad on my own hook, and paid for it out of my own resources," and he did not resent the grin of his hearer at the words. "A certain young lady and I are to be married pretty soon. At her suggestion, we both wrote to all of our friends, asking them as a wedding gift to us to carry on an endless chain letter of inquiry about your product."

The manufacturer sat gasping in astonishment.

"She and I wrote to twenty of our friends. That made forty to begin with. Each of the forty wrote to ten, asking each of the ten to write to ten more, and—"

"Wait," the magnate shouted; "if you explain any more I'll countermand that contract, for as far as I can estimate, I'll be getting inquiries until I pass over where none can reach me."

Jack and Carrie now occupy that flat.

(Copyright, 1912, by W. G. Chapman.)

GIRLS AS HUSBAND HUNTERS

Experience Proves They Don't Want Much Help in Choosing a Life Partner.

To the many fads of vocational training in the public schools a new one was proposed at the recent Teachers' institute in Cincinnati by Doctor Holmes, a psychologist of the University of Pennsylvania. He says, "All teachers should teach their girl pupils how to distinguish a real man from an imitation one. When a girl marries she is married to the family of the man for four or five generations back. If his grandparents were deficient she will have to expect trouble with her children."

There is a certain sex partiality in the inference that the proposed instruction be given only girl pupils, remarks the New York World. Surely, on equal grounds, boys should be taught to know a real girl from an imitation one. A boy may not have to marry a girl's family five generations back, but he certainly has to accept the old folks, and if he has been careless he will have to expect trouble with his mother-in-law.

But waiving the issue of partiality and considering only the vocation of the girl as husband chooser, very little reflection will bring out the well nigh hopeless absurdity of the proposed education. Nearly three thousand years of experience recorded in tales and histories proves that the more a girl is taught and educated to marry a particular man the more she doesn't do it. And who shall decide between what is a real man and what the imitation? Can any school teacher do it better than the school girl of marriageable age?

No Opening.

A man had been absent from home for some time, and during his absence had raised a luxuriant beard and mustache. Shortly after his return he paid a visit to his sister, who had a little daughter of whom he was especially fond.

The little girl made no effort to embrace him or offer him a kiss, but hung back, reluctantly.

"Why, Eleanor," said the mother, "why don't you give Uncle Ed a kiss?"

"Well, mother," returned the child, with the most perfect simplicity, "I don't see any place."—Harper's Bazar.

His Retort.

"Look at the bum husbands we women have to stand for. Must women always be oppressed by man?"

"Men juries have decreed that you can kill your husbands with immunity if you don't like 'em. What more do you women want?"

HIS MIND UP IN THE CLOUDS

Professor Imagined Appeal Was From Fido, and the Situation Became Embarrassing.

A great lover of animals, Professor Dryasdust was much given to having his pet dog sitting beside him at meal times eating tidbits from his own little plate.

The other evening he was at a dinner party, and his partner was a very great lady, who was proud of her title.

But the professor paid absolutely no attention to her. His mind had switched off on to some abstruse point and he was lost to the world over the problem.

The duchess did not approve of this, and presently, to attract his attention, she pulled him gently by the sleeve.

Then the professor woke up. Grabbing a half-picked chicken bone from his plate, he thrust it under her startled nose.

"Don't bother just now, Fido!" he said curtly. "Here, take this end go and eat it on the mat, like a good doggie!"

JUDGE CURED, HEART TROUBLE.

I took about 6 boxes of Dodds Kidney Pills for Heart Trouble from which I had suffered for 5 years. I had dizzy spells, my eyes puffed, my breath was short and I had chills and backache. I took the pills about a year ago and have had no return of the palpitations. Am now 63 years old, able to do lots of manual labor, am well and hearty and weigh about 200 pounds. I feel very grateful that I found Dodds Kidney Pills and you may publish this letter if you wish. I am serving my third term as Probate Judge of Gray Co. Yours truly,

Judge Miller.

PHILIP MILLER, Cimarron, Kan.

Correspond with Judge Miller about this wonderful remedy.

Dodds Kidney Pills, 50c. per box at your dealer or Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Write for Household Hints, also music of National Anthem (English and German words) and recipes for dainty dishes. All 3 sent free. Adv.

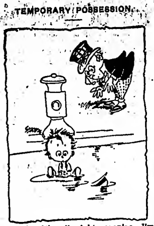
Bad Luck.

"They oughtn't to call that railroad special the Comet."

"Why not?"

"Because comets nearly always have their trains telescoped."

TEMPORARY POSSESSION.



Willie—It's all right, gren'pa, I'm just keeping this mud puddle for the feller wot owns it.

Rose Matilda's Sprinter.

"Ah's got a sprinter f'm det ol' winder sill in mah finge' Mis' Greene," announced Rose Matilda, who had been scrubbing window sills, exhibiting the injured member. "Is yo' got a pin or some sech sharp t'ing yo' cayn git it out wi'f? Ah don' jes' wen' to leave it in, 'ca'se dem sprinters ain' to be trifle wif. Oh, dem's de t'ing'll do de business," as Mrs. Greene attacked the splinter with a pair of tweezers and triumphantly drew it out. "T'enk yo' Mis Greene. Dem teesers is de bes' t'ing to exkrack sprinters wi'f."

At a Distance.

"She certainly tries to obey her mother's injunction not to let the young men get too near."

"Why, I saw a young man with his arm around her last night."

"I know, but she had a faraway look in her eyes."

YOU CAN CURE CATARRH

By using Cole's Carbolisalve. It is a most effective remedy. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

Out of Fashion.

"I see where fluffy skirts saved a girl from drowning in the Chicago river recently. The old styles were the best styles after all."

"Huh, she probably tried to drown herself because she had to wear the fluffies."

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle. Adv.

And it might be well to take a course in physical training before you start out to show a men the error of his ways.

WOMAN SICK TWELVE YEARS

Wants Other Women to Know How She Was Finally Restored to Health.

Louisiana, Mo.:—"I think a woman naturally dislikes to make her troubles known to the public, but complete restoration to health means so much to me that I cannot keep from telling mine for the sake of other suffering women.

"I had been sick about twelve years, and had eleven doctors. I had dragging down pains, pains at monthly periods, bilious spells, and was getting worse all the time. I would hardly get over one spell when I would be sick again. No tongue can tell what I suffered from cramps, and at times I could hardly walk. The doctors said I might die at one of those times, but I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got better right away. Your valuable medicine is worth more than mountains of gold to suffering women."—Mrs. BERTHA MUFF, 503 N. 4th Street, Louisiana, Mo.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A Good School

LARGE ATTENDANCE, LOWEST RATES

Thorough Work. Practical Courses. Accredited. Courses: Preparatory, Commercial, Shorthand, Stenotypy, Teachers, High School, Scientific, Music, Penmanship, Agriculture, Steam and Gas Engineering. Regular tuition, $1.00 per week; board, $1.95. Free Tuition to one student from each postoffice. Write for catalog. Address

SOUTHERN MINNESOTA NORMAL COLLEGE, BOX 830, AUSTIN, MINNESOTA

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Prevents hair falling. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 43-1912.

The popularity of "Bull" Durham is not confined to any one section. It is smoked everywhere—and, whether smoked in a pipe or "rolled" into a cigarette, it is the favorite everywhere.

Not a rich man's tobacco—not a poor man's tobacco. It is the tobacco for every man who wants a pure, mild, sweet smoke—regardless of price or package.

GENUINE

"BULL" DURHAM

SMOKING TOBACCO

Forty "rollings" in each 5-cent muslin sack

This famous old tobacco is packed in a plain, homely, muslin sack that has become familiar to smokers the world over. It is not handsome or showy, but its cheapness permits just that much more goodness to go into the tobacco itself.

The Purest Form of Tobacco

"Bull" Durham is simply the granulated leaves of bright golden Virginia and North Carolina tobacco. The purest form of tobacco human skill can produce.

Try a sack of this grand old tobacco today. See why more men smoke "Bull" Durham than all other high-grade brands combined. See why for three generations men have gone on smoking this glorious tobacco year after year, and will not be satisfied with anything else.

Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co.

Sold by practically every tobacco dealer in the U. S.

A book of "papers" free with each 5c. muslin sack.

The Corrector of Destinies

Being Tales of Randolph Mason as Related by
His Private Secretary, Courtland Parks

A St. Valentine's Adventure

By Melville Davisson Post

Copyright by Edward J. Clode

On the night of the 14th of February, I came to New York from Philadelphia. The fast train from the south was late and did not arrive until nine o'clock. It was very cold, the windows of the cars were incrusted with ice, there were miniature snow drifts across the vestibules, and the steam pipes smoked. I was exceedingly hungry. The dining-car had been cut off at Philadelphia and my hope of dinner was beyond me, in New York. When the boat which carried us across from Jersey City to the Twenty-third street ferry touched the dock, I jumped off and ran into the checking room to give directions about the transfer of my luggage. I was delayed by the oriental leisure of the man in charge. When I got out, finally, into the street not a cab was to be seen. The wind was driving past every moment with increasing fury; the frozen snow flakes cut one's face. I started to cross the street to a waiting street car. I had hardly stepped out from the ferry house when a hansom pulled up and I hailed it.

As I put my foot on the cab step, I heard behind me a little smothered cry of disappointment. I took my foot down from the step and turned around. A little way behind me, under the eaves of the building, stood a woman wearing a long fur coat to her feet, and carrying in her hand a traveling bag. Her face above the fur collar of her coat was wrapped in a black veil. I went at once to her.

"Madam," I said, "did you call this cab?"

"No," she replied, in a voice low, musical, but greatly troubled: "I did not call it, but I hoped to get it."

Then she added with a flutter in her voice:

"I am alone. I cannot possibly walk in this storm, and I must get quickly to the Dresden."

"Madam," I said, "this hansom is at your service; pray take it."

"But you?" she answered.

"I shall get up-town some way," I said; "the elevated station is only a few blocks away."

I helped her into the hansom, then another tremendous gust came roaring down by the ferry house. I banged the doors and ducked my head to escape the fierce onslaught of the wind. When the gust passed I looked up to find the cab standing beside me. A little head threw open the hansom door, the soft, musical voice said:

"I cannot leave you here in this terrible storm; get in."

I got in, howled to the driver to get over town to the Dresden and sat down by the unknown. As the hansom wheeled into the street, the woman leaned over me and looked back. I looked over her shoulder. Another boat had arrived and the passengers were coming out. I saw in the heavy snow, a man running toward us, waving a hand; then we were out of sight bowling over the Belgian blocks.

The woman tucked the fur coat around her feet, pulled the long sleeves over her hands and nestled up against her corner of the hansom.

"Pardon me," she said, "I thought I had stupidly left my bag on the curb, but here it is at my feet."

I smiled at the pretty lie.

"Madam," I said, "I am sure it is at your feet. There must be some trace of feeling even in alligator leather."

I think she was undecided whether to chill me with irony or laugh. The laugh prevailed, then came the irony.

"How stupid of me," she said; "perhaps you do not wish to go to the Dresden. We are approaching the elevated station, I notice."

Her tone was in that admirable middle pitch which reveals nothing.

I wished to answer that the Dresden seemed just then to be a fairy Mecca, and that if I were put out, I should probably trot after the cab like a faithful puppy; but were there not faint breaths of frost in the little voice? I might be put out after all, and I wished greatly to remain. At any rate, I must take no risks until the elevated station was behind us, so I laid before her the details of my discomfort.

"I shall be glad of the Dresden," I said. "I am cold, I am starving. My fingers are quite numb, and I could gladly eat the straps on the hansom."

She laughed.

"Have you gone so long, then, without dinner?"

"Long?" I echoed. "Why, madam, it has been eight mortal hours! Men have become cannibals in less time than that."

We were well past the elevated station now.

She shrugged her dainty shoulders.

"Observe," she said, "how I shudder."

We were getting on famously.

"And with reason," I answered. "Was not the taste of the bear for the bee-tree known even to the ancients?"

"One of the gospels, I think," she said, "tells us how bad such food is for the digestion."

Then, fearing that she had been led too far into pleasantry, she turned it, after the manner of a woman.

"Let us hope," she added, "that you will find something more substantial than the Baptist's meager fare at the Dresden. I would suggest a loin of beef, washed down with Burgundy, a dish of salad, a pot of coffee."

Then her voice slipped up into that dangerous, indeterminate note.

"We are crossing Broadway," she said; "perhaps you would get down here?"

"What!" I cried; "and leave the loin of beef, the Burgundy, the dish of salad? The suggestion is inhuman."

"Very well," she said, and there was no mistaking the indifference in the tone. In fact, it was rather too indifferent. I fancied it masking some aroused emotion.

We bowled along and turned into the Dresden. The porter helped us down from the hansom and into the hotel. Here I saw my companion clearly for the first time—and yet that statement is wholly inaccurate. I saw clearly only a splendid sealskin coat with a sable collar, a fashionable hat, two well-gloved hands and a thick, impenetrable veil. This chance acquaintanceship was about to end. I could not follow her, spying, to the clerk's desk, and yet I must act within the next thirty seconds before the house porter reached the bag if I wished even to go a step further. He was passing the elevator now. I set my feet into the Rubicon.

"Madam," I said, "this is St. Valentine's night, sacred to the unknown. Its privileges have been respected since Claudius. I beg you to share my loin of beef."

The woman started perceptibly, glanced up and down the corridor and then hurried to the elevator. For a moment I was at a loss to account for this instant flight. Then I observed that a second hansom had arrived and a man was coming in with the porter through the door. The obsequious flunkey was in the midst of a reply.

"Just arrived, sir, in the first hansom, sir."

I glanced at the elevator, the door clicked; the escape was by a hair's thickness. I turned to follow the man. He was advancing to the clerk's desk, his back toward me. I observed that he was rather tall and wore a dark ulster with a strap across the back. The incident required no reflection. Here was the hurrying stranger of the ferry-shed, certainly one of several kinds of dragons to be found at the heels of escaping beauties. I should presently see to which type of dangerous beast he belonged. I strolled over to the big leather settle opposite the clerk's desk, planted myself in it and lighted a cigarette. The new-comer wrote his name in the register, took off his coat, and turned. I saw then that he was not an irate father, obviously. He was either the brother, or alas, the husband of this charming unknown. He was a tall young man, evidently from the south or west. His eyes were gray, he wore gold-rimmed spectacles, his nose was aquiline, his mouth and chin firm and well cut. He was evidently a person of determination and courage.

"Aha!" I said behind my cigarette; "there is here certainly snuffings of battle, but not afar off. However, before the shouting of the captains begin to arise, it might simplify matters if I knew whether the Nemesis is brother or husband."

I should arrive at the solution from his bearing; Monsieur Le Coque or Dupin would read it, instantly, like a weather report. I looked up at the man's face. He was smiling! Then the beast was not an avenging husband. Such a one does not smile when he pursues the faithless. I had all the reeking dramas as authorities for that. He might chuckle in his throat, or draw his lips into a sinister, foreboding curl; but he did not fall into facial sunshine. This man was grinning like a Cheshire cat; and, by the Lord Harry, he was off to the bar below for grog! He must be the brother, then—and yet, no. He was too big-limbed for a brother, the types of the two were distant as the poles—nor would a brother be so bedecked with grins. He would have nothing to conceal, he would buzz like a hornet around the truant, stow her safely under his wing and then take his Scotch with his eye on her. This dragon was evidently less the brother than the husband; but was he not, indeed, the husband? Did Pinero draw always faithfully from life? A greater than he had written of those who smile and smile.

Look at it now; the first domestic wrenchings were old enough to be calloused to the fingers, the home was shattered beyond all hope of patching, the woman had gone out over bridges that straightway fell in behind her; the man followed like an Indian—not to win her back to his hearth, but for some object more sinister. He had found her at the Twenty-third street ferry and lost her, but here she was, run fast into a pocket, and so he smiled and took a glass of grog. There was time a-plenty for the blow. I thought the husband theory had rather the better of the argument.

Meanwhile, I was ravenously hungry. I threw away the cigarette, went into the dining-room and ordered a somewhat elaborate dinner. Events were marching over me, the good St. Valentine slept. I must dine alone, while the unhappy truant trembled and went hungry, and, while, perhaps, tragedy knotted the tie strings of her mask.

I was leaning over a cup of bouillon when a low, merry voice said:

"You are not very thoughtful of a guest."

I sprang up to confront a dainty figure in a gray traveling dress, two merry dark eyes, a trace of smiling scarlet above a defiant chin, and a mass of brown hair wound in loose coils.

"I beg you, madam," I said, "to lay this discourtesy to my meager knowledge of fairies. I thought you vanished."

"What!" she quoted, "and lose the loin of beef, the Burgundy, the salad?"

My tone was reproduced adorably. Then she sat down opposite me at the table, as bewitching a madcap as ever danced out of the kingdom of Queen Mab.

So, then, I had been mistaken. She had not seen the Nemesis after all. Or better, perhaps, the person who had arrived was not he, or there was no Nemesis except in my disordered fancy. I looked over the room for the man. If he were spying, he would be in some corner of the cafe with his eye on us, and so he was. I found him presently, a little behind a palm in a nook by the door, and such eyes! They burned like dull green lamps.

I could not eat much for all my boastings of hunger—no one could under those ugly eyes. They seemed now to glitter when the leaves of the palm threw little shadows on spectacle glass. That glass added a certain terror, the eyes became like one moving behind a screen, and there was something sinister in the smiles and laughter of this charming woman under an espionage she did not dream of. I held my place as carelessly as I could, under this menace like a cocked pistol. I fished a little for a clue.

"Madam," I said, tipping a little of my wine into the plate, "the king, your father, doubtless sends an invisible escort with you. I pour out a libation to it."

The man took her in his arms.

She put aside the bait.

"I am an orphan," she said, "not even a brother on the throne."

That lopped off one limb of the problem, if it were the truth.

"But, madam," I began.

She held up her ungloved hand, as bare of rings as my own good nose. That dismissed the husband—if the ring were not in her pocket.

"I beg your pardon," I continued. "How could one hope that you had escaped bondage for so long? The men of your land must resemble that foolish people railed at by the Prophet."

She lifted her little chin with a quaint challenge.

"Am I so old, then?" she said.

"Yes, Mademoiselle Inconnue," I answered, "quite eighty years old, I think. The letters to you have been published thirty years."

"Excellent, Monsieur Merimee," she said. "We are now supplied with names, we shall get on better."

I could have taken this promise with a greater joy had it not been for the sentinel behind the palm.

If it had been any other than St. Valentine's night, I should have set a doubt against this sudden geniality of my companion. She had not been so sunny in the hansom, but here she laughed like a brook. We might have been runaway lovers with no horses galloping behind us.

"Mademoiselle," I said, "in the corner yonder by that palm Madame Bernhardt recited for the disabled sailors; the spot is marked with a mosaic star."

She followed my eye boldly to the spot, held a level glance on the very glasses of the dragon without flicker of an eyelid.

"How lugubrious!" she said. "There is such a star in the railroad station in Washington marking the place where a president was shot."

Then she shrugged her shoulders and looked me squarely in the face.

"Why should they mark with the sign of tragedy the spot where Madame Bernhardt recited—that place there by the palm?"

I tried to evade the directness of the query.

"Lay it," I said, "to the unimaginative nature of our people. A Latin would have marked one place with a mosaic of laurel, and the other with a black cross. Let us suggest it to the Players."

She looked at the palm again with a slow, heavy-lidded glance and then back to me.

"No," she said, "now that I think it over, perhaps the mark of tragedy is fittest there." And then, "Does not Bernhardt indeed represent the embodiment of tragedy?"

I had new lights on the problem. The woman was perfectly aware that a sentinel watched. She knew when he entered with the porter. She knew that he sat behind that palm when she came in to dinner, and yet she came, and played with me a comedy of sweethearts crowded with suggestive incident, and overplayed it.

I had barely settled the matter to my satisfaction, when the man arose and came through the dining-room past our table to the door. He doubtless saw that the woman had discovered him and so deemed it wise to leave the cafe like an ordinary guest. I observed again that his face was strong, determined and very pale. Such a type of person did not become a detective in New York; but all manner of men came from the great west, and why not a spy with an open, honorable face? The next moment my last theory went to pieces.

The young woman looked up from her coffee, smiled and spoke to him in as pleasant a voice as I have ever heard.

"Good-evening, Henry," she said.

The man bowed courteously and passed on through the door, a show of color mounting slowly to his cheeks.

I withdrew then from the field of Le Coque and Dupin. The mystery was beyond me. One did not speak thus cordially to a hired trailer, and where in Christendom were there a spy who blushed? The man went out into the lobby of the hotel, got a cigar somewhere and sat down in a leather chair by the wall where he could have a view of the dining-room. Still he watched, and my Lady Unknown knew that he watched.

When the dinner was ended, I went with her to the elevator, wondering if she would play it out with her fingers to kiss at the parting. But she only smiled alluringly and I stepped into the steel cage with her. Even the Hebrew scriptures scorned the weakling who turned back.

"The parlors are on the next floor," she said.

Then the door clicked and the elevator began to rise. Instantly she changed as under some hideous sorcery. Her hands trembled, her face grew as white as a grave-cloth. When she spoke her voice clicked like a steel rail under an express.

"Get out here," she said, when the car touched at the next landing, "and manage to leave the hotel unobserved. You have done me a great favor. I thank you."

I got out. The car vanished. I started to go down the steps, when I saw over the rail the mysterious stranger coming up. I turned back and stepped quickly behind the elevator shaft. The man came slowly up the stairway and went into the public drawing-room. I got into the next car that came down. As it descended, I looked back through the wire net over the roof of the car. The man was coming out of the drawing-room door into the hall. His face was purple.

It was late when I got down-town the next morning. Pietro let me in and I went at once to my table in the front office. I was scarcely seated when I became aware of some one talking in the adjoining room. There was a familiar tone in the low voice that took my attention from the pile of letters before me. The door was not quite closed. I arose softly and looked through the crack. Randolph Mason sat in his chair, his fingers plucking impatiently at the heavy mahogany arms, his head held a little to one side, his eyes wandering aimlessly over the room. Opposite him, with her two elbows on the table, her face pressed together in her hands, and a long seal coat falling to the floor over the back of her chair, sat the woman with whom I had dined the night before at the Dresden. I could not see her face, but her voice was tense, vibrant, low, packed with emotion. If I had not been consumed with a special interest, I still had not been able to put away this espionage. The soft, quivering, overcharged tones held me like the droning of some incantation. I caught the words pouring hot as from a crucible.

"After that he was always at the door when I came out, heaping on me things that I did not want—flowers, bon-bons, the like. I was hideously poor. I mended with my own fingers the stockings in which I danced every Wednesday night at the Theater Francais in the great ballet of the Fata Morgana. I needed warm clothes, good food, a fire. They said I had limbs like a fairy. I had, they were starved thin. An exquisite pallor, I had that, too, but it came from sour bread, chocolate made with water and sweetened with sugar picked off with my nails from the bon-bons. I did not love the men, nor any men. I was a child. In the place of a mother, I had the warnings of an instinct. I feared the touch of a men's fingers as the beast of the field does; but the old concierge who had kept life in me with hot soup every night after the ballet, took the thing in hand. She discovered, I know not how, that the young men's father was a rich American. So she bundled me off to Passy and handed me over to him, but under a ceremony of marriage set out fully on the records of Passy. She was the only friend I ever had, this old, crooked, evil-featured Madame Duroque. She could more easily have sold me to him at the door of her lodge for a hundred louis. After this, I was, at least, not hungry. My husband was little more than a boy. We lived over the Seine by the Luxembourg. I did not dance any more at the Theater Francais, but I went every Monday morning to Madame Duroque to tell her everything and to divide with her my handful of francs. My husband studied art under the usual masters, but it was every morning thrown away. He was indolent, utterly worthless, wholly given over to a life of pleasure.

"One noon in May, his father arrived, handed me twenty-five napoleons and told me to go down into the street. I went with the money in my hand to Madame Duroque. She put her shawl over her head and hurried out. I did not see her again for five days. Then she came with the great American and took me to the Hotel Continental and to my husband. Madame Duroque kissed me at the door, put my certificate of marriage and the wedding ring in a silk bag and fastened it around my neck with a little gold chain. Then she took me to one side, and bade me remain with my husband and demand a hundred thousand francs before I would set foot out of Paris, after which she went back to her lodge.

"The father prepared then to return with us to America. I refused to go, and my husband, who was now aroused, refused also to go unless I accompanied him. I got finally the one hundred thousand francs and we arrived in New York. My father-in-law, who owned railroads in a western state, took us there and installed my husband as the clerk of a court in a little town built along the side of a mountain above the fork of a river where three railroads joined. He was trying to make a man out of my husband, he said. At his urging, I invested the money which I had received in the bonds of a railroad which he was building through the county.

"We lived there five years in the smoke, the mud, the unutterable dreariness of this frontier village. One day my husband fell and broke his wrist. He went to a hospital in a neighboring town to have the bone set, and died under the influence of ether on the operating table. I found in his pocket this letter, which he had written to me before the operation."

She took one of her hands down from her face, unhooked the bosom of her dress, took out a letter and read it. It was a meager note, a sort of memorandum to her, in the event of any serious consequence attending the operation. It told her briefly that the money which she had invested was lost, that his father had wrecked the railroad, reorganized it and absorbed its assets; but that there were twenty-five thousand dollars in a tin box in the bottom of his trunk in her room. She should say nothing to any one and keep that money for her own. It was all the provision he could make for her.

She laid the paper before Randolph Mason, then she took a newspaper clipping out of her purse and held it in her hand.

"I found the money packed in big bills in the tin box. In a few days I knew where my husband had got this money."

Then she read the clipping. It was an ordinary newspaper notice, reciting the death of the clerk of the court, and the fact that a sum of twenty-five thousand dollars which had been paid into his hands could not be discovered anywhere on deposit in any of the banks. This money he had received under the following conditions: The main line of the railroad belonging to the clerk's father had condemned and taken the bottom lands of the town for a freight yard, and, the land-owners refusing to take the money allowed in the condemnation proceedings and the circuit court not being in session, the railroad had paid it into the hands of the clerk of this court.

The woman crumpled up the piece of paper and threw it on the floor, set her elbow on the table, pressed her open hand once more against her face and hurried on with her story.

"My husband's office accounts were gone over and this money could not be found. He was presumed to have spent it. I said nothing. It was merely my one hundred thousand francs with its interest returned to me, and from the very one who, in his own fashion, had taken it. I was glad, glad of this settlement by the good God, glad to the very bottom of my heart. I made ready to return to Paris, to Madame Duroque, to life. Then I learned another thing."

She moved uneasily in her chair, her voice sank lower, her fingers tapped nervously on her face.

"There was one honorable man in this hideous village. From the very day on which we arrived he did incredible things to make life possible for us. He got a house, servants, everything that long patience could secure for our comfort. I came to regard him as an elder brother. My husband would have been a common drunkard but for him, and I should have been stark mad from dreariness. Well, he came to me and said that he was the surety on my husband's bond as clerk of the court, that if the money could not be found the railroad would force him to pay it. He was not rich, it would take all he had. He did not believe that my husband had used the money; it ought to be on deposit in some bank, or locked up in a box in some trust vault. I set my teeth down on my tongue and made a pretense of helping in the search. Months passed. I remained in the village, unable to decide between this man's ruin and Madame Duroque."

For the first time in the torrent of words, the woman hesitated, her voice became almost inaudible.

"I learned also in this time a thing that I had not suspected—that the man loved me. Oh, I don't mean love as I have seen it all my life long, the passion of the hunter, a hunger to be fed. I mean something like a religion that carries your burdens for you and is glad of it, that thinks of itself last. A thing like the feeling of that old concierge. Mon Dieu! I was mad then! On the heels of it I learned that Madame Duroque was ill in a house of public charity in Paris. Then I took the money and ran away to New York. This man discovered that I had gone and followed me. I arrived last night. He came, too, just behind me to the Dresden. Oh, I was mad, wholly, utterly, hideously mad! Now that I had decided against him, I wanted to hurt him, I wanted to do him all the injury I could. I wanted him to believe me low, vile, common, vulgar. Fate helped me. I came to the hotel in a hansom with a man I did not know. I dined with him!"

Her voice went up strong again, almost defiant.

"There was no wrong in it, no actual wrong in it. I made the man get out at the first landing and return in the next car to the hotel office; but, don't you see, I made him think I was bad."

She brought her two hands down clenched on the table.

"I wanted him to see with his own eyes that I was bad!"

The words clanged like a bell.

I became aware then of some one breathing heavily behind me. I turned, expecting to see Pietro. Instead, at my back, looking over my shoulder, was the man who had sat watching at the Dresden. His face looked as though it were coated with chalk, his eyes stared over my shoulder into the next room. I saw, too, that the door of the house stood half open. He had come in unnoticed by Pietro.

The woman got her voice painfully in hand again.

"Here," she said, "here is the money." And she took up her traveling bag from the floor and threw it down on the table among the books.

"Send it back to him. You are a lawyer, you can do that somehow. I have kept only a thousand dollars for Madame Duroque. Let him arrest me for stealing that, if he likes. I should be glad of a cell."

The woman's face was set now in a distressing tension.

"Madame," said Randolph Mason, "you might have spared yourself this nonsense. You are guilty of no crime in taking this money; neither was your husband guilty of any crime in keeping it, nor yet is the bondsmen of your husband liable for this money. This money was paid to your husband as clerk of the circuit court of his county, during the vacation of that court. It was not, then, money paid into court, to the clerk, as contemplated by the statute of the state in which he lived. It, therefore, did not come into his possession by virtue of his office, and his bondsmen are not liable for its misappropriation. Such bonds require only that the clerk shall account for and pay over, as required by law, all money which may come to his hands by virtue of his said office. It is no crime for you to keep the money since it was neither stolen nor embezzled, but merely entrusted to your husband under an incorrect idea of the law. The loss, madam, will fall on the railroad which paid this money into court—that is, your father-in-law, the one who should properly lose it."

I looked to see the woman grow suddenly radiant; but, instead, she buried her face in her hands and began to cry. The tears trickled through her fingers. She rocked, sobbing, in her chair. I caught the handle to the folding-doors between the two rooms and flung them open. The woman sprang up, stammering incoherently. The man took her in his arms.

Randolph Mason spoke then in his cold, even voice, but there was almost a smile on his lips.

"Parke," he said, "go out and engage a stateroom on the Kaiser Wilhelm for Cherbourg."

For the legal principle involved in this story see the case of State to Use of Blake v. Enslow et. al., 41 W. Va.; 744.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1912. NO. 32.

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

Raises Corn and Chickens on Great White Way

DA FARM IS GOODA DA PLACE FOR DA KIDS

NEW YORK.—A real country farm on Broadway in which vegetables of all kinds thrive, and which chickens serenely pecking at the soil undisturbed by the roar of subway trains above, and the din of traffic below, sounds more like the fancy of one of the city's rich men than the realization of the ambition of an Italian fruit stand keeper. The farm with an ancient two-story frame house occupies 500 square feet in a triangular plot on Broadway between Manhattan street and West One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street. The triangle is inclosed by a ten-foot board wall except on One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street, where there is a low rustic fence.

He is Frank Muccia, a middle-aged Italian. Muccia maintains a fruit and cigar stand outside of the triangle. He came to this country to seek his fortune 20 years ago from Naples, where his father had a large farm. Muccia brought with him here a strong love for farm life. He became the owner of a fruit stand, but the desire to have a farm and bring up his family of ten children as the children of a farmer's son should be raised grew stronger with him each year. In a city of tall buildings and crowded spaces he could see little hope of realizing his ambition. He could not move to the country because his stand and business was growing better all the time, and then there were the wife and the ten little Muccias to be fed and clothed. Nine years ago, however, his opportunity came, and with his family he moved to the triangle. He cleared away the rubbish which littered the place and started to cultivate the soil.

Mirth Before Audience, a Fight Behind Scenes

CHICAGO.—"Gigantic and glorious festival of mirth and melody." "A brilliant half-hour mosaic of musical comedy, superbly staged."

"Ten dainty, dimpled Broadway beauties. Just like the French cabarets."

That's what a local theater bill says about a skit before the footlights there.

Municipal Judge R. F. Robinson saw part of the show the other day and is inclined to doubt the veracity of the bill. It was given a piecemeal staging before him in the Hyde Park police court. His program read:

Defendant—Frank Griffith; known in the skit as "Josh Kidder, a waiter who knows his business."

Plaintiffs—Lillian, Bertha and Ida Lewis, dancers, and Mrs. Bessie Lewis, their mother, the first three being known in the skit respectively as "Lotta Racket," "Louise Louder" and "Peroxa Snow."

The "heavies" were Detectives McGuire and Rauk, who made the "pinch."

"Lotta Racket—er—I mean Lillian Lewis—to the bar," ordered the judge when the case was called. Up tripped a brunette with a big picture hat.

OW
WOW
BANG
SLAM
THAT BUNCH OF ROUGH NECKS IS BEATIN' UP MOTHER

"It was this way, judge," she said. "I was out doing my dancing stunt when I heard a scream back of the wings. I just knew it was Frank Griffith beating mother, so I ran off without finishing my act to help her. Half of the company had attacked her, and her screams were so loud the stage manager had to ring down the curtain to keep the audience from thinking there was a fire."

Judge Robinson listened for a while and then ordered silence.

"It must have been a gigantic and glorious festival of mirth and melody," the judge said, reading the program. "It was so much so that I'm going to let you settle it among yourselves. Those back-of-the-stage fights are too much for an ordinary judge to attempt to square. I'll discharge the prisoner."

Profitable Bee Hives in Loft of a City Barn

NOTHING LIKE HAVING A BUNCH OF BEES WORKING FOR YOU
$

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—An apiary containing four unusually large and busy families of exceedingly productive honey bees, conducted in the loft of a small stable in the rear of a city home, is one of the most unique industries in Milwaukee.

William Norenberg and his brother, Frederick, 794 Hubbard street, are the proprietors. They say it is one of the easiest and most profitable businesses, considering the investment, that can be conducted at home.

"I have been keeping bees for about five years," said William Norenberg. "I started with two frames of bees and a queen and now I have four extra large hives, from which each year I get a total of between 250 and 300 pounds of fine honey. Cone honey is worth an average of 25 cents a pound, so you will see that I get a nice profit from my bees, when you consider that they cost me practically nothing.

"But aside from the profit the bees afford us a great deal of entertaining study. Nothing can be more interesting than watching the manner in which these busy little workers keep their houses in order, the manner in which the guard bees of each swarm do sentinel duty at the entrance to their hive, ready to give battle to robber bees from other swarms, which was always lurking about.

"Some people may ask how the bees are fed. The answer is that we never feed them. I never have found it necessary to help them find enough food. Of course, they have no trouble in the warm weather, and while they stay close to their hives during the cold weather, as soon as the sun appears the bees leave their hives and go out foraging."

Bewails Loss of $800 He "Squandered" on Wife

DETROIT, MICH.—From a courtship that started one Sunday afternoon nearly two years ago when he drove by the home of the charming, but fiery-tempered little Italian girl, Annunzia Di Michelle, at 535 Russell street, followed by a hasty wooing, an early marriage, to the divorce court has been the brief but highly exciting matrimonial adventure of Joe Palermo.

Joe doesn't bewail the prospective loss of his wife so much as the loss of the savings that he squandered on her before and after their marriage. "Pouf! $800, she's gone like that," said Joe expressively, blowing out a fierce blast of macaroni-laden breath. "I buy heem the fort' dollar coat; he's socks $2.50 a pair, fine new shoes, pay de five do' for them, de big hat, $15, fine new silk dress; alla de mun I had. Now, nothing, not a cent left."

They had a "quick wedding," according to Joe, and then [illegible] bles began [illegible] her [illegible]

POUF! SHE GONE DUST LIKA DAT

then began a constant war with his mother-in-law. Joe charges. He declares that his mother-in-law interfered when he chided his wife, and that she refused to let her daughter go away when Joe rented a flat. Joe says his wife told him he couldn't take her away.

A week after Joe went back to get his clothes and he says they both jumped on him and pummeled him so that he had to run away without his belongings.

"I don't know what de mat," sighed Joe. "Mebbe she luf somebody else, but I don't see no man 'round de [illegible] for de las' two month."

WHO'S WHO AND WHY

NEW FIELD OPEN TO E. T. FAIRCHILD

E. T. Fairchild, president of the National Educational association, and superintendent of education of the state of Kansas, has been tendered the presidency of New Hampshire Agricultural college.

The practical benefits of education have been emphasized by Mr. Fairchild in his work in Kansas. The conventional treatment of the sciences in the secondary schools was objected to by Mr. Fairchild as unsuited to the pupil and to his actual needs when he got out of school. It is his idea that all text books, especially in high schools, should follow the plan demanded by teachers of arithmetic—that all the problems presented be of things that concern the active life of the child.

"The present text books are for advanced work and are not practical," Mr. Fairchild said recently. "While the books are written for boys and girls of high school age, still they are so technical and so full of definitions that often they are of no practical use to children after they are through school."

KING NICHOLAS PICKED TO START WAR

Declaration of war against Turkey by King Nicholas of Montenegro, followed quickly by several severe engagements between Montenegrin and Turkish forces, are regarded merely as the beginning of a general conflagration in the Balkan states.

It is believed that the other units in the Balkan coalition will follow suit as soon as the mobilization of the armies is complete.

There is only a faint hope now that the representations of the powers will avert general hostilities.

Montenegro's move is considered by many to be part of a prearranged plan. It is asserted that Greece was first selected by the Balkan confederation to force the issue and inaugurate the war.

This could easily have been done by Greece seating in the Greek parliament the deputies from Crete, which was certain to prove a casus belli to Turkey. Greece, however, declined to accept responsibility for starting the flame of battle.

Montenegro was then picked. She had a long standing quarrel with Turkey over the boundary question and Turkey's refusal to grant satisfaction was seized upon as justification for Montenegro's resort to arms.

SENATOR T. P. GORE BLINDED IN YOUTH

United States Senator Thomas Pryor Gore of Oklahoma is known as "The man that never sleeps" and "The man that never forgets anything." He is one of the remarkable men in American history, because from a poor little boy in Mississippi, blind from the time he was eleven years old, he has arisen by his own effort and indomitable will and courage to become a statesman, a scholar and a foremost citizen.

"The blind senator from Oklahoma" is known all over the country and the people like him because of his amiability, his intelligence, his high character, his oratory and his success as a statesman.

Many persons wonder how he became blind. His sight is totally destroyed. When he was about eight years old he was struck in the left eye by a stick which a young companion threw on the ground and which bounded back. The eye was destroyed. And when he was eleven years old he was a page in the Mississippi state senate. He bought an air gun to take home as a present for a brother, and at the hotel where he was stopping several children were eager to see how the thing worked. Young Gore was just as anxious to show them.

In endeavoring to do so his good eye was destroyed.

LE GAGNEUX BREAKS ALTITUDE RECORD

M. G. Le Gagneux, the aviator, who the other day at Paris reached the tremendous height of 7,067 yards, more than four miles, when he broke the man-flying record for altitude, has given a graphic description of his feat and sensations.

That his achievement was even greater than it at first seemed was proven by the official and corrected calculations made from the self-registering instruments which he carried on his marine monoplane.

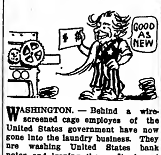
Le Gagneux has gone farther from the earth in a flying machine than any other.

Le Gagneux says: "In two and a half minutes I was 1,500 yards in the air. In seven and a half minutes I was 2,500 yards up, and a little higher I flew into a dead calm. At an altitude of 3,125 yards I found myself in a fog so thick that I could see nothing.

"It grew very cold. I was warmly clad but I felt the chill keenly. The moisture turned to icicles on my face. Only by my barometers could I tell I was still ascending. At 6,020 yards I began to inhale oxygen, as I had been advised."

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Uncle Sam Can Wash Your Money While You Wait



WASHINGTON. — Behind a wire-screened cage employes of the United States government have now gone into the laundry business. They are washing United States bank notes and ironing them. It is not generally understood that when anybody gets old greenbacks, it does not make any difference whether a dollar or a thousand, if he sent it to the treasury department and requested a new bill he would have to have it. All the bankers in the country have always had the right to turn in all old money and get new for it.

The washing machine is still in an experimental stage, it is said, and seems to be doing pretty good work. It is estimated that this will save a vast sum for the treasury. It costs $13.30 to make 1,000 bank notes. It cost but about 50 cents to rejuvenate the same number.

The machine is 15 feet long and five feet wide, and looks something like a newspaper printing press. It has dozens of rolls, many gears and operates with the same clash and clang. The money is placed between two canvas belts at one end of the machine. It runs through a solution of laundry soap and boiling hot water, where it is thoroughly cleansed. It then enters another vat, in which there is a solution of stiffening material and germ-killing solution. From this vat it is drawn between a gas-heated mangle, where it is ironed.

It emerges from the machine two minutes and 15 seconds after it has started on its 64-foot trip, and is to all intents and purposes a perfect bill. When running at full speed the washing machine can clean about 4,000 bills an hour.

Washington City The Ideal Educational Center

GRADUALLY but surely America is becoming recognized as one of the leading nations in the world for the educational facilities it offers its peoples. The little red schoolhouse is still here, and of necessity will remain in the sparsely settled communities for some years to come. The bad roads that made it difficult for the child of tender years or slight physique to be a regular attendant at these minor but still important seats of learning are gradually becoming better, something which is greatly appreciated by young America.

These bad roads are bound to disappear in time, and, strange to say, their improvement means the beginning of the end of the small country school. The amalgamation of school districts will follow; the country high school, located at the Four Corners, will take its proper place as it has already done in some districts; children will gather at central points and be carried to school in community wagons, and the educational standard will be advanced.

Before Washington became the populous and up-to-date city of today it was not looked upon in the same light as other places were, especially by those who had never visited the nation's capital, and regarded it simply as the seat of government—temporary residence for the nation's statesmen.

Times have changed. Washington is now probably better known in outside states for the advantages it offers to those seeking an education than it is at home.

Washington today is looked to as the country's seat of learning, not merely from an academic standpoint, but from a broader vision. It is realized that traditions, the beautiful examples of art as shown by the best works of famous artists, sculptors, architects, have an influence for good on those that come here to study, to work.

Parson Warns Newlyweds Against "Turkey Trot"

ADMONITIONS as to their future conduct and a warning against the seductions of the "turkey trot" and other such "fancy doin's" were interpolated freely into the marriage ceremony with which Rev. John H. Banday, pastor of an African Methodist Episcopal church, united a negro couple the other day in the private office of Judge Gorter.

Winfield Boyer, 20 years old, small in stature and not a little frightened, consented to wed Esther C. Newman, 14 years old. Judge Gorter gave an order for a marriage license, offered the use of his office for the ceremony and had an official of the court hunt up a minister.

The preacher read the ceremony impressively, but turned aside now and then to offer advice to the pair where he thought it might have effect.

"Will you live with this woman as your wife always?" he demanded of the trembling bridegroom at the proper part of the ritual. "Not for a little time," he added. "I marry so many of you niggers and tomorrow you are single again.

"Speak it with your heart, not your lips," he demanded, in putting the question, "Wilt thou have this woman?"

Other admonitions were woven into the ceremony, at the end of which the minister delivered a short lecture.

"Live right and stick to each other," he said. "Keep out of foolishness; there's a whole lot of new-fangled fool things in the world today. Don't you have anything to do with this here 'turkey trot' and 'bunny hug' business."

A Street Tragedy With Cream Puffs Mixed in.

NEVER run after a street car; nine times out of ten you don't overtake it, and, besides, another will come along some time.

A woman in a linen dress and a great hurry rushed along the south side of the avenue, waving frantically at a car going south. She had only one bundle in her hands, but she handled it rather gingerly, and as it was something in a sack, she grasped it around the top, much as a darky is supposed to hold a chicken by the neck. She sprinted across the walk paying little or no attention to anything but the car, and as she reached the curb she miscalculated the step, stumbled and fell. It wasn't one of those knee-drill falls they teach with the Delsarte style of stunts, but a fall, pure and simple.

She fell on the bag.

Cream puffs are rather tempting looking and decidedly tasty, when properly handled, but connoisseurs and epicures alike are agreed that they ought never to be sat upon, much less lain upon; they have rather a peevish nature, as it were, and are apt to start something. Those in the bag were no exception. They sent out a creamy protest that started somewhere up around the woman's neck and continued all the way down her dress front. Vesuvius in its most hilarious moments never poured out a greater flow, in comparison to its size, than that paper bag. The woman was helped to her feet by sympathetic onlookers, who promptly retired when she gave her dress a shake and sent flecks of cream in ninety-seven different directions.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE SUNBEAM.
W. O. HUNT, Publisher.
SUNBEAM. MINN

PARENTS AND TEACHERS.

Thousands of people are complaining every year that the public schools are not "making good." They cannot understand why the great majority of boys, after reaching the sixth or seventh grade, fail to pass their examinations, become discouraged and drop out of school, says the Columbia State. The small proportionate number of graduates they regard as proving that something is radically wrong in the scheme and methods of instruction. Not for a moment do they remember what they are asking of the schools. If they would compare their outlay for education with the outlay for heating or lighting their homes and then compare the results, they would agree that no other investment yields returns worthy to be mentioned by the side of their investment in the public schools, yet they insist that the schools should accomplish for average boy or girl ten times what they do accomplish. The mother or father who will give to the children in the family an hour of assistance each day will have no reason to be disappointed with the school system. If they will three times a year visit the schools and spend half an hour in them, learning at first hand what the task of the teachers is and how much the taxpayers have asked the school system to do, they will conclude that wonders are being achieved at nominal cost and they will be convinced, moreover, that in respect to their own children they may not expect the working of miracles unless they set themselves to do faithfully what is physically beyond the powers of the overworked teachers.

The fact that several Nebraska young women graduating from the department of agriculture at Washington into places of responsibility as seed experts, some in state universities, while naturally gratifying to their neighbors, is most significant in this, that it shows what a potent influence the government is exerting toward implanting the principle of intensive agriculture, says the Omaha Bee. The first steps in the process of making two blades of grass grow where but one grew before is the proper selection of seed and proper preparation of the soil. The federal government is doing a great work, therefore, in thus fostering this movement and co-operating in it with state educational institutions. Together they are making the selection of seed for agriculture and horticulture a science and a business. Of course, this opens up to young men and women lucrative fields of service, but that is only incidental to the main purpose of improving methods of farming.

Women are indignant over the statement of a German expert at Washington lately that cooking is a lost art. In view of the cooking schools and the housewives' leagues, both so popular now, and in the way which women are earnestly trying to raise cooking in the eyes of their sex to a science worthy of respect and attention, the statement is rather a sweeping one. In fact, the average moderate mind takes all the broad assertions concerning the general deterioration of the world with more than a few grains of allowance for the zeal of the speaker on special occasions when broad statements seem to be in order.

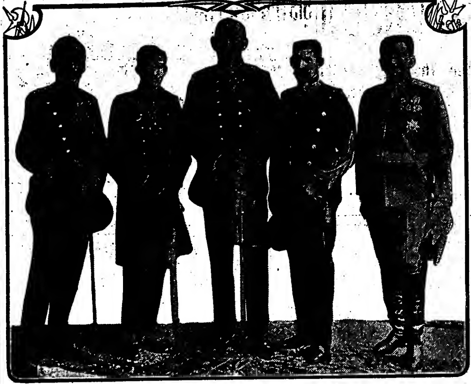
For purely material comfort, for a padded life for the rich and one with few splinters for the less fortunate, the old world offers advantages above America, says the Cleveland Leader. The chances for the education of the eye and ear in beautiful pictures and in worthy music are superior to those of this new land; the deference paid to money—even in countries supposed to be monarchial and castle-ridden—is more marked than it is here. Europe is an ideal place for those who love luxurious living and are able to pay for it.

In giving the amounts of dressmakers' bills for royal ladies an account says that Queen Wilhelmina heads the list with a considerable lead. But while she dresses more expensively than the empresses of Germany and Russia, it is to be remembered that she has one great advantage over those imperial ladies, as she, and not her husband, hold the pursestrings of the family and has the last word when it comes to orders in the case.

A Kansas City mother has earned the eternal gratitude of the general public by inventing a baby "silencer." Cry and protest as it may, the baby can make no noise. The idea of this "silencer" might be extended with profit to older shoulders.

A New York man went mad at the sight of water and shot his wife. There is [illegible] in exposing [illegible]

CROWN PRINCES OF THE BALKAN STATES



HERE is a remarkable photograph of the five crown princes of the Balkan states that are concerned in the imbroglio with Turkey. Reading from left to right they are: Crown Prince Alexander of Servia, Crown Prince Boris of Bulgaria, Crown Prince George of Greece, Crown Prince Ferdinand of Roumania and Crown Prince Danilo of Montenegro.

RYAN IS BEST GIVER

CONTRIBUTED $450,000 TO CAMPAIGN IN 1904.

Perkins Says Story of $3,000,000 Gift to Aid Roosevelt Is False and Asks That Penrose Prove It.

Washington, Oct. 23.—Thomas Fortune Ryan, the multi-millionaire Democrat, who was a witness on Monday before the campaign fund investigating committee, loomed up as the biggest campaign contributor that has come before that inquisitorial body.

Mr. Ryan gave $450,000 to the campaign fund for Judge Parker in 1904, or nearly twice the Harriman fund of $240,000, which the committee has probed.

Then Mr. Ryan trailed along with "minor" contributions to congressional campaigns—he could not remember the amounts—down to the Democratic pre-convention fight of 1912, when he contributed between $70,000 and $80,000 to Governor Harmon and over $30,000 to Mr. Underwood, and would have given to the campaign of Governor Wilson and Mr. Clark, but was not approached by the managers for these two candidates.

George W. Perkins was a belligerent witness and twice had to be called to order by the committee, the members of which objected to the manner of lecturing them. Bitterly resentful of the charge made in the senate by Senator Penrose, and later repeated by Charles Hilles, that two or three millions had been spent in the Roosevelt pre-convention campaign and that this had come from the harvester and steel trusts and had been underwritten by him, he exclaimed, angrily:

"Among the long list of unmitigated lies throughout the campaign that statement about the $3,000,000 fund perhaps ought to be placed at the top, because it was the largest.

"I was in hopes that Senator Penrose would be here. He made that statement on the floor of the senate and he ought to be required to prove it; or, like a gentleman, he ought to take it back. There is not a scintilla of truth in it from A to Z."

COTTON CORNER CASE OPENED

United States Supreme Court Will Decide If Anti-Trust Law Has Been Violated.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Solicitor General Bullitt made the final argument in the Patten cotton corner case in the Supreme court and the case is now before that tribunal for decision.

Notwithstanding the reports that the indictments have been faulty, etc., the case was submitted to the court on the general principles that there have been violations of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Interest attached to the case against Patten and others because it is an open attempt on the part of the government to use the Sherman law to break up corners in wheat, cotton and other staples and to end agreements to purchase in excess of the known supply or to make contracts for the future delivery of such products.

German Riots More Violent.

Berlin, Germany, Oct. 26.—"Dear food" riots increased in violence here Thursday. About 2,000 women raided a butcher shop in the Wedding district, demolished the premises and stole the meat.

Rob Errand Boy of $3,000.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 26.—Oscar Christianson, a messenger boy for the Soo railway, was robbed here Thursday of $3,000 in pay checks of the company on one of the principal [illegible]

BECKER IS GUILTY

JURY FINDS POLICE OFFICER DIRECTED KILLING OF HERMAN ROSENTHAL.

FACES CHAIR FOR MURDER

Prisoner Near Collapse When Verdict Is Returned After Eight Hours—Men Who Decide His Fate Sob as They Tell Their Decision.

New York, Oct. 26.—Police Lieut. Charles Becker was found guilty of murder in the first degree by the jury which has been trying him for instigating the death of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler. The verdict, which took the jury eight hours to reach, was pronounced at 12:02 o'clock Friday morning.

Mrs. Becker, wife of the convicted police official, was barred from the courtroom when the jury returned with their verdict. Seated in the corridor outside, the dread news was broken to her as gently as possible. She sat perfectly immovable when the messenger told her her husband's fate. Apparently stunned, she neither moved nor spoke. Then her eyes closed and she apparently swooned. Friends carried her away.

The verdict was a severe blow to both the defendant and his wife and counsel, all of whom had been confidently looking for a disagreement at least.

The last juror had scarcely gained his seat when the same door through which the arbiters of his fate had entered again swung open, and Becker himself stalked through. His face was white. His eyes swept about the courtroom in an affrighted manner and finally fell upon the jurors. So intent was he in studying their countenances that he stumbled just inside the room and almost fell over the railing.

The attending deputy sheriff caught him and supported him within the roll.

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict?" asked Justice Goff. "We have," said Foreman Skinner.

"How say you, gentlemen of the jury?"

"Guilty in the first degree," almost whispered the foreman.

Becker's chest sank in with a sigh that shook his whole frame. His mouth twitched and all the muscles of his face knotted in an anguished spasm.

These 12 men—after eight hours battling with their conscience having pronounced the defendant guilty—turned from judges to sympathizers and there was scarcely a man of the 12 who did not falter and whose voice did not catch with a sob as he individually recorded his belief in the guilt of the accused man.

Shot to Death for Murder.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 26.—A firing squad executed the death sentence upon Thomas Riley at the state prison Thursday. Riley was the second man to die for the murder of G. Fassell, a grocer, in March 1910.

Russian Admiral Suicides.

St. Petersburg, Russia, Oct. 26.—Rear Admiral Chagin, commander of the emperor of Russia's yacht Standart, committed suicide at his residence here Thursday. The cause of his act is unknown.

Quebec Has Earthquake.

Quebec, Oct. 26.—News reached here that a severe earthquake shock was felt between Beraimis and Pentecost, on the north shore of the River [illegible]

50,000 ARE CAPTURED

KIRK-KILISSEH WITH TURKS IS TAKEN BY BULGARIANS.

Servians Tell of Taking Kumanova, Although Moslems Claim Victory—70 Christians Massacred.

London, Oct. 26.—The fall of Kirk-Kilisseh, the Turkish fortress, which is regarded as the key to Adrianople, present main theater of the Balkan war, was officially confirmed on Thursday. The Turkish garrison at Kirk-Kilisseh numbered approximately 50,000 men, and a report to the effect that all fell prisoners to the Bulgarians is current here. However, official confirmation is lacking. The Bulgarian forces are now advancing on Adrianople.

The number of dead in the battle of Kirk-Kilisseh is not definitely known. Advices from Sofia, Vranya, Belgrade and Philippopolis estimate the losses as "several thousands," both sides suffering heavily.

Czar Ferdinand achieved the victory by a daring flanking movement which brought a strong division of Bulgars to the Ottoman rear. The battle had been in progress practically three days before the advantage turned to either side, although the Bulgarians were known to be developing a strategical division of their forces that would double their chances of victory in a final assault.

A dispatch from Sofia is to the effect that two Turkish generals were captured when Kirk-Kilisseh was garrisoned.

The Turks profess to have routed the Servians in Albania, but on the other hand, the messages from Belgrade say King Peter's troops have routed the Turks everywhere they met them, and are placing their siege artillery outside of Uskub.

One official dispatch from Belgrade states that the Servian troops wrested Propalatz Pass from the Turks, inflicting losses of a thousand killed and as many wounded. The battle lasted 13 hours. The Serbs also claim to have occupied a part of the city of Kumanova, which they have been attacking for several days.

The Greeks report the capture of the Ottoman town of Servia, 17 miles north of Mount Olympus, and their claim is unchallenged from any source. They report that the Turks massacred 70 Christians.

IMPORTANT NEWS ITEMS

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 23.—Dr. Alfred Lemon, Frank Oster and Joseph Hobbs, all of this city, arrived here Monday in an exhausted condition after a three-days' battle in a launch with storms on Lake Superior.

Washington, Oct. 23.—Mrs. C. W. Post, the divorced wife of the Battle Creek millionaire food manufacturer, was found dead in bed at the apartment of Mrs. Joseph Breckons, where she had been a guest for several days.

Coroner Nevitt decided that she died from Bright's disease. Mrs. Post was born in Illinois and has been divorced for eight years.

U. S. Transport Prairie Safe.

Washington, Oct. 24.—The naval transport Prairie, which had not been heard from since October 3 and for whose safety fear was entertained, arrived safely at San Domingo City Tuesday.

Nine Stitches in Heart; Lives.

Philadelphia, Oct. 24.—John Thompson, a negro, left the Pennsylvania hospital here last Tuesday well and strong after surviving an operation of having nine stitches taken in his [illegible]

PREPARE FOR NOV. 5

FORTY-SIX STATES TO CHOOSE CONGRESSMEN AND TWENTY-NINE GOVERNORS.

THREE BIG PARTIES ARE BUSY

Electoral Disputes Arising Between Regular Republicans and Progressives Have Been Settled in Practically All of the States.

Washington, Oct. 24.—One week from next Tuesday the voters in the forty-eight states of the Union will express their preferences for president and vice-president of the United States. In forty-six of the states representatives in the next congress—the sixty-third—will be named. Twenty-nine states will vote for governors and other state officers, and in half a dozen others minor state officials will be elected. Maine, Vermont, Arkansas and Georgia have held their state elections, but the two latter states, on November 5, will elect representatives in congress. Maine and Vermont already have chosen their congressmen, as well as state officers.

The states that will elect governors are Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

The electoral disputes arising between the regular Republicans and the Progressives have been settled in practically all of the states. Confusion still exists, however, in regard to some of the state tickets. Straight Republican tickets have been named in all the states except one or two in the south. The Democrats have tickets in all of the states in which elections are to be held.

The Socialists have named candidates for governor and other state officers in twenty-seven states. The Prohibition party has complete state tickets in twenty-one states. In addition, tickets of the Socialist, Labor, Independence, Populist and other minor parties will appear on the ballots in some of the states.

The Progressives have named complete tickets for governor and other state officers in Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Rhode Island, Texas, Utah and Washington.

The Prohibitionists have named candidates for governor and other state officers in Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Nebraska, Texas, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

Many of the states will elect legislatures which will have the naming of United States senators. A total of thirty-three seats in the United States senate will be at stake in the election. Of these eighteen are now occupied by Republicans and thirteen by Democrats. Two vacancies, caused by the death of Charles J. Hughes of Colorado and the enforced retirement of William Lorimer of Illinois, bring the total up to thirty-three.

FELIX DIAZ TO BE EXECUTED

Leader of Vera Cruz Revolt Expected to Be Shot as Traitor to Mexico, According to Report.

Mexico City, Oct. 26.—Gen. Joaquin Beltran is at Vera Cruz presiding over a summary court martial trying Gen. Felix Diaz on a charge of treason. The court martial was ordered by President Madero, with instructions that the findings of the board shall be immediately carried out.

This means, according to news from official sources, that Diaz will be shot, for it is certain he will be convicted. In fact, he had been convicted before the court martial was summoned.

It was learned on Thursday that the Diaz revolt was actually a Madero trap, set and sprung by the president himself. Diaz had long been suspected of intriguing against the government. The better to catch him at his own game, Madero permitted him, apparently, to go about Vera Cruz without being spied upon. As a matter of face, administration service men were his constant advisers.

Aviator Misses Death.

Washington, Oct. 24.—Flung from a speeding aeroplane and escaping instant death, William Kabitzke, an aviator, was receiving the congratulations of friends at the army aviation field at College Park, Md., Tuesday.

George Burnham Is Ill.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—George Burnham, for many years head of the Baldwin Locomotive works, was critically ill at his home here Thursday. He is ninety-six years old and retired from business five years ago.

Fire at Cuban Candidate.

Havana, Oct. 26.—An attempt was made Thursday to assassinate General Menocal, Conservative nominee for president, as his special train was pulling in at Sanilla. Several shots were fired from rifles.

BEST
For Every Baking
CALUMET
BAKING POWDER

Best—because it's the purest. Best—because it never fails. Best—because it makes every baking light, fluffy and evenly raised. Best—because it is moderate in cost—highest in quality.

At your grocers.

RECEIVED HIGHEST AWARDS
World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, Ill.
Paris Exposition, France March, 1912.

You don't save money when you buy cheap or big-can baking powder. Don't be misled. Buy Calumet. It's more economical—more wholesome—gives best results. Calumet is far superior to sour milk and soda.

Test Far Beneath His Capacity.

The young son of a lawyer who lives out south has just made his first appearance at kindergarten. The other day the teacher asked the children to look over the room and any who could count, to rise and tell her the number of children in the room. The young South sider arose, and looking about over the heads, remarked with great aplomb:

"Huh! I cain't count these children, because I can count to a hundred, and there ain't that many here."—Kansas City Star.

Its Language.

"If money talks, what does it say?"

"I guess it is buy-buy."

Important to Mothers
Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over 30 Years.
Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

A Mistaken Idea.

"The storm caused me a great deal of suffering by breaking all the windows in my house."

"Why, I always understood that breaking windows was a perfectly pane-less operation."

CURES BURNS AND CUTS.
Cole's Carbolisalve stops the pain instantly. Cures quick. No scar. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

Negative Evidence.

"I hear the gentleman who is visiting your daughter is a coming man."

"He must be, for he is certainly not a going one."

ALBERTA
THE PRICE OF BEEF
IS HIGH AND SO IS THE PRICE OF CATTLE.

For years the Province of Alberta (Western Canada) was the Big Ranching Country. Many of these ranches today are immense grain fields and the cattle have given place to the cultivation of wheat, oats, barley and flax; the change has made many thousands of Americans, settled on these plains, wealthy, but it has increased the price of live stock. There is splendid opportunity now to get a Free Homestead
of 160 acres (and another as a pre-emption) in the newer districts and produce either cattle or grain. The crops are always good, the climate is excellent, schools and churches are convenient, markets splendid, in either Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Send to the nearest Canadian Government Agent for literature, the latest information, railway rates, or write: Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to
W. A. GARRETT, [illegible] Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

STATUE OF JOHN A. JOHNSON IS UNVEILED

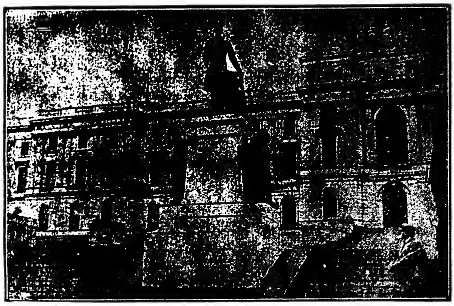
Speakers Praise Life of Former Governor.

Eberhart Says Memory Will Endure As Long As Time— Other Tributes Paid.

Ten Thousand People Attend Ceremony.

Appendicitis Attack Keeps the Sculptor, Andrew O'Connor, From Seeing His Work Unveiled.

Statue of Gov. Johnson.



Showing Side Groups On Statue In Front Of State Capitol.

St. Paul.—In the presence of 10,000 Minnesotans who had been his friends and admirers, the bronze presentment of John Albert Johnson, thrice governor of Minnesota, raised before the main entrance of the state capitol in St. Paul was unveiled late Saturday with simple ceremony. Gathered about the monument to which 100,000 persons had contributed were the high men of church and state and the late governor's lifelong friends in all walks of life. His loyal widow, still attired in somber black as in the days at Rochester when Governor Johnson was fighting his battle with death, was an important though a modest figure in the events of the day.

Andrew O'Connor, the sculptor who designed the monument and supervised its erection, was not present when his great work was unveiled. He was confined to his bed in the Saint Paul hotel suffering from a slight attack of appendicitis.

Second Monument at St. Peter.

The erection of this monument is to be followed by that of another to be raised in St. Peter, probably in the cemetery where lies the body. The monument commission in its final meeting after the unveiling exercises voted to publish 1,000 copies of its proceedings, to appropriate $600 for bound volumes of newspaper clippings on Governor Johnson now owned by Carleton college and to turn the remainder of the fund, amounting to about $2,500, to St. Peter. This city has raised $1,000 for a Johnson monument and as Mr. O'Connor has offered to produce a replica in bronze for $3,000, the way is opened for another Johnson monument.

A Woman's Tribute.

Unobserved except by a few persons occurred a touching incident of the exercise. Shortly before the exercises began a middle-aged woman, rather plainly dressed, made her way through the throng about the statue and proceeded to the granite pedestal, placed at its feet a handful of roses and autumn leaves. John McCormack, who provided the pedestal, hastened to the woman's side and as a recognition of her delicate tribute, invited her to a place on the stand among the invited guests, at the same time asking her name. The woman in a half-frightened manner and in a foreign tongue, declined the honor and hurriedly disappeared in the crowd.

As a preliminary to the exercises, Governor O. A. Eberhart, with his entire staff in full dress uniform and the guests invited by the monument commission, marched out from the main entrance of the capitol to the stand, prepared for the day.

In the train from the capitol were C. D. O'Brien, chairman of the commission; Bishop J. J. Lawler, B. F. Nelson, A. C. Weiss, H. V. Jones, D. M. Neill, A. E. Rice, J. T. Schain, Arthur Selover, president of the Minneapolis council; Frank A. Day, Chief Justice C. M. Start, Justice C. L. Brown, G. W. Bunn, P. E. Brown and Andrew Holt of the supreme court; Congressman W. S. Hammond, former Justice Thomas D. O'Brien, Fred B. Lynch, Senator George P. Wilson, most of the state officials, the governor's military staff, the officers of the national guard and a delegation of old settlers, headed by A. L. Larpenteur.

While thousands of admirers stood looking at the memorial statue of Governor John A. Johnson and voiced appreciation of the remarkable lifelike piece of art, Andrew O'Connor, the sculptor, whose genius was complimented on all sides, was suffering from an attack of appendicitis in his rooms at The Saint Paul.

The sculptor was stricken Friday, but had been making every effort to ward off the attack which he felt was coming, until after the unveiling of the statue, so that he might be present. He was unable to do so, however, and Doctors H. T. O'Brien and Herbert Davis were called in consultation over Mr. O'Connor at about the time the statue was uncovered.

Mr. O'Connor was able to talk. "I did not want to be laid up just at this time," he said, "but I was compelled to forego the pleasure of seeing how the statue was received. It was a piece of work in which I was deeply interested, and I did so want to get close to those who knew your Governor, to hear just how the work appealed—and here I am laid up."

Mr. O'Connor was anxious to know what had been said about the monument, and when told that the work was the subject of enthusiastic comment, he expressed satisfaction. It is not expected he will be compelled to undergo an operation. He expressed the hope last night that he would be able to be about in a few days. The physicians are watching his case closely, however.

"We erect this monument," said Bishop Lawler in pronouncing the invocation, "to an illustrious son of our state in the hope that it will perpetuate his memory and serve to stimulate us all to try and emulate the highest and noblest type of citizenship which he exemplified." He invoked the blessings of God upon the state and upon the officers who are doing the work that Johnson did.

Miss Lynch was introduced by O. W. Ames, chairman of the commission, and, standing upon the platform, just as the band opened with the first bars of "America" she pulled the cord and the covering fell from the statue.

Mr. Ames announced with regret that Andrew O'Connor, "to whose genius, artistic imagination and skill of hand we are indebted for this monument," was ill and would not be able to attend. Mr. O'Connor was taken sick early yesterday with an attack of appendicitis. It is not believed the attack is serious, but physicians said he must remain in bed. He is at The Saint Paul.

C. D. O'Brien, originator of the idea of a memorial to Governor Johnson, as head of the commission, formally presented the statue to Governor Eberhart, who received it on behalf of the people of the state.

Governor Voices Appreciation.

"I accept it," said the Governor, "knowing that today Governor Johnson lives in the hearts of the people of Minnesota. I sat in that office when the body was lying in state and saw 62,000 men, women and children file through with bowed heads to take their last view of his remains. If ever there was a proof that the people of Minnesota appreciate noble services it was at that time.

"The men in the Capitol building who were loyal to him have been loyal to me, and his memory will serve to inspire them to a service like to that which he gave. He was typical of the West and of this state." Governor Eberhart quoted a poem with the lines "Out where the skies are a trifle bluer, out where the friends are a trifle truer, that's where the memory of John A. Johnson lives."

"Therefore," he concluded, "on behalf of every boy and girl in Minnesota and every man and woman to whom this will be an inspiration and a benediction. I accept this statue that we may build up the state to its true destiny." He ended with a word of thanks to the commission for its successful work.

Tribute of Great State to Great Men.

When Congressman Hammond was presented he looked out over the faces and up at the brilliant sky and exclaimed: "What a magnificent spectacle—the tribute of a great state to a great man." Then he delivered his address eulogizing and appraising the great work of Johnson and the place he held in the hearts of the people of the state and nation. When he made a stirring comparison with Lincoln the crowd was swept by his eloquence and applauded feelingly.

It was Congressman Hammond who nominated Governor Johnson for the gubernatorial candidacy, twice in the state, and who also presented his name to the national Democratic convention for the nomination for presidency; so it was especially fitting that he should nominate him for a high place in the memory of the people of the state and the nomination was heartily and unanimously accepted.

To Remember Bravery.

Gary Ind., Oct. 21.—Steps have been taken here to perpetuate the memory of Billy Rugh, the newsboy who died as the result of the operation on his withered limb to save a young girl's life.

SISTER IS ATTACKED

MARY GARVEY ASSAULTED WITH AX—NAMES BROTHER TONY AS HER ASSAILANT.

POSSIBLY IS A SUICIDE.

Police Think Man Who Jumped Off River Bridge May Be Relative—Woman May Recover.

Minneapolis. — Strongly suspecting Anthony Garvey of having attempted to murder his sister Mary at the latter's home, 2328 Seventh St. S., and that he later attempted to take his own life by leaping from the Franklin avenue bridge, the police are searching high and low for the man, not feeling positive that he succeeded in his attempt at self destruction.

Miss Garvey was found unconscious in her home, with two gashes in her head and the gas jets in the house turned on, but unlighted. She is now in the City hospital in a precarious condition, but may recover.

The discovery was made by Mrs. J. E. McGerty, a cousin, who called at Miss Garvey's residence. After knocking on the door for a long time she entered and saw the body of her cousin all covered with blood lying in a room on the second floor. She hurried out and notified the police and the injured woman was taken to the hospital.

She was unconscious at the time, but later revived and made a statement at the City hospital, say the police, accusing her younger brother of the assault.

At about 7:30 in the morning, a man answering the description of the brother, was seen to crawl over the railing of the Franklin avenue bridge and drop into the river, 100 feet below. The body disappeared almost immediately, but the police dragged for it all day in the hopes of recovering it. They were unsuccessful, but have renewed the search. It is still a matter of doubt whether the man drowned or saved himself by swimming.

Daniel Garvey, an older brother, admits that he, his brother and his sister quarreled Sunday night. It was over a guardian who had been appointed for Tony. Tony, who was about 35 years old, resented the idea of being hampered in enjoying his share of the estate left by his parents, is said to have made threats, but offered no violence. Daniel also said that his brother was mentally unbalanced and was notoriously a spendthrift, which made the appointment of a guardian a necessity.

Daniel told the police that when he left home for work on the government dam Tony was asleep. He knew nothing of the tragedy until notified by the police.

An ax that had been used as the weapon in the assault on Miss Garvey was found by Patrolman J. H. Thompson of the South Side station, in a summer kitchen. He was led to the place by a trail of blood. The back of the axe fitted the wound in Miss Garvey's skull, and it was undoubtedly the weapon used.

Anthony Garvey is described as being 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing about 185 pounds, smooth face and of dark complexion. He was dressed in a dark suit of clothes and wore a black soft hat. This description tallies with that of the man who jumped from the bridge and the police feel positive that he is the same man.

WAGE CHECK FOR RABIES

Experts Discuss the Threatened Epidemic.

Minneapolis.—Six of the greatest authorities on rabies in the Northwest gathered in conference with several of the most prominent kennel men and women of the city at the West Side Commercial club, admitted that an epidemic of rabies not only threatened Minneapolis, but was at present a grave reality, and accepted gratefully the offer of co-operation on the part of the 125 members of the Minneapolis Kennel club to combat it.

A remedy, the only possible solution veterinarians say, was offered. This is to either muzzle, leash or confine the dogs for six months or possibly longer. By doing this dogs that are healthy cannot become rabid, because to be infected a dog must be bitten by another that is rabid. Also, it is said, rabid dogs could be watched and if found to be infected, disposed of. This, the authorities urged last night, as the only feasible means to not only safeguard the public, but the dogs as well.

Bad Wreck Is Averted.

Albert Lea.—A disastrous wreck costing the lives of several passengers was averted on the Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad near here when a sleeping car attached to a passenger train jumped the rails and turned over after crossing a bridge.

Auto Runs Down Woman.

St. Paul—Mrs. F. Renard, resident of Rosetown, Minn., and Mrs. E. Nelson of St. Paul, were seriously hurt when an unknown automobile struck their carriage while they were driving on Rice street near the city limits. Mrs. Renard received a broken left arm. Mrs. Nelson's injuries were not so serious and she was removed to her home. The chauffeur speeded away leaving the women entangled in the [illegible]

MRS. [illegible] CAMERON-FALCONET

Mrs. Cameron-Falconet of Minneapolis is fighting in Chicago to regain possession of her daughter, Lucille Cameron, who became infatuated with Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist.

BABIES BURN; MOTHER IN JAIL

CHILDREN LEFT TO PROTECTION OF SCHOOLBOY ARE CAUGHT IN FIRE TRAP.

Infants Were Cold and Lad Was Endeavoring to Warm the House —Charred Bodies Found.

Buhl, Minn.—A mother and her woman neighbor under arrest, charged with drunkenness, and two babies left to the protection of a fifteen-year-old schoolboy, resulted in the burning of two infants behind locked doors where the boy had left them after starting a wood fire in a kitchen stove.

Mrs. Nicholas Mattson, mother of the two children, a boy 3 years old and a girl 11 months old, was taken to jail along with her companion by a policeman sent to the Spina location for that purpose.

Stopping on the way to town, the policeman took from school a 15-year-old son of Mrs. Mattson and told him to go home and care for the children.

The boy found the children cold and crying and lit a big fire in the kitchen. After half an hour he went out, locking the door. Returning in a few minutes he saw the entire inside of the house in flames. Two little bodies were later found, charred and blackened near the stove.

"OBEY" IS LEFT OUT.

Minneapolis Lawyer Has Novel Marriage.

New York, Oct. 23.—Miss Hilda Matzner, who is an artist by profession and an ethical culturist from choice, will become the bride of Louis L. Schwartz, a Minneapolis lawyer, and she will not promise to "obey" him. The ceremony, which has been "especially constructed for the occasion," according to the bride-to-be, will be performed in the new marriage room of Ethical Culture society, at Sixty-fourth street and Central Park west.

The "obey" clause will not figure in it, because Miss Matzner is a "moral progressive" and believes in the equality of the sexes. Just what other innovations will be included in the ceremony Miss Matzner could not announce when seen at her home, 471 Central Park west.

"All Ethical Culture marriage ceremonies differ and possess individualities," said Miss Matzner. "Ours will be performed by the Rev. John Lovejoy Elliott, one of the five elders of the society in New York state. We have left everything in his hands."

"Including the omission of the 'obey' clause?" she was asked.

"That omission," she answered, "is understood."

"Our wedding garments will be most individual," continued Miss Matzner. "I shall wear white crepe de chene cut along Greek lines and there will not be any lace in it. My veil will be an heirloom in my family. Mr. Schwartz will be dressed in conventional black." Mrs. Sarah Matzner, mother of the bride, will give her away.

Endowment For Windom.

Winona.—Rev. John H. Morley of Turners Falls, Mass., is in Minnesota to raise an endowment for Windom institute at Montevideo. He was pastor of the First Congregational church of this city from 1876 to 1883, and filled his old pulpit here on Sunday. An endowment of $250,000 is sought, and it is hoped to close up the first $100,000 the present year. Already some $73,000 is on hand or pledged for the first $100,000. There will be $20,000 available from the Levi Stewart estate in Minneapolis when the first $100,000 is raised. James J. Hill has promised to help.

Five Hurt in Train Crash.

Coleraine.—Five trainmen were injured near here Wednesday when a freight train on the Missabe railroad and an engine and caboose collided. The injured men are: Schultz, brakeman, shoulder dislocated and badly bruised; Fred Olson, fireman, badly bruised about head, may have concussion of the brain; Z. M. Allen, fireman; John Hibbard and C. W. Brown, brakeman, hurt. The wreck stopped traffic and no ore cars were able to [illegible] today, thus shutting down [illegible]

$10,000 IS PURLOINED

VOUCHERS OBTAINED FROM SOO MESSENGER BY RUSE.

MERCHANTS CASH THEM.

Within Half an Hour Score Are Placed—Police Have Meager Description of Thieves.

Minneapolis.—Two bold robbers, by a ruse, secured 173 Soo line pay checks, valued at about $10,000 from Oscar Christianson, a messenger boy for the road, visited a dozen department stores and other places of business and cashed about 20 of them, valued conservatively at $2,000, within the next half hour, then dropped out of sight after almost the entire central station detail of plain clothes men had been put on the case.

Boldest Theft of Northwest.

In many respects, police officials declare, the theft, and the work of cashing the checks after forging indorsements, make one of the boldest pieces of work in the history of Northwest crime. For a half hour after the police had learned of the theft, and detailed detectives on it, to at least two cases, while the business places were being notified, the men worked. After several narrow escapes from detection they disappeared from the downtown district, their hands loaded with packages, and their pockets with cash. Ten detectives, with the serial numbers of the missing checks, were then scouring the town for them.

Police Lack Descriptions.

Despite their efforts, the police had nothing to work on except a variety of descriptions of the pair who cashed the checks, and a dozen pieces of crinkled green paper, for which the robbers had been paid face value.

The Soo officials, Minneapolis banks, and the police department united, soon after the robbery, in notifying downtown business places of the missing checks. The notifications, in many cases, came too late.

Turning abruptly to the other extreme, after knowledge of the robbery had become general, business men caused an endless amount of trouble to more than 2,000 Soo line employes with good checks they desired cashed. The stolen checks were those to be used in paying off the comparatively few employes of the road at the freight station. Two thousand men employed at the Shoreham shops, invaded the downtown district with good checks they desired cashed and everywhere they met with a chilly reception.

Many Merchants Anxious.

At police headquarters, several officials were kept busy answering telephone queries of anxious business men who had had the matter of cashing a Soo check put up to them. Checks not bearing the serial numbers of any of the missing ones, generally were cashed. Many of the employes, however, were forced to go home with their monthly wage still on the company's paper.

According to Oscar Christianson, the messenger boy, one of the pair later seen in downtown stores approached him as he was carrying the package of checks from the general Soo offices to the freight station. The stranger told the boy he was from the paymaster's office. He said he had been sent to take the checks back to the general offices, as the indorsement of some official had been omitted. The boy readily gave up the checks, and the stranger boarded a passing car.

Thieves Captured.

Minneapolis.—Owen T. Morris and Albert K. Borke have just confessed to the police that they conceived and executed the plot to rob Oscar Christianson, 16-year-old messenger, of 173 pay checks belonging to the Soo Line, that they cashed eight of them for a total of $576.19, and that, becoming frightened, they mailed 155 back to the company, 10 having been destroyed by Borke.

GARVEY'S BODY FOUND.

Police Recover Remains of Sister's Assailant.

Minneapolis.—After diligently dragging the river for more than 24 hours, the police found the body of Anthony Garvey, who jumped from the Franklin avenue bridge, after having inflicted probably fatal wounds on his sister, Mary Garvey, at the family home, 2328 Seventh street south.

The police feel confident that this ends the case so far as they are concerned, for Miss Garvey, during a short period of consciousness, declared that her assailant was her brother Tony. The body has been positively identified as that of her brother.

There is still a slight hope that Miss Garvey will recover, although her skull was fractured in three places and her injuries are considered of a grave nature.

Campaign Manager Arraigned.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A. B. Crowell, Charles L. Steadman and Arthur R. Ferrin, indicted by the grand jury on charges of violating the state election laws by distributing campaign literature without appending their signatures, were arraigned before Judge Jelley and pleaded not guilty. In each instance 10 days was allowed within which to withdraw the pleas and enter demurrers to the indictments. Bail was fixed at $100 in each case and the defendants released on their own recognizance.

Fear for Motorboat's Crew.

Duluth.—Two adventurous Duluth young men and a companion from Marquette, Mich., are somewhere on the reaches of Lake Superior between Houghton and Duluth, bound this way in a small motor boat. The Duluth men are J. A. McLennan, vice president of the Manley McLennan agency and William White, Jr. Their Marquette companion is Ward Powell. According to advices from Houghton [illegible]

Youthful Robber Dying.

Minneapolis. — Finally realizing that death is near, Lloyd P. Foster, who was shot and mortally wounded by Patrolman Martin Johnson of the East Side station early Sunday morning when he attempted to make his escape after having been caught in the act of burglarizing a drug store, asked the head nurse at the City hospital to summon a priest. The burglar, who is [illegible] confessed, received [illegible]

$1,600,000 to Be Asked.

St. Paul. — While addressing a group of social workers, Dr. Christopher Easton, secretary of the State Tuberculosis association, said that the next session of the legislature would be asked to appropriate $1,600,000 to fight the white plague in Minnesota. This sum, he declared, would be sufficient for a period of years. Mr. Easton said that the state tuberculosis hospital at Walker was inadequate and [illegible]

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Vote for Roosevelt for president and Collins for Governor. The two progressive republican candidstes.

Eberhart says if he is elected he will inforce the law. He will if he catches individual violators, but a lumber company can slanghter fish and violate all the laws they want to and Adolph never bears about it.

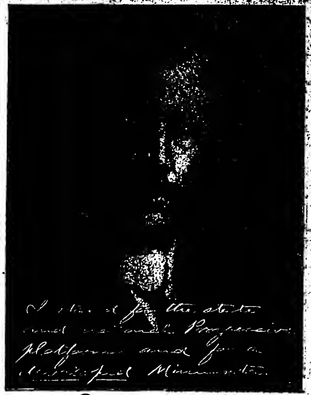
Red Lake River farmers should remember the way they were used by the Taft appointed government engineers last winter, and that Major Shook was promoted to a higher position for faithful services rendered to the corporations.

Eberhart and Knut Nelson are going to make a tour of the state this week for Taft. That is they expect to convince the farmers that Taft was only joking about Reciprocity. It is unnecessary to add that Knut will not qnote from his senate speech when this matter was up before congress. If he did, people might think he was crazy.

During the next two years the farmers who must pay the taxes for these county ditches, and the contractors who are digging them for profit are likely to have some hot lawsuits. J. M. Bishop, the Republican nominee for county attorney has promptly taken the farmers and tax payers side of the case, while Stanton seems to be of the opinion that about all the rights a farmer has, is the right to pay taxes. Which one of these are yon going to vote for next Tuesday? The Northwestern Drainage company or for Stanton. We are for Bishop. We have not a word to say against Mr. Stantons ability as a lawyer, but J.M. Bishop is just as good a lawyer as he is. The only question to decide is where their interest, your interests and the interest of the ditch tax payer lies.

We have been in politics a good many years, but Adolph Eberhart is the first man that we ever heard of running for a prominent office that had the solid backing of the temperance people, preachers, Wholesale Whisky dealers, and Beer Brewers at the same time. It looks funny to hear a minister of the gospel pray for temperance and the abolishing of the saloons then wipe the tears out of his eyes and advise his congregation to vote for Eberhart for governor. A man that would promptly veto a county option law, or anyother temperance laws that would effect the interests of his masters the great Brewing Companies.

Lattimore says we placed the name of Republican over the names of Roosevelt and Collins. You bet they are Republicans, and they are the class of Republicans that will stay in this fight until they route men like Taft and Eberhart out of the party. Lattimore knows as well as we do, that Taft engineers and Eberharts Game and Fish Commission represented the interests of the lumber companies last winter on this River Fight. Now he comes out and supports them under the cloak of republicanism, a hl — of a republican he is! Supporting the democratic nominee for county attorney, who is the nominee of the drainage companies, to help put the farmers in the same position on county ditches that they were in regarding Red Lake River last winter.



Sincerely
P. V. Collins

VOTE FOR COLLINS X.

The Farmers Candidate for Governor. The man who stood by The Minnesota Farmers in the Reciprocity Fight.

Porto Rico's New Wonder.

From far away Porto Rico come reports of a wonderful new discovery that is believed will vastly benefit the people. Ramon T. Marchan, of Barceloneta, writes "Dr. King's New Discovery is doing splendid work here. It cured me about five times of terrible coughs and colds, also my brother of a severe cold in his chest and more than 20 others, who used it on my advice. We hope this great medicine will yet be sold in every drug store in Porto Rico." For throat and lung troubles it has no equal. A trial will convince you of its merit. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by All Druggists.

ROOSEVELT LEADS.

According to a straw vote being taken by the Duluth Herald and the results of which that paper has been publishing for the past twelve days, Roosevelt is the favorite candidate among the readers of that paper. The Herald is the most radical democratic sheet in the state, and it has crowed lustily because Wilson showed the greatest strength in the early days of this straw vote. In The figures yesterday Roosevelt leads and Wilson takes second place. The figures shown are; Roosevelt, 783; Wilson, 666. Debs, 304; Taft. 292; Chafin, 26. Oh, yes; Roosevelt is losing every day to Taft — so the city papers say.—Northern Light.

Only A Fire Hero

But the crowd cheered, as, with burned hands, he held up a small round box. "Fellows!" he shouted, "this Bucklen's Arnica salve I hold, has everything beat for burns." Right! also for boils, ulcers, sores, pimples, eczema, cuts, sprains' bruises. Surest pile cure. It subdues inflammation, kills pain. Only 25 cents at All Druggists.

The Limit.

Stern—Say, is Brown's credit good?
Kern—Good? Why, he couldn't even borrow trouble.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

PNEUMONIA

left me with a frightful cough and very weak. I had spells when I could hardly breathe or speak for 10 to 20 minutes. My doctor could not help me, but I was completely cured by

DR. KING'S New Discovery

Mrs. J. E. Cox, Joliet, Ill.

50c AND $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Paid Advertising:

Allow me through the columns of your esteemed paper to extend to my neighbors and friends throughout the County my sincere thanks for their support and for the nomination tendered me at the Primary Election.

Knowing our teachers, the conditions in our schools and being in the work, it will be a source of pleasure to me serve the people and to do my best for the upholding of our rural schools should I be favored with the election on Nov. 5th.

Fraternally,
E. A. Mostue.

(Paid Advertisement. $5.00 paid by H.G. Hieber of Thief River Falls, Minn., Sec. of the personal Campaign Committee of Wilhelm Michelet. Non partisan Candidate for the office of Judge of Probate in and for Pennington Co., Minn.)

Wilhelm Michelet

JUDGE OF PROBATE.

Non-Partisan Candidate for Re-election.

I Respectfully Solicit Your Vote and Support,

WILHELM MICHELET,
Thief River Falls, Minn.

True Enough.

Tallman—Could you loan me $5, Bill?
Smallman—Sorry, old man, but you can see for yourself I'm pretty short just now.—Washington Star.

Flagged Train With Shirt.

Tearing his shirt from his back an Ohio man flagged a train and saved it from a wreck, but H. T. Alston, Raleigh, N. C., once prevented a wreck with Electric Bitters. "I was in a terrible plight when I began to use them," he writes, "my stomach, head, back and kidneys were all badly affected and my liver was in bad condition, but four bottles of Electric Bitters made me feel like a new man." A trial will convince you of their matchless merit, for any stomach, liver or kidney trouble. Price 50 cents at all Druggists.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Sep. 20th. 1912

Department of the Interior, U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 9th. 1912

NOTICE is hereby given that Grace M. Pinkerton, of Torgerson Minn., who on May 15th, 1911, made homestead Entry No. 06123 for S. E. ¼ Section 22 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. [illegible] Judge for the city of Thief River Falls at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 20 day of November, 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

A. Tillee, of Germantown Minn. John Markuson, E. H. Brsaceon, of Torgerson Minn. J. H. Hay, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Oct. 25.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. October 23rd. 1912

Notice is hereby given that Johan E. Udstrand of Torgerson Minn. who on Dec. 11th, 1905, made Homestead Entry No. 1251. Serial No. 01510, for W. ½ N.W. ¼ Section 28 Township 154 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 5th, day of December 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Reinhart A. Johnsrud, Emil Sigerud, Mikkel Amundson, Theodor O. Berg all of Torgerson, Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Oct. 25th. 1912

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Oct. 21st. 1912

Notice is hereby given that Hans P. Dahl of Neptune Minn., who on October 2, 1911, made Homestead Application Serial No. [illegible] for S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼ Sec. 13. E. ½ N. W. ¼ & S. W. ¼ N. W. ¼ Section 21 Township 153 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn, on the 4th, day of December 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Joseph Dahl, of Oklee Minn. Alfred Nelson Selma Nelson, Jacob H. Dahl, of Neptune Minn.

Asthar P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Oct. 4, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Sept. 30th, 1912

Notice is hereby given, that Nels Thorstenson, of Germantown Minn., who on May 16th, 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 06162 for Lots 1, 2 & S. ½ N. E. ¼ Section 3 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet. U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 12th. day of November 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses

Martin Olson, Robert Ramback, John Ose. Carl Edseth, all of Germantown Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Doesn't Like to Move.

A most curious and sluggish creature is the tuatara, a nine inch lizard whose home is in New Zealand. This little imitation saurian has the reputation of being the laziest creature ever created. He is usually found clinging to rocks or logs along the shores of rivers and lakes and has been known to remain in one position perfectly motionless for many months. How the creature manages to exist is a mystery.

A Misleading Sign.

She entered the grocery store with a jar of marmalade in her hand and fire in her eye. "See here," she said to the clerk, "I bought this stuff because the card in your window says it's an excellent substitute for butter."

"Yes, ma'am; so it is."

"Well, it's a grand substitute, I must say! I tried frying a bit of fish with it this morning, and the taste was so awful I had to throw the fish all away."—Boston Transcript.

A Bengalese Peculiarity.

A doctor remarks: "What strikes one most at a Bengal hospital is the lack of sense of proportion in the estimation of diseases. A man is gravely perturbed because he has not sneezed for three months, but he is comparatively indifferent to the fact that he exhibits the early signs of leprosy."

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINE LINE OF GROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9,40 a. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m,

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Oct. 11th, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S Land Office at Crookston Minn. October 7th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Halvor Svendson, of Hilda Minnesota, who, on June 27th, 1906, made Homestead Application No. 1196, Serial No. 04169, for lots 3, 4, Section 1, and Lots 1, 2, Section 2, Township 153 N., Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for the District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 11th, day of November 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Knut Asleson, Swan Swanson, O. A. [illegible], of Hilda Minn. Halvor Falkedal, of Highlanding Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

Premium Catalogue and Pattern Catalogue free, on request.

W.G.Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

We have a fine farm for sale in Deer Park township for only $21 per acre.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof

Voters should remember, that that the polls close at 5 o'clock on General Election day. Do not make a mistake in the time but be sure to be there before 5 o' clock.

The weather indicates to day, that our Indian summer has started. About three weeks fine warm weather at this season of the year would make the Northern Minnesota farmer smile.

If the sneak thief who has been cutting and hauling the green poplar trees off from the east lot of The Sunbeam Farm gets caught at it we will endeavor to see that he gets what is coming to him, a few days free board.

Bernhard Knutson, Sec of the Republican Central Committee, has sent out Republican sample ballots. Any voter can take one of these sample ballots into the voting booth to look at and copy from. Take one with you and vote it straight, from top to bottom.

This is our last issue of THE SUNBEAM before election, and we ask our readers to remember one fact, and that is this: That we have not changed or turned our coat in this campaign. If we told you last winter that a man was dishonest in office, and had appointed tools of the corporations to office, we have stood by our guns and will stand by them until the sun sets on election day.

The Griffith dredge started digging on the lower end of Ditch 53, yesterday. This makes two dredges working on this ditch which will insure its completion this fall, and make a good passible road to Highlanding from the south side of the river at all seasons of the year, and the next thing we need is a bridge across the river at that point, and we will soon get it, if we can get the river out from under the control of the government.

We regret to state that the tickets showed, when they were counted at the primary election in Highlanding, that there was a number that did not understand how to vote correctly. The people who do not understand the ticket has a right to ask instructions from the judges of election, or he can call on a friend to go into the booth with them and show him how to vote. It is not surprising that a farmer who has been devoting all his time to saveing his crops should not understand how to vote them long tickets correct, so do not be bashful about asking for assistance.

Our Republican County Committee certainly have one dandy member in the person of John. Lattimore, who has sold out part of the county ticket, and is supporting Stanton for County Attorney. A little grease generously contributed by the drainage companies, and applied where it does the most good helps with a man that has no respect for honesty. Then the old "mug wamp" comes out and supports such old rotten dung heaps as Taft and Eberhart for office because, he says they are REPUBLICANS. "Gee Whizz". That is the rotten stink that we predicted would come from the Northeast, some time ago.

Mother Goose.

It is reported that the following occurred in a small poultry store kept by the widow of the deceased merchant:

"I should like to see a nice fat goose," said a customer entering the shop.

"Yes, sir," replied the boy. "Mother will be down directly."—Woman's Home Companion.

An Eye to Business.

"Son, would you like to see your name written high on the scroll of fame?" "No, pa; I'd like to see my name stamped on some domestic article that no family could do without."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

THAT CHALLENGE.

The Steenerson campaign committee seems to have stirred up a hornets nest among the socialists by the publication of their catechism. They have got so excited that they have actually challenged Steenerson to debate with their nominee M. A. Brattland and seem to be surprised because he, Steenerson does not accept the challange. For Steenerson to accept a challenge of this kind would be something like the pugilist Jack Johnson accepting a challenge to fight sent him by a 12 year, old school boy. Johnson would simply inform the "kid" that a battle of that kind would not draw a crowd but would tell him to fight someone nearer his own size and that is just what Steenerson's campaign committee told Mr. Brattland. We are personally acquainted with these two men and we would not go a mile to hear a debate between them, as it would be to one sided to be interesting. In 1890 this district sent a man to congress that was elected by blind prejudice, that was no more fit for that position than a yellow dog.

Ever since that time there has been "jack knife" politicians that have sprung up about every two years and tried to hoist themselves into offices by exciting and prejudicing the people to catch votes. This year his name is Brattland, and his residence is at Ada Minnesota, and he comes under the political name of "Socialist", but he will be overwhelming defeated next Tuesday, as the people are to well onto their job to elect a man like him to fill the shoes of Congressman Steenerson, as a representative in congress from this District, "ja, ja, ja."

A Great Building Falls.

when its foundation is undermined, and if the foundation of health—good digestion—is attacked, quick collapse follows. On the first signs of indigestion, Dr. King's New Life Pills should be taken to tone the stomach and regulate liver, kidneys and bowels. Pleasant, easy, safe and only 25 cents at All Druggists.

HEAL IT WITH
Bucklen's
THE ONLY GENUINE
Arnica Salve
KEEPS FLESH IN TONE FROM SKIN TO BONE.
Heals Everything Healable, Burns, Boils, Sores, Ulcers, Piles, Eczema, Cuts, Corns, Wounds and Bruises.
SATISFIES, OR MONEY BACK.
25c AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Subscribe for The Sunbeam.

Pay up your back Subscription.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the American College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

HOUSE KEEPER WANTED.

I desire to employ the services of a house keeper on my farm in the town of Kratka. Good conveniences and steady employment. Salary $4.00 a week and board. Call on or address,

John Quirk,
Highlanding Minn

Muscles.

Many muscles are located at a considerable distance from the point where their force is to be exerted and are connected with the point of operation by slender strings or tendons. This is a provision of nature solely for convenience. If all the muscles whose power is concentrated in the hand and foot were located in the hands or feet these members would assume an inordinate size and weight and become more troublesome than useful.

Pipes and Hymns.

Rev. Dr. Parr when perpetual curate of Hatton, Warwickshire, which living he held from 1783 to 1790, regularly smoked in the vestry while the congregation was singing long hymns, chosen for the purpose, immediately before the sermon. The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] hymns, but I [illegible] a long pipe."—London Telegraph.

Republican Ticket.

For President:
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
U. S. Senator:
KNUT NELSON.
Governor:
P. V. COLLINS.
Treasurer—WALTER SMITH
Attorney General:
LYNDON A. SMITH.
Railroad Commissioner (4 years)
IRA B. MILLS.
Congressman at Large:
JAMES MANAHAN.
Congressman for 9th, Dist.
HALVOR STEENERSON.
Representative to the Legislature
HON. D. P. ONEIL
County Auditor:
A. H. FASEL.
Treasurer:
ANDREW TROVATON.
For Sheriff;
W. J. LaBREE
Register of Deeds:
NELS J. ANDERSON.
For Coroner
H. R. HALVORSON
For County Surveyor
C. H. MARTZ
County Attorney:
J. M. BISHOP.
Clerk of Court:
HARRY E. IVES.
County Commissioner 2nd, Dist.
DANIEL SHAW.
5th, District:
A B. MANDT.

This column will be for the use of any of the candidates for office, who desire to make a statement to the voters over their own signature. It pays us to have you use it, but if you don't think it pays you don't use it.

Paid advertising.

Having received the nomination of the Public Ownership Party for candidate for County Commissioner of the 5th commissioner district, I will, if elected, consider myself at the service of the people and use all my efforts in the interests of the tax payers of Pennington County.

I earnestly solicit the support of the voters at the final election November 5th.

Respectfully
George Leimers.

TO THE VOTERS

I wish to express to the voters of our County my appreciation of your splendid support given me at the primaries just held for Pennington County. The vote for the county attorney was as follows to-wit:

For J. M. Bishop, Republican Candidate for County attorney 895 votes, O. A. Naplin, Socialist candidate for County attorney 170 votes, E. M. Stanton, Democratic candidate for county attorney 62 votes.

The above figures are absolutly correct. About 600 of my votes were given me by the farming community and the remainder of the vote by the City of Thief River Falls.

I will greatly appreciate a continuation of your splendid vote and support at the general election to be held on November 5th, 1912,

Very sincerely yours,
J. M. Bishop, Republican nominee for County attorney for Pennington county, Minnesota

Paid Advertisement

I wish to thank my supporters for the republican nomination for County Treasurer, and also my opponent and his supporters for the clean, gentlemanly manner in which they conducted their campaign.

On account of my official duties I shall not be able to make much of a personal campaign for the November Election, but will do all I can for all the Republican nominees by the Primary last Tuesday, because they are all good men as far as I know, and were fairly nominated by our party.

I believe it would be bad for the county should our party be defeated, especially so far as Congress and Legislature are concerned.

Very Sincerely
Andrew Trovaton

BULLIOT'S RASH BET.

A Banker's Wagers on St. Swithin's Day Rain Legend.

There were few frenzied financiers in England at the beginning of the eighteenth cetury if the banker Bulliot, of whom the following story is told, can be taken as an example. The feast of St. Swithin, July 15, 1725, was a particularly wet and stormy day.

Trusting implicitly in the old superstition which says that if it rains on St. Swithin's day it will rain for forty days thereafter, Bulliot opened a pool for every one who was willing to bet against him. The affair attained so much notoriety that the wager was reduced to writing.

"If, dating from St. Swithin's day," reads the memorandum, "it rains more or little during forty days successively Bulliot will be considered to have gained, but if it cease to rain for only one day during that time Bulliot has lost."

For two weeks it continued to shower every day, and so confident did the banker become that he accepted as stakes not only money, but gold headed canes, jewels, snuffboxes and even clothes. When his cash gave out he offered notes and bills of exchange. Another week passed, and Bulliot's star was still in the ascendant.

But when the twenty-second day sank into the west bright and cloudless the unfortunate banker was ruined.—London Graphic.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

JUDGE OSCAR HALLAM.

Primary Nominee for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Wouldn't It Be Fine?

"Radium is constantly giving off particles of itself, yet never gets any smaller."

"Gosh! That's the kind of stuff for a bank roll."—Pittsburgh Post.

But for some sorrow and trouble we would never know half the good there is about us.—Dickens.

Nothing to It.

"Green and Brown are having a terrible row down the street."

"What seems to be the matter?"

"I don't know, but they are calling each other 'thief and 'liar'"—

"Did you say Green and Brown?"

"Yes?"

"I thought so. They are just having a friendly political discussion. Come on: let's go home."

His Errand

"[illegible] Billy! Where you goin'?"
"I ain't goin'; I'm just [illegible] off my [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]."—Punch.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.

NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Giteau Vic. Prs. Larry O'Niel, Abraham Parquize, T. L. Cruzon.

J. A. DUFFY, Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever came into this Section of the Country.

Don't Buy Eleswhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.

Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost.

BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at our expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

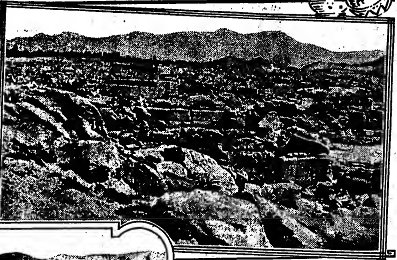
DEFECTIVE PAGE

The DEAD CITY of CAJAMARQUILLA

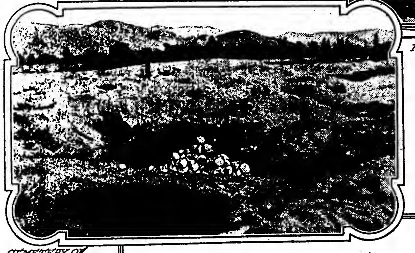
By Charles Warren Currier, Ph. D.

OF the thousands of people who inhabit Lima, or of the many who, in the winter months, take a run up to Chosica, on the Oroya railway, there is probably not one in a hundred who knows anything of Cajamarquilla. I was about to leave the capital of Peru without dreaming that, within a stone's throw, there were slumbering the ruins of a prehistoric civilization that had not yet passed away when Pizarro laid the foundation of the City of the Sovereigns.

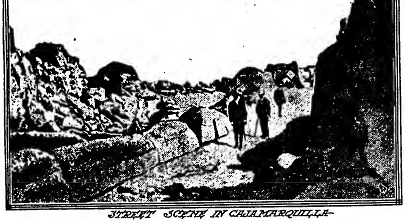
The sacred city of Pachacamac is known to, and mentioned by every traveler who includes Lima within the limits of his itinerary. It has been visited and described from the days of the Conquistadores with more or less accuracy, until Dr. Max Uhle made a special study of it and published his monumental work. If these ruins of the Lurin valley are world famous, it is not thus with those of the valley of the Rimac, and if Pachacamac is known to all, solitary Cajamarquilla is buried in an obscurity as deep as the sand that covers it, while few, very few, authors even make mention of it.



RUINS OF CAJAMARQUILLA, PERU



CEMETERY OF NEVERIA NEAR CAJAMARQUILLA



STREET SCENE IN CAJAMARQUILLA

I said that I was about to leave Lima. It was the eve of my departure when I learned from Professor Saville, of New York, the well-known Ecuadorian explorer, that he had visited the ruins that very day. How I wished that I could have accompanied him! I concluded that regrets were useless and I was about to relinquish all hope of ever seeing the old Peruvian city, when I learned that the departure from Callao of the Ucayali had been postponed for a day. Communicating this fact to Doctor Saville, he most graciously volunteered to accompany me on the morrow. It was an opportunity I readily grasped.

Thus it happened that we met by appointment at the Lima station of the Oroya railroad at 8:30 on a morning early in July. Gray clouds, as usually, hung heavily over the city when we boarded the train, which soon pulled out of the station, to begin the steep journey up the Andean slopes. A little way outside of Lima the sun was shining in a cloudless sky, scattering its rays through an atmosphere as transparent as any you could wish to see in Castile or Aragon. Here and there on the route the adobe ruins of pre-Inca civilization might be observed, for the Rimac valley is richer in such ruins than any other part of the coast.

The morning was bright and exhilarating when we arrived at Santa Clara railway station. Leaving Mrs. Saville to proceed to Chosica, the professor, his young son, and myself alighted. A little mule car, run on tracks, awaited us. It might accommodate about nine persons. We sprang to the seats, the driver whipped up his mules, and off we were on the long, sandy road between fields of sugar cane. Poor mules, cut and bleeding, how we pitied them! But in those countries animals are handled without mercy.

A run of a couple of miles or more, passing on the way the little train that is used to haul the cane, or carry the laborers, we arrived near the dwelling of the hacienda, now leased, I understand, by Chinese. Some distance from the house we alighted, to continue the journey on foot in the direction of the mountains. For a while we had a good, though dusty road, but the greater part of the journey had to be made through sandy plains, which did not improve our personal appearance, so that we presented a picture of dust and wretchedness on our return to the Hotel Maury in Lima. Our way was now and then obstructed by adobe walls, or by the canals used for irrigation, and over these we had to climb or jump. It was not long before we caught sight of the ruins, solitary and abandoned. With the exception of a herd of cattle and the mounted herdsman, besides an occasional buzzard or vulture, no living being was in sight.

Cajamarquilla lies about 23 miles from Lima, as you ascend the valley of the Rimac, but in a side valley, in a plain among the spurs of the Andes. The valley is watered by a canal, dug, probably, at a period antedating the advent of the Spaniards. In the vicinity are several haciendas, such as Huachipa and La Niveres, and an occasional "tambo" or rural inn, where, if you care to, some kind of refreshment may be had. These, however, are hardly visible from the ruins, near which one solitary hut is to be seen. Years ago, when Squier visited the place, the ruins were the [illegible] bbers that gave no little [illegible] authorities, but it is now quite safe to visit Cajamarquilla. In fact, the thought of robbers was not connected in my mind with Cajarmarquilla, until I read Squier's work.

During our brief stay among the ruins it was impossible to make anything like measurements, except with the eye, but as far as the vision extended towards the mountain we saw nothing but ruins which stretched to a great distance to right and left. Toward the river they seemed to melt away into the plain. Squier says that they cover an area of nearly a square league, and Middendorf estimates their extent at four square kilometers. From my observations, the ruins consist of houses built of immense adobe blocks, closely adjoining each other, here and there separated by streets. Some of the houses consist of several apartments. Admission is gained through a low doorway, but nowhere is there a sign of a window. As in Pompeii, the roofs, whatever may have been the material of their construction, have long since fallen in. Outside the buildings, the soil has risen to a great height, sometimes nearly to the top of the wall, but inside the walls the depth gives an idea of the original height of perhaps 10 feet or more. Toward the mountain, a large portion of the city is almost completely buried in the sand, which in the course of ages has come drifting down from the hills. There are within the city a few elevations or small hills, which may have been occupied by temples or forts. Pits are everywhere within and without the houses, with a width of from two to four and a depth ranging from six to twenty feet or more. Human remains in the shape of skulls and bones are found within the pits or scattered over the ground, together with bits of pottery and other articles, such as corncobs, which were probably interred with the dead. Some of these pits are said to have served the purposes of storehouses or granaries, while others were certainly graves. The inhabitants of the city buried their dead within or in the immediate vicinity of their houses, although the mass of the people must have used the necropolis, some distance away from the residences. Many of these pits, excavated in the hard soil, are in the form of a jar or urn, while others are square.

Squier thus describes the ruins as he saw them:

"These consist of three great groups of buildings on and around the central mass, with streets passing between them. It would be impossible to describe this complicated maze of massive adobe walls, most of them still standing, albeit much shattered by earthquakes, or to convey an idea of the pyramidal edifices, rising stage on stage, with terraces and broad flights of steps leading to their summits."

He adds that the history of the place has been lost to tradition. [illegible]

As standing on an eminence, surrounded by the ruins, with the silence of death upon you, you look down upon what was once a city, [illegible] part of the city is buried would indicate remote antiquity, and a possible destruction of the place long before the advent of the Europeans, were it not for what Estete tells us. Miguel Estete accompanied Hernando Pizarro from Caxamarca to Pachacamac, at the time when Atahualpa's people were scouring the country to collect sufficient gold for the ransom of their unfortunate chief. He gives us the itinerary of Hernando day by day until the return to Caxamarca. Wherever he goes he finds the country thickly populated with towns and villages, surrounded by cultivated fields of maize and orchards, with flocks of a kind of sheep. He judges that Pachacamac is of considerable antiquity, and he finds within it a certain number of ruins. No mention is made of Cajamarquilla, yet it is probable that his journey led him through the valley of the Rimac, and Markham even supposes that he passed over the present site of Lima.

According to Middendorf, who infers his statement from Estete's narrative, the valley was at that time thickly populated, having besides many smaller places three large towns, Huadca, now Huatica, Armatambo, and Cajamarquilla. Huadca, he says, was the principal town of the district. Its ruins still exist between Lima and the village of Magdelena, but they seem to be even less known than those of Cajamarquilla.

The valley, together with the entire coast, was overrun and conquered by the Incas, a century or more before the arrival of the Spaniards, about the time that these lords of the Peruvian uplands imposed their rule on the Grand Chimu farther north and on Pachacamac. Though there is little or nothing to indicate an Inca occupation at Cajamarquilla, it is quite likely that after the conquest its population more or less mingled with the conquerors. To judge from the names of places in the conquered districts, the victors imposed their language, no doubt gradually supplanting the original tongue of the valleys and coastlands. Caxamarca is a Quechua name, meaning "rock city." Caxamarquilla is the Spanish diminutive of Caxamarca. The city in the Rimac valley was thus called Little Caxamarca, to distinguish it, no doubt, from that other Caxamarca to the north, so intimately connected with the sad history of Atahualpa.

Among old writers who have treated of the coast people that preceded the Incas, Don Francisco de Avila, priest in the principal village of Huarochiri, may be profitably consulted. His work was translated and published by Sir Clement Markham, in the forty-eighth volume of the Hakluyt series.

Unfortunately, Cajamarquilla furnishes little data to the archaeologist. It contains no inscriptions, no works of art, and its pits have been opened and searched, probably by treasure hunters, who have long since carried off any objects of value they may have contained.

Yet the ruins are of the greatest interest for the beauty of their situation, their general plan, and their adobe architecture. Cajamarquilla must rank as one of the finest remains of that mysterious pre-Inca civilization which existed on the coast between the Pacific ocean and the mighty Andean ranges. Unlike the massive ruins on Lake Titicaca, or the oft-mentioned Pachacamac, it has attracted little attention on the part either of tourist or scientist, and its history does not exist. Yet a careful study of its houses, with their apartments, of its streets, and of its burial places may, I think, throw some light on the mode of life of the primitive people that once dwelt within it. The ethnologist may also find some material in the skulls that lie scattered throughout the ruined city, or buried in its pits.

As you wander through the Rimac valley and contemplate its vast solitudes and crumbling ruins, you ask yourself what has become of the population. Alas, what has become of the Indian population of the West Indies, and where are our Indians of the United States? They have melted away before Caucasian civilization.

Some day a patient explorer and archaeologist may pitch his tents among the ruins of Cajamarquilla to study them in detail and force them to reveal some of their secrets. At least he may give us a plan of the city, and reconstruct it, drawing some order from its confusion.

For the present Cajamarquilla is a mystery. It has neither history nor traditions nor legends [illegible]

A Girl's Pity.

"It was King Midas, wasn't it, who turned everything he touched to gold?"

"I believe so."

"Poor old fellow."

"Why do you think he was a poor old fellow?"

"He never could eat a pickle with his fingers."

Probably.

"A thing is never so when it is not so."

"I'll bet it is if your wife says it is."

Many a bewhiskered man has been known to tell barefaced lies.

Smoke Pleasure and other Pleasures for the Man Who Smokes

Liggett & Myers

Duke's Mixture

There is smoke pleasure in this pure old Virginia and North Carolina bright leaf. Thousands prefer it to all others. Thoroughly aged and stemmed and then granulated—there is no better.

One and a half ounces of this choice tobacco cost only 5c, and with each sack you get

A Free Present Coupon

The other pleasures are the presents that are secured with the coupons in each sack of Liggett & Myers Duke's Mixture. These presents delight old and young. Think of the pleasure that you and your friends can get from a talking machine, free, or such articles as—fountain pens, balls, skates, cut glass, china, silverware, tennis racquets, fishing rods, furniture, etc.

As a special offer, during November and December only we will send you our new illustrated catalog of presents, FREE.

Just send us your name and address on a postal.

Coupons from Duke's Mixture may be assorted with tags from HORSE SHOE, J.T., TINSLEY'S NATURAL LEAF, GRANGER TWIST, coupons from FOUR ROSES (10c-tin double coupon), PICK PLUG CUT, PIEDMONT CIGARETTES, CLIX CIGARETTES, and other tags and coupons issued by us.

Address—Premium Dept.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

A CURE FOR PILES.

Cole's Carbolisalve stops itching and pain—and cures piles. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle. Adv.

Your Liver Is Clogged Up

That's Why You're Tired—Out of Sorts—Have No Appetite.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will put you right in a few days.

They do their duty.

Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion and Sick Headache

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

THOMPSON'S EYE WATER Quickly relieves eye irritation caused by dust, sun or wind. Booklet free

JOHN L. THOMPSON SONS & CO., Troy, N. Y.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 44-1912.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

FOR BACKACHE·RHEUMATISM KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

RICH IN CURATIVE QUALITIES·NO HABIT FORMING DRUGS

$927.33 NET FROM 3 ACRES

Remarkable, you say? You can do the same thing. Get some land in Mississippi or Louisiana.

On August 20, 1912, Mr. James A. Cox of Centerville, Miss., writes that in 1912 to date he had gathered 1029 crates of tomatoes and sold them for $927.33. And in this figure he did not take into account the culls which were sold separately.

IT'S THE LAND OF PROMISE

and corn, cotton, alfalfa, oats, fruits, vegetables, hogs and cattle. Better investigate. Write for illustrated booklets and full information to J. C. CLAIR, Immigration Comm., Room K600 Cent. Sta., I.C.R.R., Chicago

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

$3.00 $3.50 $4.00 $4.50 AND $5.00

FOR MEN AND WOMEN

Boys wear W. L. Douglas $2.00, $2.50 & $3.00 School Shoes, because one pair will positively outwear two pairs of ordinary shoes, same as the men's shoes.

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more $3.00, $3.50 & $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 30 YEARS.

The workmanship which has made W. L. Douglas shoes famous the world over is maintained in every pair.

Ask your dealer to show you W. L. Douglas latest fashions for fall and winter wear, notice the short vamps which make the foot look smaller, points in a shoe particularly desired by young men. Also the conservative styles which have made W. L. Douglas shoes a household word everywhere.

If you could visit W. L. Douglas large factories at Brockton, Mass., and see for yourself how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they are warranted to fit better, look better, hold their shape and [illegible]

NERVOUS HEADACHE

And Numbness in the Hands and Arms.

This Iowa Woman Was In a Serious Condition and Her Cure Will Interest Many.

A cure of unusual interest and importance is related by Mrs. J. H. Morgan, of Correctionville, Iowa. After being a hopeless sufferer from sick headaches, she is now entirely free from attacks. She tells of her cure by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as follows:

"Some years ago I was in a terribly nervous and run-down condition and suffered greatly from nervous headaches. I was treated for three months by a specialist in Chicago, who advised me to wear glasses, but he did not help me. My head seemed as though it would burst, and I had frequent dizzy spells. I was in despair of getting well until I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and began taking them. A few boxes cured me and since then I have used them as a family medicine.

"Before the birth of my last child I suffered untold agony with pain and numbness in my hands and arms up to the shoulders. My hands were so swollen and the muscles so sore that I could hardly dress myself. For a time I could not close my left hand. During the day if I kept moving the pain did not seem to be so bad, but my hands were always numb. I again used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and found them good for this trouble also, as they entirely relieved me."

Unless properly treated sick headache is a disease of many years duration, as it occurs before the twentieth year in two-thirds of the cases and recurs with more or less regularity until the fiftieth year or later. It is usually hereditary and is probably directly caused by a defect in the process which changes the food we eat into blood. Most sufferers are troubled with obstinate constipation which makes it necessary to use a laxative.

An ideal combination treatment is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and the new laxative pills, Pinklets. This treatment is fully described in a little booklet, "The Treatment of Sick Headache," which is free on request, together with a sample of Pinklets, the little laxative pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale at all druggists, or will be mailed to any address, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. Adv.

Choosing a Wife.

An old Virginia gentleman who said he knew the way to pick a wife was willing to recommend it to young men. His advice is: See how she looks in the morning! The old Virginia gentleman, when getting married himself, sent his valet across the country to take a look at two sisters in the early morning. One looked well and one didn't. One found a husband. One didn't. So, ladies, beware; these facts are important if true. And true they are as sure as you are women. Men hate a woman who looks frowzy in the morning.

FACE ALMOST COVERED WITH PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

Atchison, Kan.—"For a number of years I suffered very greatly from skin eruption. My face was very red and irritated, being almost covered with pimples and blackheads. The pimples were scattered over my face. They were a fine rash with the exception of a few large pimples on my forehead and chin. My face burned and looked red as if exposed to either heat or cold. It was not only unsightly but very uncomfortable. I tried several remedies but couldn't get any relief. I was recommended to use Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment.

"I applied the Cuticura Ointment in the evening, leaving it for about five minutes, then washing it off with Cuticura Soap and hot water. I washed with the Cuticura Soap and hot water also several times during the day. After about four months of this application, my face was cleared of the pimples. I still use the Cuticura Soap." (Signed) Miss Elsia Nielson, Dec. 29, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

The man who invests in green goods must want money pretty bad.

BAD BACKS DO MAKE WORK HARD

Backache makes the daily toil, for thousands, an agony hard to endure.

Many of these poor sufferers have kidney trouble and don't know it.

Swollen, aching kidneys usually go hand in hand with irregular kidney action, headache, dizziness, nervousness and despondency.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, the best-recommended kidney remedy.

Here's an Oregon Case

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

L. Bonney, Eugene, Ore., says: "I contracted severe kidney trouble through heavy lifting. There was a steady ache across the small of my back, and pains like knife thrusts shot through me.

"Doan's Kidney Pills cured after doctors failed, and now my back is stronger than before in years."

Get Doan's at Any Drug Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

PISO'S REMEDY

[illegible]

SERIAL STORY

EXCUSE ME!

Novelized from the Comedy of the Same Name

By Rupert Hughes

ILLUSTRATED From Photographs of the Play as Produced By Henry W. Savage

Copyright, 1911, by H. K. Fly Co.

20

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Harry Mallory is ordered to the Philippines. He and Marjorie Newton decide to elope, but wreck of taxicab prevents their seeing minister on the way to the train. Transcontinental train is taking on passengers. Porter has a lively time with an Englishman and Ira Lathrop, a Yankee business man. The elopers have an exciting time getting to the train. "Little Jimmie" Wellington, bound for Reno to get a divorce, boards train in maudlin condition. Later Mrs. Jimmie appears. She is also bound for Reno with same object. Likewise Mrs. Sammy Whitcomb. Latter blames Mrs. Jimmie for her marital troubles. Classmates of Mallory decorate bridal berth. Rev. and Mrs. Temple start on a vacation. They decide to cut loose and Temple removes evidence of his calling. Marjorie decides to let Mallory proceed alone, but train starts while they are lost in farewell. Passengers join Mallory's classmates in giving couple wedding hazing. Marjorie is distracted. Ira Lathrop, woman-hating bachelor, discovers an old sweetheart, Annis Gattle, a fellow passenger. Mallory vainly hunts for a preacher among the passengers. Mrs. Wellington hears Little Jimmie's voice. Later she meets Mrs. Whitcomb. Mallory reports to Marjorie his failure to find a preacher. They decide to pretend a quarrel and Mallory finds a vacant berth. Mrs. Jimmie discovers Wellington on the train. Mallory again makes an unsuccessful hunt for a preacher. Dr. Temple poses as a physician. Mrs. Temple is induced by Mrs. Wellington to smoke a cigar. Sight of preacher on a station platform raises Mallory's hopes, but he takes another train. Missing hand baggage compels the couple to borrow from passengers. Jimmie gets a cinder in his eye and Mrs. Jimmie gives first aid. Coolness is then resumed. Still no clergyman. More borrowing. Dr. Temple puzzled by behavior of different couples. Marjorie's jealousy aroused by Mallory's baseball jargon. Marjorie suggests wrecking the train in hopes that accident will produce a preacher. Also tries to induce the conductor to hold the train so she can shop. Marjorie's dog is missing. She pulls the cord, stopping the train. Conductor restores dog and lovers quarrel. Lathrop wires for a preacher to marry him and Miss Gattle. Mallory tells Lathrop of his predicament and arranges to borrow the preacher.

CHAPTER XXVIII.—Continued.

Marjorie was overwhelmed, but she felt it becoming in her to be a trifle coy. So she pouted: "But you won't want me for a bride now. I'm such a fright."

He took the bait, hook and all: "I never saw you looking so adorable."

"Honestly? Oh, but it will be glorious to be Mrs. First Lieutenant Mallory."

"Glorious!"

"I must telegraph home—and sign my new name. Won't mamma be pleased?"

"Won't she?" said Mallory, with just a trace of dubiety.

Then Marjorie grew serious with a new idea: "I wonder if mamma and papa have missed me yet?"

Mallory laughed: "After three days' disappearance, I shouldn't be surprised."

"Perhaps they are worrying about me."

"I shouldn't be surprised."

"The poor dears! I'd better write them a telegram at once."

"An excellent idea."

She ran to the desk, found blank forms and then paused with knitted brow: "It will be very hard to say all I've got to say in ten words."

"Hang the expense," Mallory sniffed magnificently. "I'm paying your bills now."

But Marjorie tried to look very matronly: "Send a night letter in the day time! No, indeed, we must begin to economize."

Mallory was touched by this new revelation of her future housewifely thrift. He hugged her hard and reminded her that she could send a day-letter by wire.

"An excellent idea," she said. "Now, don't bother me. You go on and read your paper, read about Mattie. I'll never be jealous of her—him—of anybody—again."

"You shall never have cause for jealousy, my own."

But fate was not finished with the ~~~~ of the unfortunate pair, and already new trouble was strolling in their direction.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Jealousy Comes Aboard.

There was an air of domestic peace in the observation room, where Mallory and Marjorie had been left to themselves for some time. But the peace was like the ominous hush that precedes a tempest.

Mallory was so happy with everything coming his way, that he was even making up with Snoozleums, stroking the tatted coat with one hand and holding up his newspaper with the other. He did not know all that was coming his way. The blissful silence was broken first by Marjorie:

"How do you spell Utah?—with a y?"

"Utah begins with You," he said—and rather liked his wit, listened for some recognition, and rose to get it, but she waved him away.

"Don't bother me, honey. Can't you see I'm busy?"

He kissed her hair and sauntered [illegible] between

And now there was a small commotion in the smoking room. Through the glass along the corridor the men caught sight of the girl who had got on at Green River. Ashton saw her first and she saw him.

"There she goes," Ashton hissed to the others, "look quick! There's the nectarine."

"My word! She's a little bit of all right, isn't she?"

Even Dr. Temple stared at her with approval: "Dear little thing, isn't she?"

The girl, very consciously unconscious of the admiration, moved demurely along, with eyes downcast, but at such an angle that she could take in the sensation she was creating; she went along picking up stares as if they were bouquets.

Her demeanor was a remarkable compromise between outrageous flirtation and perfect respectability. But she was looking back so intently that when she moved into the observation room she walked right into the newspaper Mallory was holding out before him.

Both said: "I beg your pardon."

When Mallory lowered the paper, both stared till their eyes almost popped. Her amazement was one of immediate rapture. He looked as if he would have been much obliged for a volcanic crater to sink into.

"Harry!" she gasped, and let fall her handbag.

"Kitty!" he gasped, and let fall his newspaper. Both bent, he handed her the newspaper and tossed the handbag into a chair; saw his mistake, withdrew the newspaper, and proffered her Snoozleums. Marjorie stopped writing, pen poised in air, as if she had suddenly been petrified.

The newcomer was the first to speak. She fairly gushed: "Harry Mallory—of all people."

"Kitty! Kathleen! Miss Lewellyn!"

"Just to think of meeting you again."

"Just to think of it."

"And on this train of all places."

"On this train of all places!"

"Oh, Harry, Harry!"

"Oh, Kitty, Kitty, Kitty!"

"You dear fellow, it's so long since I saw you last."

"So long."

"It was at that last hop at West Point, remember?—why, it seems only yesterday, and how well you are looking. You are well, aren't you?"

"Not very." He was mopping his brow in anguish, and yet the room seemed strangely cold.

"Of course you look much better in your uniform. You aren't wearing your uniform, are you?"

"No, this is not my uniform."

"You haven't left the army, have you?"

"I don't know yet."

"Don't ever do that. You are just beautiful in brass buttons."

"Thanks."

"Harry!"

"What's the matter now?"

"This tie, this green tie, isn't this the one I knitted you?"

"I am sure I don't know, I borrowed it from the conductor."

"Don't you remember? I did knit you one."

"Did you? I believe you did! I think I wore it out."

"Oh, you fickle boy. But see what I have. What's this?"

He stared through the glassy eyes of complete helplessness. "It looks like a bracelet."

"Don't tell me you don't remember this!—the little bangle bracelet you gave me."

"D-did I give you a bangled bangle-let?"

"Of course you did. And the inscription. Don't you remember it?"

She held her wrist in front of his aching eyes and he perused as if it were his own epitaph, what she read aloud for him. "From Harry to Kitty, the Only Girl I Ever Loved."

"Good night!" he sighed to himself, and began to mop his brow with Snoozleums.

"You put it on my arm," said Kathleen, with a moonlight sigh, "and I've always worn it."

"Always?"

"Always! no matter whom I was engaged to."

The desperate wretch, who had not dared even to glance in Marjorie's direction, somehow thought he saw a straw of self-defense. "You were engaged to three or four others when I was at West Point."

"I may have been engaged to the others," said Kathleen, moon-eyeing him, "but I always liked you best, Clifford—er, Tommy—I mean Harry."

"You got me at last."

Kathleen fenced back at this: "Well, I've no doubt you have had a dozen affairs since."

"Oh, no! My heart has only known one real love." He threw this over her head at Marjorie, but Kathleen seized it, to his greater confusion: "Oh, Harry, how sweet of you to say it. It makes me feel positively faint," and she swooned his way, but he shoved a chair forward and let her collapse into that. Thinking and hoping that she was unconscious, he made ready to escape, but she caught him by the coat, and moaned: "Where am I?" and he growled back:

"In the Observation Car!"

Kathleen's life and enthusiasm returned without delay: "Fancy meeting you again! I could just scream."

"So could I."

"You must come up in our car and see mamma."

"Is Ma-mamma with you?" Mallory stammered, on the verge of imbecility.

"Oh, yes, indeed, we're going around the world."

"Don't let me detain you."

"Papa is going round the world also."

[illegible] barrass her a trifle: "No, papa went on ahead. Mamma hopes to overtake him. But papa is a very good traveler."

Then she changed the subject. "Do come and meet mamma. It would cheer her up so. She is so fond of you. Only this morning she was saying, 'Of all the boys you were ever engaged to, Kathleen, the one I like most of all was Edgar—I mean Clarence—er—Harry Mallory.'"

"Awfully kind of her."

"You must come and see her—she's some stouter now!"

"Oh, is she? Well, that's good."

Mallory was too angry to be sane, and too helpless to take advantage of his anger. He wondered how he could ever have cared for this molasses and mucilage girl. He remembered now that she had always had these same cloying ways. She had always pawed him and, like everybody but the pawers, he hated pawing.

It would have been bad enough at any time to have Kathleen hanging on his coat, straightening his tie, leaning close, smiling up in his eyes, losing him his balance, recapturing him every time he edged away. But with Marjorie as the grim witness it was maddening.

He loathed and abominated Kathleen Llewellyn, and if she had only been a man, he could cheerfully have beaten her to a pulp and chucked her out of the window. But because she was a helpless little baggage he had to be as polite as he could while she sat and tore his plans to pieces, embittered Marjorie's heart against him, and either ended all hopes of their marriage, or furnished an everlasting rancor to be recalled in every quarrel to their dying day. Oh, etiquette, what injustices are endured in thy name!

So there he sat, sweating his soul's blood, and able only to spar for time and wonder when the gong would ring. And now she was off on a new tack:

"And where are you bound for, Harry, dear?"

"The Philippines," he said, and for the first time there was something beautiful in their remoteness.

"Perhaps we shall cross the Pacific on the same boat."

The first sincere smile he had experienced came to him: "I go on an army transport, fortu—unfortunately."

"Oh, I just love soldiers. Couldn't mamma and I go on the transport? Mamma is very fond of soldiers, too."

"I'm afraid it couldn't be arranged."

"Too bad, but perhaps we can stop off and pay you a visit. I just love army posts. So does mamma."

"Oh, do!"

"What will be your address?"

"Just the Philippines—just the Philippines."

"But aren't there quite a few of them?"

"Only about two thousand."

"Which one will you be on?"

"I'll be on the third from the left," said Mallory, who neither knew nor cared what he was saying. Marjorie had endured all that she could stand. She rose in a tightly leashed fury.

"I'm afraid I'm in the way."

Kathleen turned in surprise. She had not noticed that anyone was near. Mallory went out of his head completely. "Oh, don't go—for heaven's sake don't go," he appealed to Marjorie.

"A friend of yours?" said Kathleen, bristling.

"No, not a friend," in a chaotic tangle, "Mrs. — Miss—Miss—Er—er—er—"

Kathleen smiled: "Delighted to meet you, Miss Erer."

"The pleasure is all mine," Marjorie said, with an acid smile.

"Have you known Harry long?" said Kathleen, jealously, "or are you just acquaintances on the train?"

"We're just acquaintances on the train!"

"I used to know Harry very well—very well indeed."

"So I should judge. You won't mind if I leave you to talk over old times together?"

"How very sweet of you."

"Oh, don't mention it."

"But, Marjorie," Mallory cried, as she turned away. Kathleen started at the ardor of his tone, and gasped: "Marjorie! Then he—you—"

"Not at all—not in the least," said Marjorie.

At this crisis the room was suddenly inundated with people. Mrs. Whitcomb, Mrs. Wellington, Mrs. Temple and Mrs. Fosdick, all trying to look like bridesmaids, danced in, shouting:

"Here they come! Make way for the bride and groom!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Boxing, Ancient and Modern.

Although boxing and pugilism, occupying much attention at the present time, were popular in classic Greece, they seem to have died out in the middle ages, and it is not until the end of the seventeenth century that we find references to boxing as a regular English sport. Boxing, as distinguished from pugilism, may be said to date from 1866, when the Amateur Athletic club was formed, and the Queensberry rules drawn up. The boxing glove, however, had been invented about a century before by Broughton, "the father of English pugilism," who used them in his practice bouts. But you will remember that the boxing glove, as described by Virgil, was a terrible instrument of offense.

Money in Growing Willows.

A Chicago merchant advertised for 1,000,000 willow clothes baskets which indicates that the willow-growing industry is very much neglected. The government is encouraging it by teaching farmers how to grow willows. They require [illegible]

GOT RICH IN THREE YEARS

EXPERIENCES OF A BRITISH IMMIGRANT IN CANADA-WEST.

The following straightforward statement needs no comment to add to its force and effect. It appears in a recent issue of the Liverpool Mercury.

H. Patterson, of Nutana, Saskatchewan, Canada, when he arrived from Liverpool, had "Six of us to support," to use his own phraseology, and his funds were getting low. He secured a homestead 32 miles out from Sundurn, and started living on it April 15, 1907. The previous fall he put all his money, $137, into a shack and lot, making sure of a home. As cook and caterer in a local hotel he made $75 a month, and out of this had some savings out of which he paid his breaking and improvements on the homestead. The shack was sold to good advantage. Then Mr. Patterson tells the story after he had removed his family to the homestead:

"For the first month life was so strange and new that I hadn't time to think of anything, only fixing up our new home. I was so 'green' to farm life that I didn't know the difference between wheat and oats (I do now)! Between working out, cropping my piece, and with my gun, we managed to live comfortably for the three years, which time was required to put in my duties. I had accumulated quite a stock of horses, cows, pigs, fowls, and machinery in the three years.

"In October, 1909, I secured my patent to my land, so took a few days' holidays to Saskatoon to locate a purchased homestead (viz., 12s. per acre) from the Government. Instead of getting the purchased homestead, I secured a half section (320 acres) on the Saskatchewan River for $25 per acre on easy terms, nine years' payments with a cash payment of $1,000. I mortgaged my first homestead, obtained chattel mortgages on my stock, and on December 24th, 1909, took possession; on June 10, 1910, I sold out again for $40 per acre, clearing, besides my crop (140 acres), $4,800. I also sold my first homestead, clearing $1,800 and two Saskatoon town lots, which we value at $1,000 each today. We placed all our capital in another form (river frontage) and some trackage lots (60), also a purchased homestead (river frontage). I remained as Manager of the Farm I had sold on a three years' contract at a fine salary and house, garden, and numerous privileges.

"So by the time my three years have expired, with my investments and the increased value of my frontage and lots, I am hoping to have a clear profit on my $137 investment of $50,000. My land doesn't eat anything, and it is nearly all paid for. I hold a good position (and secure)"—Adv.

Couldn't Use Green Snow.

"Why are you writing your play on green paper?"

"I hear managers tear up a good many plays for stage snowstorms. I'll fool 'em that far, anyhow."

WOMEN SHOULD BE PROTECTED

Against So Many Surgical Operations. How Mrs. Bethune and Mrs. Moore Escaped.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Murrayville, Ill.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a very bad case of female trouble and it made me a well woman. My health was all broken down, the doctors said I must have an operation, and I was ready to go to the hospital, but dreaded it so that I began taking your Compound. I got along so well that I gave up the doctors and was saved from the operation."—Mrs. CHARLES MOORE, R. R. No. 3, Murrayville, Ill.

$53,000 Being Given Away

to those who act as the local representatives of Everybody's Magazine and The Delineator—all in addition to liberal commissions. Let us show you how you can simply by forwarding the subscriptions of your friends and neighbors and collecting the renewals of our present subscribers. Try for this month's prizes. Write at once to Butterick Publishing Co., Butterick Building, New York City.

Secure a Share

FREE TO ALL SUFFERERS

If you feel "out of sorts"—"run down" or "got the blues," suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., write for my FREE book. It is the most instructive medical book ever written. It tells all about these diseases and the remarkable cures effected by the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2, No. 3 and you can decide for yourself if it is the remedy for your ailment. Don't send a cent. It's absolutely FREE. No "follow-up" circulars. Dr. LeClerc Med. Co., Haverstock Rd., Hampstead, London, Eng.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

Pettit's FOR SORE Eye WEAK EYES Salve

DEFIANCE STARCH easiest to work with and starches clothes nicest.

5 PER CENT SOLUTION

OF THIS COMPOUND WILL

Kill Germs

of Distemper, Pink Eye, Epizootic,

Catarrhal Fever and Influenza, under the microscope.

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER CURE

Given on the Horse's Tongue, it unites with the fluids of the alimentary canal, thrown into the blood passes through the glands and expels the Germs of Disease. Absolutely safe and sure for Brood Mares, Baby Colts and all others. Do not depend on any powder in this class of Diseases. Give it to brood mares in times of distemper. Booklet, "Distemper, Causes, Cures and Prevention," free. Druggists and Harness Shops sell Spohn's Cure. 50 cents, $5.00 a dozen; $1.00, $10.00 a dozen.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO., Bacteriologists, GOSHEN, IND.

Y.M.C.A. AUTOMOBILE SCHOOL of Minneapolis. The only school of the kind that pays its men for shop work. Next class Nov. 5 WRITE FOR BOOKLET K.

Stops Backache

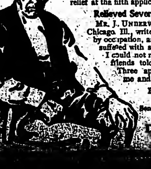
Sloan's Liniment is a splendid remedy for backache, stiff joints, rheumatism, neuralgia and sciatica. You don't need to rub it in—just laid on lightly it gives comfort and ease at once.

Best for Pain and Stiffness

MR. GEO. BUCHANAN, of Welch, Okla., writes:—"I have used your Liniment for the past ten years for pain in back and stiffness and find it the best Liniment I ever tried. I recommend it to anyone for pains of any kind."

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

is good for sprains, strains, bruises, cramp or soreness of the muscles, and all affections of the throat and chest.



Got Entire Relief

R. D. BURGOYNE, of Maysville, Ky., R. R. 1, Box 5, writes:—"I had severe pains between my shoulders; I got a bottle of your Liniment and had entire relief at the fifth application."

Relieved Severe Pain in Shoulders

MR. J. UNDERWOOD, of 2000 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes:—"I am a piano polisher by occupation, and since last September have suffered with severe pain in both shoulders. I could not rest night or day. One of my friends told me about your Liniment. Three applications completely cured me and I will never be without it."

Price 25c., 50c., and $1.00 at All Dealers.

Send for Sloan's free book on horses.

Address

Dr. Earl S. Sloan, Boston, Mass.

The Corrector of Destinies

Being Tales of Randolph Mason as Related by His Private Secretary, Courtland Parks

THE DANSEUSE

By Melville Davisson Post

Copyright by Edward J. Clode

By far the most interesting client that ever called upon Randolph Mason was St. George Fairfield Porter. I do not put this superiority upon any one predominating feature; in point of dignified manner, in point of physical impressiveness, in point of courtly presentation of his case, he was easily first. He came attended by a retinue, like a maharaja. He gave no personal attention to Randolph Mason beyond a certain stolid observation cast in entering equally upon the rows of leather book-backs, upon Pietro, upon the glittering ink-stand on the table. Like a maharaja, he conducted his relations with others through skilful attendants waiting constantly on his person. One spoke for him—a sort of regent. One in white, a servant of an upper order, saw constantly that no profaning hand touched him, and another, of a lower caste, waited at the door with various articles of portable luggage.

He held, above all persons of my knowledge, decided contempt for custom. I remember that he lunched during the interview, that he expressed without restraint his annoyance at a beam of light which struck him through an open shutter, and once he sang monotonously the fore words of a ditty with endless repetition, like one comfortably at leisure dwelling on a thought that pleased him. Something of his dress ought, doubtless, to be described. He wore a sort of yellow sandal, disclosing white hose, ending four inches above on his fat leg, a plaited frock, a coat hand-embroidered in white silk, a hat buttoned together, having a baggy crown, a drooping rim—all of French pique. In his right hand he carried a dog-whip, although there was nowhere in his retinue a dog, and, tucked under his left elbow, a man in minute effigy named—as I presently observed—most curiously, "How de-do," and more curiously, I thought, referred to by his master as a "baby."

Now I admit here upon this record the superiority of St. George Fairfield Porter in all qualities deemed excellent among men; but in the matter of sight I am as good as any of God's creatures, and my gorge rises at the word baby applied to such a beast as this How-do-do. There was never on this earth a more debauched, evil-featured thug of middle age. The worst strains in three alien races were hideously mixed in him. The negro kink in his hair spoke of "long pig" eaten half-raw by camp fires on the Congo; his puffy, cruel, Turkish face, of ghastly-writhing sacks cast out of palace windows into the Bosphorus; his slim Mexican body, deformed at the extremities, of good priests buried alive to the chin in the slime of the Verde, their faces smeared with honey that the flies might devour them. If at the last door-post, by reason of my sins, I am to meet the devil, I pray that he may not come upon me in the mortal habiliments of this How-do-do. I saw now the larger uses for the dog-whip.

St. George Fairfield Porter was perhaps two years old. He came accompanied by his mother, a nurse and a lesser servant. This mother was a woman whose face impressed me; it bore record of disaster without attendant hardening of lines, rather the face seemed cleansed by misfortunes, as a plate passed through acid. She spoke directly, without coloring her words, without restraint and without apology, as one speaks to the surgeon before he strips for the knife. She did not desire sympathy or verbal consolation. She wished merely that Randolph Mason should have the object of her visit laid clearly before him. She had consulted with an eminent attorney in New York, who had sent her to him, as the practicing physician sends the difficult case to the expert.

She was born in New York city, and had been married three years before to Charles Porter, an iron-broker of that city. This man was a progressive, brilliant fellow. He had risen swiftly from a subordinate position, partly by reason of his excellent address, but chiefly because he was the most practical authority in America on the manufacture of pig-iron.

The era of industrial consolidation arrived about the time of this marriage, and Charles Porter was the first in the east to step into the open door. He swiftly got optional control of the iron mill whose product he was accustomed to sell, and materially assisted to bring the larger business into one gigantic combine under a New York charter. This tremendous, giddy rise was the man's ruin. Shot upward almost in a night from the status of a middleman to a position of authority in one of the greatest consolidated industries of the world, he was wrenched violently loose from every moral safeguard. He adopted, as an essential element of this new station, the glittering vices with which he was now surrounded.

A certain oriental, speaking from rare knowledge of human nature, feared that with riches one would forget God. Had he been a monogamist, he would equally have feared the forgetting of one's wife and God. So long as a man can with difficulty carry out but one plan of life he is apt to conduct himself as an honorable citizen. Set on an instant where many paths are open, he is equally apt to plunge recklessly into every possible experience. The American lacked the foresight of King David; within a year he had startled a continent by his gambling at Monte Carlo; he had been fined in every city of Italy for the reckless driving of motor cars; he had been publicly ejected from the Moulin Rouge for excesses passing even the elastic standard of Paris.

On his way of riot he came under the eye of a Viennese danseuse, Suzanne Kinsky, a creature with the alluring person of a dryad and the hard, practical mind of an inn-keeper. She attached herself instantly to this flowing gold-pot. In the gas-lit region of Cockaigne, the American was no equal of this experienced adventuress; she had come up from the obscurest, reeking tarns of it; she knew with hideous certainty what fate awaited poverty and the loss of youth in that tinseled kingdom. Like every woman of her class, arrived at a certain station, she determined to secure at any cost a permanent fortune and a footing in the world of respectability above her. The coming of this rich western licentiate was a direct answer to Satanic invocations.

After this fatal meeting, the American traveled through the south of Europe like the Fifteenth Louis, the dividends of the second greatest business in the world skipping through the cigarette-stained fingers of a Viennese danseuse playing desperately for an established marital relation.

The end was not far to seek. Recalled to America by his business associates, Charles Porter repaired to New Haven, established there a constructive residence, alleged the desertion of his first wife and secured a divorce by an order of publication. Immediately upon the entering of the decree he married Suzanne Kinsky and, later, returning to New York, took a country house on Long Island.

During all of this time his former wife had remained quietly with her father in New York city. Unfortunately, she could not accompany Porter on his disastrous European tour because of the birth of the little boy. For a time she was absolutely loyal to the dissolute husband, in the face of convincing private advices and the lurid public reports brought glaringly to her attention. Even the man's divorce and subsequent marriage induced no word of comment or censure from the lips of this remarkable woman.

The spoke in the wheel of fortune to which Suzanne Kinsky had so desperately clung, having carried her unbelievably to the first realization of her hopes, went on swiftly upward. The physical machinery of Charles Porter, unused to dissipation and driven at a pace thus killing, went suddenly to pieces. Two months after his second marriage, his brain softened like a dish of porridge. He got up one afternoon from his desk in his office, dragging his feet, his mouth drooling, his speech a simian jabber. The danseuse acted with the most daring resolution. She isolated him instantly in his country house on Long Island, gave out that he would conduct his affairs from his residence and caused all his private papers, including the tin boxes in which his very securities were packed, to be removed to it. His deposits in banks were, likewise, immediately drawn out. His yacht, motor-cars and racing stables were sold hurriedly at auction. Suzanne Kinsky thereby got at least one-seventh of the man's estate safely into her hands while he was yet alive. The great bulk of his fortune she could not lay hands on; it was in iron and steel stocks, deposited with a trust company under an order permitting their withdrawal only upon the written direction of a syndicate committee of which Charles Porter was a member, and encumbered by a further agreement requiring them to be first offered to the members of the syndicate before being exhibited otherwise for sale. This estate was valued at, perhaps, seven millions of dollars.

The far-sighted, practical second wife was not greatly alarmed over the status of these seven millions. Every other scrap of the estate was in her possession—cash and negotiable assets aggregating, perhaps, a million dollars. One-half of these remaining six millions the law would give her at the husband's death. Porter had made no will and he was now forever incapable of executing one. These iron and steel stocks were personal property, and one-half would go to the wife should the husband die, as he was doing, without issue by the second marriage, the child of the first marriage having been provided for in the decree of divorce by a meager annuity in lieu of future property rights. Then, when every detail was snugly arranged, she carried Charles Porter to the medical experts. They pronounced him utterly incurable, with perhaps six months to live.

The danseuse now saw the last gate barring her wildest fancies swing inward on its hinges—a great chateau in the Bavarian mountains, a palace in Vienna, a glittering court flitting through continental capitals like a fairy pageant, all rising from that six feet of earth into which this slobbering creature, who had eaten of Circe's flowers, was presently to be hidden.

Then, on the [illegible] as [illegible] God's finger, that spoke in the wheel of fortune, arriving at the summit, snapped. Suzanne Kinsky, looking over a New York paper at dinner one evening, read that the Supreme Court of the United States had on that day pronounced an opinion declaring invalid divorces granted upon an order of publication.

In another quarter events now began to move. The catastrophe befalling Charles Porter startled the first wife into activity. She had not cared particularly for herself, and she had all along believed that finally Porter would secure the bulk of his estate to his son. Now, stricken into senility, he could not. The scarlet woman must be met with fire. There is no courage, no endurance, no tenacity comparable to that of the just, rising, at last, to action. This deserted woman went at once to an attorney and laid the matter before him. He brought forth the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States which had struck such terror to Suzanne Kinsky, and assured her that the Courts of New York would refuse to treat Porter's divorce as valid or of any effect. She would stand under the law as Porter's wife. The estate in New York would descend at his death to her and the boy. But the million dollars which the danseuse had got into her hands was certainly gone, the woman was shrewd enough for that. But the Covenanter, the Puritan, was in the field now. No inch of ground should be yielded, no dollar of the child's inheritance should remain in the fingers of that woman. Was there no law fitting such a case? The eminent attorney pointed out that in theory there were remedies enough within the law, but that, when applied, they would all fail. This dancing adventuress would conceal, bury, spirit away Porter's portable estate. She would swear it had been given to her, lost, stolen, used by her husband, she knew not how. With legal arms there was no hope. If she wished, he would try what could be obtained by treaty. She wished it, and he did try. Nothing was gained. Suzanne Kinsky, being approached, took it for a sign of weakness and condescendingly, as one who would be generous, offered to pay to Mrs. Porter a million dollars provided she would not contest the decree of divorce. One million for three. In diplomatic bartering, the danseuse followed Continental masters.

"I took the paper out of my pocket."

The attorney presented this proof of his opinion to the client. Mrs. Porter must be content with the six million dollars. She was not content—no dollar to the scarlet woman. She demanded additional counsel. These men, learned, experienced in human affairs, were of the same opinion. The money was lost. Mrs. Porter, with an unreasonable persistence, by virtue of which every woman is a client to be dreaded, refused, even over their opinions, to consider it as lost. Then, annoyed, wishing to be rid of a problem impossible of solution by any legal formula, the attorney sent her to Randolph Mason.

Thus I met St. George Fairfield Porter, seeking to regain a lost million of his inheritance under the conduct of his regent, a woman driven by that mystic, fearless, untiring instinct shared alike by the mothers of the forest.

When the story was ended, Mrs. Porter took from the bosom of her dress three folded papers and laid them on the table before Randolph Mason.

"That," she said, "is my marriage certificate. This, a file of the divorce proceedings, and here," her fingers pressed the document against the writing-pad as though to crush it, "is the contract which that woman had the effrontery to send with her offer of compromise."

Mason looked casually through the court file; then he opened the contract and carefully read it, and I, standing by the table, read it also. It was a rigid agreement by which this first Mrs. Porter, in consideration of one million dollars, received from Charles Porter, agreed and bound herself not to contest or disturb the decree of divorce; and in order that the signature might not ever be questioned, it was to be acknowledged before a notary and witnessed before the clerk of a court of record under his official seal.

"You will observe," said the woman, "that this paper is an iron-clad contract. My attorney says its terms could not be more bindingly put."

"That is true," replied Randolph Mason.

"And," continued the woman, "by its terms I would, in point of fact, be agreeing to surrender an estate of six millions coming to my son here and to me at Mr. Porter's death for this one million delivered to me now. Is not that true?"

"That also is true," replied Randolph Mason.

"Then," said the woman, "this adventuress is a fool if she thinks I would sign it."

"Madame," said Randolph Mason, "you must sign it."

Mrs. Porter looked at Randolph Mason a moment in complete, utter astonishment. Then an explanation suggested itself and she smiled.

"I see," she said, "you will use this paper in order to get the money delivered into your possession or where it can be held by law, but you will not give it to that woman."

Then her voice became almost masculinely resolute.

"I know this to be a piece of difficult strategy. I wish to put it wholly into your hands. I wish in no way to interfere with you. I want to do exactly as you direct. But I do not intend to give away six millions for one. I will sign this paper if you assure me that it will under no circumstances pass out of your possession to the loss of my boy's inheritance. Do you promise me that?"

"I promise you that," replied Randolph Mason.

Then I conducted St. George Fairfield Porter and his retinue to a notary public and the clerk of a court of record, had Mrs. Porter properly identified and the paper signed and executed as its terms required. The young gentleman labored for my entertainment on the way. He pointed out the various colored "gups" drawing carriages, the "meows" sunning in the doorways, the "giggles" singing in the green trees of the park, and once, for the better safety of us all, lashed How-de-do soundly with the dog-whip.

We parted at Twenty-first street, friends, one looking on there would have sworn, till death.

When I returned with the executed paper Randolph Mason seemed already to have forgotten the interview. He was writing at his table, stopping now and then to consult a digest, open among other books before him. I waited for a few moments, then I laid the paper between the open pages of the digest. When he came again to examine the reference, he picked up the paper and held it out to me. I saw that his attention had departed from Mrs. Porter's affair. I took the paper back and explained carefully what it was.

"Yes," he replied, without looking up.

"But, Mr. Mason," I urged, "what shall I do with it?"

He wrote on.

"Take it to the woman and get the money," he said.

I thought he could not understand—he would hardly direct me to deliver the paper to the adventuress on Long Island, after his deliberate promise. I went again over the case, calling his attention directly to his word. He looked up then, his eyes wavering.

"Parks," he said, "you disturb me."

I should have gone out but for the memory of St. George Fairfield Porter—I felt his little fat hand clinging to my fingers, his fortune in my keeping. I braved Mason before the table. I explained, urged, denounced such an act of infidelity as the surrender of this paper. I spread the contract open above the sheet that he was writing. He sprang up then, his eyes blazing, his clenched hand hammering the table.

"You vex me," he said; "you harass me. What do you want?"

"I want to know what to do with this paper," I responded.

"What to do with it?" he cried. "I told you! Go out now."

Then he dropped back into his chair, oblivious again to his surroundings.

I felt that I had done all that it was possible for me to do. If he were determined to violate his word, why, then, doubtless he had a sufficient reason for it. Perhaps the divorce was not invalid after all. At any rate he was the person in authority, the one responsible. But had his mind returned to this matter? Did he understand what I was asking? Was he not, in fact, merely annoyed by a supposedly meaningless interruption? I feared it.

Nevertheless, I obeyed him. I took a motor-car and went down to the residence of Charles Porter on Long Island. The house, enclosed by enormous hedges, sat on the border of the Sound, a few ancient trees contrasting their green with its silver gray. A yacht hung out beyond in the water. I left the chauffeur with the car before the door, and knocked. By a mistake of the maid I was taken at once into the presence of Suzanne Kinsky. As a highly-colored incident, this scene remains strikingly vivid, it seems yet out of proportion to other events of life, although it continued perhaps not twenty minutes.

The room into which I was shown was littered with the light articles of ocean travel, with heavy coats, rugs, portmanteaus. In the center of the room an open steamer trunk was packed with stocks, bonds and bulky packages of currency. A little, dark, glossy-haired woman, robed in a Japanese wrapper, was writing at a desk. A man, whom I instantly recognized as a notorious attorney of New York, one Levin Howell, the famous counsel of actors, adventurers, criminals with filled pockets, was standing at the window, his back to me, his fingers drumming on the pane. He turned around and regarded me with an expression of profound astonishment. For a moment he was too overcome to speak, then he began to stammer.

"Good heavens!" he said, "this is not my partner. This is Mr. Perks, the secretary of Randolph Mason."

The woman writing at the desk flashed to her feet like cotton touched with fire. For a step or two she advanced on me as a weasel might upon some larger creature. Then she turned viciously on the maid, and cursed her in French, German and Italian, until, in the Lorraine peasant's figure of speech, a fly passing would not have lighted on her.

I gleaned an explanation from the lurid damning. The attorney was expecting his associate to come for him in a motor, the maid had been directed to admit him at once on his arrival and, naturally, she had taken me for the man.

The infuriated woman slapped the maid's face, pushed her out of the room, locked the door and turned to me, her eyes again shimmering beedily, like a weasel's.

"What do you want?" she said in English, biting at each word as it came out.

I had no wish to be scratched to pieces, so I took the paper out of my pocket and swiftly explained my errand. The pistol, the scalping-knife, the acid bottle, instantly vanished. A moment's calm fell and then the sun flooded that theater of savagery. Thus a convict escaping from the death-cell would have acted, if, as he climbed the wall, a guard had touched him, and, turning about desperately to meet a bullet, he should be handed a reprieve. The woman and her attorney carried the contract to the desk, spread it out, read it and re-read it absorbingly, surely as that convict would have done his pardon. Then they talked whisperingly together while I waited. Finally, the attorney spoke to me, holding the contract in his hand.

"If you will pardon me a moment, Mr. Parks," he said, "until I verify these signatures, we will conclude this matter."

He went out into the hall to a telephone. I heard him call the clerk and the notary. While he talked I had a little leisure to examine Suzanne Kinsky. Her complexion was of that deep beautiful olive to be found in the south of Austria. Her hair was heavy with the purple-black gloss of dye, although it was certainly not dyed. Her figure, fallen now into repose, was sensuous and dainty; her hands were especially tapering and beautiful, but her ankles were thick—the ankles of a ballet dancer.

In a few minutes the attorney returned.

"Mr. Parks," he said, "this contract seems to have been properly executed. My client will accept it. I think you will find the full consideration packed in that steamer trunk in money and securities."

I went with him to the open trunk and, in ten minutes, had verified its contents. The bulk of the fund was in securities and the remainder in banknotes, of large denominations. These securities were difficult to value accurately. I thought the trunk contained some twenty-eight thousand dollars more than the required sum. Howell thought it contained forty thousand more. We compromised finally at thirty-five, and he took out that sum in currency. I closed the trunk and carried it myself to the motor-car.

Then I returned up Long Island to New York, the first man since Kidd to travel there with a chest of treasure, albeit to the passer I appeared to be merely one returning to his town apartment with a rather knocked-up steamer trunk held together by a broad leather strap. I wondered, as I went, into what pleasing scene this changed situation fell at my departure. I had come evidently, by the maid's blunder, upon a flight. I had entered to the danseuse an instrument of the law with some detaining writ, and was changed into a friendly herald of surrender. I had brought, against all hoping, peace, the end of harrowing uncertainty—a signed instrument of settlement. Three millions to the adventuress for one!

That hour was highly colored, and yet the hour arriving passed, I think, beyond it. At three o'clock I had set the trunk down in the office of Mrs. Porter's lawyer, and explained its contents. He called her instantly by telephone, and once more St. George Fairfield Porter came before me with his retinue, the only one of us on this dramatic day a gentleman unmoved, and yet the one whose fortune was in peril.

Again I saw a woman cast from one emotion violently to another—a woman of a higher order, and yet the situation was no less one of desperate drama. Mrs. Porter had taken the message to her for some clean recovery of the money, and came elated as to a victory. When she had the story, when she knew that the contract of settlement had been delivered for it, she fell upon that instant to the very grave-floor of despair. By this folly of Randolph Mason she had lost the major portion of her boy's inheritance. He had surrendered the paper against his promise, he had broken his word immediately, he had given up for one million dollars their claim to the estate! The thing in the acuteness of its injuries was criminal, and yet there was here no violence, no bitter word, no ravings of hysteria. The woman was terrifyingly quiet, her face fallen into a painful stiffness. In that hour I admired her lawyer. He made no comment upon this verification of his own advice, upon this blunder of Randolph Mason, upon failure following where he said it certainly would follow. He set the trunk on end in his office vault and took his client to Randolph Mason.

I carried St. George Fairfield Porter from the carriage to Randolph Mason's house. I was still his loving friend, although by my act I had lost him and his mother on this day six million dollars. He patted me softly on the shoulder and, by infant magic, changed me to an Arab charger, urged gently with the dog-whip. Then he placed the murderous Howde-do astride my collar with various equestrian directions. So little a thing was six million dollars against a friendship. Since I was set wailing in this world, I have not gone two hundred feet with a keener misery.

We found Randolph Mason writing at his table, where I had left him. In his presence the distressing dumbness which had fallen on Mrs. Porter for a moment lifted. She went forward resolutely to his table.

"Mr. Mason," she said, "why did you break your promise to me?"

Randolph Mason arose and, seeing me, ignored her query.

"Parks," he said, "did you get that money?"

"Yes," I answered, "I did exactly what you directed me to do. I took the contract to Suzanne Kinsky and got the money for it."

"Good!" he said. Then he turned to the woman standing by the table.

"Madame," he said, "I have kept my word rigidly. I said that this paper should not pass out of my possession to the loss of your child's inheritance. I have kept that promise. You have now in your possession the one million of dollars which you wished me to secure, and, under the laws of New York, you and your son will inherit the remainder of the estate of Mr. Porter at his death."

"But, my dear sir," interrupted the attorney, "you have delivered an agreement by which Mrs. Porter binds herself not to disturb the decree of divorce granted in Connecticut. That paper will be filed in bar of any proceeding now taken to establish her right to the fortune as the true legal wife of Charles Porter. You seem strangely to have overlooked the effect of this agreement."

"I have overlooked nothing," replied Randolph Mason.

Then he took up a book from the table, opened it at a certain page, and handed it to the attorney.

"There," he said, "is the leading decision in this country, holding that where a decree of divorce has been wrongfully obtained, a subsequent agreement among the parties that it shall not be disturbed is an illegal contract, void, as against public policy."

For the legal principle involved in this story see Comstock v. Adams, 23 Kansas, 513, 33 Am. R. 191; Black v. Nohl, 102 Mo., 159; Haddock v. Haddock, Supreme Court of the United States, 201 U. S., 562.

The courts of New York have invariably refused to treat a divorce rendered in another state under the circumstances stated, as entitled to be enforced in New York by virtue of the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution of the United States; and, indeed, have refused generally to give effect to such decrees even by state comity. Haddock v. Haddock, supra, citing Lynde v. Lynde, 162 N. Y., 405; 48 L. R. A., 679, 76 Am. St. Rep. 332, 56 N. E. 979; Winston v. Winston, 165 N. Y., 553, 59 N. E. 273.

THE SUNBEAM.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY

VOL. XII. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1912. NO. 33.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Suggests the Mounting of American Boy Scouts

WASHINGTON.—Curtis Guild, Jr., American ambassador to St. Petersburg, desires to see mounted boy scouts. He believes the United States government should furnish ponies for the boys, give them instruction in horseback riding and train them in skill in riding and develop their hardiness.

He outlines his plan in a letter to the state department, which has been referred to James E. West, chief scout executive of the Boy Scouts of America. West is enthusiastic over the scheme. The scout leaders are taking the matter up with Ambassador Guild and the officials in Washington.

Ambassador Guild got his inspiration from seeing 70 Cossack boys drill before the czar last spring. "At recent events," he writes, "in the presence of the emperor at Krasnoe Selo, there was one thing of particular importance as it opened a new vista of the possibilities of the boy scout movement.

"Early in May some Cossack boys, ranging in age from eleven to fourteen years, left their villages and assembled at Lepsinsk, mounted on small and rough but hardy ponies. They marched 500 miles across country to Kahul-Sal on the Tashkent railroad where they entrained for St. Petersburg toward the end of July.

"Arriving in St. Petersburg, the 70 boys rode around the city seeing the sights for several days, and they were then given a place in the grand review. The next day they gave a special drill before the emperor. The drill consisted of a little troop work in close order, of the Cossack exercises in the saddle with the pony at full speed, and ended with all the boys standing in their saddles, advancing in line and singing their native songs."

Washington's Sewerage System Pronounced Best.

WASHINGTON'S SEWERAGE SYSTEM IS THE FINEST IN THE WORLD SURE 'TIS

WASHINGTON'S sewerage system has been pronounced the finest in the world by a party, including some of the foremost sanitary engineers. This party, which included Dr. John Watson, chief sanitary engineer of Birmingham, England, and formerly chief sanitary engineer of Toronto; Dr. George W. Fuller of New York, author of the standard work on sewerage systems; Dr. Soper, president of the Metropolitan Drainage commission of New York City, and James C. Webster, chief sanitary engineer of Philadelphia, were escorted over the system by Superintendent Asa E. Phillips just at the close of the Congress of Hygiene and Demography. It was the unanimous opinion of this party that no city had a better system except the German municipalities, which were considered to be a model in this regard. Washington is underlaid by 600 miles of subterranean rivers, an average of nearly nine miles of river to every square mile of land. These are really underground rivers, because they take off the flowage from a half dozen or so streams which used to drain through what is now the central portion of the city. In addition, they handle all the drainage from Washington houses and all the immense amount of rain that falls annually in the District. The system was started in 1810, when an initial appropriation of $120 was granted for that purpose. The present sewerage system has so far cost $12,000,000 and the annual expenditure for sewerage runs about $350,000, and the annual increase in mileage is about 25 miles. To get rid of mosquito breeding, all of the catch basins, of which there are about 5,000, are thoroughly flushed biweekly, and then dosed with mosquito oil during the season.

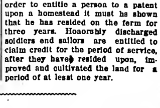
Uncle Sam Makes It Much Easier to Secure a Farm

GENEROUS Uncle Sam who for over a century has been giving away homesteads in the west through his general land office here, has decided that in order to make these lands more attractive to the prospective settlers he must make some concessions which will render them easier to acquire. As a result of the constant granting of homestead tracts, ranging from 40 to 320 acres, since the enactment of the homestead act of 1868, during which time the government has given away gratis more than 123,540,355 acres in final homestead entries, the land office has found it had on its hands lands less suitable for cultivation and farming purposes than in former years, and consequently fewer applications for homesteads.

According to the latest report of the land office there still remain to be disposed of in homestead, timber, coal, mineral and stone lands 695,401,259 acres, situated in what are commonly known as public land states. About one-quarter of these lands have been surveyed.

In order, then, to induce entries on the remaining lands, congress recently passed a law providing that certain restrictions on these entries in the way of cultivation, residence, etc., be moderated so that settlers would find it less difficult to live up to the specifications set forth in homestead laws. One of the most attractive features of the new law is the three-year residence clause. This provides that in order to entitle a person to a patent upon a homestead it must be shown that he has resided on the farm for three years. Honorably discharged soldiers and sailors are entitled to claim credit for the period of service, after they have resided upon, improved and cultivated the land for a period of at least one year.

Railroad Puts Engine in the City Fire Service



ONE of the big railroads having terminals here has equipped a locomotive with modern fire-fighting apparatus and put it in commission to assist the district firemen in extinguishing flames in the railroad yards, particularly near New Jersey and Virginia avenue.

Because of the high speed of which the engine is capable and the fact that it has right of way all the time, its service will be invaluable, as has already been shown by its efficiency in putting out small flames in the yards without the assistance of the municipal department. The excellent switch-board service, operated from the towers, can give it right of way with scarcely any delay.

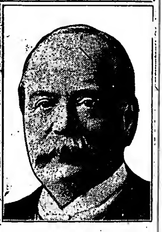
The primary use of the engine will be in the yards, but it can be brought to the Union station or elsewhere along the road if necessary. The terminal has been so constructed that water can be reached at any point in the yards.

This is not an innovation, as the road has equipped a large number of similar engines. In many places they have grown more efficient than the fire department and are called upon to do most of the work. No fewer than 150 fires have been extinguished by the locomotive fire engines in the various yards and stations of the company.

The railroad has a special organization which becomes effective whenever a fire breaks out. The assistant chief yardmaster acts as chief of the department; he gives general directions in case of a fire and conducts drill from time to time.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

SIR GEORGE ALARMED BY AMERICA'S GAIN



Anglo-American amity means world supremacy or these two nations, according to the opinion expressed by Sir George Reid, high commissioner for Australia at the British capital, in an interview given out the other day. With a rupture of the friendship between the United States and Great Britain—and he sees no indication of unpleasantness—other powers might seek to change the balance of power, the commissioner said.

Sir George and Lady Reid have just finished a tour of the United States that extended over several weeks. Of course, he is duly impressed with the remarkable growth of American industries and American fortunes. But, do you know, Sir George actually thought at one time that the bally American foundation wasn't solid. He says so himself. Listen:

"To one who lives as far from the United States as I do your tremendous strides and development appear so rapid that it is hard to believe they are built on a solid foundation. One feels that the bubble must burst some day. But my visit has convinced me that you have builded solidly, and that impression of which I spoke has been entirely dissipated."

HEAD OF WOMEN'S FEDERATED CLUBS

Mrs. Pennybacker, a picture of whom is herewith presented, was recently elected president of the Federation of Women's Clubs. It is said to be her idea that women, whose activities are directed to affairs outside their home circles, consist of three classes: First, those who work for their daily bread; second, those who are moved to action by the economic conditions surrounding working women and political abuses which affect the general public and strike particularly hard at women and children; third, those who are interesting themselves in public affairs as a means of broadening their mental horizons and acquiring a more liberal knowledge of the ways of the world.

In the first class there are in the United States six million women. Six million women are working for their bread and shelter. Their activities are, with few exceptions, compulsory. They work because hard practical necessity compels them.

It is almost impossible to estimate the number of women in the second class. They are in every city and village.

The third class form the majority of the club women.

JILTS A PRINCE TO WED AN AMERICAN

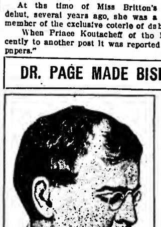
The engagement of Miss Katherine Britton, who, it is reported, jilted a prince to wed E. H. Herriman's son, Averill, is expected to be announced shortly. Young Herriman will inherit much of the millions left by his father, and Miss Britton, as the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Britton, will come into a large fortune.

Miss Britton spent the summer in Europe and at Narragansett Pier. She won fame in social circles at the national capital last winter by appearing at a dance with a golden snake twined about her corsage. The effect was so lifelike that it startled the guests until the wearer assured them it was made of jewels. As a devotee of aviation, she has also gained some prominence, having made several flights on the speedway with famous aviators.

At the time of Miss Britton's debut, several years ago, she was a member of the exclusive coterie of debutantes known as the "Big Six."

When Prince Koutacheff of the Russian embassy was transferred recently to another post it was reported that she had given him his "walking papers."

DR. PAGE MADE BISHOP OF NEW MEXICO



Rev. Herman Page, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, East 50th street and Madison avenue, Chicago, has been chosen bishop of New Mexico by the Episcopal house of bishops.

The announcement of Dr. Page's election came as a surprise to the members of his parish. None of the members had heard of the possibility of such action being taken. Some were inclined to express doubt as to whether Dr. Page would accept the appointment.

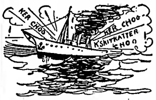
Only one other promotion was made by the house of bishops, that being the election of George Biller Jr., formerly of New Jersey, to the bishopric of North Dakota. The house of bishops was in session for two days.

Dr. Page has been rector of St. Paul's church for twelve years. He came to Chicago from St. John's Episcopal church at Fall River, Mass.

The newly appointed bishop was graduated from Harvard with a degree of bachelor of arts in 1288. In 1891 he received the degree of bachelor of divinity from the Episcopal Theological seminary at Cambridge, Mass. In 1906 he was awarded the honorary degree of doctor of divinity by the University of Pittsburgh.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Pepper Laden Ship Sneezes Its Way Into Port



NEW YORK.—Looking off to the Azores from his little room at the top of the observation tower out on the bend of Sandy Hook, Jack Murray, the observer and wireless telegraph operator, thought he heard a queer sound from out of the mists beyond the dawn.

He threw open a window and silenced a clicking key to listen.

"S'skitkatter choo!"

It was the most stupendous sneeze that his veteran ears had ever heard in all his adventurous life. For a moment he thought it might have been a boiler explosion on an incoming steamer. But, no. It was unmistakable when it was repeated.

"S's'skikittkatter choo!"

Wondering, Jack Murray leaned out still farther and snuffed the breeze as he made out the lines of a ship headed in from the Ambrose lightship and then he found himself nearly out of the window, his own head racked with the biggest sneeze Mrs. Murray's son ever got out of his system. He sat back panting and slammed down the window. When he was rested he took up his glasses, made out the ship's name and reported the Athol of Southampton, Captain Saxby.

On to quarantine went the Britisher, and as she dropped anchor the doctor and the revenue men and all the clerks, and even the dwellers on the green slopes of Rosebank wheezed and buried their faces in their handkerchiefs and sneezed again.

"What the—achoo, fs-s-st wow—is this?" remarked the revenue man as he followed over the side.

"Pepper!" shouted Captain Saxby.

"Pepper by—aker-choow-wumpf!"

"Yes—blast the ker-sniff-choo!—Stuff!" roared Mate Pringle.

The manifest showed them truthful mariners.

Trap for "Dips" Is One of the Latest Inventions

CHICAGO.—Members of the "Pickpockets' Protective association" had better beware of Samuel Franklin, 1347 Throop street.

Sam was robbed of a purse containing $16 while riding on a north-bound Halsted street car. The other day the police of the Desplaines street station took Harry Robinson and J. Harris in custody on suspicion that they were pickpockets. As one of them answered the description of the man who victimized Franklin, Sam was called in to identify him.

"I don't think I shall ever be robbed again," said Sam casually.

"Why?" asked several policemen at the same time, startled by the young man's apparent self-assurance.

Sam's answer was to turn his back and remove his coat. There the astonished bluecoats beheld a thick string looped about the man's shoulders and running down into his trouser's hip pockets on either side. Sam pulled on the right string and out from the depths of his pocket came the fattest purse the cops ever had seen. Robinson's eyes bulged hungrily. The purse was tightly tied to the string.

"You see, I put paper in this purse and keep my money in another," explained Sam jauntily. "When a dip grabs my purse he pulls on the string and I know he's nibbling."

"Yes, but how are you to prevent him from jerking it loose and making a run for it?" asked the detective.

"Why, you see, when he pulls on this string," explained Sam suiting his actions to his words, "it pulls the string out of the other pocket. I have a club in the other pocket, which has no bottom. The thief in pulling out the purse automatically pulls out the club and I bang him over the bean with it."

Chicken Dinners Follow Fire Over Grocery Store

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Because Mrs. Sarah Weinstein, whose neighbors vouch for the accuracy of her statement that she was born 108 years ago, refused to be rescued when a fire started in the cellar of the house in which she lives, residents of that section of the city the other day enjoyed the first Sunday chicken chase of the season.

While Mrs. Weinstein obstinately resisted the efforts of a band of firemen and the best persuasive methods that Captain Mooney of truck company No. 70, could muster to convince her she should permit them to carry her down the fire escape, a person, whose chief asset later was shown to be an exaggerated sense of humor, catered the chicken market kept on the ground floor of the burning building by Julius Sandwich. Half a minute later the firemen gave up their attempts to rescue Mrs. Weinstein with her consent, picked her up in their arms and carried her down the fire escape.

Simultaneously 300 clucking hens and crowing roosters fluttered through the doors of the butcher shop, and with little regard for the rules of the road flew into cellars and open windows and doors. Some of them perched on the tops of shutters; one gained a point of vantage on an iron peg protruding from a telegraph pole. Most of them, however, saved from death by smoke, died in the back yards of persons living in the neighborhood and later did service at a belated Sunday afternoon dinner.

Of the 300 chickens that got out of the market, Mr. Sandwich by means of the strictly commercial method of offering 25 cents for each that was returned by its captor, was able to recover only forty.

Black Cat That Knows How to Turn on the Lights

BOSTON, Mass.—A cat played burglar in the diamond store of Charles E. Kattelle, in the Kimball building, at 13 Tremont street, early the other day and caused the night watchmen and the police of the Old Court Square station to nearly collapse of shock.

When James Jackson, the watchman, made his rounds, he found everything all right in the diamond shop. Shortly afterward he discovered the electric lights burning brightly. He crept to the door and listened for the dread music of the safe burglar's drill. All was still except for a constant purring. Jackson called Sergt. Walter Berry and Policemen Marks and Hale.

The master's key to the locks of the door will not open the door of the gem shop, for it is provided with a special jeweler's lock to guard against thieves. Kattelle was called by telephone from his home in Newton. When he arrived he explained that the lights in his shop are furnished by an illuminating company, while those in the corridors of the building are supplied with current by a series of dynamos in the basement connected with the building itself.

When James Jackson, the watchman and the policemen jumped inside with him, prepared for a conflict with the burglars, they were greeted by a sleek, purring cat which was evidently happy to see them.

It was revealed that the cat, in jumping about, had snapped the electric light switch over and turned on the lights.

Mr. Kattelle explained that the cat had turned on the lights before, when tired of remaining alone in the darkness.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN

THE REPORTER.

Among the sons of men there is none who really knows a great city except the man who has been a reporter in it. He has sounded its depths. He has come to know the house of crime, the house of worship, and the house of festival. He is familiar with the church and with the nether world. He has seen the greater and the lesser wheels of administrative machinery in motion. He has learned how to reach that supreme potentate, the police sergeant, behind his desk, and how to unravel and knit together the varying tales of bystanders. The streets of the city are known to him, bared in gray morn, when the vast commissary of a great city is converging on the markets, thronged by the rising and ebbing tides of those who go to their work and return from it jostling in the crowded hours, suddenly empty in mid eve as the tide sweep strips the estuary of its water and full again when the theaters empty, writes Talcott Williams in the Columbia Quarterly. He knows the streets of danger full of news, and the streets of safety full of newspaper readers, comfort clogged. He comes to have an instinct as to the trail of news, and he discovers, as perhaps no other man does, how often the intelligent, the educated, the well bred, and the advantaged are dull and hackneyed by a safe life, and how keen and swift and quick comes to be the great guerrilla horde that knows the street as its hunting ground and wins by wit and not by work.

Each year some person of good intentions comes forward with the suggestion that the clocks be set an hour ahead in the summertime. The object is to haul people out of bed while the day is young so they will have a chance to get their work well along in the cool of the morning. But every hot spell demonstrates afresh that such a scheme is a delusion and a snare. On a hot night you never get off soundly to sleep until after midnight, says the Kansas City Star. It's too uncomfortable in the early part of the night. Often you are up and down trying to cool off until well toward morning. About five o'clock the morning chill gets in its work and you are having your best sleep. To chop that off sooner than need be by an artificial time scheme ought to cause a revolt. Talk about it's being hard to get up early in cold weather! It's a lot harder to get up early when it's hot—at least, it seems that way until winter gets around again.

Policemen in West Philadelphia who escaped electrocution the other night consider themselves exceedingly fortunate. In some way a police telephone wire had become heavily charged by a feed wire. One patrolman was killed by a shock which he received upon inserting the key into the patrol box. Another was knocked unconscious. A sergeant answering the telephone calls at the station house was thrown across the room. Many on the circuit who received only slight shocks attribute their immunity to the circumstance that they had on rubber boots. It was a very serious situation, and illustrates what may happen at any time when an uninsulated electric wire carrying a heavy current crosses a telephone wire. Hence the necessity for vigilance in the observance of precautions which will prevent that dangerous mischance.

The Boy Scout movement is flourishing in other countries than the United States and Great Britain. It is on a strong footing in Denmark, where both the Crown Prince Frederik and his brother, Prince Knud, are taking part in the training. The young princes associate with their fellow scouts on terms of perfect equality. This is a good preparation for future usefulness on the throne of a democratic country like Denmark—for democratic Denmark is, although ruled by a king.

A pair of valuable opera glasses, lost 23 years ago, have just been restored to the owner by the finder, whose conscience urged their return. Evidently, the speed mania of the age has not as yet affected the operations of the average conscience.

For purposes of fancy balls, the modern society woman loves to tog up in fashions of a bygone day. But wouldn't she raise an awful holler if she had to wear them all the time?

The receipt of two cents for the conscience fund in Washington has been regarded in quite a humorous light, but if all were to act under the sense of obligation to the government shown by the sender of this infinitesimal contribution, the fund might be big enough to build a dreadnought.

A detective who climbed two hundred feet in the air to arrest a steeplejack ought to rise rapidly in his chosen profession.

MONTENEGRIN SOLDIERS IN ACTION

THE Montenegrins are proving themselves good fighters and they have an up to date army. A group of Montenegrin soldiers is seen here working rapid fire machine guns just outside the town of Berane.

FORMER M'CORMICK OFFICIAL GIVES U. S. FACTS IN HARVESTER CASE

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Rodney B. Swift, former head of the legal, patent and experimental departments of the McCormick Harvester company, proved the "star" witness for the government in the preliminary hearing of its suit to dissolve the International Harvester company, when the Chicago hearing was resumed Wednesday before Special Examiner Robert S. Taylor. The former confidential man of the McCormicks, the organizers of the alleged "harvester trust," told the "inside" story of the events leading up to the formation of the International Harvester company in September, 1902.

Mr. Swift testified that the McCormick Harvester company, despite keen competition, earned net profits of $16,000,000 on its capitalization of $2,500,000 during the fiscal years of 1900, 1901 and 1902. He said the dividends paid for the three years amounted to 463 per cent.

Under the interrogation of Edwin P. Grosvenor, special assistant attorney-general, who had charge of the prosecution of the alleged "trust," the witness revealed the details of the conferences in New York and Chicago which resulted in the combining of six harvesting machine companies, which controlled from 85 to 90 per cent of the binder and reaper business of the world, he said.

Attorneys representing the defendants in the dissolution suit made a stubborn fight to prevent the examination of Mr. Swift at this time. Their efforts were futile, however, and at the end of a bitter series of tilts between William D. McHugh, chief counsel for the corporation, and Mr. Grosvenor, the examination of the witness by the latter was allowed to proceed.

NUNS PERISH IN FIRE

SISTERS SACRIFICE LIVES IN EFFORT TO SAVE CHILDREN IN ASYLUM AT SAN ANTONIO.

MOTHER SUPERIOR'S BRAVERY

Attempts to Carry Out a Child, But Two Fall Back Into Blazing Structure as Firemen Look on Powerless to Aid.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 1.—In an attempt to save 87 children in their charge, six sisters of charity sacrificed their lives Wednesday in a fire that destroyed St. John's orphanage. One body fell to its death with Mary of the Cross, mother superior of the institution, who left her place of safety in a vain effort to save the child. Another orphan is missing, and it is feared it did not escape.

The children owe their lives to the courage and self-sacrifice of the nuns.

The death of the mother superior, Mary of the Cross, was the sequel to a demonstration of remarkable courage. She returned to the burning dormitory when she heard the cry of a child who had been overlooked in the excitement. A few moments later she appeared at a window in the front of the building with the babe in her arms.

Fire Chief Wright attempted to save her, but he failed. A ladder was placed against the unsteady wall and the chief scaled it, but before he reached her the mother superior with the child fell back into the flames.

The dead nuns belonged to the Sisters of Charity of the Incarnate Word.

AUTOIST DEAD; FOUR LOST

Party of Five Who Started on Ride to Nebraska Town May Have Perished in Missouri River.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 30.—Positive identification of a body found in the Missouri river Saturday near Winnebago, Neb., as that of George Miller, a contractor of this city, caused an investigation by authorities here of a report that an automobile party of five had perished in the river.

Miller, with Bertha Holbrook of Sioux City; Frank Stamper of Danbury, Iowa; Ida Hall of Omaha and Louis Matwig of Danbury, Iowa, left here for Omaha in Matwig's automobile October 1. Investigation by authorities elicited no information as to the whereabouts of the other four members of the party.

The entire party had been missing since October 1st, officials said.

Late Senator Elkins' Son Dead.

Ft. Worth, Tex., Nov. 2.—After living in voluntary exile 18 years and under an assumed name, Frank W. Elkins, son of former U. S. Senator Stephen B. Elkins of Virginia, died Thursday from acute alcoholism.

Woman Dies in Auto Collision.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 2.—Mrs. John H. Daugherty was killed and her husband, Doctor Daugherty, seriously injured in an automobile collision here Thursday. The Daughertys came here from Indianapolis.

BECKER IS SENTENCED

GOTHAM OFFICER TO DIE WEEK OF DECEMBER 9.

Reiterates Statement That He Is Innocent of Rosenthal Murder—Is Now at Sing Sing.

New York, Nov. 1.—Charles A. Becker, the former police lieutenant convicted of procuring the murder of the gambler, Herman Rosenthal, was sentenced here Wednesday to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing during the week of December 9. Sentence was pronounced by Justice Goff. His execution will be stayed, however, by a notice of appeal from the verdict of the jury soon to be filed by his counsel, which may take a year to determine. Becker was delivered into the custody of Sheriff Harburger, who at 11:55 left with him by train for Sing Sing prison, where the convicted man will be confined until his fate is determined.

Sing Sing, Nov. 1.—The sheriff reached Sing Sing with Charles A. Becker, former police lieutenant, condemned to death for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, Wednesday night. Turned over to the prison authorities, Becker's measurements and pedigree were taken and he was placed in the "death house." "I come here an innocent man," he said in bidding good-by to the sheriff. "I don't know any more about that murder than you do."

NEW WARSHIP IS LAUNCHED

Largest of Uncle Sam's Great Fighting Vessels Is Christened by Congressman Calder's Daughter.

New York, Oct. 31.—In the presence of President Taft, Secretary of War Meyer, Governor Dix, Mayor Gaynor and thousands of other spectators, the superdreadnaught New York, the newest addition to the United States navy, slid from the ways in the new New York navy yard on the crest of the forenoon's tide into the waters of the Wallabout.

Miss Elsie F. Calder, daughter of Congressman W. M. Calder of New York, christened the big vessel, breaking a bottle of wine on its bows, and little Kathleen Fitzgerald, daughter of Congressman Fitzgerald of Brooklyn, was the flower girl.

The New York is a sister ship to the battleship Texas, which was launched at Newport News a few months ago. Like the Texas, she will have an armament of fourteen-inch guns. Ten guns of this size will be carried in the main battery. She will also have 21 five-inch guns along her sides.

Income Tax Near Ratification.

Washington, Nov. 1.—Thirty-two states have notified Secretary Knox of their ratification of the proposed income tax amendment of the federal constitution and four have notified the state department of their rejection.

Orders Troops for Strike.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 2.—As a result of disorders and rioting in connection with the street car strike, Governor Gilchrist ordered out the First and Second regiments, state troops, Thursday.

SHERMAN IS BURIED

REMAINS OF LATE VICE-PRESIDENT ARE INTERRED IN FAMILY MAUSOLEUM AT UTICA.

TAFT AND SENATE PRESENT

All Ostentation Is Avoided in Connection With Rites Over Statesman—President Issues Proclamation and Asks Country to Honor Dead.

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 2.—The remains of James S. Sherman, late vice president of the United States, who died on Wednesday night, were buried in Forest Hill cemetery in the family mausoleum recently erected.

The most unostentatious funeral services compatible with Mr. Sherman's high position were held over the body Saturday.

President Taft and the entire senate were present as well as many other prominent men of the country. There was a private service held in the morning in the Sherman home on Genesee street for the immediate members of the deceased's family, and at two o'clock Saturday afternoon public services were held in the First Presbyterian church of Utica. They were conducted jointly by Doctor Holden, pastor of the Reformed Dutch church of Washington of which Mr. Sherman was treasurer, and Dr. M. W. Stryker, president of Hamilton college of which he was an alumnus. The body laid in state at Oneida county courthouse from 3 o'clock Friday afternoon until 9 o'clock at night. The pall-bearers were intimate friends of Mr. Sherman's, friends whom the vice president selected before his death. Messages of condolence have been received from all parts of the world.

Washington, Nov. 2.—All official Washington and the thousands of friends of the late Vice-President Sherman mourned his death Thursday at the capital city of the nation, where he was so well and affectionately known.

The president issued a proclamation taking official notice of the death of Mr. Sherman and giving instructions to the navy, army and American diplomatic corps to pay honor to the memory of the dead vice-president.

By the instructions of the proclamation, the American flag was displayed all around the world at half-mast during the funeral ceremonies and until sunset of the day of the obsequies.

At every naval station, on board every battleship and on all ships a salute of nineteen guns was fired, beginning at the hour fixed for the funeral service. For thirty days officers of the military establishments will wear mourning badges on sword and uniform.

Senator Bacon, president pro tem, of the senate, announced the death of Mr. Sherman to all senators, and the sergeant-at-arms of the senate sent them a copy of the proclamation of the president. The house was represented by a committee. The senators and representatives met in New York and by arrangements made there by the sergeant-at-arms of the senate, the statesmen were taken to Utica by special train.

A great many of the judges of this district attended the funeral. All the courts, from the United States Supreme court down, adjourned out of respect to the event of the vice-president's death.

CHICAGO PACKERS INDICTED

Federal Grand Jury of Boston Hold Men as Officers of Consolidated Rendering Company.

Boston, Nov. 2.—The federal grand jury Thursday returned indictments against Edward F. Swift of Chicago, president of the Consolidated Rendering company; Edward A. Tilden, vice-president, also of Chicago; George H. Swift of this city; Horatio W. Heath, general manager, and the company itself, for combining to monopolize the trade and commerce in the rendering business.

The indictments were returned in the United States district court before Judge Morton. It is charged that the company, which in 1904 controlled 40 per cent. of the business, now controls about 95 per cent. of it, through unfair, oppressive, tortuous and unlawful conduct.

NO DIAZ RULING FOR MONTH

Mexican Supreme Court Docket Is Too Crowded to Permit Hearing of Rebel's Case.

Mexico City, Oct. 30.—Judges of the Mexican supreme court who are to decide upon the legality of the death sentence imposed by court-martial upon Felix Diaz at Vera Cruz, announced that the docket is so crowded that there will probably be no decision for a month.

Arrest Consul in Mexico.

Washington, Oct. 31.—International complications may follow the action of the Mexican government in arresting the Belgian consul at Merida, Yucatan, which was reported to the state department Tuesday.

Railway Official Shot.

Greensboro, N. C., Oct. 31.—George G. Thompson, division freight agent of the Southern railway, was shot and killed here Tuesday by W. R. Blair, his former private secretary, whom he had discharged.

YOUTHS LOOT TRAIN

EXPRESS CAR ON "KATY" IN OKLAHOMA ROBBED BY BANDITS.

Thieves Risk Lives of Selves and the Train Crew on Burning Trestle, and Then Blow Open Safe.

Muskogee, Okla., Oct. 31.—A southbound Missouri, Kansas & Texas train was held up and robbed Tuesday by three youthful bandits south of Eufaula. They made the engineer detach the express and baggage cars and run them ahead, after which they blasted and robbed the express safe. Road officials believe the outlaws got several thousand dollars.

Eyewitnesses say they saw one of the robbers twice make trips from the express safe, each time with his arms piled high with sealed packages of currency.

Possemen found the outer wrappers of one of these packages, which had contained $3,500, consigned by the Southwestern National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City to the National bank of Greeneville, Tex.

By setting fire to a trestle near the town of Wirth the robbers had no trouble in flagging the train to a halt. Although the flames threatened to destroy the trestle before their work was accomplished, the hold-up men moved deliberately.

While one robber held the line of employes the other two uncoupled the engine, baggage and express car from the coaches. They then forced the trainmen into the cab and ordered the engineer to open the throttle.

The engine, pulling the two cars, shot across the burning bridge.

NAB SINGER MURDER SUSPECT

Charles N. Conway and Actress Wife Captured in Home Town of the Former—Deny Crime.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Charles N. Conway, crippled acrobat and exhibition diver, and his actress wife, known in burlesque circles as Mary Conway, Beatrice Ryall and May Monte, who have been sought by the police of every city in the country in connection with the murder and robbery in Chicago of Miss Sophia Gertrude Singer, a Baltimore heiress, were arrested at Lima, O., the home town of the wooden footed circus clown, on Thursday. News of their arrests was received by Capt. John J. Halpin of the detective bureau in a telegram and concluded a relentless, unabated search for several days. Conway and his wife both denied they were responsible for Miss Singer's death.

KILLS HIS WIFE'S FAMILY

Alvin Roehr of Plymouth, Wis., Who Committed Triple Murder, Then Hangs Self.

Sheboygan, Wis., Oct. 30.—Alvin Roehr, a young farmer of Plymouth, shot and killed his father-in-law, Phillip J. Ott, Mrs. Ott and Mrs. Ott's father, Fred Haut, eighty years of age on Sunday when he was refused permission to see his wife, from whom he had been separated.

Roehr's body was later found hanging to a tree in the woods about a quarter of a mile from the scene of the tragedy.

Mrs. Roehr and her baby escaped by hiding for three hours.

Ott was one of the most prominent farmers and stock raisers in this county.

TITANIC SURVIVOR HAS BABE

Mrs. Daniel F. Marvin of New York, Whose Husband Died When Ship Sank, Is a Mother.

New York, Oct. 31.—Announcement was made here of the birth of a girl baby to Mrs. Daniel W. Marvin of Riverside drive. Mrs. Marvin and her husband were returning on board the Titanic from their honeymoon trip to Europe when the liner sank. Mr. Marvin met his death and Mrs. Marvin was saved. It was said at her home that the mother and daughter were doing well.

At the time of the marriage the bride was only seventeen years old and the bridegroom a year older.

TELEGRAPHIC NOTES

Washington, Oct. 30.—President Taft and the presidential party left Tuesday for New York, where the president will attend the launching of the battleship New York Wednesday, returning here Thursday morning.

New York, Oct. 30.—Announcement is made here of the engagement of Karl H. Behr, the former Yale tennis champion, and Miss Helen Newman, daughter of Mrs. R. L. Beckwith of Riverside drive. Mr. Behr and Miss Newman are both survivors of the Titanic disaster and were taken off the sinking ship in the same lifeboat.

Thirty Volcanoes Erupt.

Sydney, N. S. W., Nov. 2.—Thirty volcanoes are in eruption on the island of Ninafoou in the Tongan group, and many remarkable changes in the physical features of the island have resulted.

France Wins Balloon Race.

Berlin, Germany, Nov. 2.—France wins the Gordon Bennett international balloon trophy, regardless of the performances of the Duesseldorf and the Isle de France, which have not yet reported.

BACKACHE "GETS ON THE NERVES"

Many who suffer from backache and weak kidneys are unnaturally irritable, fretful and nervous. Not only does constant backache "get on the nerves", but bad kidneys fail to eliminate all the uric acid from the system, and uric acid irritates the nerves, keeping you "on edge" and causing rheumatic, neuralgic pains. Doan's Kidney Pills cure these ills by curing the kidneys. Here's proof:

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

A California Case:

Mrs. H. Walsh, 1649 Tenth Avenue, San Francisco, Cal. says: "I had such sharp, shooting pains through my kidneys it seemed that a knife were being thrust into me. My back was so lame I could hardly stoop. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me after doctors failed. I have had no trouble since."

Get Doan's at Any Drug Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., Buffalo, New York

WANTED Men to learn Barber trade. Easy work. Big wages. Few weeks completes. Expert instructions. Tools given. Beautiful illustrated catalog free. Moller Barber College, 28 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

TYPEWRITERS All makes from $15 up. Over 1000 to select from, all guaranteed. Machines rented 3 months for $5. Write for bargain list No. 4. AMERICAN WRITING MACHINE CO., Minneapolis, Minn.

IN THESE DAYS OF DIVORCES

Really Nothing Remarkable in the Simple and Frank Explanation of the Small Boy.

We were walking down the street Sunday and we saw the most beautiful child sitting on the front steps of a pretty house, says Ted Robinson. His eyes were so big and blue, his curly head so golden, his innocent smile so frank and inviting that we could not resist the temptation to enter into conversation with him.

"Well, son," we said in the idiotically genial way with which an adult usually addresses a child, "how old are you?"

"Four," lisped the infant. (He didn't really lisp it, because you can't lisp when you say four; but that's the way children are supposed to do.)

"Isn't that fine!" (It would have been just as fine if he'd been three, though, or five. More idiocy.) "And whose little boy are you?"

"Momma's li'l boy."

"Aren't you papa's little boy, too?"

"Nope."

"Why aren't you papa's little boy?"

"The decree gimme to momma."

Then we went on our pleasant way.—Savannah Morning News.

England's Motto.

"Dieu et Mon Droit"—God and My Right"—the royal motto of England, was the parole of the day given by Richard I. (he of the Lion Heart) to his army at the battle of Gisors, in France, on the 20th of September, 1198, when the French army was signally defeated. Dieu et Mon Droit appears to have been first assumed as a motto by Henry VI., 1422-1462. Semper Idem—"Always the Same"—was one of the mottoes of Queen Elizabeth; also adopted by Queens Mary and Anne.

Not for Her.

"He seems to be so superficial," said Mrs. Oldcastle.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Gottalotte, as she hung her $15,000 necklace over the back of a chair. I've noticed that. He's got half a dozen big ones stuffed, that he claims he caught. I wouldn't have such things in my dining room."

"PROUD AND GLAD"

Because Mother Looked So Well After Quitting Coffee.

An Ohio woman was almost distracted with coffee dyspepsia and heart trouble.

Like thousands of others, the drug—caffeine—in coffee was slowly but steadily undermining her nervous system and interfering with natural digestion of food. (Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the poisonous drug found in coffee.)

"For 30 years," she writes, "I have used coffee. Have always been sickly—had heart trouble and dyspepsia with ulcers in stomach and mouth so bad, sometimes, I was almost distracted and could hardly eat a thing for a week.

"I could not sleep for nervousness, and when I would lie down at night I'd belch up coffee and my heart would trouble me. It was like poison to me. I was thin—only weighed 125 lbs., when I quit coffee and began to use Postum.

"From the first day that belching and burning in my stomach stopped, I could sleep as soundly as anyone and, after the first month, whenever I met any friends they would ask me what was making me so fleshy and looking so well.

"Sometimes, before I could answer quick enough, one of the children or my husband would say, 'Why, that is what Postum is doing for her'—they were all so proud and glad.

"When I recommend it to anyone I always tell them to follow directions in making Postum, as it is not good to taste if weak, but fine when it has the flavor and rich brown color." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest. Adv.

VICE PRESIDENT SHERMAN DIES AT HIS HOME

LEADER IN REPUBLICAN PARTY PASSES AWAY AFTER A LONG ILLNESS—DEATH DUE TO BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

FAMILY WAS WITH HIM.

Taft, in Letter of Sympathy, Pays Tribute to His Running Mate—Funeral Arrangements—Senate Will Attend in Body.

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 31.—After a long illness, Vice President James Schoolcraft Sherman died at his home in this city of uremic poison caused by Bright's disease.

He had been sinking for hours and it was realized that death was a question of only a few hours.

There was a slight reaction shortly before the end, caused by apparent improvement of the kidneys, but it did not prove real or lasting and at best gave only temporary hope.

Members of Family Present

All the members of the immediate family were witnesses to the final scene. In addition to Mrs. Sherman there were in the death chamber their three sons, Sherrill, Richard U. and Thomas N. Sherman and their respective wives; R. M. and Sanford Sherman, brothers of Mr. Sherman, and Mrs. L. B. Moore and Mrs. H. J. Cooklcham, sisters of Mr. Sherman.

Soon after Mr. Sherman's death, Dr. Fayette H. Peek, the attending physician issued the following statement:

Physician Issues Statement.

"The vice president died without regaining consciousness for a moment. He was perfectly quiet. He died in the presence of his wife, her brother and sister, his two brothers and his three sons and their wives. He died in a uremic coma as a result of Bright's disease, heart disease and arterio-sclerosis."

Mrs. Sherman Bears Up Bravely.

Mrs. Sherman bore up bravely under the shock of her husband's death as also did the other members of the family. Although it was said at the house that the hopelessness of Mr. Sherman's fight against death had been realized since Friday, the blow nevertheless was a crushing one.

The announcement of the vice president's death spread quickly through the city. Universal sorrow was expressed and immediate steps were taken for the proper recognition of the sorrowful event.

Mr. Sherman was regarded as the first citizen of the city and all differences growing out of politics died with him.

Bell Tolls Out Doleful News.

The mayor gave out a statement voicing the general grief and the big bell at city hall as well as many church bells tolled out the doleful news to the public.

Not only did the Republican organization take recognition of the event, but the Progressives cancelled all meetings immediately, until after the vice president's funeral.

The Democrats signified their intention of removing a Wilson and Marshall banner which had been flung across one of the city streets and of suspending all political activity until after the funeral.

The mayor ordered that the flags on all city buildings should be placed at half mast and suggested that a similar course be followed with all other flags in Utica.

Prominent in Politics.

Washington. — The twenty-seventh vice-president of the United States and the only one re-nominated was christened James Schoolcraft Sherman. But in nearly a quarter of a century of public life, "Jim" Sherman ho won to his intimates, and probably half the nation referred to him as "Sunny Jim," a sobriquet he earned by a never failing, all year round sunny disposition.

Sherman belonged to the school of Republicanism oowndays popularly called "regular" and he fought his political battles without compromise or flinching. The events he helped to shape are so comparatively recent that history cannot assign him to his proper place until it also records the work of his contemporaries.

Elected Representative in 1887.

To the house of representatives of the fiftieth congress he came in the winter of 1887, just passed his thirty-second birthday, with the energy and optimism of youth, college bred from the halls of Hamilton, which has given to public life many other statesmen and public figures, none without some mark of distinction. He had been elected mayor of Utica two years before. Like many others who came to lead in the national legislature he brought with him an education in law. He was well born and well bred. His father, Richard Sherman, was an editor and public figure in New York state.

Nominated Vice President.

Two sessions of congress found Sherman defeated and out of office, but not for long. Henry W. Bentley of Booneville, Oneida county, beat him by less than a thousand votes in the race for the fifty-second congress. In the interim Sherman went back to Utica, built up his law practice and returned to the fifty-third congress with a signal victory. He remained in the house without defeat to the sixtieth congress when he was nominated and elected vice president on the ticket with Mr. Taft.

Sherman's Work in House.

Any review of Sherman's life would not be complete without a reference to his work in the house. Briefly, there is recorded no time when he moved galleries to applause by an address from the floor or changed any votes by eloquence, but the statutes bear marks of his work in committees and caucus, and the results of his labors on the rules committee, the interstate commerce committee and other branches of the machinery of the house where the real legislating is done, while speeches prevail upon the floor.

Lad in New York Politics.

In New York state politics Sherman was a leading figure. He always was active in state convention and a figure at all national gatherings of the party.

Sherman went to preside over the senate just about at a time when what popularly is known as "senatorial dignity" was beginning to feel its first break. In the chair, Sherman was dignity itself, fair in his rulings, his colleagues said, quiet, firm, sure and seldom reversed an appeal.

WASHINGTON MOURNS.

Every Attache the Vice President's Friend.

Washington, Oct. 31.—News of Vice President Sherman's death, though it had been expected hourly, was received with profound sorrow in official Washington.

At the capitol, where every attache considered him a friend, in the government headquarters where he was a frequent visitor, among the cabinet officers and in the diplomatic corps, where he had many close friends, the announcement caused genuine regret.

President Taft issued a proclamation directing that for 30 days all the United States embassies and legations abroad shall observe mourning. The flags over the White House, the dome of the capitol and the public buildings in Washington have been half masted.

From the navy and war departments orders were flashed to all army posts, ships at sea, navy yards and insular possessions to put flags at half mast on the day of the funeral.

SUCCESSOR NOVEMBER 12

National Committee Will Appoint Vice President.

New York, Oct. 31—Chairman Hilles of the Republican national committee has announced that he had called a meeting of the national committee for Nov. 12 in Chicago, to elect a successor to J. S. Sherman as the Republican candidate for vice president.

Mr. Hilles' statement, in part, was: "The national convention which met in Chicago in June delegated to the national committee power to fill vacancies on the national ticket and the death of Mr. Sherman, candidate of the Republican party for vice president at the coming election makes it incumbent on the national committee to nominate a candidate in his place. The nomination, however, cannot possibly be made prior to the election next Tuesday."

Taft Extends Sympathy.

New York.—President Taft immediately after arriving in New York despatched the following telegram to Mrs. Sherman at Utica:

"Mrs. Taft and I extend to you our heartfelt sympathy in your great sorrow. Our hearts go out to you in the loss of your noble and loving husband. Vice President Sherman had rendered distinguished service to his country and his death ten years before the time allotted by the Psalmist, is a great loss."

"WILLIAM H. TAFT."

Roosevelt Sends Message.

New York.—Just after he left the Madison Square Garden meeting Colonel Roosevelt was informed of the death of Vice President Sherman. The colonel immediately sent a telegram.

Governor Wilson Shocked.

Princeton, N. J.—When Governor Woodrow Wilson reached his home here from Burlington, where he spoke he learned of the death of Vice President Sherman. The governor said he was shocked at the news and expressed deep sorrow.

Suspects Still at Large.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Charles D. Conway, high diver, circus clown and acrobat, and his wife, Beatrict Ryall, a burlesque actress, wanted by the Chicago police in connection with the murder of Sophia G. Singer, has not been found after a search that extended throughout the entire country. Reports that the two had been seen in Rochester, Ind., caused extra activity among the police of that state. The body of Miss Singer will be taken to Baltimore, her former home, where her family is prominent.

Ban on Public Drinking Cup.

Washington, Oct. 31—Secretary MacVeagh, with one swoop, banished the public drinking cups from railways and steamboats operating in interstate commerce. This order, which becomes effective immediately, is in the interest of the nation's health. The drinking cup is held to be a menace as a carrier of disease. Treasury officials recommend that the traveler equip himself with a clean sheet of white paper, which by adroit folding can be turned into an impromptu drinking cup.

$1,900,000 IS GIVEN

ORIGINAL GIFT OF NOVEL PLAN WILL ONLY TOTAL ABOUT $1,000, HOWEVER.

WILL KEEP 250 YEARS.

Minneapolitans Eager to Aid City by Evansville-Van Winkle Method, City Clerk Knott Says.

Minneapolis. — Within a week, according to City Clerk Henry M. Knott, Minneapolis may be given:

A $4,000,000 park in the heart of the city.

A $4,000,000 public library building.

A $2,000,000 union station for airships.

A $1,000,000 women's rest station.

A $3,000,000 centrally located bath house and men's gymnasium and rest room.

A $2,000,000 endowment fund to insure the creation and operation of a woman's police department.

A $3,000,000 home for cats and dogs.

All these things are to be given Minneapolis this week, according to Mr. Knott, if citizens who have called up the city clerk to make good their promises, but Minneapolis won't really receive them for 250 years.

Evansville Plan Liked.

The Minneapolis people who, according to Mr. Knott, will make gifts to the city are people who read of Adolph Melzer's innovation in municipal financing at Evansville, Ind. Mr. Melzer, a wealthy retired soap manufacturer, has given Evansville a $1,000 certificate of deposit in an Evansville bank with the stipulation the money shall draw compound interest at 4 per cent for 250 years and the $19,956,400 principal and interest shall then be paid to the city.

Now, according to Mr. Knott, Minneapolis citizens declare their intention of following Mr. Melzer's example, but with smaller amounts and with a stipulation that the money is to be used for specified purposes at the end of 250 years.

"If they all keep their promises the present fund will amount to about $1,000," said Mr. Knott, who kept a list of the probable donations, and estimated the amounts which would be ultimately received for various purposes.

GIRLS ORGANIZE.

Have Camp Fire Club and Cook Own Out-of-Door Meals.

St. Cloud.—Fifty girls have joined the Camp Fire Girls' organization that is rapidly becoming locally popular. The Camp Fire is under the same advisory board or council as the Boy Scouts, their chief guardian being a member of that board. The organization will be known as "The Grey Rock Camp Fire," suggestive of the "granite city."

The Camp Fire girls in a body have held several meetings, taking long "hikes" down the river bank, each time building their fires and cooking their own meals. This week they enjoyed a hare and hound race. The hares taking 15 minutes start were followed by the hounds, the trail leading them over fields and through the woods. After an exciting chase all joined around a campfire, at which they cooked their noonday meal.

This week the girls are divided into four camps, each having a guardian, who will work under the direction of the chief guardian. Each camp will take up a line of work suited to its own needs or pleasure, with the outdoor tramps as a chief feature. Prominence will be given to the home department.

ESCAPE FROM ST. CLOUD.

Two Prisoners From Twin City Use Coal Sledge to Advantage.

St. Cloud.—While the officer in charge of the engine room at the state reformatory here was closing down one of the machines two inmates working as firemen, took advantage of the noise of the escaping steam, took a large sledge used in breaking coal, smashed the lock on the boiler room door, escaping into the main driveway and out into the woods. The guards were immediately notified and started in pursuit, but lost track of the men when they struck the river bank.

The two men were William Tennius and John Morris, both of whom have been in the institution for some time. Tennius was sent up from Minneapolis and Morris from St. Paul. Earlier in the day two paroled inmates created a disturbance in Rockville, this county, where they had been working. The men had obtained some whisky and became drunk. One obtained a shotgun and the citizens became alarmed.

The officers were called and brought both men back to the institution.

Mother Swoons; Baby Burns.

Duluth.—Mary Hansen, 3 years old, was burned to death at her home here and a 3-month-old baby so badly injured that he will die. The mother, Mrs. Harry Hansen, was outside the house when it caught fire. Barred by the flames from entering to save her three children, she smashed a window and lifted the oldest out. Then she went into hysterics and was unable to tell the firemen that the children were in the building. A neighbor gave them warning and the captain of the firemen entered the building but too late.

GRAIN RECEIPT RECORD.

1,000,000 Bushels a Day in Minneapolis Since Sept. 1.

Minneapolis. — The month that closed made new commercial history for Minneapolis, for in the fifty-one business days since the crop year opened Sept. 1, a sustained movement of unprecedented volume held up grain receipts to 1,000,000 bushels a day, and total receipts up to and including today were 51,938,510 bushels. No such continued heavy receipts were ever recorded here nor was 50,000,000 bushels of the Northwest crop ever handled before in the first sixty days after Sept. 1.

Bank clearings in October totaled $147,711,582.74, the second largest month's results in the history of the city. A year ago in the crop year period, ending Oct. 31, the grain receipts were 41,962,260 bushels. The increase this year is 9,976,250 bushels. A year ago in October, the bank clearings were $122,274,358.75. The increase this year was $25,437,223.99.

Conspicuous gains in grain receipts were: Oats, 4,481,000 bushels, compared with 1,947,000; rye, 2,080,000 bushels, compared with 786,000; wheat, 33,450,330 bushels, compared with 27,661,610. There were 9,210,000 bushels of barley received, 2,265,780 bushels of flaxseed and 450,920 bushels of corn.

The Minneapolis mills made 444,760 barrels of flour in the week ending Oct. 26, according to the Northwestern Miller. This compares with 332,470 in 1911, and 320,290 in 1910. All the twenty-three mills are operating, and the output is expected to continue heavy.

FARMER'S BODY FOUND.

Knife Wound in Arm Found Is Cause of Death.

Duluth.—Hugo Pyggo, who is a farm hand, was arrested on suspicion of having murdered Matt Kemp, whose body was found in the road at Midway, near here, where he had been stabbed to death. Kemp, who was a farmer living in Midway, was driving from Duluth, and when his horse and wagon reached home alone with the bottom of the wagon box covered with blood a search was made. He had been stabbed in the arm, from which he bled to death. At an autopsy it was found that the point of a knife was broken off in Kemp's arm.

A knife about seven inches long, with the point broken off, was in Pybbe's possession when arrested, according to Sheriff John Meinlog, who took him into custody.

Head Shaving Planned.

Minneapolis. — In spite of the fact that old China is now a republic and wearing of queues is done away with, officers of the immigration and Chinese inspection bureau learned that a newly born Chinese baby, the son of Moy Quai, Ny., proprietor of the Joy Ying Low restaurant, may have his head shaved and prepare for a queue, just like his father had it done in far away China years ago. The feast of the head shaving will take place in about a month and until that time the little slant eyed American will be without a name.

Miss Susie Ripley Injured.

Rochester.—Miss Susie Ripley, daughter of one of Rochester's most prominent citizens, lies in an unconscious condition as the result of an automobile accident. In company with Miss Agnes Grey she was a guest of Hubert Drips, a young business man of the city on a motor trip. While going at a moderate rate of speed a bad place in the road was encountered and the jar threw Miss Ripley from her seat. She struck on her face and side and was unconscious.

Find a Snake in Church Pew.

Halleck.—Sunday worshipers at the Catholic church were frightened on finding a big snake in one of the pews. The reptile, known as a "razorback," was 57 inches in length and two inches through the thickest part of its body. It was first seen by several women. One fainted, and men came to her assistance. They placed the reptile in a tub, and it was killed by Sheriff Anderson. Needless to say, there was not the solemnity usually seen when worship was resumed.

Bogus Gold Coins to Account For.

Mankato.—The October term of the federal court opened Tuesday, with Judge Charles A. Willard of Minneapolis presiding. The most important criminal case is that of William Johnson of Waterville, charged with having in his possession 2,000 bogus gold coins, made in representation of Spanish 25-peseta pieces. There are only a few civil cases on the calendar.

All Records Go.

Minneapolis.—G. N. Tunell, who is chief deputy grain inspector in Minnesota, predicts that the grain yield of the Northwest this year would exceed all records by at least 35,000,000 bushels.

Plan to Reorganize Bank.

Wannebago.—It is expected the State Bank of Commerce will be reorganized shortly along the lines of a plan agreed to by Kelsey Chase, state superintendent of banks, and the attorney general. It is hoped by this plan the depositors will receive the greatest portion of their money, otherwise they will receive only about 50 cents on the dollar. A man, thought by detectives to be H. W. Parker, the missing vice president, has been arrested at Sacramento, Cal., and efforts are being made to identify him.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY SHOOT BOY

HALLOWE'EN CELEBRATORS CARRY REAL RIFFLES.

Lad Had Tried to Disperse Crowd of Youngsters Near Own Home.

St. Paul.— Frank Schlinkert, fifteen years old, 289 Chatsworth street, St. Paul, is in a critical condition in a hospital as the result of a wound received in the left breast when he and some friends were trying to drive seven or eight Hallowe'en revelers away from the Schlinkert home where they were creating a disturbance.

Young Schlinkert and several of his friends were spending the evening in a little hut they had built as a clubhouse at Victoria and St. Anthony streets, and the former was outside when he noticed that the other "gang" was in front of his house.

"Come on, fellows," he is said to have called to his chums, "there's a gang over at the house. Let's go and clean 'em up."

Schlinkert and his friends started on the run toward the former's home. As they neared it the "gangsters" opened fire with 22 calibre rifles.

Suddenly Schlinkert threw up his hands, crying, "boys, I'm shot." His parents spent the night at the bedside in the hospital.

The boys who did the shooting escaped. Friends of the wounded boy said that they were a strange crowd that had probably come to their neighborhood to play Hallowe'en pranks. Street car conductors had before this reported that a gang of boys was shooting up the neighborhood and endangering passengers on the cars.

GREATER TAX FAVORED.

State Commission Advises Voters to Adopt Increase.

St. Paul.—The Minnesota state tax commission has come to the conclusion that the proposed law to be voted upon at the coming election increasing the railroad gross earnings tax from 4 to 5 per cent is justified by the facts. The election will take place next Tuesday, and the office force of the commission has been busily engaged in sending out information calculated to help the voters.

The commission says that if all the roads were assessed and taxed the same as other property, their taxes for 1912 would amount to more than $5,000,000. This is more than $1,000,000 in excess of the gross earnings for the last year as reported by the railroads.

Compete With Parcels Post.

Minneapolis.—While the Minneapolis officials of the railway mail service are making preparations for starting the parcels post service in this territory, the express companies, it is reported, are planning a coup on the government by greatly reducing their rates on all goods coming into competition with the new mail law. According to a report which reached officials of the Minneapolis postoffice, the express companies plan to put their new rates into effect prior to Jan. 1, the date the new parcels post law becomes effective.

Steamer Has Hard Voyage.

Duluth, Minn.—Active Captain Edward Martin of the steamer Octorara, which is in port with the largest cargo, 2,900 tons of package freight, ever brought west says that after he had left Houghton, the hardest seas he has ever encountered were met. "The chief trouble was that the screw would go out of the water and spin," said Captain Martin. "We had to fill two of the compartments to hold the stern down, and we were drawing 20 feet in the stern, but the wheel would go out."

Rural Church Betterment.

Rochester, Minn.—The very novel country life commission, which has been fostered by District Superintendent J. C. Craig of the Winona district of the Methodist church, was formelly launched at Rochester, when the ministers and laymen of the denomination gathered in this city for the purpose of electing officers and adopting a constitution.

Paralysis Fatal to Lawyer.

Austin Minn. — LaFayette French who was a well known attorney of southern Minnesota and prominent citizen of this city, died at his Chatham street residence from the effects of a paralytic stroke which he suffered Monday evening. Lafayette French was born Nov. 19, 1848, on a farm near Loraine township, Ohio.

Mayoralty Candidate Withdraws.

Minneapolis.—Alderman Charles D. Gould has just withdrawn as an active candidate from the mayoralty race. The contest is now between Wallace G. Nye, nominated at the primaries with Mr. Gould, and Thomas Van Lear, socialist, nominated by petition.

Badly Burned in Prairie Fire.

Bismarck.—John Kirsch, resident of Dawson who brought here in a terrible condition as the result of a prairie fire. His back, hands, arms and legs are terribly scorched and he has only a fighting chance for recovery. He was one of a party that was combating the fire near Dawson and became separated from the rest of the fire fighters. His clothing caught fire and he was unable to extinguish the blaze. Pieces of burned and charred flesh adhered to the clothing when p 'led from his body.

DREADED ATAXIA

What Active Treatment With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Accomplished in a Recent Case.

Mr. Francis M. Poole, a harness maker, of Garvin, Lyon Co., Minn., says: "My illness started in 1902, with sharp pains all through my limbs. At first I thought it was rheumatism but the pains kept getting more and more severe and I grew steadily worse. Later a numbness came over my feet. It gradually extended up my legs to my spine and waist. By this time I had lost all control of my legs. Next my bladder and bowels were affected and I lost all control of them. At this stage of the disease I was perfectly helpless and from November, 1905, to April, 1906, I was confined to the bed. My memory was so affected that I thought I would lose my mind. I looked just like a dead person. My lips and finger nails were blue. I suffered with terrible sharp, shooting pains and could get relief only from the use of morphine.

"I was treated by five St. Paul doctors. All of them pronounced my case locomotor ataxia. One said I could not live a year and another told my wife all he could do for me was to give medicine to relieve the pain. I was discouraged and, when my brother-in-law urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, I did so willingly for he had read of their curing a case similar to mine. I started to take the pills in March, 1906, while I was still confined to bed. I took several boxes when I felt a slight change for the better and had a healthier look. I was finally able to go to the country but kept on with the treatment. The bluish color left my lips and my eyes became brighter. I took the pills a long time and the next spring in May I could walk around. In June I went to work although still weak. I kept on gaining and am now working without the return of a symptom of my former trouble and without losing a days' work. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People absolutely cured me and I want all fellow sufferers to know of my wonderful recovery."

Those who are interested in the treatment which cured this case should have our booklet, "Diseases of the Nervous System," which will be sent to every nervous sufferer upon request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. ADV.

Clever Idea of Collector.

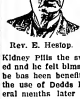
Here is a rare specimen of business humor, received the other day by a London firm. It ran:

"Our cashier fell unconscious at his desk this morning. Up to this time 4 p. m., we have been unable to get a word out of him except your names. May we say to him, with a view to his immediate recovery, that we have your check, as we think that is what he has on his mind?"

A CLERGYMAN'S TESTIMONY.

The Rev. Edmund Heslop of Wigton, Pa., suffered from Dropsy for a year. His limbs and feet were swollen and puffed. He had heart fluttering, was dizzy and exhausted at the least exertion. Hands and feet were cold and he had such a dragging sensation across the loins that it was difficult to move. After using 5 boxes of Dodds Kidney Pills the swelling disappeared and he felt himself again. He says he has been benefited and blessed by the use of Dodds Kidney Pills. Several months later he wrote: I have not changed my faith in your remedy since the above statement was authorized. Correspond with Rev. E. Heslop about this wonderful remedy.

Dodds Kidney Pills, 50c. per box at your dealer or Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Write for Household Hints, also music of National Anthem (English and German words) and recipes for dainty dishes. All 3 sent free. Adv.



Rev. E. Heslop.

Long-Felt Want.

Man (entering store)—A card in your window says: "Boy wanted over sixteen years."

Proprietor—Yes, sir; have you one?

Man—No. I just dropped in to ask you if you weren't discouraged, that's all.

Suitable Attire.

"How were the sailors dressed who were left on the desert islands?"

"In maroon suits, of course."

Your Opportunity IS NOW in the Province of Saskatchewan, Western Canada

Do you desire to get a Free Homestead of 160 ACRES of that well known Wheat Land? The area is becoming more limited but no less valuable.

NEW DISTRICTS have recently been opened up for settlement, and into these railroads are now being built. The day will soon come when there will be no Free Homesteading land left.

A Swift Current, Saskatchewan, farmer writes: "I came on my homestead, March 1906, with about $1,000 worth of horses and machinery, and just $35 in cash. Today I have 900 acres of wheat, 300 acres of oats, and 60 acres of flax." Not bad for six years, but only an instance of what may be done in Western Canada in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta.

Send at once for Literature, Maps, Railway Rates, etc., to

R. A. GARRETT,
315 Jackson Street,
St. Paul, Minn.

Canadian Government Agent, or address Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1906, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879.

This has been a very unfavorable fall for the farmers to harvest his crops. After that big September storm the lands have been so soft that it is almost impossible to do any work on them. But let us hope for a better season next year.

Election is over, and peace is again in the land of plenty. There is one good feature about American politics, and that is that there is no revolutions after election. The winner crows and the defeated goes way back and sits down waiting for the next chance to dig in to win.

The democratic president Woodrow Wilson was elected by a big majority at Tuesdays election. Those who are looking for any radical change to times or the methods of running the goverment will be disappointed. As it will be about the old saw with a little of the set taken out of it, so it will pinch the poorer class of people a little harder. We are satisfied to let the people have their say but inside of two years they will be very anxious to vote again, and the cry will be give us another change.

The Times, along with a large number of the voters of the county, wants to go on record right now, on the eve of the general election, as favoring the selection of Dan Shaw and Ed A. Aubol as commissioners from their respective districts. We believe that it is to the best interests of the county to have these two men re elected. Both served on the county board of Red Lake county before the division. They are the only present members of the board who have opposition and they are two of the best commissioners who have ever sat on a county board. Their years of experience fits them with exceptional qualifications. They are both deserving of atleast a ten to one vote, and here's hoping they get it. Remember, a vote for Shaw and Aubol is a vote for the continuation of the present high efficiency in the management of county affairs by the board of county commissioners.—Thief River Falls Times.

There are some things said before election that deserves an answer after election, and this is one of them. What is the matter with our P. C. Wold? A man that we unanimously elected to represent this district on that board! Does the pimple head who wrote the above article have an idea that the people op this way don't know enough to elect a man that is qualified to look after their interests, and honestly look after the best interests of the tax payers of this county on that board? There is no doubt about the qualifications and fitness of Mr. Shaw and Aubol for this position but if they should happen to die or be defeated, Pennington county would still continue to do business at the old stand, under the careful management of men like P. C. Wold.

The Boss Blows.

Time 4:30. Whistle blows in nearby factory. New office boy asks if it is time to go home. Old office boy says no. New boy calls attention to fact that whistle has blown. Old boy retorts, "You wait till the boss blows."—Chicago Tribune.

Defined.

He—What kind of a resort was it you were at? She—Well, judging from the kind of men I saw there, I should say it was the last resort for marriageable girls.—Boston Transcript.

Double Trouble.

Tweenie Ann—Oh, mum, I've fallen downstairs and broken the back. Her Mistress—Well, whatever you've broken will be deducted from your wages.—London Sketch.

Porto Rico's New Wonder.

From far away Porto Rico come reports of a wonderful new discovery that is believed will vastly benefit the people. Ramon T. Marchan, of Barceloneta, writes "Dr. King's New Discovery is doing splendid work here. It cured me about five times of terrible coughs and colds, also my brother of a severe cold in his chest and more than 20 others, who used it on my advice. We hope this great medicine will yet be sold in every drug store in Porto Rico." For throat and lung troubles it has no equal. A trial will convince you of its merits 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by All Druggists.

Only A Fire Hero

But the crowd cheered, as, with burned hands, he held up a small round box. "Fellows!" he shouted, "this Bucklen's Arnica Salve I hold, has everything beat for burns." Right! also for boils, ulcers, sores, pimples, eczema, cuts, sprains' bruises. Surest pile cure. It subdues inflammation, kills pain. Only 25 cents at All Druggists.

AMAZONS OF DAHOMEY.

These Famous Women Warriors Fight Like Unchained Demons.

This famous body of women warriors are described by Mr. Martyn in "Life in the Legion," in which he tells of his experiences while serving with the Foreign legion of the French army:

"Any one inclined to sympathize with the amazons on account of their sex and look upon the combat between them and our men as unequal may take it from me that their sympathy would be misplaced. These young women are far and away the best men in the Dahoman army and, woman to man, were quite a match for any of us. They were armed with Spencer repeating carbines and made much better use of them than the men made of their rifles, and for work at close quarters they had a small, heavy backed chopping sword or knife very much like a South American machete, with which they did great execution.

"They fought like unchained demons and if driven into a corner did not disdain the use of their teeth and nails. One of them was seized and disarmed by a marine infantryman in this fight, but she was so far from being beaten that she at once turned on her captor and set about biting his nose off. The man yelled out for his mother, but the lady would not leave off worrying him until she was cut down.

"The uniform of these female warriors was a sort of kilted, divided skirt of blue cotton stuff. This garment barely reached to the knees. It was supported at the waist by a leather belt, which carried the cartridge pouches. The upper part of their bodies was quite nude, but the head was covered with a coquettish red fez or tarboosh, into which was stuck an eagle's feather."

Not a Graduate.

The editor of the Alkali Eye has this editorial note on a news dispatch:

"That eastern duck that got up in th' night fer a little nid snifter o' th' real thing an' got hold of th' carbolic acid jug an' died f'm the effects of th' same, is better off. He could never have become no fine drinkin' duck nohow. Th' last time we made that mistake we got up an' made it four times more in suction, thinkin' that our booze had tooken on a new an' delightful flavor, an' not until we spit outdoors in th' mornin' an' set th' steps afire did we diskiver our mistake."—Atlanta Constitution.

PNEUMONIA

left me with a frightful cough and very weak. I had spells when I could hardly breathe or speak for 10 to 20 minutes. My doctor could not help me, but I was completely cured by

DR. KING'S New Discovery

Mrs. J. E. Cox, Joliet, Ill.

50c AND $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Next In Command.

"I'm looking for the man who runs this office."

"He is out just now."

"But I have a big deal I want to put over."

"You might see the office boy."

WEDDING STORIES

Experiences Grave and Gay at the Marriage Ceremony.

ODD BREAKS AND BLUNDERS

The Tearful Regret That Flowed From the Heart of a Happy Ex-Widow—A Pert Reply to "Wilt Thou?"—A Tragic Wait and Its Sequel.

According to the stories told by several of Chicago's leading clergymen, wedding ceremonies do not always run any smoother than true love.

"People seem to act more insanely at a wedding than at any other time, save perhaps a fire," declared one pastor, "and it is usually the bridegroom who gets the most flustered. It is seldom that a woman gets the responses mixed as does the man. One time at a fashionable wedding where I was officiating the bridegroom insisted upon saying in a loud and distinct voice, much to the amusement of his hearers, 'I take me this plight' instead of the usual 'I plight thee my troth.'

"Another time when I was marrying a country couple at my home I asked the bridegroom the usual question, 'Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?' and he replied, with fire in his eye, 'What do you suppose we're here for ef I wouldn't?'

"It was at a wedding in my church that the six-year-old niece of the bridegroom caused a ripple of laughter. With big eyes she watched the bridal procession come up the aisle, and as it neared the altar she noticed her uncle, who had come out of the vestry and with his best man and me awaited the bride in the chancel. Up she jumped and, pointing a small finger at the bridegroom, said in her shrill baby voice, 'Oh, mother, if there isn't Uncle Bob with his best clothes on and his everyday nose!' She had been told by her uncle, who possessed an unusually prominent nose, that when he got married it would be shorter.

"One time after reading a ceremony the bridegroom handed me a five dollar bill, saying, 'I'll give you two.' Not understanding him, I said, 'Thank you,' and put it into my pocket. He touched me on the shoulder and again said, 'I'll give you two.' 'Oh, you want change?' I inquired. He nodded, and I handed him $3."

One laughable wedding was that of a widow who married one of her boarders. She was a woman past forty-five, with all the airs of a schoolgirl, and amused all who knew her by her references on all occasions to her departed husband, John. In fact, John got to be a byword among all who knew the widow. Among the boarders was a young fellow of twenty-five, who fell in love with the fair relict of the sainted John, and in a short time the roomers were all invited to attend a wedding to be held in the parlor.

The widow was large, tall and stout and the bridegroom exceedingly small for a man, and when on the night of the wedding the widow appeared at the proper moment leading her prospective husband into the parlor, much as a mother leads her little boy, even the waiting clergyman had to suppress a smile. After the ceremony had been read and congratulatory speeches were in order the erstwhile widow exclaimed, with emotion, "Oh, if only my poor, dear John were here to see how happy I am at this moment!" Only the perfect self control of the guests saved the situation.

It was in an Episcopal church that a superstitious bride fainted at the altar. Just as the bridegroom was about to put the ring on her finger his nervous, shaking fingers dropped it, and it rolled away across the floor. The bride, certain that some great calamity would overtake them, refused to go on with the services and then fainted. After the delay of an hour or so she was prevailed upon to allow the ceremony to be finished.

A Unitarian minister tells this story: "One time I was to read the service in my church in a western state where licenses are not required. The church was filled, and the bridal party arrived on time, all save the bridegroom. For more than an hour we waited, the bride growing almost hysterical and the guests restless over a delay the reason for which was not suspected.

"At last word was brought that the party was ready, and I came out from the vestry, the organ pealed forth the wedding march, and the bride came up the aisle to the altar, pale and trembling, looking much different from the pretty, flushed girl I knew.

"Imagine my surprise when the bride and best man stepped before me. The man said a few whispered words. I looked at the girl, and she nodded, and I began the service that made the girl the wife of the best man. The bride was saved from mortification, and the guests were not disappointed.

"It seems the best man had been in love with the girl, and when the bridegroom did not come he quietly stepped in and got her consent to marry him. I believe she never heard directly from her recreant bridegroom, and her marriage to the best man proved a happy one."—Chicago News.

Very Much In the Way.

Owens—How do you do, Mr. Shears? What can you show me in the way of a new suit today? His Tailor—Your bill, sir. That is decidedly in the way of a new suit!—London Telegraph.

He who restrains not his tongue shall live in trouble.—Brahman Maxim.

Flagged Train With Shirt.

Tearing his shirt from his back an Ohio man flagged a train and saved it from a wreck, but H. T. Alston, Raleigh, N. C., once prevented a wreck with Electric Bitters. "I was in a terrible plight when I began to use them," he writes, "my stomach, head, back and kidneys were all badly affected and my liver was in bad condition, but four bottles of Electric Bitters made me feel like a new man." A trial will convince you of their matchless merit for any stomach, liver or kidney trouble. Price 50 cents at all Druggists.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Sep. 20th, 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. Sept. 9th, 1912

NOTICE is hereby given that Grace M. Pinkerton, of Torgerson Minn., who on May 15th, 1911, made homestead Entry No. 06180 for S. E. ¼ Section 22 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarraet, Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 2d day of November, 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

A. T. Rice, of Germantown Minn. John Markuson, E. H. Benson, of Torgerson Minn. J. H. Hay, of Thief River Falls Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Oct. 25.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. October 23rd. 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Johan E. Udstraed of Torgerson Minn. who on Dec. 11th. 1905. made Homestead Entry No. 1251. Serial No. 04510, for W. ½ N. W. ¼ Section 28 Township 154 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 5th, day of December 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Reinhart A. Johnsrud, Emil Sigerud, Mikkel Anderson, Theodor O. Berg all of Torgerson, Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Oct. 25th, 1912

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Oct. 23rd. 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Hans P. Dahl of Neptune Minn., who on October 2nd 1911, made Homestead Application Serial No. 00094. for S. E. ¼ S. W. ¼. Sec. 13. E. ½ N. W. ¼ & S. W. ¼ N. W. ¼ Section 24 Township 152 N. Range 30 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn, on the 4th, day of December 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Joseph Dahl, of Okla Minn. Alfred Nelson, Selma Nelson, Jacob H. Dahl, of Neptune Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Oct. 4, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Sept. 30th, 1912

Notice is hereby given, that Nels Thorsten son, of Germantown Minn., who on May 16th 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No 06162 for Lots 1, 2 & S. ½ N. E. ¼ Section 1 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 12th. day of November 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses

Martin Olson, Robert Rambach, John Graff, Carl Euseth, all of Germantown Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Doesn't Like to Move.

A most curious and sluggish creature is the tuatara, a nine inch lizard whose home is in New Zealand. This little imitation saurian has the reputation of being the laziest creature ever created. He is usually found clinging to rocks or logs along the shores of rivers and lakes and has been known to remain in one position perfectly motionless for many months. How the creature manages to exist is a mystery.

Not Such a Hot Speech.

A candidate for congress had been making a speech in one of the towns of his district where he was not well known personally, and in the evening while waiting for a train he strayed into a butcher's shop and, without saying who he was, began to pump the butcher to find out how he stood.

"Did you hear that speech this afternoon?" he inquired after some general talk.

"Yes," replied the butcher, "I was there."

"What do you think of it?"

"Pshaw!" said the honest butcher. "I've made a better speech than that a hundred times, trying to sell 15 cents' worth of soup bones."

The candidate concealed his identity.—Kansas City Star.

An Old Saw, With A New Set.

We have now a large and complete stock of new goods at our Kratka store, and would be pleased to have all our old customers call and see us at the new store and post Office.

A FINE LINE OF BOTH HEAVY AND LIGHT SHOES.

Ask to look at our stock of Shoes. No trouble to show GOODS.

Higest market price paid for butter and eggs.

Singer Bros Kratka minn.

RHODA STORE

NEW GOODS, NEW PRICES.

A trial order will convince you, that this is the best Store to buy your goods.

I HAVE A FINe LINE OF gROCERIES.

BOOTS, SHOES, & COMPLETE STOCK OF SUMMER FOOT WEAR.

give me a call and get prices.

GEORGE SINGER. Prop. Rhoda Minn.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9:40 a. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m,

FARM LOANS.

Made Without Delay, at reasonable rates of interest.

Be sure and see me before you place your loan.

GEORGE ELDER.
McGinn Block,
Thief River Falls.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

McCall's Magazine and McCall Patterns

For Women

Have More Friends than any other magazine or patterns. McCall's is the reliable Fashion Guide monthly in one million one hundred thousand homes. Besides showing all the latest designs of McCall Patterns, each issue is brimful of sparkling short stories and helpful information for women.

Save Money and Keep in Style by subscribing for McCall's Magazine at once. Costs only 50 cents a year, including any one of the celebrated McCall Patterns free.

McCall Patterns Lead all others in style, fit, simplicity, economy and number sold. More dealers sell McCall Patterns than any other two makes combined. None higher than 15 cents. Buy from your dealer, or by mail from

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
236-246 W. 37th St., New York City

[illegible]

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Oct. 11th, 1912.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. October 7th, 1912.

Notice is hereby given that Halvor Svendsun of Hilda Minnesota, who on June 27th, 1905. made Homestead Application No. 1166, Serial No. 04188, for Lots 3, 4, Section 1, and Lots 1, 2, Section 2, Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for the District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 11th, day of November 1912.

Claimant names as witnesses:

[illegible] Aftenson, Swan Swanson, O. A. Storhaug, of Hilda Minn. [illegible] of Highlanding Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

We have a fine farm for sale in Deer Park township for only $21 per acre.

Call and see us, when you are ready to make your final proof

Knut Dale has been nearly all the week trying to get his engine from Deer Park up to Highlanding.

Julious Halvorson bought and shipped another car load of cattle from this locality yesterday.

J. T. Lindley, of McIntosh was doing business in this locality today and made this office a pleasant call.

Sjur Stolaas was over here today making application to make final proof on his additional homestead,

James O'Brieh is putting in a new foundation to his residence and will have a fine cement cellor.

The unfavorable fall weather has began to make the farmers think of the cow who is not affected by unfavorable weather.

The town of Highlanding cast only 89 votes at Tuesdays election as the farmers were to busy to turn out to election.

W.G. Hunt Wife and Daughter Myrtle visited with Mr. and Mrs.George Singer, at Rhoda on Sunday last.

Ye Editor has been so busy this week attending to his own farm work that he has not had much time to look after other peoples business.

George Leimers and A.B.Mandt came out a tie in the 5th district and we do not know how they will settle it.

This has been another bad weather week for the flax harvest, with a snow storm Monday night and another rain storm last night.

There has been very little threshing done in this locality, and the prospects now are that machinea can not be moved around until we have a solid freeze up.

The Griffth dredge is moving rapidly eastward from this end of ditch 58 and the other big dredge is coming north night and day on the same ditch. This ditch will be completed this fall, if the winter don't shut down very suddenly.

Walter McAndreas finished his flaxstacking last night, just before the rain. Men are pretty scarce but the Sunbeam man can do a turn with a pitch fork to help out a worthy neighbor which he did yesterday and the last load of flax was safely in the stack before the rain came.

The socialist party carried the town of Highlanding with 84 votes for Debbs Roosevelt 24 Wilson 9 Taft 9. This is the strongest socialist township in the county, and won out over the united vote of Taft and Roosevelt.

"Taking Aim."

It is agreed among anthropologists that "taking aim" is a human characteristic that even the anthropoid apes cannot be said to share. Apes and monkeys frequently throw nuts and sticks, sometimes with unpleasant consequences to others, but they show little or no ability to take accurate aim. The baboon is said to excel somewhat in this respect, but still it would never pass for a marksman. Accuracy of eye and the judgment of direction and distance that are involved in real aiming have been developed only by man and are among the tokens of his intellectual superiority.—New York Press.

Then There's No Hope.

"Gracious! That [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] like a pistol shot."

"Don't be alarmed. That was Mr. [illegible] slamming the door of his residence as he left for town."

"Does he always slam the door so hard?"

"Not every morning. There are some mornings when he and Mrs. Gribber don't meet at the breakfast table."—Spokane Review.

Still Holding a Grudge.

"Blinkenstein simply abhors women barbers."

"He has some sort of a reason, I suppose."

"Yes; he says he can never forget the haircut that Delilah gave Samson."—[illegible] Library.

ELECTION RETURNS.

The Tuesdays election resulted in the election of Woodrow Wilson for president by what the democrats call a land slide: Roosevelt carried this state by about 10,000 majority, but New York and a number of other strong voting eastern states gave their votes to Wilson. Taft, as we said he would be before election was not in the race.

Eberhart was re-elected for governor and about all the other republican nominees except Julious A. Schmall for Secretary of State who may be defeated.

Knut Nelson was elected for U. S. Senator by a large majority and Steenerson won out by a large majority All the republican nominees on the county ticket were elected except J. M. Bishop for county attorney, who was defeated by E. M. Stanton the democratic nominee by a small majority. The socialist party showed large gains in the county, but failed to elect any of their officers.

A Great Building Falls.

when its foundation is undermined, and if the foundation of health—good digestion—is attacked, quick collapse follows. On the first signs of indigestion, Dr. King's New Life Pills should be taken to tone the stomach and regulate liver, kidneys and bowels. Pleasant, easy, safe and only 25 cents at All Druggists.

HEAL IT WITH
Bucklen's
THE ONLY GENUINE
Arnica Salve
KEEPS FLESH IN TONE FROM SKIN TO BONE.
Heals Everything Healable: Burns, Boils, Sores, Ulcers, Piles, Eczema, Cuts, Corns, Wounds and Bruises.
SATISFIES, OR MONEY BACK.
25c AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Subscribe for The Sunbeam.

Pay up your back Subscription.

DRESS MAKING.

For plain and Fancy sewing apply to Mrs. Sam McMahn Student of the America College of dress making.

Kuehnel, Minn.

HOUSE KEEPER WANTED.

I desire to employ the services of a house keeper on my farm in the town of Kratkas Good conveniences and steady employment. Salary $4.00 a week and board. Call on or address,

John Quirk,
Highlanding Minn

PNEUMONIA

left me with a frightful cough and very weak. I had spells when I could hardly breathe or speak for 10 to 20 minutes. My doctor could not help me, but I was completely cured by

DR. KING'S New Discovery

Mrs. J. E. Cox, Joliet, Ill.
50c AND $1.00 AT ALL DRUGGISTS.

Good Advice.

"I'd have you know I am nobody's fool."

"You'd better be careful then. You are liable to be attached any minute."

Fruit of the Tree.

"They have a family tree, I suppose?"

"Yes, and the daughters are [illegible]!"—Judge.

Without earnestness no man is ever great or does great things.

CAUGHT BY A LION

Fearful Adventure With a South African Man Eater.

FLUNG RIGHT INTO ITS JAWS.

Ordeal of a Transvaal Ranger Who Was Pitched Over His Horse's Head Only to Be Gripped in Midair by the Savage Brute—The Dramatic Finish.

If any one is eager for adventure hunting lions in their native jungles will offer him abundant opportunity. Major J. Stevenson Hamilton in the pages of his book, "Animal Life in Africa," gives an account of a terrible experience that one of his fellow rangers of the Transvaal game reserve had with a lion.

In August, 1903, he was returning from a month's patrol to the Olifants river and had arrived within two days' march of the Sabi. He had pushed on ahead of his natives and pack donkeys in order to reach the nearest police picket before nightfall. However, the distance was greater than he thought, and darkness found him still some three miles from his destination, riding along a path by the side of a reed bordered stream, accompanied only by his big dog Bill.

As he rode through the dry bed of the creek, where the path crossed it in one of its windings, he saw something move out of the reeds and melt away into the darkness ahead. A few yards farther on the dog rushed forward, barking, and again an indistinct form moved away. Supposing this to be a buck of some kind, the ranger rode on without taking any special notice of the incident, but a few minutes afterward he suddenly saw the shape again, this time apparently approaching.

He had scarcely time to reflect that this was an odd performance for a reed buck when he became conscious that it was no antelope, but a lion in the act of crouching for a spring. Pulling his horse sharp to the right just as the lion rushed, he caused the latter partially to miss his mark, but his claws tore down the horse's quarters, and the frightened animal, making a terrified leap forward, shot its rider over its right shoulder straight into the jaws of a second lion, which had been coming up from behind.

Horse, man and rifle all went in different directions. The horse made off at full speed, followed by the first lion, which in turn was pursued by the dog. The man never touched the ground at all, as the lion seemed to catch him in midair.

The first thing he realized was that it was trotting off with him down the path. He was held firmly by the right shoulder, and, lying on his back, his face was on a level with the brute's neck, while his legs were dragging along under its belly.

It was a desperate predicament, and as soon as he was able to collect his thoughts a little he began to wonder whether he would be killed outright or tortured first. He saw no hope of escape. The pain he describes as acute, which is contrary to the experience of Livingstone and others. However, being a very cool headed man and full of grit, he presently began to cast about for some method of saving himself.

The mind works quickly in such cases, and suddenly he remembered his sheathknife, an ordinary six inch blade, which was carried in an open leather case at the back of his belt. Reaching underneath himself with his left hand, he discovered that the knife had not been lost, so, pulling it out, he bent all his energy on holding it tight and awaited a favorable opportunity.

Fortune favors the brave, and the ranger's chance came when the lion, after going with him about 150 yards, laid him down under a small tree for the purpose either of shifting its grip or of commencing operations upon him.

Feeling very carefully behind the left shoulder for what he judged to be a vital spot, he struck a couple of backhanded blows with all his force, using, of course, his left hand. It turned out that each of these strokes reached the heart.

For what seemed hours, but was no doubt only a few seconds, man and beast stood facing each other, the latter silent and the former, with some hazy idea of the power of the human voice, shouting out every abusive word that rose to his tongue. The tension was relieved by the lion turning and walking slowly away to a spot some thirty yards distant, where, after swaying for a moment, it fell heavily to the ground, emitted a few groans and expired.

Not Debatable.

"How about your idea of introducing parliamentary rules in your debates with your wife?"

"Give it up. She was too quick at it."

"How so?"

"In the very first debate we had about buying a handsome hand work centerpiece she moved at once to lay the subject on the table."—Baltimore American.

Dispelled His Fears.

Old Gentleman—It is folly to talk of marriage for years yet. My daughter is a mere child. She knows nothing about the world and could not manage servants. Mr. Slimpurse—Oh, that doesn't make the slightest difference! We shan't have any.

A man who covers himself with costly apparel and neglects his mind is like one who illuminates the outside of his house and sits within in the dark.

WORKERS IN BIG BANKS.

They're on the Job All the Time—Nights, Sundays and Holidays.

The average worker is apt to regard with envy the bank employee, inasmuch as there is a popular notion that his hours are short and that he knocks off work at about 3 in the afternoon, unless, indeed, there should be a "mistake somewhere" that necessitates keeping all hands to "balance."

As a matter of fact, in certain of the largest banks, particularly those in New York, there is always some one at work. All night long and on Sundays and holidays as well, these banks have staffs of men kept busily engaged in opening letters—thousands of letters—sorting and listing innumerable checks and drafts representing vast sums of money. These men "get things ready" for the day force. Were it not for the night men working constantly the day force would soon be overwhelmed.

Between 5 in the afternoon and 9 the next morning there are at work in the big banks two shifts. They call themselves the "scouting force." Each bank has a big "drawer" in the general postoffice, and every hour during the night messengers take from this drawer its accumulation of mail.

One large bank receives an average mail of 3,000 letters a day, and of these two-thirds arrive during the night. These letters contain many checks and drafts from all parts.

As soon as they have been opened at the bank the checks are counted and the totals verified with the footings of the lists. The letters are then stamped—"proven in," as bank clerks call it. Then they are acknowledged by clerks detailed for the purpose.

A big task is the assortment of the various checks according to the books wherein they are to be entered. Sight drafts must be grouped according to the routes of the bank messengers, and everything possible is done to turn over the night's accumulation of mail in proper shape for the clerks in the morning.—Harper's Weekly.

A FRENCHMAN ON GOLF.

Sarcastic Comments on the "Absurdities" of the Game.

The "absurdities" of golf as they present themselves to the eyes of a Frenchman are amusingly dealt with by a contributor to the Paris Journal:

"We see on green countrysides during the warm days of summer perspiring creatures, flushed and unkempt, armed with long handled clubs striking the ground with frenzy as if they wished to discover rare stones or precious metals. It is golfers at work. Any ground will do so long as it is not level. Having found your ground, you then take great care to fill up all the natural holes in it. Having done so, you make a number of artificial holes which are all of a fixed shape and depth. The more these holes resemble natural holes the better they are.

"Golf is the direct descendant of a now unfashionable sport known as stone breaking, which consists in breaking stones on the roads with the aid of a long hammer. The essential difference is that the golfers do not wear wire spectacles like their ancestors, the stonebreakers. The stones have been replaced by a small india rubber ball, which lasts much longer, being unbreakable.

"The problem is to make this ball go into the holes on the golf course without touching it with the hands. That would be much too easy. To push it toward the holes you use a wooden stick with an iron butt, very inconveniently turned and shaped, so as to make the problem as complicated as possible. This stick is called a club, and its number is legion, since it is the correct thing to change the club between each stroke just as you change forks between every course.

"The collection of clubs contained in an umbrella case is carried behind the line of fire by a youngster known as a caddie.

"The player, having chosen with great care from among his clubs one which is likely to make a successful stroke, flourishes it with both hands, strikes—and misses the ball. There are two ways of missing the ball—one by using too much force and the other by not using enough. The stroke with too much force behind it is the easier. It consists in striking the earth a few centimeters behind the ball without touching it. When this stroke is well done it sends into the air a shower of earth and turf after the style of a fireworks display, with very elegant effect.

"The hit which misses is more delicate to achieve. In this case it is necessary that your club, after a vigorous flourish, should make straight for the ball, pass it without touching it and return by the impetus given it to strike the player on the back of the head."

Competent.

Garalde—Women ought not to be allowed to vote. Could a woman sit on a jury? Hillside—Could she! A woman like my wife could sit on the jury and the judge and the lawyers and the whole department of justice if she took the notion.—Newark News.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

F. J. CHENEY, & CO, Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

NEW BANK.

FIRST STATE BANK,

OF OKLEE Lambert Post Office Minn.
NEW STATION ON DULUTH SOO LINE.

Your Business Solicited.

Directors: A. P. Toupin, Pres. Samuel Gibean Vic. Prs.
Larry O'Niel, Abraham Parquine, T. L. Cruzon.
J. A. DUFFY, Cashier. T. L. CRUZON, Assist. Cashier.

Let Us Tell You Something!

This Season we are offering the best line of Dry Goods that ever, came into this Section of the Country.

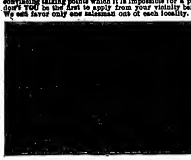
Don't Buy Eleswhere, Until You Have Seen What We Have To Offer.

No Matter What Price you pay, WE Will please YOU.

VAUGHAN BROS. & CO.
Highlanding Minn.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.



Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars, it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT

IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the regular retail prices.

$10.00 Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof Self-healing Tires A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $10.00 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES
Nails, Tacks, or Glass will not let the air out. A hundred thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. [illegible] They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is [illegible] for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D" also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

EASY TO FILL THAT ORDER

Floorwalker Hardly Had to Think to Make Satisfactory Answer to the Inquiry.

"Silk stockings must be very cheap in America. Nowhere in the world do women's slim and supple ankles gleam in lustrous silk as they do here."

The speaker was Robert Loraine, the English actor. He continued:

"A married man told me the other day that, going into one of your department stores, he said to a floorwalker:

"'I'm looking for something pretty in silk stockings.'

"The floorwalker smiled, and with a gesture embraced the long rows of counters with their charming saleswomen.

"'That remark,' he said, 'describes, I believe, practically every one of our young ladies.'"

One Woman's Faith.

The Interviewers—And you believe your husband innocent?

The Wife of the Accused Official—Absolutely! I know he is incapable of duplicity.

Then she put on her hat and hurried downtown and drew from the bank the $17,000 her honest husband had saved during the past six months out of a salary of $150 a month.

Fond Memories.

"Baggs is such an ugly man, Miss Prettyface, that I cannot understand why he seems to interest you so."

"Of course, you can't, but with his dogged expression and his pug nose, he reminds me so much of my pet terrier."

One Better.

"I've got a fireless cooker in my house."

"That's nothing. I've got a smokeless husband in mine."

CURES ITCHING SKIN DISEASES. Cole's Carbolisalve stops itching and makes the skin smooth. All druggists. 25 and 50c. Adv.

Occasionally a patient swears by his doctor, but more often at him.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets, small, sugar-coated, easy to take as candy, regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Do not gripe. Adv.

There are a lot of cheap skates outside the skating rinks.

TIRED BLOOD EXPOSES THE LUNGS

(Copyright 1912 by the Tonitives Co.)

Tired Blood Conditions permit Cold and disease germs to attack the air passages and lungs, developing Catarrh, LaGrippe, Difficulty in Breathing, and Consumption. These germs can be destroyed and expelled only by chemical action in the blood. TONITIVES FOR TIRED BLOOD The purpose of Tonitives for Tired Blood, is to revive this chemical action, help the blood to absorb more nutriment and more oxygen, to bring these elements into direct contact with every cell, to chemically cleanse and renew the lungs and other tissues. 75c. per box of dealers or by mail. The Tonitives Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

WANTED! Northern Farmers In Mississippi and Louisiana

where every day is a planting day and every month is a harvest month. Farmers in these states reap from two to four crops a year and have green pastures for their hogs and cattle ten months in the year. The land is cheap and you can buy it on very easy terms. Many farmers have gone to Mississippi and Louisiana and become wealthy. Why not you? Write today for beautifully illustrated booklets to

J. C. CLAIR, Immigration Comm., I.C.R.R. Room F600 Central Station, Chicago, Ill.

The Wretchedness of Constipation

Can quickly be overcome by CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. Purely vegetable —act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty. SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE. CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

We sell Traps, Etc., Cheap and pay HIGHEST PRICES for HIDES, FURS, PELTS, ETC. Write for free catalog, price list and shipping tags. N. W. HIDE & FUR CO. Established 1890 Minneapolis, Minn.

PISO'S REMEDY Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by Druggists. FOR COUGHS AND COLDS 25 CTS

HER MAGAZINE STORY

How Bob Found His Long Lost Ruth.

By ADELE MENDEL.

"Come on to bed, Robert; it's past midnight," said his roommate, Kenneth, as he knocked the ashes from his curved meerschaum pipe.

"Just want to read one more story and then I'll be with you," answered Robert, settling himself comfortably in the huge leather arm chair.

"One would think you were a love-sick maid, the way you devour those magazine stories," growled Kenneth.

"I'm not a love-sick maid, but maybe I'm that kind of a man," said Robert with a quizzical air and throwing down his magazine.

"I've no doubt of that, none at all," emphatically answered Kenneth. "Any fellow of twenty-eight who refuses to call on girls, declines all invitations to dances, dinners and parties, who never changes the color or style of his necktie, has something wrong with him, mark my word."

"Her name is Ruth Wilson," began Robert, as if he were repeating a well-known lesson. "She was a little pen-and-ink sketcher and sold some of her work to our firm; that is how I first became acquainted with her. But our acquaintance soon grew to friendship, and then it wasn't many months before we both knew we were in love with each other. I wanted to marry at once, but Ruth insisted upon waiting a year, as she felt she had a future in her artistic career and was not as yet willing to give it up. Patiently I agreed, and at the end of the allotted time she begged for six months more. And then another and yet another delay, until one evening, as we were seated in her two-by-four hall-room studio on the third story of a second-class boarding house, irritated by her seeming preference for her profession when she again asked for a postponement of our marriage, I lost my temper and hurled unkind, angry words at the girl. Naturally, she resented my attitude. One word led to another, I banged the door and dashed like a madman down the stairs and out of the house. I walked miles and miles, not caring where, until, exhausted, I finally reached home. That is the last time I ever saw her. Only God knows how I love that girl!"

"By George, Ken, I'm in Love."

"Don't tell me you never went there again; it's unbelievable!" interrupted Kenneth.

"She, dear little forgiving angel," went on Robert, "had written me a note saying: 'I surrender. Name the day.' Through the stupidity or carelessness of the maid I never received it until four weeks later, when I chanced across it unopened in a book that was lying on my library table.

"I rushed to her home without delay. Everything on the way seemed to say, 'Ruth is going to marry me, Ruth is going to marry me.' I was fully prepared to tell her what an all-fired fool and idiot I thought myself for losing my temper. Bounding up the stairs, my pulse throbbing, imagine my feelings when the landlady informed me that Ruth had moved the day before and had left no address. That is two years ago, and although I have tried incessantly, I have been unable to secure the slightest clew to her whereabouts. Naturally, I suppose she thought I received her letter when written and didn't care to respond."

"It's certainly hard lines, but you'll find her yet. Brace up, old boy," comforted Kenneth.

A few weeks after this conversation, as Robert entered the room, he found his friend excitedly walking up and down.

"Bob, Bob," he exclaimed, "I thought you would never come. I have found her, I've found Ruth—at least, I have a clew."

Robert gazed at him, speechless.

"Coming home," continued Kenneth, "I picked up this magazine from a news stand. I turned to the story entitled 'Unfinished.' It's almost word for word the story of Ruth and yourself. The name signed is doubtless fictitious, for Ruth, and no other, can have written it. Write to the publisher, secure her address, and then your troubles will be over."

Early the next morning, after a sleepless night, Robert reached the publisher's office, where he discovered that the name signed to the story was the author's real name, and that she lived in a small suburb in the outskirts of New York. Jumping on a train, after two impatient hours he reached his destination. A pretty girl, with a twinkling eye and sympathetic voice, answered the bell. He introduced himself, explained his mission, and added:

"Tell me, please, where I can find your heroine, for find her I must."

"I'll gladly give you her address, but first I wish to explain how I came to have the story published. Ruth, after leaving New York in an unhappy state of mind, came here to visit and rest with me. Poor thing, she was so distressed that I begged her to tell me the cause. I never intended to use the story for material to sell, but just wrote it up because its dramatic possibilities appealed to me. Last fall I sprained my arm, and mother, addressing some manuscripts to my publishers, in mistake inclosed this story. I felt dreadful at the time to think that it might appear as a breach of confidence. But now, if it will be the means of bringing Ruth and you together again, I will be the happiest of girls."

Robert thanked the girl, boarded his train, and lost no time in reaching his office and writing a passionate appeal to Ruth for forgiveness.

Many and weary were the weeks that followed. Hope and despair alternated in Robert's breast, but no answer came.

"It's no use," he remarked one evening to Kenneth. "Ruth has received my letter long before this, and it is evident that she no longer cares enough for me to answer it. I don't—"

The telephone rang, and Robert stepped to the phone. He heard a soft voice say, "Is this you, Robert? I just received your letter, returned to me from England. I am stopping with my aunt, Mrs. Davenport, who, strange to say, lives in an apartment next to yours. Would you care to come over?"

"Would I care to?" cried Robert. "Oh, girl, just wait two minutes and see!"

As Robert bounded down the stairs, Kenneth said to himself: "I guess the little authoress won't be able to call her story 'Unfinished' any more."

(Copyright, 1912, by W. G. Chapman.)

HIS FIRST USE FOR WEALTH

For a Millionaire, Mose's Aspirations Would Seem to the Ordinary Man Singularly Modest.

